Legislature gives go-ahead for Rice addition at WSC

by Chuck Hackenmiller

Wayne State College President Ed Elliott couldn't have been happier Friday afternoon.

Twenty-five votes were needed and 27 were received from the Nebraska Legislature as Wayne State College officials received the go-ahead Thursday morning to seek bond revenue financing for its proposed new 50,324 square foot Recreation/Intramural/Physical Education Center (Rice-Carlson Addition).

"Yes, I'm really elated by the approval. I worked hard, as others had, over the last 18 months in getting this project approved," said Elliott.

"If (the new recreation facility) should provide a sense of satisfaction for the community of Wayne, it represents a positive addition to the community," he said.

"We're pleased too for the city of Wayne and the people it represents during this difficult economic time. The project will infuse a lot of new money into the community, and that can't hurt," he added. "It makes the campus and what we offer more attractive, he said. "A beautiful campus and good facilities are what attracts students...and teachers," he said. "If you don't have a good physical plant, you are not going to have a lot to sell."

"This (the addition) adds a dimension that we hadn't really had in the past."

"But we have a long way to go before people can start jogging, playing basketball or sit in the sauna inside the new facility," he said.

The date which Wayne State College officials plan to have the Rice-Carlson addition occupied is September of 1987.

"My staff will now be assuming the responsibility on a day to day basis of monitoring the activity going on with the project."

AMOUNT OF the 20 to 25 year long term bond sale needed to complete the projected $3.1 million Rice-Carlson Addition ranges from $3.2 to $3.3 million, according to Wayne

State College Dean of Finance John Struve. The long term bond will be sold in 1988. Short term bond anticipation notes will be obtained up till 1988, according to Struve, who will have supervision of the project from this point on.

Two bonds will be retired in 1988 which were used in financing the construction of the college's student center and the Carlson Natatorium.

The upcoming retirement of these bonds was what prompted Elliott and his staff 18 months ago to look into expansion of the Rice-Carlson facility. It was in May, 1984 when the WSC administration was given approval by the state board of trustees to formulate and develop plans for the new facility.

In July, the architect firm of Bahr, Vermeer and Haecker of Omaha was retained to prepare the program statement for the project. That program statement was approved by the state board of trustees who met on the Wayne State College campus in November of 1984.

NEBRASKA legislature coincided unanimously with the state board of trustee's recommendation.

At the upcoming March 6th state college board of trustee meeting, Elliott will request permission to seek an underwriter for the bond and will review development plans.

The 50,000 plus square feet of available space in the new facility was "designed to fit what we felt was within a satisfactory budget," Elliott said.

"That satisfactory budget is what we can safely assign to the project from revenue that is available now and revenue from the project that is available in the future," he said.

"The taxpayers' money is not and will not be used in financing the facility. They money will be paid by users of the facility," he added.

Once the project is completed, intramural activity and some inside practice sports will be shifted from the Rice facilities to the new building.

One reason that there is not a larger percentage of facility users is because there is no place to shoot baskets, no place to jog or lift weights without conflicting with varsity sports, classes or scheduled intramural sports.

This is an architect's rendering of what the addition will appear as, looking at the facility from the east. The new complex is at left.

"First and foremost, the facility will be for Wayne State College student's use," Elliott said.

PUBLIC USE OF the facility will also be encouraged at different levels.

"We hope area high schools will use it for indoor training purposes. It will generally be available (and assessed accordingly) for high school track meets (on inclement days). It would be available for groups of people, with a user fee likely. And there is the possibility of having membership of private use, during the off-student hours," Elliott mentioned.

At the present facilities, he said public use of the recreational equipment is "hardly available."

"We have to schedule for early in the morning and later in the evening just to meet the academic and intramural (recreation) needs of the students," he said.

Those students who pay room and board at the college will see an increase in their fees next year by about 1 percent and in 1988-89 between 3 percent to 6 percent. A $3 increase will also be tacked on to what is paid for facility fees.

Built into the financing plan of the facility is to add custodial staff. But there is no plan to increase the professional staff at the college.

The location of the building will be north of Rice-Carlson, covering the area currently occupied by the tennis courts. The five tennis courts will be relocated to the north end of the stadium parking lot, according to the program statement proposal.

ELLIOTT SAID he hopes to have the courts in place by September of this year.

Forty-five parking spots are expected to be lost where the tennis courts will be placed. However, Elliott said that difference can be evened out by allowing parking on the north side of the new complex.

According to the project time schedule as presented in the program statement, architect/engineer for the Rice-Carlson building project will be confirmed in March of 1985. Prior to construction, there will be a period when schematic designs, design development and contract documents will be approved.

Construction could begin on the structure by February of 1986.

Struve said bids for construction of the tennis courts could arrive within three months. He expects the bids to come in on the building project, after the architects compose the bidding specifications, by February of 1986.

Proposed areas outlined

Inside the Rice-Carlson Addition will be the following proposed areas:

- Multi-purpose room — 38,100 square feet. An area for various physical activities, serves all user groups. This multi-purpose space is to accommodate four basketball courts with markings for four volleyball courts, four badminton courts and two tennis courts; 1/10 mile competitive running track; pole vault; long jump; shot-put; seating for 300 spectators; special groups/events.
- Four racquetball courts — 3,200 square feet. For intramural and recreational use by students, faculty, staff and community.
- Gymnastics/Wrestling — 1,670 square feet. Space provided for intramurals and general recreation.
- Weight room — 1,400 square feet. Supplement existing weight room. Existing area in Rice could be solely used for varsity. To be used for training, conditioning and increasing body strength.
- Dance/Aerobics — 1,220 square feet. For instructional use, general student recreational use and community participation.
- Two meeting rooms — 1,200 square feet. General purpose space to be used for group meetings, conferences and some recreational activities.
- Sauna — 48 square feet. Relaxation and minor therapeutic treatment.
- Control center — 120 square feet. Work/planning area to house building manager and staff; to monitor persons entering, leaving and using facility; should be able to view facility and control by use of control panel the backboards, lights, access pins, temperature, ventilation, drop nets and possibly bleachers.
- Other rooms — 550 square feet. Restrooms, storage room and custodial facilities.

That's stretching it

WARMER WEATHER The past several days has caused the thawing process to begin throughout the area. For some, like this horse pictured alongside Highway 4 north of Wakefield, warmer temperatures have also exposed additional eating grounds. Of course, the grass is always greener on the other side of the fence.

DMSO: A medical breakthrough?

by Chuck Hackenmiller

The user of the drug D.M.S.O. in this story is under a fictitious name to protect the source's identity.

It's been just over a year since Sandy traveled across the Texas border into Mexico to the special medical clinic.

It was there she heeded the recommendation of a friend to receive intravenous injections of the drug Dimethyl Sulfoxide (D.M.S.O.) — a solvent made out of tree sap.

Prior to the clinic visit in Mexico, Sandy said she was painfully experiencing rheumatoid arthritis in her hip.

"If you've never had it, it's like a steady pain — like a toothache. It got so painful I could only lay on my back at times and not on either of my sides," said Sandy, who is 61 years old.

"I had been to the hospital in Rochester (Minnesota) and had cortisone shots, but they only last so long," she said.

Sandy's friend who recommended D.M.S.O. treatment had also been suffering from arthritis. Her friend took the treatment nearly eight years ago. "She hasn't had it since," Sandy said.

"I was skeptical about it at first. We were going to San Antonio, Texas anyway, so I made an appointment at the clinic [in Mexico]."

She allowed herself extra time before the appointment in case she changed her mind and decided not to go through with the treatment.

"I wanted to go and take a look at the clinic and talk to the people over there who have gone through the treatment," Sandy said.

UPON VISITING the clinic in Mexico, she became convinced to give the treatment a try.

"It was the cleanest Mexican town that I have ever been in. There were people waiting in the clinic's office and they all swore by the treatment," Sandy said.

She checked in at a hotel in Eagle Pass, Texas (which was just across the border from the Mexico clinic). Her treatment began on Jan. 1 and continued for two more days.

The D.M.S.O. treatment, she said, took three days. Prior to the D.M.S.O. injections, Sandy underwent a health screening.

"The first intravenous injection went slower than the injection on the second day and the third day," she said.

"I noticed the difference after the first day of the injection. So far the treatment has worked real good."

She is no longer experiencing the arthritis. A year's supply of medication furnished by the clinic isn't needed.

"Also before the injections, my hands experienced stiffness. Now they are not stiff," Sandy said.

Cost of the treatment during the three days was approximately $1,395, according to Sandy.

"It is not expensive as long as the treatment is really worth it," she said.

ACCORDING TO a source from the University of Nebraska Hospital in Omaha, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) hasn't approved the drug D.M.S.O. for human use.

"It has also been withdrawn (by the FDA) from investigative status for human use," said Dr. Lynell Klassen, Associate Professor of Medicine and Chief of Rheumatology and Immunology at the University of Nebraska Medical Center. He is also Chief of Rheumatology of the Omaha VA Hospital.

It is not legal, he said, to have D.M.S.O. prescribed for human use in one state when the drug is manufactured in another state.

"In other words, those in Nebraska can't be prescribed the drug if it is made in Oklahoma," Klassen said.

"In the state of Oregon, medical use of the drug is legal since it is being produced there. It (D.M.S.O.) is being sold in filling stations in Oregon," he said.

Food and Drug Administration had approved research of D.M.S.O. prior to 1965, Klassen said. However, that approval was rescinded later in 1965 when there were noted changes in the level of cataracts, which had risen with fairly high doses of D.M.S.O.

"It caused a side effect with cataract development," he said.

"Klassen said he is not one who 'doubts' when a drug is attributed to a cure. The University of Nebraska Medical Center uses D.M.S.O. to store bone marrow. Some suggestions by medical studies say the drug is helpful in soft tissue injuries, such as sports-related injuries — helping the injury to heal more rapidly.

However, the first thing that is vital to any understanding of the therapy for arthritis, he said, is "that there are over 130 different types of arthritis."

WHAT WORKS ON one arthritis case might not perform equally to another and there are some physicians who do not separate the diagnosis when applying the D.M.S.O. dosage.

Another factor to consider, Klassen said, is the "placebo effect." Placebo is defined as a substance that has no medicinal value but is given to satisfy a patient.

In a study involving 100 people, 1/2 of the patients were given D.M.S.O. and the other 1/2 were given something that looked similar to the drug. Twenty to 30 percent of the patients that were given the similar drug had responded.

An October 1982 review, written by Jimenez Wilkins of the University of Washington Medical School in the Journal of Laboratory and Clinical Medicine also revealed "some very good studies," Klassen said.

THREE HUNDRED rheumatoid arthritis patients were treated D.M.S.O. or a placebo solution and there were no signs of improvements among the D.M.S.O. group, he said.

When speaking of degenerative arthritis, there have been several studies that show the drug reduces the pain one or two days after applying it. "It will help for one or two days, but shows there have been no long-lasting effects," Klassen said.

Supplying the drug intravenously has been "absolutely unproven," he said.

"There have been no suggestions that this has been helpful or no indication as to why the drug is expected to work."

Evidence does show that when the drug is given intravenously, there is a breakdown of red blood cells. The more D.M.S.O. is used, the more breakdown of red blood cells you get, he added.

Klassen said the drug could cause severe liver disease and it is reported to cause brain swelling in patients.

D.M.S.O., he said, had been given to animals who were also provided with bacteria. "The animals were not able to kill the bacteria."

Another side effect is the "garlic-type" breath which he said results from taking the drug.

When applied to the skin, 80 percent of the patients receive rashes and a couple of patients have resulted in obtaining significant fevers, Klassen said.

WHS, WSC bands performing

A combined concert by the Wayne Carroll High School and Wayne State College concert bands is scheduled Tuesday, Feb. 26 in Ramsey Theatre on the college campus.

Ron Dalton, high school band director, said each band will perform individually in 30 minute segments, beginning with the high school band at 7:30 p.m.

Dalton added that Tuesday night's concert by the Wayne High band is a preview of what the band will perform during the 1985 Nebraska State Bandmasters Convention on March 1 in Lincoln. Wayne was among five high school bands chosen last month to perform at the convention. The 96 musicians will perform a 1 p.m. concert at Kimball Auditorium on the University of Nebraska campus.

Also needed are former Air Force people with experience in air-traffic control, aircraft systems, aircraft weapons-maintenance, avionics and ground communications to name a few.

People who want to find out if they are eligible to enlist during this special recruiting drive should contact MSgt. Marshall at 571-3818.

Adding on to Rice

The $3.1 billion cost to build a complex attached to the present Rice Auditorium-Carlson Nadatorium certainly doesn't look to appealing right now for those people struggling in a depressed economy. But we are convinced that Wayne State College has a need for this certain type of facility. Sharing the varsity basketball floor between the Wildcats during practices and intramural pick-up games can be confusing at times. In the lower level of the auditorium are handball courts which can produce irritating noise to those who are trying to learn something in the nearby classrooms. Comparing a game of basketball to thousands of lost dollars in equipment isn't comforting. But it is important that the college continue its goal of making the campus attractive and enticing to students, particularly in Wayne — as the college is the city's largest employer. Since the college administration assures that there will be no taxpayer's money involved in financing the project, then those who are unable to use the facility (that are non-students) should not feel cheated. Students who pay room and board and facility fees will likely be hit with a percentage or two increase. They, and many other students on the campus, will be the ones who have priority over the public in use of the facility. The new facility will not benefit the city of Wayne on the tax rolls because it would be tax exempt. However, it will have a drawing power attracting the students, faculty and residents not only from Wayne but surrounding communities. Enrollment figures at Wayne State College are on the rise and the college should accommodate its growing population on campus by offering wellness programs and physical education through intramural sports to its students and faculty members. It was a bold move by the college administration to make the choice in adding on to Rice-Carlson. If the project were to be financed totally with tax dollars from the state of Nebraska, there would be screams from the taxpayers and rightfully so. But being that the project is being financed by bond revenue sold to individuals, banks or others on the markets — then now is the time for the college to take advantage of the financing opportunity to provide quality recreational facilities for our post-secondary students.

political notes

Nebraska Representative Doug Bereuter said he will co-sponsor a bill to extend federal revenue sharing for three years. Under current law, the revenue sharing program should remain for one more year, but the Reagan Administration's budget proposal calls for its termination. Revenue sharing is the main source of federal dollars for most of our counties and smaller cities. Bereuter said, "It provides funds for use in law enforcement, libraries, senior citizen centers, bridge and other local programs and projects. The Administration's proposal to eliminate this program has some very serious ramifications for state and local governments." In the present fiscal year, Nebraskans will benefit from $30.7 million in federal revenue sharing funds. Approximately $15 million goes to counties, $14.5 million to townships. "State and local governments are just emerging from a period of severe fiscal stress caused by two back to back recessions which caused the highest unemployment and business failure rates since the depression, and our agricultural communities are in severe distress. All of this has caused massive erosion of their tax bases. This is no time to pull the rug out from under them by eliminating these badly needed federal funds," said Bereuter. U.S. Senator Jim Exon has introduced emergency legislation to aid farmers and ranchers through the current farm debt crisis. Exon said the legislation is a product of a bipartisan group of Members of Congress from rural areas of the nation who "reject the Administration's claim that the farm debt crisis has been caused by farmers." He emphasized that "farmers are not the victims of this crisis and not the perpetrators." To aid farmers and ranchers the legislation provides: 1. Advance Commodity Credit Corporation loans to producers of 1985 crops; 2. A debt restructuring mechanism at a low interest rate of 2 1/2 percent above the Federal Reserve discount rate; 3. A 90 percent government guarantee on loans provided through the farm credit system and commercial lenders; 4. And an emergency transfer of personnel from agencies of the Department of Agriculture to the Farmers Home Administration. The legislation, without significant budget impact, will give our family operated farms and ranches the necessary short term assistance to get them through the next 45 day period and provide some breathing room." Exon said.

There is an issue currently in the courts concerning the prohibition of corporal punishment in licensed child-care facilities. Some agencies want the prohibition dropped to allow spanking. The corporal punishment ban was initiated to stop what was considered abusive acts to children, causing and inflicting pain. The Omaha World Herald has taken the editorial stance that some parents believe in corporal punishment and prefer that their children be under the care of people who feel the same way. They should have the right to make such a decision, just as parents who oppose corporal punishment should. First of all, I wish the term "corporal punishment" was changed. It instills thoughts of court martial...the thoughts of facing a wall against a line of soldiers as you ask for one last cigarette. My personal feelings is that a little tap on the posterior of those that are child care center age, coupled with a scowl on the face, is probably enough for the young child to know he or she has been bad. As the young child grows older, then it is better to reason than to strike softly. But not at the age of two or three. There are so many things that a young child of that age just doesn't understand, or you can't say "Now listen son. This is the way it is." What would you say to a two year old who: Just doesn't understand that in today's society, people just don't go throwing peas off the plate just to watch them bounce on the kitchen floor. Decides to dye his hair with grape jelly and his best shirt with peanut butter. Has this ambition to be an artist and forgets about using the coloring book and pours out his creativeness on the living room wallpaper. Enjoys turning on the water faucets but acts like its damnation time because it's time for his bath, or decides to become a tumbling acrobat just when its time to dress him in the morning. Has this habit of contradicting everything you say and it seems that "no" is the only word in his vocabulary. Has anybody tried reasoning with a two-year-old who complains his grape sucker was confiscated before supper without war-fair when in reality it was removed as to not spoil their appetite? Does anyone know what it is like to reason a small child into swallowing a spoonful of the most vulgar-fasting medicine in the whole world, telling the child that the drug will cure his hacking cough? Try reasoning with a child who won't do any activity with you unless the show "Mr. Rogers" or "Sesame Street" is off the air. We as parents know that at these tender ages, reasoning sometimes isn't the answer. Shaking a child profusely or spanking a child with the purpose of inflicting severe pain should certainly not be allowed. I don't agree with belt-whipping out in the woods. There are other ways to demand respect. We had a home room teacher who disciplined by using a two by four board drilled with holes. Purpose of the holes, of course, is to cut down on the amount of air that would have softened the blow if the student required disciplining. He would then strike the guilty party's posterior. Evidently it never discouraged the pranks and such that went on in the school because the instructor had to use it so often. On that same line of thought, I don't think making a child stand in the corner for a whole afternoon or finish supper without dessert is going to discourage a youngster from again digging into a fresh cherry pie which was made fresh for evening supper. Tone of voice can be a deterrent in most instances, mixed with a gentle spanking. When I was young, any naughty activity which was initiated by me brought on an ear boxing and a loud scolding. Usually that was enough to keep me from doing the same thing again. While in grade school, there was a real bully who always picked on the younger kids. As he grew older and advanced into the junior high age, the lad became more and more of a bully — sometimes striking or kicking the younger youths. He was considered uncontrollable by the teaching staff at this level, since his strength and size were too much for the older and frail women teachers to reckon with. I often wondered what it would have been like if this fellow would have been spanked once or twice during his earlier years in grade school. Would he have been such a dominant threat to younger kids and teachers? This fellow was so mean that if he told someone to jump headfirst into a puddle of mud, the student would — if you played basketball and he was on the other team and he wanted the ball — you handed it to him. If he said you were a nerd, you were a nerd and no argument about it. So what am I saying? I guess I'm for a gentle spanking when deserved "now and then" at the early age — and reasoning as the child matures.

Farm programs should be on diet

Did you know that Uncle Sam pays $10 for every hundred pounds of milk that dairy farmers agree not to produce? Or that your government spent $12 billion in 1983 paying farmers not to grow grain and cotton? Did you know that $11 large farms were given more than $1 million each in government payments last year, at a time when record numbers of farm families were tottering on the brink of foreclosure? And did you know that these and other farm programs have a double-whammy effect on you — the public. You pay as taxpayers and again as consumers. Take the dairy program; for instance. Increases in the government milk support price pushed program costs to a record $2.6 billion in 1983. At the same time, consumers were paying hundreds of millions of dollars in higher retail prices for milk, cheese and ice cream. But despite massive injections of taxpayers' dollars, the farm economy remains depressed, with declining farm income and record indebtedness. This is the sorry harvest of government farm programs and policies which are rooted in the Dust Bowl days of the late 1920s and 1930s; and which now fail to keep pace with rapid changes in the structure and technology of modern agriculture. In the next few months, Congress will begin to fashion a new "Farm Bill" or agriculture law that will determine the scope and direction of federal farm policy for the rest of this decade and beyond. The prospect of new, multi-year farm legislation has generated intense public debate and widespread awareness that the farm programs of yesterday won't meet the challenges of today and tomorrow. What's wrong with farm programs? For starters, they cost too much. Annual federal outlays for crop supports have risen from between $2 billion and $3 billion during much of the 70s to $19 billion in 1983, the latest year for which figures are available. AT THE SAME TIME, the congressionally mandated programs benefit large producers who need them least. For example, in 1983, the largest 12 percent of all farms were given nearly half of total government payments. Another problem is that Congress sets minimum or guaranteed commodity prices at levels higher than world market prices. This adds to consumers' grocery bills, prices of U.S. commodities out of world markets and induces farmers to produce for government warehouses rather than the marketplace.

Government administrators have tried to deal with burgeoning grain, cotton and dairy surpluses caused by overly generous price guarantees by attempting to control the volume of production. But production controls — such as paying farmers not to farm — have made the situation only worse. Foreign competitors have taken advantage of U.S. cutbacks in production by expanding their own production and taking over our export markets. Instead of reducing farm output, we should use our vast agricultural potential to benefit U.S. farmers, our economy, America's position in world trade and the millions of starving and malnourished people in the developing world. The new Farm Bill will be a crucial test of how serious Congress and the administration are about cutting federal spending and ending the failed and wasteful policies of the past. Our elected officials should seize this opportunity to cut farm subsidies, dump production controls and free farmers to compete in world markets. This means that Uncle Sam should get out of the tractor seat and let farmers, not government planners, decide how much to grow. The Agriculture Department has spent billions of dollars to induce greater production, and then billions more to reduce it. IN ADDITION, the government should no longer set the price of crops in a misguided effort to prop up farm income. Artificially high crop prices penalize consumers, undermine export competitiveness and give windfall benefits to big farmers with low production costs per unit. If Congress insists on supplementing farm income, it should do so with direct payments targeted to the neediest farmer. These fundamental reforms should be brought about in a gradual and orderly fashion. The adjustment to market-responsive agriculture will cause some pain and discomfort, but the end result will be a more efficient, competitive farm sector. The alternative is to keep on the same path with the certainty of huge costs, loss of export markets and farmers' dependent on government largesse. If Congress doesn't have the guts to tackle the bloated, obsolete farm programs, can we realistically expect spending cuts in other government programs? (Hardy is manager for food and agriculture policy for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.)

Well behaved porkers are appreciated at Wayne Care Centre To the editor: Late news item from Pig Day. No mention was made of the hog farmer who brought in the two pigs for the residents to see. He was Larry Nichols whose wife, Mary, is one of our nurses, an RN. We appreciate such well-behaved porkers. Jimmie Thorsden especially liked them. Carried one around in his arms. As I was going down to see the pigs, Dr. Bob passed by and told me "Now don't you be taking them up to your room." I just laughed. I should have told him that they would look cute with a bright pink ribbon and a band around their neck. Two ears of corn were passed around for folks to guess the number of kernels on each ear. Mrs. Ruser's guess was the closest and she was chosen the queen for Pig Day. Harold Gildersleeve was chosen king for the day. His last name was misspelled in the picture. Also there was a hog calling contest in which Grace Millie won first prize, a small bank (piggy). Herb Bruhn also won a prize in the hog calling contest.

On St. Valentine's Day we had a puzzle to solve. One was a red heart that was cut in several pieces to form a heart. I am not sure who won a prize in this. Also each person was given a long piece of paper with the word Valentine at the top to see how many words one could find. Harold Gildersleeve and I had over 130 words each so we each received a package of candy corn. We had refreshments of red jello and a cookie. Jimmie Thorsden's birthday was on the 15th. Mary Nichols baked him a heart-shaped cake all decorated with fancy frosting and had his friends stop in for cake and ate large chocolate ice cream hearts on a stick to enjoy. I also was asked to stop in and enjoyed the delicious refreshments. So it was a fun-filled week for all and Roberta and Rita deserve much credit for all the work they did to make everything go so well. Anna K. Meier Wayne Care Centre

Staying alive and well

"Staying Alive and Well" is the theme for the 1985 Helen Becker Conference on Family Health to be held March 20 at the Villa Inn in Norfolk.

Many people are interested in healthy lifestyles, and this conference is tailored toward them.

This year's conference features 15 workshops on topics including family stress, consumer rights, lifestyle choices, blood pressure control, medicare and supplemental insurance, weight control, water quality, over-the-counter drugs, exercise and aging, diabetes, child and spouse abuse, and others.

There is something for everyone from infants to grandparents at the all-day conference.

THE CONFERENCE was established as a memorial to Helen Becker, a former extension specialist for health education with the Cooperative Extension Service.

It's mission is to emphasize the responsibility of the individual and the role of the family in improving personal health.

The conference this year will focus on the responsibility of all community members to enable each person to live in a healthful environment.

Dr. Herman Witte, Department of Preventive and Stress Medicine, University of Nebraska Medical Center in Omaha, will deliver the keynote address.

Dr. Witte will speak on self-fulfilling prophecies in health. How a person views himself and his relationship to others determines much of his behavior and health status.

A SPECIAL presentation by local 4-H'ers will outline the opportunities available through 4-H health projects.

Four 4-H'ers will share their enthusiasm for the fourth H — Health — during the noon luncheon.

Advance registrations to attend the conference are requested by March 15, but walk-ins will be accepted the day of the conference. Early registration is encouraged to insure participants will be able to attend the workshops of their choice.

Wakefield edges closer to state with 28-25 win over Allen

A pair-of-free throws by senior Brian Soderberg with 18 seconds left on the clock iced a 28-25 win for the Wakefield Trojans over Allen in a subdistrict playoff game Thursday night at Lyons.

With the win, Wakefield stands within one game of making it to the Nebraska boys state tournament. The Trojans will match up with 13-7 Macy in a district playoff game slated for Tuesday, Feb. 26, beginning at 7:30 p.m. in the Homer High School gym.

The Eagles saw their season end with a 9-8 record, which goes down as the first winning season for the Allen boys cage program in over 10 years.

"We said at the beginning of the year that district tournament time was the start of a whole new season," said Wakefield Coach Clark Coco. "Right now we look at our record as being 2-0."

THE TROJANS surprised no one when they came out in their familiar slow-paced offense in the first quarter, and it worked to their advantage. They were able to take control of the game and capitalize on several Eagle turnovers and take a 4-0 lead before Craig Noe hit a field goal for Allen's first score, with 3:03 remaining. Wakefield rattled off six points in the following minutes and held a 10-4 lead into the second quarter.

Wakefield upped their lead to 14-4 on points by Soderberg and Brad Lund, but Allen began to work their way back into the game on a series of free throws and closed the gap to 15-3 at the half on three straight baskets by Kevin Malcom and Mitch Pettit.

"I had hoped that we would show more patience," said Allen Coach Dave Uldrich. "Wakefield played a very good game, and we were slow coming out the first quarter and a half of the game. At the end of the second quarter, we started going the opposite way under the basket, and we got some points."

Coco said that Allen's scoring quickened the offensive pace of the game, and his team may have lost some of their composure at that point. "We gave up a lot of fouls, and got into a pace of game we didn't like."

SCORING CAME TO an almost complete standstill in the third quarter, with the two teams combining for six points overall. Allen tied the game at 15-15 on a shot by Steve Jones after taking the opening jump, and again at 17-17 on a field goal by Noe from the top of the key with 4:40 left. From that point it was a ball-handling duel and neither team added points in the quarter.

Allen broke a 19-19 tie with a basket by Noe with 4:15 left in the game, and held on to their first lead of the game down to 1-42, when Brad Lund potted a field goal from the corner to put Wakefield back on top 24-23.

Brian Soderberg broke loose with an Eagle turnover to drop in a layup and increase the lead to 26-23 with 44 seconds left, but a pair of free throws by Shawn Mahler seconds later clipped the Trojans' margin to 26-25.

The Eagles turned the ball over on a five-second call with 21 seconds left and a foul underneath the Wakefield basket, sent Soderberg to the line, where he dropped in his game-winning pair of free throws.

Soderberg accounted for 18 of Wakefield's 28 points, hitting seven field goals and shooting a perfect 4-4 from the line. Brad Lund was next in line with six points.

FOR ALLEN, Craig Noe logged eight points and three teammates, Shawn Mahler, Jay Jones and Kevin Malcom, each added four points.

Shooting was at a minimum in the game as Allen put the ball up 29 times and scored on nine for 31 percent, while Wakefield made 11 of 34 shot attempts for a 32 percent average.

"A big key in the game for us was the fact that when we got behind in the fourth quarter, we didn't panic. We just got the ball to our good ball handlers," said Coco. "Allen ran a tough 3-2 zone throughout the night and it was tough for us to play against that."

"Wakefield held the ball a lot in the third quarter and there were few shot attempts by either team...that made a big difference in the game," said Uldrich.

The turnover factor spelled trouble throughout the night for the Eagles, as they gave up the ball 20 times, compared to nine for Wakefield.

"I told the team before the game that when they were in a slow game, they would have to take advantage of every possession and at least get a shot off each time. We gave up the ball too much...we couldn't give up the ball that much and win."

BOTH COACHES agreed that defense was going to be a primary aspect of the game, and neither was disappointed. "In games like this at the end of the season, it is usually the defense that decides the outcome," said Coco.

"Defensively, I knew both teams could handle that part of the game well, and it would come down to the fourth quarter to decide the winner in the game," Uldrich added.

"I was not disappointed with the effort of our team...they gave a good effort and they lost to a good team," Uldrich said. "It's our first winning season in over 10 years, and that speaks a lot for everyone on the team...we have added more wins to the record each year and we hope to see those improvements continue."

Looking towards the Macy game, Coco said they feature a run-and-gun style of play, and will present as tough of challenge as any the Trojans have faced so far. "They play the press a lot and have a height advantage over us."

Wayne Blue Devils big third quarter ousts Scotus in B-4 district opener

The luck of the Irish deserted Columbus Scotus in the third quarter of their game against the Wayne High Blue Devils Friday night.

Up to that point, the Shamrocks had held their own in the Class B-4 district opening round game, leading much of the first half and standing deadlocked with the Blue Devils 22-22 at the half.

But, in the initial two minutes of the third period, Wayne burned the nets for three unanswered points and took a 31-22 lead behind the scoring efforts of Rod Dahl and Don Larsen to hold out for a 34-21 win and advanced to the semi-final round game versus Columbus-Lakeview Saturday night at 8:15 p.m. at Northeast Technical Community College in Norfolk.

COLUMBUS-LAKEVIEW, 16-5 and rated eighth in Class B, earned their spot in the semifinal round game with a convincing 67-51 over Hartington Cedar Catholic in Columbus. In an earlier game between Wayne and the Vikings, the Blue Devils came from behind to score a 50-45 win at home.

"We were able to get the ball to the inside more and started reversing it well," said Wayne Coach Bob Uhing. "We needed to be patient offensively and the kids just came out and did it."

Scotus opened the game's scoring and broke a 2-2 tie to take the lead and hold it throughout the entire first quarter. The first quarter ended 10-8, in favor of the Shamrocks.

Blue Devil Carl Urwiler evened the score at 10-10 in the first minute of the second quarter and sophomore Ted Lueders dropped in a hoop just under a minute later to give Wayne their first lead of the game.

12-10. From that point it remained a two-point ball game, with the score tied five times, including the 22-22 halftime knot. Trailing 22-20 with 2:37 in the half, Don Larsen got a shot in from underneath off a pass from Rod Dahl to bring about the tie.

Larsen and Dahl each recorded eight points at the halfway mark. Scotus' Pat Engelbert kept the Shamrocks in control of the first half, scoring 14 of his 18 game points in the initial two quarters.

WAYNE BROKE THE game open in the third period, beginning with a field goal by Rod Dahl to go up 28-22 and adding a three-point play by Larsen to widen the lead to 27-22. Overall, in the quarter, Wayne outscored Scotus 19-11 to end the period with a 41-33 advantage with buckets coming from Brent Pick as well as Larsen and Dahl.

The Blue Devils continued their roll into the fourth quarter, which included a 10-2 scoring spurt at the start of the period.

The Blue Devil defense also played a large role, in second-half comeback, effectively shutting down Engelbert and limiting him to just four points in the entire second half.

Larsen and Dahl combined for 41 of Wayne's 54 total points, Larsen setting down 21 points on eight field goals and a 5 for 5 performance from the line. Dahl hit nine shots from the field and added two free throws for his total. Brent Pick knocked in six points from his starting position, Dan Gross netted three points, and Ted Lueders and Carl Urwiler ended the night with two points each.

Pat Engelbert led Scotus with 18 points and was joined in double figures by Karl Hroza with 10 points.

"DON AND ROD ARE definitely fine athletes and had great games, but they were getting a lot of help from everybody out there," said Uhing. "Ted (Lueders) played a great aggressive game and got things moving and everybody was looking for the good shot...plus we had good help off the bench in Urwiler, Hausmann, Warno and Baker."

"We were mentally ready for this game, and played almost the four full quarters that we need to play in order to win," Uhing added.

Wayne hit 22 of 43 shots from the floor for 41 percent and collected 10 of 13 attempts from the free throw line 77 percent. Columbus Scotus was 16 of 39 from the field for 41 percent and hit 9 of 14 from the line for 64 percent.

On the boards, Larsen and Dahl shared top honors with seven rebounds each. As a team Wayne outrebounded the Shamrocks 25-15 on the night.

Turnovers were even for both teams, with Wayne giving the ball up 16 times and Columbus Scotus 17 times, 13 of those in the second half.

He did add that the golfing practice area is open for use.

Scoring spree by Bancroft ends Allen tourney hopes

A scoring wave in the fourth quarter by Bancroft-Rosalie ended the Allen girls basketball team's hopes of a state tournament berth on Wednesday night as it resulted in a 45-34 win for Panthers in Homer.

"We couldn't stop them on the inside, and that is primarily where they scored most of their points from," said Troth. "They also scored on a couple of long pass plays, which also set us back."

We are not a really physical team, so it was to our disadvantage. I'm proud of our team as a unit, we were starting over in a lot of ways and to get so close to making the trip to state while doing that is a credit to all of the individuals on the team."

THE EAGLES FELL behind in the early going of the game and trailed at the end of the first quarter, 11-7. "I felt that it was important for us to establish ourselves early, but we came out very tentative and not as confident as we normally are," said Allen Coach Gary Troth.

"BANCROFT plays a slow-down game, and they held the ball a lot in both the first and second half," said Troth. "With our personnel, we like to play a more up-tempo game, but weren't able to do that."

Wildcats drop Pittsburg State; Lady Cats felled by Gussies

Wayne State's Wildcats and Lady Wildcats split their weekend CSIC opener with Pittsburg State on Friday night in Rice Auditorium, the Cats logging their third straight conference win with a 91-74 over the Gorillas, while the Lady Cats were tripped up by the PSU 66-54.

Three Lady Cats hit double digit scoring in the loss, led by Deb Nygren with 19 points. Shari Krohn and Barb Wragge each scored 14 points.

Krohn and Wragge also hit double figures on the boards with 12 and 10 rebounds each. The Lady Cats outboarded Pittsburg State 46 to 42 in the team statistics.

The victory put Rick Weaver's Wildcats back at the .500 mark for the overall season, with a 14-14 mark, and boosted their CSIC record to 4-7, the best CSIC record since the 1977-78 season.

From the floor, the Cats hit 40 of 77 shots for just under 52 percent, and Pittsburg connected on 28 of 73 attempts for 38.4 percent. Both teams shot well from the line for the night with WSC shooting 73.3 percent on 11 of 15 tries and PSU hitting 18 of 21 for 85.7 percent.

Table with columns: FG, FT, PTS, R, FLS. Rows include WSC, Daley, Rosenquist, Penn, Reed, Heritage, Thomsen, Tille, Sprew, Radig, Totals, Pittsburg.

Midlands youth tree planting programs

1985 has been proclaimed International Youth Year by the United Nations and the Year of the Trees by Governor Bob Kerrey. In the spirit of these proclamations, the Nebraska Game & Parks Commission and the Omaha World-Herald are jointly sponsoring the Midlands Youth Tree Planting Program.

The program makes trees available to youth groups such as girl scouts, boy scouts, or 4-H if the groups agree to plant the trees and care for them for two years. The trees are available in two categories: Category I — Rural Wildlife Planting, A — 50 Cedar and 50 Ponderosa Pine, B — 50 Hackberry and 50 Chokecherry; Category II — Urban Landscape Planting, 50 trees (5 each of 10 different species) with a choice of 59 species.

Applications for these trees must be in to the Nebraska Game & Parks Commission before March 1. For more information, contact the Nebraska Game & Parks Commission or Lower Elkhorn NRD.

The Wildlife Week Kit contains: 1. Large theme poster; 2. Checkerboard poster of plant and animal pictures; 3. Mini-poster stamps; 4. An overhead transparency of the soil ecosystem; 5. An Educators Guide of activities for all grade levels.

This packet is an excellent chance for young people to have fun while learning about the vital link that we and all living things have with the soil.

Groundwater levels rebound in 1984

The wet years of 1983-84 posed many hardships on agriculture in northeast Nebraska, but had at least one good effect. The above normal precipitation has replenished groundwater supplies to their highest level in years and should reassure us, in northeast Nebraska, that irrigation is not presently threatening our groundwater supplies.

The Lower Elkhorn NRD has carried on a well monitoring program since 1976. Static (non pumping) water levels are measured each spring and fall in approximately 300 wells across the district. These levels are recorded to indicate any long term trends in water level changes.

Lower Elkhorn NRD and other NRD's across the state established well monitoring programs because the rapid spread of irrigation in the early 1970's raised the concern that we may be mining (using it faster than it is replaced) our groundwater. These concerns have materialized in three areas of the state which have currently been declared "Groundwater Control Areas." In these areas, various controls may be applied to slow or stop the groundwater declines.

Northeast Nebraska has very diverse groundwater aquifers and areas where the supply or quality of groundwater is poor. However, the Lower Elkhorn NRD well monitoring program has not indicated significant problem areas, and has shown a general recovery of groundwater levels above the levels of 1976.
