Has over 700 reels

Collection keeps Lundstrom reeling

by Chuck Hackenmiller

When Max Lundstrom of Wayne was a youngster growing up in the small Kansas community of Little River, he did a lot of fishing.

Lundstrom, current Dean of Students at Wayne State College, and five other Little River neighbors would take their poles to the nearby Smokey Hill River.

"Our parents said they would rather see us on the river bank than chasing around town," Lundstrom said.

"It was just good wholesome fun," he added. "We caught lots of channel catfish there."

Since coming to Wayne and as a staff member of 27 years at Wayne State College, he schedules one major fishing trip annually. There are weekend fishing excursions and camping trips during the year — enough to satisfy his urge for catching fish and being in the outdoors.

If it came down to picking what fish he loves to reel in, his first choice would be walleyes followed by northern and trout.

"When I was in Springfield, Missouri, I caught a lot of bass. But bass is not on the top of my list," Lundstrom said.

To catch these fish requires patience, a good rod and a dependable reel.

And Lundstrom can certainly afford to be selective in the reel he uses. What makes a good reel, he said, is "a free spool and a good drag on it."

He doesn't have to look very far for the exact reel. Several of the 750 fishing reels that he collects fit the mold of his "perfect reel description."

brand names such as the Julius VomHole, Talbot, Milam, Meek, Meisselbach, Cox, Shakespeare and the Flueger Supreme, which was manufactured during 1918 and MAX'S REEL Shop adorns the top of the reel display shop.

FIVE HUNDRED of the reels are in working condition, he said. They include was still being made in the 1950's.

Some old reels are wooden and some are brass and handmade. "You don't find many like that anymore," he said.

"The best fishing reel ever made," Lundstrom said in describing the Flueger Supreme reel.

"I have almost all the Shakespeare and Flueger models," he added.

He also has a sampling of the early Kentucky type reels, which he defines as precision instruments.

Also on his display shelves are early reels that were used in the 1890's, basically on cane poles.

"There were just used then to store the lines," Lundstrom said.

Of the wooden reels he has collected, four have been from England, also used around the 1890's.

They were trolling reels used to catch salmon," he said. There are also several deep sea fishing reels in his collection.

FOR HIS PRESENT fishing trips, Lundstrom uses the old Shakespeare and Flueger reels, plus the newer models such as the Garcia and the Ambassador reels.

Many of today's reels really do not impress him, he said. None, in his opinion, have the real good drag as the older reels he collects.

He began his fishing reel collection about six years ago. Prior to delving wholeheartedly into the hobby, Lundstrom said he owned about 50 reels which he had saved or gathered from previous years.

During an auction in Sioux City in 1978 (with property belonging to a world fisherman), Lundstrom said he "came away spending $200 at the sale."

I bought some books (on fishing equipment) and found out I had something valuable," he said.

Some of Lundstrom's 750 reels are duplicated, where he might have 10 of one kind. Some are used for grade parts. Once these parts are taken from the reel, he can pass them on to other reel collectors.

Used often in "trading" to build his reel collection are rods and lures which he also collects. He is a member of the National Fishing Lure Collector's Club.

From one lure (an old Winchester with is a rare item), he received five reels. He does some lure trading currently with a man who resides from Bemidji, Minnesota.

"Several people in Wayne pick up fishing reels or other equipment locally for me. I get all kinds of tackle and lures to do a lot of trading," he said.

LUNDSTROM STARTED at Wayne State College as a placement director. Since then, he was a line coach in football, an admission director, Dean of Admission and Vice President of Admission before returning as Dean of Student Services.

Even with all these responsibilities throughout the years, he never has left behind those memories of fishing in the Smokey Hill River. "I enjoy fishing very much," he said.

Both he and his wife, Margaret, "like the outdoors." On the many fishing trips they take, he said Margaret would "rather read a book than fish."

He took his two daughters (Elaine and Marie) fishing too when they were younger. Marie, he said, is a writer for the Denver

Relocation proposal causes stir

A recent proposal to relocate the present Soil Conservation Service office from Wakefield to near Ponca has run into some concerned opposition from some Wakefield citizens.

A petition against the relocation proposed by the Dixon County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service Committee (ASCS), which has been signed by 307 registered voters from the Wakefield area, has been circulated and will be sent to Sherman Lewis, the Nebraska Soil Conservation Service (SCS) Conservationist in Lincoln.

Lewis will be the individual who will decide the fate of the proposed SCS move.

In a recent letter to the editor, published Thursday in "The Wakefield" newspaper, there has been a steady decline in the amount of cost sharing being allocated through the agricultural program according to Melvin Manz, chairman of the Dixon County ASCS Committee.

Manz said, in speaking with SCS personnel, members of the Natural Resource District board and staff, other producers in the county and people involved with conservation work from surrounding counties, that the biggest problem is lack of interest by producers in the area of the county where there is the greatest need for conservation. "Dixon County loses out to neighboring counties on the biggest share of conservation program funding because of the non participating level."

THE ASCS COMMITTEE has proposed that the SCS personnel be located in the Aowa Watershed Area (near Ponca) "where the greatest needs exist and would make a big difference in selling producers and landowners on the conservation needs."

Manz mentioned in the published letter. He added that the relocation is "at this point a proposal on the part of the county ASCS committee in the best interest of all the people of Dixon County to help solve a very important program."

The ASCS has made formal requests to the Lewis and Clark Natural Resource District and the Lower Elkhorn Natural Resource District, asking both organizations to approve the relocation proposal.

Tom Anderson, president of the Lower Elkhorn Natural Resource District (LENRD) and also a member of the Wakefield Community Club, said the NRD has a "memorandum of understanding" with the SCS. "The SCS performs all our technical work, such as water or land treatment," he said.

LENRD BOARD members referred action on the ASCS relocation request and will take no official action on the proposal until the October meeting, Anderson said. Anderson said the real problem, as he sees it, is not in geographic location.

"The ultimate problem is that we don't have enough people down there (at the SCS office in Wakefield)," he said.

"At times, he said, the office staff members

It appears that the timetable has again shifted on the Wakefield bridge project. This time forward instead of backward — as one significant development has recently occurred.

In a letter to the Wakefield Community Club on Sept. 18, Nebraska Department of Roads District Engineer Thomas McCarthy of Norfolk said the probable opening date of the bridge would be during the last week in November.

Reasoning behind this prediction, he said, was because five of the 15 beam sections had not arrived in Lincoln for the fabrication process. The beam sections were due by Sept. 24 in Lincoln.

The problem had been in obtaining the beam sections from US Steel Company, one of up to three suppliers of the size beams required for the Wakefield bridge.

evening that the five beams arrived in Lincoln three days earlier and are currently being fabricated. This will push the completion anticipation a few days ahead of ahead of schedule, he said.

"At least we're moving in the right direction," he added.

On wet weather days, McCarthy suggested the detour of the optional route, from Wakefield south and east to Pender on N 16 and then north on N 9 to Emerson.

For those traveling from Wayne to South Sioux City, he recommended taking the detour of N 15 north then N 116 and N 20. This detour route will accumulate to only five additional miles. The Wakefield to Emerson detour adds up to 22 additional miles.

He said the four mile gravel detour currently being used is "good when traveled at posted speeds." However, the road can be bad in wet weather, he added.

McCarthy said he anticipates the bridge will be completed by Elkhorn Construction Company within the number of working days which were originally designated in the bidding process.

What's up there?

STUDENTS AT the Wayne State College do a study of trees on the college campus during a warm and bright sunny afternoon.

Northeast Concord Station has new new name

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln district station at Concord has a new name. By action of the NU Board of Regents Sept. 14, the Northeast Station is now officially the Northeast Research and Extension Center. Irvin Omtved, dean and director of the UNL Agricultural Research Division, and Leo Lucas, dean and director of the UNL Cooperative Extension Service, said the new title better depicts both location and function and is "highly desirable from the standpoint of understanding among clienteles." Also, they said, the new title is more descriptive of the role and mission of UNL's Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Director of the Northeast Research and Extension Center, Cal Ward said, "Our northeast geographic designation is no change but the name, Research and Extension Center, is more descriptive of our unit than the work station. The new name also indicated our combined Research and Extension role." In other action by the NU Board of Regents, the name of the UNL Agricultural Experiment Station was changed to the UNL Agricultural Research Division.

UNL Vice Chancellor for Agriculture and Natural Resources Roy Arnold said the change eliminates the frequent misinterpretation of "Experiment Station" as a geographic location. "The new name better communicates the function of this major statewide IANR division," he said.

United Way Kick-off

Wayne's United Way Kick off Coffee will take place on Wednesday, Sept. 26 from 8:30 a.m. to 11 a.m. at Daylight Donuts.

All United Way volunteers are urged to attend and pick up their volunteer kits.

The board members for 1984 include Joyce Reeg, president; Ginny Offe, vice president; Jerry Schaefer, Gerald Conway, Marilyn Pierson, Jack Hausmann, Dave Olson, Larry Magnuson, Dave Luff and Max Kathol.

The United Way Staff includes Linda Carr, campaign chairman; Gene Lodes, assistant chairman; and Linda Baddort, secretary-treasurer.

Next Friday (Sept. 28), the Wayne Chamber of Commerce weekly coffee will take place in honor of the United Way campaign, tentatively to be located at the Middle Center above the Wayne Fire Hall.

Nebraskans for Peace seek voter registration

Voter registration on the Wayne State College campus and more involvement in the town of Wayne will be two priorities of the Wayne chapter of Nebraskans for Peace as it begins its second year. Members of the group met Tuesday afternoon on the Wayne State College campus to plan activities for the coming year and give new and old members a chance to discuss their concerns.

Nebraskans for Peace (NFP) will participate in a non-partisan coalition of student groups sponsoring voter registration on campus on Oct. 25, when an official from the county courthouse will be available to register students to vote in the November election. Students attending Wayne State are eligible to register on campus even if they do not live here permanently.

NFP endorses voter registration as part of its commitment to citizen participation in the electoral process.

OTHER ACTIVITIES suggested for this year included a film series which would be shown both on campus and downtown, and participation in a proposed Religious Emphasis Week, still in the discussion stage, in which the chapter might sponsor a workshop relating issues of peace and justice to religious values and concerns.

Nebraskans for Peace is a chapter of Clergy and Laity Concerned, a nationwide organization with many church groups and religious organizations in its membership.

The other project in which members expressed interest was participation in the Sister City program. This is a program in which cities and towns in the United States are paired with towns in the Soviet Union on a people-to-people basis. The two towns share photographs, letters, tapes, etc., and establish contact between students, churches, and ordinary citizens.

THE PROGRAM is based on the hope that through learning more about each other as people, citizens of both countries can break down the walls of fear and suspicion that divide us, and put pressure on both governments to end the arms race and work for peace. One other Nebraska city, Lincoln, has been assigned a "sister city" in the USSR and the program is operating in many other citizens and towns all over the U.S.

Nebraskans for Peace will meet again Wednesday, Oct. 3 at 5 p.m. in the Humanities Commons area of the college. Anyone seeking more information on any of the chapter's activities is invited to contact Sæyre Andersen or Rita Kissen, both at Wayne State College, 375-2200.

Chemical abuse focus of counsel program

The Family Support Service Program will begin to hold group sessions at Monroe Mental Health Center in Norfolk on Tuesday, October 2 from 7 to 8 p.m. Thereafter the group will continue to meet weekly at the same time on Tuesdays.

The families who are experiencing problems due to chemical abuse or chemical dependence will benefit from this counseling program. The group sessions are for all family members including children. The children will be in separate groups from adults where necessary.

The program will help families understand themselves better, to find solutions to their problems and especially to discover each family's strengths and resources as a family. Families coping with chemical abuse and everyday life stresses will be helped in their search for living together more happily through education, support and group dynamics. Times will be spent exploring alternatives for effective family living.

The Family Support Service Program for the ongoing group sessions will be facilitated by Mr. Alfredo Ramirez, M.S.W., supervisor of the Touchstone Community Alcohol and Drug Abuse Services from Monroe Mental Health Center. Marilyn Davis, M.A., an Alcohol and Drug Abuse Counselor also with Touchstone, will be co-facilitator.

A fee will be charged for the 12 week sessions according to family size. Registration for the beginning classes should be completed by September 28. For more information and registration material contact Monroe Mental Health Center at 371-7530 or 1-800-672-8232. Later enrollments are welcomed for ongoing sessions.

Individuals may attend sessions with or without total family participation. The program will be conducted in a confidential manner.

"I can't think of a better place to relax and get away from everything — in a boat or along the river bank," he said.

"It's just you and the fish out there. No interruptions. I think out a few things when out there," he said.

are all working in the field and the half-time secretary/receptionist is not present, leaving nobody to answer the phone at the SCS office. Anderson said LENRD committee members appear to be leaning toward retaining the SCS office at Wakefield, requesting more manpower for the office and improvement of communication between both the ASCS office and the SCS office.

Anderson said the newest employee at the Dixon County SCS office, Lowell Johnson, should be given a chance to bring more farmers into participation of soil and water conservation programs. "He's aggressive, knows the people and we're confident he'll do the job for us," Anderson mentioned.

He said the Lower Elkhorn Natural Resource District and Lewis and Clark

Natural Resource District "are not battling" but working to resolve the problems which the ASCS committees have specified. And the Wakefield Community Club is not taking the position to battle with Ponca for the SCS office location. "That [battling] doesn't get anything done," Anderson said.

TOM GUSTAFSON, a representative of the Rural Affairs Committee of the Wakefield Community Club, wrote to State conservationist Lewis and said "the good will from which your people and programs have created during the many years in this area of the county will be seriously eroded if this office [in Wakefield] is moved."

Gustafson, in his Sept. 14 letter to Lewis, said Ponca is the location of the Dixon County Courthouse, ASCA and FHA and Wakefield area citizens have "found it necessary to travel to Ponca to license vehicles, pay their taxes, participate in farm programs and borrow money from FHA."

"It should not be a hardship for the citizens in northern Dixon County to travel our way for this one government service," Gustafson, a Dixon County farmer, said if it was necessary to have Dixon County ASCS and SCS under one roof, the Wakefield Community Club would propose that the Dixon County ASCS be moved to Wakefield.

"The Wakefield Community Club would be pleased to assist in every way possible," he said in the letter.

Gustafson's letter was sent to Jim Lalleur, area conservationist, Larry Welterberg, district conservationist, Anderson, Jim Worthman, chairman of the Lewis and Clark Natural Resource District, and to Manz

NPPD gets go-ahead to build line

The Nebraska Public Power District (NPPD) and the Winnebago Indian Nation announced the signing of a right-of-way agreement which will permit NPPD to complete construction of a vital transmission line in Northeast Nebraska.

NPPD is constructing a 345,000-volt line from the Raun Substation in Iowa, owned by Iowa Public Service, to NPPD's Hoskins Substation near Hoskins, Neb. The line will cross the Winnebago Reservation in Thurston County, Neb. The line is required to supply growing agricultural and industrial electric loads and to stabilize the transmission system in Northeast Nebraska.

Construction is complete on the line from the Raun Substation south of Sioux City over the Missouri River west to Dakota County and structures have been erected from the Hoskins Substation east and north to Thurston County.

Under terms of the agreement, NPPD has been granted right-of-way easements across 30 tracts of Indian land in Thurston County, enabling NPPD to forego costly and time-consuming condemnation proceedings that have been pending in U.S. Federal District Court.

Tribe paying for the actual construction costs of the sanctuaries.

NPPD General Manager Don Schaufelberger, in signing the agreement, cited the cooperation between NPPD and the Winnebago Indian Nation in reaching agreement for the right-of-way.

"Good things often happen in the negotiation process," Schaufelberger said. "This settlement shows that good faith negotiations can mutually benefit all parties involved. It is in the best interest of NPPD, its ratepayers and NPPD customers in Northeast Nebraska, including the Winnebago Indian Nation, to expedite completion of this badly needed high voltage transmission line."

Reuben Snake, Chairman of the Winnebago Nation, stated that "The Winnebago Nation has demonstrated clearly that through negotiations with companies, it can achieve self-determination and enhance self-government. The present settlement is an indication of the fact that the Indians are in a position to measure the opportunity cost of their business ventures and interact with the business world in a productive and fruitful manner while preserving their cherished Indian values."

Man dies near Wayne

A 65-year-old crop insurance adjuster from Kansas died Wednesday afternoon following inspection of a field on a farm about 11 miles west and 1/2 mile south of Wayne.

Ralph H. Wedd, Jr. of Lawrence, Kansas collapsed in his vehicle after making an inspection of a soybean field on the Dale Stoltenberg farm. With Wedd at the time of the inspection were Dick Diltman of Wayne, Verlyn Stoltenberg of Carroll and another insurance adjuster.

Diltman said Wedd had just completed the inspection and had entered the car and closed the car door before collapsing. "We did the best we could to get him to the hospital," Diltman said.

Sheriff LeRoy Janssen said an autopsy will be performed to determine the cause of Wedd's death.
