A daily dose of music is Kelton's philosophy

by Chuck Hackenmiller
"Stars and Stripes Forever", a rousing marching tune that can tingle the spine and perhaps in late a inspired tear, happened to be the last musical number played by a 1984 summer music camp honor band under the direction of Ray Kelton.
The audience attending the evening concert, sparked by the excitement of the music, rose from their seats and voiced a resounding ovation. Kelton turned to face the crowd, bowed and drew his hand to bring attention to the performing band members.
He has faced the cheering crowds many times during the past years. But this night was rather special for Kelton.
Some of the band members will return to next summer music camp, but this was Kelton's last hurrah on stage at Ramsey Theatre as the College Director of Bands and Professor of Music at Wayne State College.
Twenty-four years of association with the Wayne State music department closed on a high note when he received special gifts and awards from alumni and students who participated in this summer's music camp.

Ray Kelton

University of Arizona played that instrument," Kelton said.
He certainly wasn't pushed into the music field by his parents. "Father wanted me to do something else for my future besides music," he mentioned.
But Kelton decided to pursue his ambitions and enter a career in the music field. At the University of Arizona in Tucson he received his Bachelor and Masters degrees in music.
There are other instruments in Kelton's repertoire: "but his favorites remain" the baritone and the trombone. "I've studied all of the instruments to some extent," he said.
Upon graduation in 1942, he enlisted in the Navy and after boot camp, joined up with the Naval Military Band headquartered in San Diego. It was during the wartime and the band played at various military ceremonies and bond drives. They served as greeters of naval ships returning from war and provided entertainment for the people at surrounding camps. "We had a lot of fine musicians in the group. Some had played in Hollywood studios," Kelton said.
Kelton, after serving three years in the Navy, joined a local dance band — playing hit after hit from the Andrew Sisters, Spike Jones, Stan Canton, Glen Miller. "We played a lot of Miller and Dorsey tunes," he said.

BUT HIS HEART, it seems, was in teaching — particularly at the college level. Prior to his arrival at Wayne State College in 1960, Kelton instructed band music in Montana; taught five years in Fort Worth, Texas; and instructed for five years at Ada, Oklahoma. He then went back to school in Denton at North Texas State University to receive his Ph.D. in music while also serving as music instructor at several of the Dallas public schools.
Over the years he has become active in various state and national organizations related to the music education field.
"He came to Wayne State College as director of bands and an associate professor of music."
"The first few years were pretty rough from the standpoint of not having enough students enrolled in the music program," Kelton said.
Since then, enrollments have gradually increased. The big years, he said, were in the late 1960's and early 1970's when enrollments were up.
Music facilities also grew as enrollment increased. Prior to when the Wayne State College Fine Arts building was constructed and opened in 1964, the music instructions were conducted in the top corner section of what is now the college education building.
"The building was not adequate at all. There was only one classroom, one rehearsal room and up to six practice rooms," Kelton said.

NOW ENROLLMENT crowds available facilities at the fine arts building, he said, and "more space is needed" to accommodate speech, choral and band departments and the college's radio station.
If it came to a choice, Kelton said he would prefer teaching band at college level rather than high school. "The kids are older and more mature. Most of them are more advanced musically and there are not as much discipline problems," he said.
"College instructing has always been my aim."
"But teaching the young high school musicians still is special to Kelton, who has participated in over half of the summer music camps since the program was started at Wayne State College in the mid 1940's. "It's still one of the oldest and biggest summer music camps around in this part of the country," Kelton bragged.
Quite a few of the students, ranging from those going into ninth grade to those who are graduating high school seniors, return as students to Wayne State College. "While at the summer camp, the kids get to know the campus and the teachers," he said.
Although retiring as professor of music and band director at Wayne State College, Kelton said he plans to continue being active in the music education field. That could include judging at band contests, making guest conductor appearances and directing clinics.
"One thing I hope to do is do a little composing and music arranging now that I have more time," he said. He'll also continue performing with the Sioux City Municipal Band during the summer months.

KELTON IS not the lone musician in his own family. His wife, Barbara, plays the cello and piano and a son, Harry, is an organist and choir director at a college in Boston.
There are also those who have graduated under the Wayne State College "family" and have "done very well in the music field, particularly the teaching area," he said.
"Primarily what we do is train teachers," he added.
Music style and sound has changed since Kelton graduated from college and embarked on his music education career. But he has adapted to it and treats each new piece as a challenge — whether it be pop music, classical music or marching music.
He has a certain philosophy about music. "I and other teachers of music would like to see as much music as possible in people's daily lives. We're teaching people to become good consumers of music, helping them to appreciate, understand and enjoy it [music]," Kelton said.
Perhaps it is this philosophy which prompted members of the wind ensemble band to take up a collection and present Kelton with a beautiful watch.
It was their way of saying thanks to Kelton for bringing music and perfecting it to fit into their daily lives.

My heart goes out to the citizens of Russia right now. News reports indicate that the Russian citizens are being subjected to film footage of Americans in soup lines and the massacre of innocent people at the McDonalds in California.

Russian citizens are being disillusioned about America's lifestyle, the Russian government mentions. There is corruption and terrorism on a daily basis, according to what the Russian news reports have stressed in media publications.

Well, too bad Russia. While all of you are seeing a dim view of what America is truly like, you're missing wonderful footage of Olympic spirit at its finest. What lessons in human life you are now missing!

While you were listening to reports of American murders and crazy people, we in the United States were treated to a lesson in endurance as on the first day of Olympics an American cyclist won a marathon event to capture a rare gold medal.

As the Russian media was flooding the airwaves and type about how terrible Americans are, we watched a lesson in perseverance and dedication as the men's gymnastics team snatched a gold medal away from favored China and Japan. America's national anthem never sounded sweeter as people left the gymnastics arena with respect and tears for new found heroes.

REALLY, LIFE here isn't all that bad. Not when you see samples of sportsmanship by the United States' women's gymnastics team — a team which was in the hunt with Romania for first place in the all-team event but instead received a silver medal.

They smiled and performed with precision, even after they knew the gold medal was lost. They knew they had performed better than any other American Olympic team.

Although you despise our politics and social habits, you have to admire our courage. We got a lesson in courage during the Olympics from Greco-Roman style wrestler Jeff Blatnick, who was diagnosed two years ago with having Hodgkins Disease and had his spleen removed. Thursday night, he was at his best as he won a gold medal.

His happy emotions flowed freely and uncontrollably, saying he'd like to divide his medal into lots of pieces and give a piece to his parents and friends.

He dedicated his gold medal winning match to his older brother who was killed in a motorcycle accident several years ago. It's too bad you didn't get to see the humaneness of this type of competition, Russia. It would be a far better article or news program than what is being transmitted by your media now. During the past week we've seen athletes compete in sincere efforts to break world records. There are track and other sports to look forward too in the coming week.

SURE, YOU WILL have your own "special games" later on this year with competition from other boycotting teams. But it certainly won't be the same as the Olympics.

One rerun of the opening ceremony will verify the pageantry and beauty of the event. One tear of accomplishment, a perfect 10 for a gymnast, a twinkle of pride in the eye of a gold medalist when standing in recognition of the nation's national anthem, togetherness and handshakes of competing athletes — that's what makes the Olympics the most important relationship-building sport in the world.

Olympic games still draw the attention of millions from different nations as it did when it first began. Today's electronics and space age equipment has allowed many to watch the games in the comfort of an easy chair.

Lots of Americans are focusing their interests on what is happening in Los Angeles. So have many other countries.

And what are you doing Russia? Showing film footage of violence which happens even in communist countries? Rebellious against American politics? Turning your countryman against America?

As long as you are watching all the violence taking place in America, maybe you can flip the channel or turn the newspaper page and catch the action of political murders and other vicious acts conducted in other countries.

You'll find the Olympics in Los Angeles is a lot more fun to watch and is more wholesome entertainment.

I really think you'd enjoy watching the games. All of us could use a refresher course in human relations. And what better classroom for learning how to get along with each other than in the Olympic games.

Legal drinking age

By Oct. 1 of 1986, states across the nation must comply with recent federal legislation signed by President Reagan to bring the legal drinking age to 21.

Failure to do so could result in possible decreases of state highway funding from the federal government.

States such as Nebraska, Iowa and Minnesota must raise their drinking age requirements or else be penalized financially for allowing the drinking ages to stay at the current levels. Iowa and Minnesota both have the drinking ages established at 19. Nebraska young adults are allowed to purchase beer or liquor at age 20.

The intentions of the legislature and President Reagan are sincere in protecting individuals from drunk driving accidents and deaths. But some people might feel the federal government is using a blackmail approach of cutting federal funding in order to achieve full compliance of the nationwide drinking law.

At age 21, adults are approximately three years out of high school. Some marry. Many are in the process of graduating from college or have made the decision on how to pursue future careers. Some are nearing the final years of serving in the armed forces. A major share of those that did not go on to college have found employment on the family farm, factories or other industries and are making important on-the-job decisions constantly.

Those questioning the effectiveness of an age drinking law might consider these statistics reported in the 1983 State of Nebraska Traffic Accident Facts Annual Report.

Despite the Nebraska drinking age being 20 years of age, over 17 percent of all accidents involving alcohol were in the ages 15-19 category. The Safety Council of Nebraska, in a recent news release, said driving under the influence of alcohol is the leading cause of death for persons 15 to 24 years old.

Young adults, ages 15 to 19, comprise about 10 percent of the driving population. Yet they represent almost 14 percent of all alcohol-impaired drivers involved in accidents.

This indicates the drinking age laws are being abused by those considered as minors.

But even those who are of legal age to drink appear to slack off in responsibility — more so than the minors. Of all the alcohol-related driving accidents which happened in Nebraska last year, 31 percent occurred with those between the ages of 20-24 behind the steering wheel.

Ages 25 and up (those that are supposed to know better than to drink and drive) were responsible for over 50 percent of the alcohol-related accidents.

These accident facts reflect that legalizing a drinking age certainly doesn't correlate with responsible drinking, be it 18 years or 80 years of age.

If the age 21 drinking law is accepted by the states, cracking down on "minors consuming alcohol" would become an even greater task for county liquor commissioners and law enforcement officials.

Highway safety, if that is what the federal government is truly concerned about, will not be enhanced if federal funding for state highway improvement is lessened by non-participating states who allow their drinking age limits to remain under 21.

Poor road conditions, such as highways or interstates filled with potholes, are also key contributors to traffic accidents.

Nearly four percent of all accidents recorded in Nebraska last year were alcohol-related.

That means almost 96 percent of all accidents last year occurred when the driver was sober, and most of those accidents, about 55 percent of them, happened when surface conditions were dry and not affected by adverse weather conditions.

It is agreeable that the federal government should proceed with its effort to create a uniform nationwide drinking age — an idea helpful in stopping minors from one state from drinking legally in another state.

However, instead of a penalizing states for non-conformance to the uniform drinking age, the federal government should consider incentive ideas such as pumping more of its revenue sharing funds toward state substance abuse treatment centers or establishing educational programs for teenagers (and adults) on the problems related to alcohol.

An idea would be to provide financial assistance for communities interested in building community centers where "minors" can gather with friends for fun times.

All this might help in relieving "minor" attendance at weekend beer parties or unlawful gatherings within the community.

Most people agree that drinking should be restricted from those who irresponsibly abuse alcohol. Apparently, the federal government feels that 21 is the age when responsible drinking should be attainable.

However, facts show irresponsibility with alcohol doesn't end at age 21.

The age limit will be established for enforcement purposes. But the real goal of the federal government should be to educate all ages (from teenagers on up) the hazards of drinking irresponsibly and not to drive after excessive alcohol consumption.

Removing alcohol completely off the shelves, or prohibition, could be the only other alternative to stop alcohol abuse.

Q. If you are involved in an accident, and your driver's license has expired, are you liable for damages if no violation ticket is issued? Also, if you have automobile insurance would you be covered if you were involved in an accident and did not have a valid license?

A. Although driving without a current driver's license is a ticketable offense, it is not "negligence per se." Merely driving with an expired license would not, by itself, make you liable for the accident.

The questions of who is liable for damages would be determined in the same way whether or not you had a valid license. Eyewitness accounts, police reports and other evidence would be taken into account in determining liability.

Whether your automobile insurance would cover you while you were driving with an expired license depends on the exact wording of your policy. Under most automobile policies, driving with an expired license is not grounds on which the insurance company can avoid coverage. If you are unsure about the exact wording of your policy, you should at least consult with your insurance agent. If you are involved in an accident and wish to know the legal implications of, and coverage provided by your policy, you may want to consult with an attorney.

Q. What does a court reporter do? Is this job being phased out, or is there still a demand for court reporters? What kind of salary do they earn?

A. A court reporter's job is to keep a verbatim record of everything that goes on in a judicial proceeding. In addition, many court reporters retain possession of the physical evidence or exhibits from a trial. Court reporters are responsible for providing transcripts of testimony to be used in further proceedings or in appeals. Court reporting is not being phased out. However, the nature of the profession is changing in many cases. While many court reporters still use traditional stenographic methods of reporting, some are now using new electronic technology in their work.

Generally, there are two types of court reporters: freelance and official. Freelance court reporters are available to participate in a number of different kinds of proceedings and are generally hired by private attorneys. The average salary for a freelance court reporter varies considerably depending on experience and volume of work done. However, many freelance court reporters earn between $13,000 and $19,000 per year.

Official court reporters work for one particular judge. They keep records of all court proceedings over which that judge presides. The current salary for official court reporters is approximately $25,000 per year. In addition, official court reporters charge a fee for providing copies of a transcript to attorneys or other interested parties. The maximum amount that can be charged for such copies in Nebraska is currently $7 (75 cents) per 100 words.

Much accomplished in 30 years of food for peace

P.L. 480, the Food for Peace program, is 30 years old this summer. It's come a long way in those three decades.

Very simply, the idea was to feed hungry people around the world, make better use of surplus American farm products and create new markets for U.S. farmers. Farm Bureau nationwide and especially in Nebraska was a primary backer of that original program. Former Nebraska Representative Bob Denney introduced the bill in Congress.

In those 30 years, world food production has more than doubled, at a time when world population growth has been almost as rapid. Embargoes, quotas and hunger in the midst of plenty have become global issues, ones addressed in presidential election and economic summits.

When Public Law 480 was signed by Dwight Eisenhower in July 1954, it provided for commodities to be paid for with local currencies. Later it was changed primarily to one of long-term dollar credits. And since 1967, it has strongly emphasized ag development within the receiving countries.

During these 30 years, some 300 million tons of P.L. 480 commodities have gone to more than 100 countries, either through subsidized sales or outright donations. Program costs have amounted to $3 billion for farm products, plus $5 billion for transportation.

During this same time, our commercial exports of farm products rose from a mere $3 billion in 1954 to more than $40 billion early in this decade. In recent years, P.L. 480 commodities have accounted for only 4 percent of U.S. ag exports, compared with 25 to 30 percent in the early years of the program. Our recipient countries have grown up,

Juniors stay alive with 6-4 win over Schuyler

Wayne's Junior Legion baseball team likes to keep its fans on the edge of their seats.

After taking a win over Jackson in the opening game of Class B Area 3 Junior Legion tournament last Tuesday, Wayne fell 12-8 to a hard-hitting West Point Junior team on Wednesday night.

Falling into the loser's bracket, Wayne met up with Schuyler in a Friday afternoon game, both teams battling to stay alive in the double elimination tournament.

In a contest that went nine innings, Wayne tied the score in the top of the seventh on a two run homer by Steve Overin and added two more runs in the ninth to take a 6-4 victory. The win set up a re-match with West Point which was to have been played at 6 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 4.

The winner of the Wayne-West Point game would have faced the victor of the Blair-Jackson game in the championship final set for 8:30 p.m. last night (Sunday).

IN THE LOSS to West Point, Wayne jumped to a 3-0 lead in the first inning. After Kevin Maly reached first on an error, Steve Overin rapped out a base hit to get on base and Randy Gamble followed it up with a fielder's choice which scored a run and left him on first.

Chris Wieseler added another single and Dave Longe went to first on a second West Point error, scoring Overin and Gamble.

West Point tied the game in the bottom of the third when they combined two doubles and two singles to load the bases and bring in three runs.

West Point continued to hit off of starting pitcher Steve Overin in the fourth inning, coming up with a double and two singles before Todd Dorcey came in to relieve Overin with two outs. Dorcey gave up a single and a walk before closing out the inning with a strike out.

DORCEY SCORED a run for Wayne in the top of the fifth inning, reaching base on a walk and scoring on a RBI single by Dave Longe.

The margin widened to 12-8 in the bottom of the inning when West Point put two men on base with walks and capitalized on a series of wild pitches to load the bases. A home run with two out cleared the bases for West Point before finishing out the inning with an out at first base.

Wayne staged a rally in their half of the sixth inning, scoring four runs to close to a 12-8 deficit.

Pitching proved to be a problem for West Point in the inning as their starting pitcher gave up three walks and a single before being relieved with two outs.

Kevin Maly and Overin advanced on singles while Todd Dorcey smacked out a single to load the bases. All three scored runs on wild pitches.

Gamble walked to first and scored the final run of the game for Wayne with two out, also on a wild pitch.

Wayne notched six hits in the game including singles by Dorcey, Overin, Gamble, Wieseler, Longe and Jeff Jorgensen.

Overin tossed three strike outs in his three and two thirds innings on the mound. Dorcey also logged a trio of outs at the plate before being replaced by Randy Gamble in the sixth.

WAYNE HAD to fight from the opening pitch in the win over Schuyler, coming behind to send the game into extra innings before taking the 6-4 victory.

Schuyler started out with two runs in the bottom of the first inning, coming off of a walk and triple with one out.

Wayne tied the score 2-2 in the top of the third inning when Kevin Maly walked and scored on a Schuyler error which put Steve Overin on first.

Overin scored later in the inning on a sacrifice by Randy Gamble.

The lead again fell into the hands of Schuyler in the bottom of the sixth inning when they scored a pair of runs on a double, a pair of singles and a Wayne error.

IN THE SEVENTH, Pat Melena was thrown out at first and Kevin Maly struck out to bring Todd Dorcey to the plate. Dorcey went to first on a walk and Steve Overin blasted a game-tying two run homer over the centerfield fence to keep Wayne in the thick of things.

Both teams went scoreless in the eighth inning of play before Wayne added the winning runs in the top of the ninth. Melena came up with a base hit with one out and Maly added one of his own to put two men on before Dorcey walked to load the bases.

The go-ahead run for Wayne was walked across the plate when Overin was pitched a base on balls. The second run of the inning came when Maly scored on a sacrifice by Gamble.

Schuyler threatened with a single to open the bottom of the ninth, but struck out twice before finishing the inning with a fly out to center field.

Overin's lone hit of the day proved to be enough and led Wayne's hitting department. Maly, Longe, Jeff Jorgensen and Melena all added singles to total Wayne's five hits.

Before leaving the game at the top of the seventh inning, Overin struck out seven Schuyler batters and gave up three hits. Dorcey came in to toss five strike outs while walking one.

Midgets move on to area finals

A berth in the Area 3 finals awaited the Wayne Midget baseball team after they took a 4-2 decision over Schuyler in tournament action last Wednesday at Overin Field.

Wayne was to take on the winner of the Blair-West Point game, slated to be played on Saturday afternoon, Aug. 4.

West Point advanced to their game with Blair following a 29-3 romp over Wahoo in a game played on Wednesday.

The winner of yesterday's final game will advance to the State Class B Midget Championships being held in McCook beginning this Friday, Aug. 10.

IT WAS PERHAPS the closest contest of the year for the 21-2 Midget team, as they had to fight to maintain their lead throughout the game.

Both the Schuyler and Wayne batters struggled at the plate during the opening inning of play and Schuyler went down three in a row in the top of the second before Wayne scored their opening run of the game.

Casey Nichols filed out to centerfield before Don Larsen received a base on balls. Jeff Hausmann was thrown out at first after the Schuyler catcher lost control of the third strike, advancing Larsen to second. Larsen then went to third on a stolen base and scored with two out on an RBI single by Brent Pick.

Schuyler tied the score up 1-1 in the top of the fourth inning when their lead-off batter singled to get on base and was brought home with two outs on a base rap.

LARSEN SCORED his second run of the game in the bottom of the inning after leading off with a double and heading home on a single by Jeff Hausmann. Following a pair of strike outs, Hausmann came in for Wayne's third run of the game and Shannon Dorcey scored after taking a walk to first base and advancing on a wild pitch.

A second run by Schuyler in the top of the sixth narrowed the margin to 4-2. With one out the Schuyler batter doubled, advanced to third on a Wayne error and came in on a sacrifice fly for the score.

Larsen's double was the only extra-base hit of the game for Wayne, as he went one-for-two and walked once. Scott Baker, Hausmann, Dorcey, Nichols and Pick all had singles for Wayne's remaining hits.

Hausmann went the distance on the mound for Wayne, throwing nine strike outs in seven innings and giving up one walk while scattering seven hits.

Town Team defeats Wausa 5-0; Laurel next in division play-offs

Neil Blohm cracked out a home run and Tim Pfeiffer added a two RBI single to lift Wayne's Town Team to a 5-0 win over Wausa last Wednesday night in game two of the Tri-County league division play-offs at Randolph.

Wayne was scheduled to meet Laurel in second-round action last night (Sunday) in Laurel for game one of the best two-out-of-three series.

Scoring for Wayne started in the second inning when Jeff Dion went to first on the walk and Jerry Goeden rapped out a double to get on base. A single by Tim Pfeiffer with one out scored both Dion and Goeden, and Pfeiffer later came in to make the score 3-0.

A single by Mike Breske in the top of the fifth inning set the stage for a two-run homer by Neil Blohm with two out and gave Wayne the five run advantage.

Wayne's pitcher Joel Ankeny held Wausa to one hit on the night, a single in the third inning. Ankeny also set down nine Wausa batters at the plate, including three straight in the first and fifth innings. He allowed just two walks.

Blohm's homer led the hitting for Wayne. Goeden was two-for-four with a double and single and Al Nissen had two singles and one RBI in four at-bats.

In the A division, the Rusty Nail kept their undefeated record intact and won the championship over Thorp's Thumpers in a close 6-5 contest played on Wednesday night at the Wayne State College varsity field.

The King of Clubs claimed the top spot in the B division when they won the second of two championship games played against the PBR team on Friday evening.

PBR took the first game by a score of 9-7 to even play in the double elimination tournament before King of Clubs came back to win the deciding game 10-7.

Marty Nelson, a 1984 Laurel-Concord High School graduate, recently returned from the national conference of Future Business Leaders of America in Atlanta, Ga. June 30-July 5. Marty Nelson and two students from Crete, Arlen Nafziger and Sheri Wenz, represented Nebraska and brought home a fourth place finish in national business competition. The teams of two Hered Entrepreneurship II competition took a written test including questions about things like accounting and productivity of which the Nebraskans finished by earning the top three individual scores of the nation. The five teams with the highest average scores underwent an oral examination. The teams were given a hypothetical situation involving a business which wished to expand but was plagued by certain employee and cash flow problems. The possible solution proposed by the Nebraska students was judged fourth best.

About 3,000 students from nearly every state, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, as well as an American school in West Germany participated in the conference. Sixty-six students represented Nebraska and 11 of the 23 Nebraska teams placed in their events.

Marty is the son of Randy and Sheryl Nelson, who recently moved from Laurel to Harlan, Iowa. Marty plans to attend the University of Nebraska-Lincoln this fall and major in electrical engineering.
