Junior High basketball is approved

A proposal to start a seventh and eighth grade boys and girls basketball program at the Middle School during November and December was approved Tuesday evening by the Wayne-Carroll School board.

The proposal recommended by the Athletic Task Force, as was submitted to them by Wayne-Carroll varsity boys and girls basketball coaches, was to "offer seventh and eighth grade girls and boys basketball and to schedule four games for them during November and December, after which they go to Hank Overin's City recreation program which begins in January," according to Dick Metteer, principle of the Wayne-Carroll Middle School.

The following was proposed by the athletic task force:

- Development of a junior high boys' and girls' basketball program for the 1985-86 school year.

- A program to run six to eight weeks during the months of November and December.

- Three to four games to be played or an inter-school league to be played if 20 or more players are participating.

- And junior high coaches be hired to work with the head coaches who would coordinate the program.

"The program will definitely be closely supervised by the Uhings (Bob, head varsity basketball coach and Marlene Uhing, new head varsity girls basketball coach)," Metteer told the school board members.

The athletic task force said the junior high basketball program would not replace the city recreation program, but it would give students more playing and practice time.

PRACTICES ARE currently scheduled for three nights a week. None of the practices will be scheduled on Wednesday.

The basketball season at the junior high level will operate the same time as the wrestling season begins for the seventh and eighth grade.

Two of the limitations which the Middle School currently faces in starting up its basketball program is the coaching duties and finding a practice site, Metteer said.

Two sites considered, besides the school district facilities, were the city auditorium and the National Guard Armory. However, the Armory was ruled out by board members because it contains a concrete floor.

Possible teams which the seventh and eighth grades will be playing include Wisner, West Point, Schuyler, Hartington Holy Trinity or Pierce. These games will mostly be played, four games a day, beginning at 4:15 or 4:30, Metteer mentioned.

School Board President Becky Keidist had hoped the school would not be using the players great distances in order to play the games, mainly because the young players would be "getting back late."

After it was approved to install the basketball program at the junior high level, Board Member Arnold Emry said it should be clarified about the difference in the type of basketball program between the school and city recreational league.

"The city recreation program is for recreation whereas this (seventh and eighth grade basketball) would be for training," said Emry.

IN OTHER action Tuesday evening, the school board:

- Accepted the bid for roof work on the west side of the Wayne-Carroll Elementary School from Guarantee Roofing and Siding of Norfolk.

New treatment plant operating

by Chuck Hackenmiller

Wayne's new wastewater treatment plant has been in experimental operation since the second week of February and the city personnel continues to monitor its performance.

An announcement will be forthcoming as to when the new plant will "officially" be ready for operation. Also planned is an open house at the new plant.

As of now, there is still work to do with regard to the landscaping and paving around the plant area. However, the flow of present city sewage is now entering the plant and being processed.

General contractor of the sewage and wastewater treatment plant is Spencer Construction, a firm out of Spencer, Iowa.

Currently the influent is being pumped to the new facility into an area containing a comminutor, where the solids are ground into sludge. From there, the flow is entered into a primary clarifier area, where the sludge is skimmed off the flow and into a settling tank.

Air is added to the sludge, which is later pumped to the lagoon.

The "sewage minus the sludge" goes from the primary clarifier to four rotating biological contactors (RBC's).

Bacteria on the RBC's continue eating away at the waste until the "clearer sewage" leaves and enters the final clarifier. From there, the effluent moves by gravity flow to Logan Creek.

MERT MARSHALL, who will be primary operator at the new plant, said once the facility is officially in operation, tests on quality will be conducted daily, although the state requires testing only once a month. There are no tests being conducted currently at the plant site.

Marshall has been employed by the city for the past seven years.

The building at the plant site contains a maintenance shop, storage rooms, utility room, control room and laboratory (where tests on samples will be conducted). Previously, samples were sent away for testing.

Process control at the plant is automated to inform the operator as to if there is a problem with any equipment at the plant or liftstations within the city of Wayne. If workmen are not at the plant the time the problem is sighted, then the primary operator is telephoned — a man's voice transmits the message over the phone to the plant operator — alerting the city personnel of the problem.

The current aerated lagoon system currently being used by the city was not big enough to meet state standards. Marshall said the new facility can be "doubled in size if needed" to meet expanded water and sewer usage within the city of Wayne.

City approves Timpte funding

by Chuck Hackenmiller

Wayne's City Council members approved a grant request, revolving loan request and a rezoning request — all of which in one way or another will involve the city's incoming new industry, Timpte, Inc.

Timpte, Inc. announced several weeks ago it would build a refrigerated semi-trailer manufacturing plant in Wayne, an industry which will employ from 150 to 200 people. It will be constructed north of Heritage Homes east of the city.

On Tuesday, the Wayne City Council acted on a recommendation by the city's planning and zoning commission to change the zoning classification of the parcel of property (where Timpte, Inc. will build on) from heavy industrial to light industry.

The request got unanimous approval from the city council.

The site specifically marked off as the future site of Timpte, Inc. encompasses 45.14 acres. Of that total, 7.5 acres will be designated for Timpte storage area; 28 acres for the Timpte plant site; and 9.4 acres to be retained by the City of Wayne for future industrial expansion and the site of the planned 300,000 gallon elevated water tower.

Also on Tuesday, the city council approved, following a public hearing, a block grant request of $500,000, to be matched in-kind by the city of Wayne, Wayne County and Timpte, Inc.

The grant plus the in-kind match from the city and the county will be utilized in providing infrastructure improvements at the new location. This will require bringing water and sewer lines to the site, extension road construction and adding storm drains, according to city administrator Phil Kloster.

"The county will do what leveling and grading it can do. Then the finishing work will be handled by contract," he said.

WHAT NEEDS TO be leveled could be decided next week by company officials, Kloster said.

A request was also made on behalf of Timpte, Inc. to obtain a revolving loan of $500,000 through the city. The city would obtain the Community Development Block Grant revolving loan funding from the Nebraska Department of Economic Development.

The money, loaned to Timpte, Inc. by the city, would be approximately one-half of the prime interest rate. That rate on the revolving loan would currently be 5 1/4 percent.

ESU implements nursing program

By LaVon Anderson

In a meeting Tuesday night that lasted less than an hour, members of the Educational Service Unit One board of directors approved an implementation program for nursing services during the 1985-86 school year, and ratified a proposal stating that nursing contracts for 1985-86 will be offered no later than April 15.

The proposal also states that nurses be notified by April 15 of the reason for amending the contracts and of their (nurses) rights regarding the request for a hearing before the board.

The proposal further states that the reason for the proposed amendments to the contracts is the reduction of the 1985-86 nursing budget to $205,000.

THE DECISION regarding the funding of nursing services for the upcoming school year was resolved during a meeting last month of the ESU 1 board of directors.

At the March 12 meeting, board members voted seven to one to accept a motion by Paul Steffen of Hartington to fund the ESU 1 nursing services program at a level of $205,000 for the 1985-86 school year.

That figure represents an approximate 10 percent reduction in services from 1984-85.

Board chairman Deryl Lawrence of Wayne instructed the ESU 1 administration last month to implement the program with the 10 percent reduction.

IN OTHER BUSINESS Tuesday night, ESU 1 Assistant Administrator

Rodney Garwood told board members that state auditors have informed the unit that it can no longer pay a board member to take minutes at meetings.

Under present board policy, the unit pays the board secretary, Randy Shaw of Wayne, to take minutes at each month's meeting.

"Obviously, it is unfair to ask that a board member also be responsible for the minutes. It does impose a certain amount of labor and meticulous thought," said Garwood.

After some discussion, board members Tuesday night voted to accept a motion by Ken Labrs of Ponca to appoint Lisa Smith, ESU 1 office manager, as secretary to the board at a rate of $30 per meeting.

Bloomfield has wild horses contract

Some good economic news for Knox County was announced Monday by Representative Doug Bereuter. The Bureau of Land Management has awarded Clark Mills and Sons of Bloomfield a contract to provide a holding facility for wild horses and burros. "This one-year contract will bring over $800,000 into the local economy along with new jobs," Bereuter said. The holding facility in Knox County will be one of four located West of the Mississippi River. These facilities will hold about 2,000 wild horses and burros that have been taken off of overpopulated Federal lands. The facility in Bloomfield, which will mainly hold yearlings and two-year-olds, is scheduled to begin operations about June 1. There was extensive interest in this program with nearly 110 applicants. "It is a relief to have a contract," Bereuter said. "The Bureau recognized the excellent facilities in Knox County." The Bloomfield holding facility will be the only one of its kind in Nebraska.

Initiative 300 issue not dead

by Melvin Paul
Just when it seemed the issue of repealing initiative 300 was dead for the year, the Legislature changed its mind.

The initiative, approved by Nebraska voters in 1982, added a section to the state Constitution which restricts corporate ownership of farmland.

Earlier this session, a Legislative committee had voted to kill a proposal to place on the 1986 ballot a proposal to repeal the corporate ownership restrictions.

Making skillful use of legislative rules, Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh succeeded last week in reviving Legislative Resolution 16, the repeal measure. Lawmakers voted 25-23 in support of DeCamp's motion to revive it.

Sen. Vard Johnson of Omaha referred to the action as an "incredible thumbing of one's nose in the face of popular will." He said he would make every effort to oppose passage of the proposed constitutional amendment.

Although it would have taken 30 votes to pull a killed bill out of committee, DeCamp found a legislative rule that suggested it can be done with only 25 votes when it involves a resolution. Speaker William Mitchell of Scottsbluff supported DeCamp's interpretation of the rule, and DeCamp was able to revive the measure with five fewer votes than he otherwise would have needed.

Gov. Bob Kerrey declined to apologize last week for comparing the Legislature to "a carnival of animals" during a public appearance in Omaha.

Senate Sen. Vard Johnson of Omaha, who like Kerrey is a Democrat, demanded the apology after reading the remark in a newspaper.

"This remark offends me," state Sen. Vard Johnson said after reading to colleagues from a newspaper report during remarks on the legislative floor Monday. "He owes us an apology."

According to the Omaha World-Herald, Kerrey told the audience at a March 31 performance of the Omaha Symphony Orchestra that he was pleased to be asked to read poetry by Ogden Nash as part of the orchestra's performance of Camille Saint-Saens' "Carnival of Animals."

"When the Legislature is in session, that's all I do is participate in a carnival of animals," Kerrey told the symphony audience.

"Vard should read Ogden Nash," Kerrey said when asked if an apology to the Legislature is in order. "The remark is not the least bit disparaging given the context of the poetry reading."

In the past, Kerrey agitated state lawmakers when he was quoted as saying he "steeps beef" when the Legislature isn't in session.

Lawmakers last week decided against letting commodity check-off boards spend money for lobbying Congress and the Legislature.

On a 24-22 vote, they killed L.B. 80, a proposal introduced by Sen. Jim Pappas of North Platte and Carson Rogers of Ord to allow the check-off boards to expand their activities beyond the research and marketing in which they now engage.

The bill would have affected check-off boards for beef, soybeans, corn, grain sorghum and wheat. Current law expressly prohibits expenditures for influencing legislation.

The boards, which administratively are part of the state Agriculture Department, are funded by an assessment on producers levied at the time the commodities are sold. In total, the boards, next years are budgeted for about $5 million.

"If you pass this legislation, you may have taken step one to the elimination of the check-off boards," warned Sen. Jerome Warner, of Waverly, who co-sponsored the bill.

Decision on political positions could erode producer support, Warner said. Existing farm organizations and their voluntary membership adequately represent farm interests in the legislative process, he said.

Supporters of the bill argued that involvement in the legislative affairs hold the greatest potential for helping economically troubled farmers and ranchers.

Current marketing and promotional activities have limited potential for improving business for farmers, said Sen. Lorain Schmitt of Bellwood. "Congress is the place the game is being played," he said.

Project 1995

Project 1995, sponsored by the Farm Credit System (composed of Federal Land Banks, Federal Land Bank Associations, Federal Intermediate Credit Banks, Production Credit Association and Banks for Cooperatives) is an attempt to assess farming conditions in the year 1995. Here are some of the findings.

- A full agriculture is emerging in which relatively few large farms account for most farm output and income. Those farmers who are trying to make their living from farms that are not economically viable will continue to experience problems.

- The total number of farms will decline about 1 percent per year through 1995. The number of large farms will grow at an increasing rate, while the number of small farms will decrease at a dropping rate.

- Production of soybeans, corn, wheat and cotton will increase significantly, mostly from improved yields.

- After this year, cattle numbers will fall. Stocker programs will grow while feeder programs will decline.

- Leverage for some farmers will increase as will the pressure on liquidity and incomes. Many farms will be subject to increasing financial stress. Total debt is projected to reach $465 billion by 1995, representing annual growth of 7.5 percent. Proprietor's equity is expected to grow about 6.5 percent per year.

- New market potential for Farm Credit exists mainly in providing a full range of new services, such as leasing, depository capabilities, cash management.

- Expanding demands are projected for oilseeds, grain, fresh fruits and vegetables, cheeses, livestock feed, seed and rural utilities. Relatively static demands are projected for cotton, fluid milk, red meat, fertilizer and petroleum. The demand for canned fruits and vegetables will likely decline.

- Transportation costs will rise. An adequate transportation infrastructure (highways, ports, railroads, locks and dams) is vital to contain long run transportation costs.

- The private savings rate in the U.S. will likely remain low compared with other industrialized countries and will be inadequate to fund the needs of both private and public sectors. This will make economic recoveries more difficult to sustain.

- Several financial groups will become more important sources of capital for the U.S. economy: domestic non-bank financial institutions, public and private pension funds and foreign institutions. Commercial banks and other depository organizations will continue to be important sources of capital.

- Pressures will grow on sponsored agencies to restrict their lending.

- There will be substantial declines in price support and in income enhancement programs for agriculture. Non-farm social programs will benefit the part-time and middle group of farmers. Supply, price and income stabilization will be the primary objectives of government policy. The government will play a role in other areas, such as soil and water conservation, food quality and safety and credit programs for agriculture.

- Public support for the Farm Credit System will erode if the System serves only the large scale commercial farmer.

- Government credit programs for special groups will remain. There will be substantial pressure from Congress or the Executive Branch to increase the tax burden on all financial institutions.

- Business technology will significantly change the work environment and will require different job skills. Agriculture will be in the forefront in production technology, but behind other industries in business management technology.

- The report also indicates agriculture will move away from government control toward a more independent existence.

- All of this information is something to consider, looking up the rows 10 years ahead as the planting of 1985's crops begins.

Bereuter introduces legislation requiring mandatory insurance for financial institutions

Recent bank and savings and loan failures, coupled with concerns about a run on financial institutions, underline the need for a consistent deposit insurance system, Nebraska First District Representative Doug Bereuter said today.

Bereuter, who serves on the House Banking Committee, and Rep. Jim Leach of Iowa introduced a bill to require all depository institutions to carry some form of deposit insurance, either federal or state level. State insurance would have to meet stringent federal standards.

"When money is deposited in a financial institution — a bank, a savings and loan, or a credit union — the depositor has to have confidence in the security of that money," Bereuter said. "When the deposit is insured by the Federal Deposit Institution Corporation (FDIC), the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, or the National Credit Union Administration Board, it is secure. Never has an insured depositor lost money when it was insured by one of these insurance systems."

Bereuter said not all financial institutions have this insurance. "We still have about 400 savings and loans in the country that are not federally insured, and 22 states, including Nebraska, allow private insurance for certain kinds of depository institutions. As we saw in Nebraska when Commonwealth Industrial Savings and Loan failed and again in Ohio, a state authorized private insurance program can be financially unsound."

Last year, 79 commercial banks failed, nine savings and loan associations failed, and 38 credit unions failed or had to be liquidated. The need for a consistent deposit insurance system is clear," he said. "Depositor confidence is the keystone of a strong financial community. We can't afford to have ill-defined or shaky insurance imperial that confidence."

The bill, H.R. 1564, empowers the FDIC, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, and the National Credit Union Administration Board to jointly issue rules to ensure that state-level insurance programs can meet claims under all reasonably foreseeable circumstances. It provides for an orderly transition in the deposit insurance system by granting interim insurance to institutions which do not qualify for federal insurance. The interim insurance would guarantee accounts up to $10,000. Financial institutions which do not immediately qualify for broader coverage would be allowed five years to remedy the problems that cause denial of more comprehensive insurance.

Bill would keep uninsured drivers off roads

I've never agreed with those who say that all government can do is make life more difficult. Working within the system takes persistence, but real change is possible. My feelings were reaffirmed this morning when I was able to get L.B. 404 passed to the second round of legislative debate. The bill would keep uninsured drivers off the roads by requiring proof of financial responsibility before they could register their cars.

Similar measures have been considered many times in the past. This is the first time, however, that the bill has been advanced to the full body and the first time it has received a majority vote. The vote indicated the legislature's ability to recognize a virtual no-cost effort to save our responsible drivers millions of dollars and unending anguish. It is very pleasing to know that if you work hard, present the facts and fight for what people want, you can gain the support of the body.

was the controversy over mandating the use of seat belts in all motor vehicles. This issue prompted several hours of highly emotional debate and strong arguments on both sides of the issue: Those who favor the proposal feel they have both safety and cost effectiveness on their side. It is argued that seat belts are already in your car, are easy to use and are more reliable than the proposed automatic air bags. Proponents cite studies which show that use of belts can reduce injuries in both minor and severe accidents.

The opponents of mandatory seat belts argue that the Legislature is merely responding to pressure from the federal government. The Reagan administration has said that if two-thirds of the states do not require the use of seat belts, that the administration will mandate air bags in all new cars sold in the United States. Many senators feel this is both an invasion of personal freedom and an unenforceable law.

The Legislature has advanced the bill to the final stage of debate, but the controversy is not nearly over. As with other high-profile bills, there have been a host of amendments considered. More attempts to amend are sure to come.

I'll continue to examine the arguments on both sides of the issue. It may come down to the harsh reality of the federal mandate. The inclusion of air bags will add a sizeable cost (approximately $500) to the average automobile. However, the cost of mandated air bags may be irrelevant when we consider whether we want to live with a law that forces us to buckle up when we're in the front seat of an automobile.

Annie Bishop observes 100th

The guests came from Sac City, Lawton and Sioux City, Iowa; Boreas, S. D.; Maskell, Newcastle, Allen, Ponca, Dixon, Oberl and Laurel.

Mrs. Bishop has one daughter, Mrs. Phyllis Herfel of Dixon. Three sons are deceased. There are eight grandchildren, 24 great grandchildren and nine great, great grandchildren.

Congratulatory messages were received from President and Mrs. Reagan, along with several friends and relatives.

ANNIE BISHOP, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Nelson, was born April 5, 1885 in a dugout one mile south of Maskell.

Nelsons came to the United States from Sandford, Norway in 1880 and lived in South Dakota two years before coming to Dixon County where nine of their 10 children were born. Mrs. Bishop is the only surviving child.

Annie attended country school for four years near Newcaste. Later, she took on odd jobs at nearby farms before going to Vermillion where she worked as a seamstress.

SHE MARRIED William Bishop on Sept. 3, 1906. He died in 1923, leaving Annie to care for four young children, Larnet, Levi, Virgil and Phyllis.

With the help of her young sons, the family was able to stay on the farm. Mrs. Bishop moved to Maskell in 1937, where she raised a garden, mowed her lawn, split wood and milked a cow until she was 80 years of age.

"Oh, it's good for me," was one of Annie's favorite sayings. Annie continued to live alone at her home in Maskell until last October when she came to reside at the Hillcrest Care Center.

WSC SOPHOMORE pitcher Mary Lingelbach winds up for a throw against the University of Omaha, while Suzy Todd keeps an eye out for the play at first base.

Lady Cats hitting continues in split with UNO Lady Mavs

Making only their second home appearance of the 1985 season, the Wayne State Lady Wildcat softball team split with the University of Nebraska-Omaha in a doubleheader played Monday, April 8.

The Lady Cats continued their strong hitting clip, logging a 5-0 win in the first game to down the Lady Mavericks before UNO came back to tag WSC with a 1-0 decision. UNO came into the games with a 17-10 record.

Wayne State, at 19-10, was slated to travel to Kearney for an important NAIA District 11 doubleheader with the Lady Antelopes yesterday (Wednesday). They are also scheduled to compete at the Northern Iowa Dome Tournament in Cedar Falls, Iowa this weekend. A rundown of their game schedule includes: Friday, Augustana, 10:30 a.m.; University of Nebraska-Omaha, noon; St. Xavier, 6 p.m.; Saturday, Mo. Western, 2 p.m.; Augustana, 3:30 p.m. Sunday - single elimination tournament with 11 team field.

The Lady Cats scored a big first inning home run, logging a 1-0 win in four runs on five hits to break the game open.

Lead-off batter Carmen Doeschot got on base with a single and advanced to second on a stolen base. Michelle Blomberg and Kristy Govig with base hits, the latter which scored Doeschot. With one out and two men on, Shelle Tomaszewicz rapped out a triple to score two runs, and crossed the plate minutes later on a passed ball for the fourth run in the inning. Her triple was the only extra base hit of the game for WSC.

Run number five came in the bottom of the second inning when Doeschot reached first on a walk and scored on a fielder's choice by catcher Teresa Durbala.

Mary Lingelbach upped her pitching record to 9-3 with the win on the mound, giving up two hits, no walks and striking out one opposing batter.

A couple of WSC miscues in the day's second game gave the Lady Mavericks their chance to score and pick up a 1-0 win.

Omaha's lead-off batter in the top of the third inning reached base on a single, advanced around the bases and came home on an error by Wayne State's shortstop with two outs.

Wayne made a run at the lead in the bottom of the seventh inning, getting two runners on base with one out before going down swinging on two strikeouts.

Pficher Laurie Owens took the loss for Wayne, giving up four hits, two walks and striking out three batters. Her record moved to 8-7.

Cage coaching search continues at WSC

The search for a men's basketball coach at Wayne State College continues, according to Athletic Director Ron Jones in a statement released Tuesday.

"The search process has proved to be very effective, but frustrating," Jones said. "Of our top three candidates, two have moved to NCAA Division I assistant coaching positions and the third decided to stay at his present position. It proved the people we were looking at were top notch candidates."

"The major concern of the search committee at this time is that the best available person be located and recommended to the administration. Although expediency is still a major concern, the temptation to make a hasty decision must be avoided," Jones stated.

"The search committee will be moving forward with the search process; the objective being the employment of the best possible candidate as soon as possible."

SQUIRREL, RABBIT SEASON SET

The Nebraska Game and Parks Commissioners set the dates for the 1985 squirrel and rabbit hunting seasons at their meeting in Lincoln on Thursday, March 14.

The 1985 squirrel hunting season will be August 1 through January 31, 1986. The daily bag limit will be seven, the possession limit 21 rabbits. The cottontail rabbit season will be Sept. 1 through Feb. 28, 1986. The daily bag limit will be seven, and the possession limit 21 rabbits.

1985 ARCHERY DEER SEASON

The Game and Parks Commission also recently set the 1985 archery deer season to run from Sept. 25 through Dec. 31, except during the firearm deer season. The only exception to that rule will be the Gifford area where archery hunting will be permitted regardless of rifle seasons.

This year, because of the addition of some special firearm season, the archery season will vary in various parts of the state. The season will be closed statewide (except at Gifford) during the regular firearm season. Nov. 9-17, it will also be closed Dec. 7-15 in the Keya Paha Late Season Unit, the East Republican River Late Season Unit and the West Republican River Late Season Units. Maps indicating the dates and unit boundaries will be available from permit vendors.

FIREARM ANTELOPE SEASON

Nebraska's 1985 firearm antelope season has been set as Sept. 28 through Oct. 6 and a total of 1,065 permits have been authorized for this year's season. There will be no antelope season in the Brown Unit in 1985.

WHOOPIING CRANES TO ARRIVE IN NEBRASKA

Fifteen young whooping cranes hatched in 1984 have survived through their first year at the Aransas National Wildlife Refuge in Texas and will join approximately 69 adult and subadult cranes to begin their annual northward migration. An additional seven or eight whoopers were unaccounted for on the wintering grounds, but could boost the flock passing through Nebraska to a total of 91 or 92 birds, says non-game Biologist John Dinan.

The whoopers are expected to be passing through the state on their way to northern nesting grounds between April 1 and May 10. The large white whoopers rarely fly east of Grand Island or west of North Platte. The Platte River, the Niobrara River or natural wetlands and associated croplands in the central part of the state are commonly used by the cranes.

Commission biologists will again be investigating sightings of whoopers in Nebraska and their success will depend on quick and accurate information from the public. Because following up on false alarms wastes biologists' time, Dinan has some pointers to help people make accurate observations.

"Whoopers are very large, white birds, with a seven-foot wing spread, black-tipped wings and a dark red face. They fly with a steady, deliberate wingbeat, long neck extended to the front and spindly legs trailing behind. On the ground they stand about five feet tall," he said.

Mistaken identity accounts for most cases of false alarms from the public. Pelicans, egrets, swans and snow geese are all common visitors to Nebraska and due to their white color have all been mistaken for whooping cranes. The short legs of pelicans, snow geese and swans quickly distinguishes them from the long-legged whooper. Egrets and swans lack the whooping cranes black-tipped wings, and unlike the cranes, egrets and pelicans fly with their long necks crooked back in an "S" shape.

Sandhill cranes have also been confused with whooping cranes, but the Sandhill cranes' drab gray color should quickly separate it from the larger white whooper.

A record number of confirmed sightings in the United States were reported in the fall of 1984. Three confirmed sightings, four probable sightings and one unconfirmed sighting were reported in Nebraska. Whooping crane sightings should be reported immediately to any Game and Parks Commission conservation officer in Lincoln (402) 464-0841; Omaha (402) 554-2144; Norfolk (402) 371-4950; Bassett (402) 684-3511; North Platte (308) 532-6225; or Alliance (308) 762-5605.

Kloster said the time frame of the revolving loan would be a 15-year term and would follow the same type of program as was granted to the Dairy Queen and Restful Knights, both Wayne companies.

The maximum which a company can borrow through the revolving loan program is $500,000.

A motion was passed to approve the revolving loan funds to Timpte, Inc.

IN OTHER action, the city council:

•Approved a resolution which would add the proposed 14th Street extension to the Wayne Urban System. The ultimate result in this action would bring some federal funding to help in financing the street construction.

•Approved three resolutions pertaining to Providence Road construction project, which will be from Providence Road southward to Highway 35. One resolution stated that the city of Wayne be earmarking its funds to pay its share of the project.

Another was to set establish-bonding proposals for the street construction from the intersection of Providence Road and 10th Street southward to 7th Street (or Highway 35) and to set a public hearing on the proposals.

And the third resolution was to select Gilmore and Associates of Columbus to do the engineering work on the Providence Road project.

•Approved a liquor license request for Gary G. Donner, who has taken over the management duties of the Casey's General Store in Wayne, providing that Donner fulfills the resident requirement before a license can be changed to him.

He currently lives in Hartington, but he told the city council he plans on moving to Wayne.

•GRANTED permission to the Wayne Chamber of Commerce's request to block off the 200 block of Pearl Street on April 20.

That is the day of the "Springfest" celebration planned by the Wayne Chamber of Commerce and its members.

Plans are to have variety show entertainment along with Wayne

Regional Arts Council's 1985 Spring Festival on April 20. More information will follow in this on the Monday, April 15 Wayne Herald.

•Decided to hold off on the proposal to license city cats because there is a legislative issue currently confronting the Unicameral on the situation and whatever decision the city would make on the matter now would possibly be changed because of a legislative ruling.

"I got another complaint from a lady who had a sandbox for her youngster. The neighbor has got cats and the cats had been leaving their calling card," said Councilman Freeman Decker.

•And discussed the problem of uneven sidewalks in Wayne's downtown area. "I don't think we need a legal opinion on it (the sidewalk problem). We just need to fix them," he said.

Superintendent of Public Works, Vern Schulz, said the repair will not be an easy thing to do. "I won't be like taking a square out and putting it back in."

"Each ledge is different. Each one is unique," he said.

•Learned that the Department of Education will likely be changing its previously announced non-resident tuition amount to be allocated to the Wayne-Carroll School District for the 1985-86 school year.

A Department of Education telephone call to the school district, according to Superintendent Francis Haun, revealed that Wayne-Carroll would be receiving up to $367,882 in non-resident tuition.

This current year's non-resident tuition was established by the school board at $7,300. The State Department of Education now decides what schools will obtain in non-resident tuition, based on student attendance during the past five years at the school district.

The Department's non-resident tuition figure of $7,438 per student is greater than the current figure.

However, that could change because of litigation currently going on in Lancaster District Court regarding the proper method being used in determining non-resident tuition charges for those school districts serving more than one county.

According to a release from the Nebraska Department of Education, released April 1, it has been deemed necessary for the Department to recalculate tuition charges for multiple county districts and also pre-empt all initial calculations.

•Were presented a proposed board policy assembled by Keldel, Haun and members of the Task Force for the Gifted (Academically Talented). The policy states that the board of education supports a broad based K-12 staff training program which will enable classroom teachers to assist the gifted (academically talented) student in reaching his/her highest intellectual potential.

The board further endorses continued development of a counseling segment designed to enhance understanding by the student of his/her relationships to his educational environment, the board policy says.

•WERE BRIEFED on the spring parent/teachers conference conducted by the Wayne-Carroll School District. Attendance was well above expected at the Wayne-Carroll Elementary School, but poor at the high school level.

All the parents (32 of them) appeared before teachers of the Carroll Elementary School, signifying a 100 percent turnout.

Following are grades and parent's attendance percentages compiled after the spring conferences in the Wayne-Carroll School District:

kindergarten, 83.7 percent; 1st grade, 79.1 percent; 2nd grade, 79.7 percent; 3rd grade, 83.7 percent; 4th grade, 78.5 percent; 5th grade, 73 percent; 6th grade, 63 percent; 7th grade, 45 percent; 8th grade, 38 percent; 9th grade, 37 percent; 10th grade, 41 percent; 11th grade, 29 percent; 12th grade, 13 percent.

•Heard a report from Neil Sandahl and Arnold Emry on the National School Board Association Convention.

•REVIEWED A math committee's recommendation on the changeover of the school district's K-8 math program (currently six or seven years old) to D.C. Heath, one of 12 companies that were researched. A number of math instructors within the district's school system were involved in a committee to researching the math curriculum. Their findings showed that math programs must now involve some computer work-testing.

The committee is looking for more story problems, math problems, computer skills and testing and computer assisted instructions.

•Briefly discussed nursing services. Until ESU makes a final decision and lets the school board know its intent on implementing nursing services to the school district, the school board cannot judge the cost they will be required to pay for the 5 hours of service the nurse provides during the weekdays.

•Discussed summer school proposals, including the computer keyboarding/word processing classes to begin in the first weeks of June; LD summer session from June 10 to 28; Driver, Education; and Music.

Mariene Uhing was officially approved by the school board as a resource teacher and head of the girls high school basketball program.

•And approved the list of Wayne-Carroll High School graduates. The list includes 31 boys and 42 girls. Graduation is scheduled for May 19 at 2 p.m.

Approval was given with the stipulation that the list may need to be amended pending final grades to be computed on May 17, the last day for high school seniors.

Region IV governing board holds meeting

Discussion and action toward compliance with certain government regulations kept the Region IV Office of Developmental Disabilities Governing Board busy at their Wednesday meeting.

The Governing Board adopted a proposed Affirmative Action program in response to a Department of Public Institutions (DPI) requirement. The requirement called for an active program to guard against discrimination and insure equal opportunity and compensation.

DPI has required that any contracting party receiving $75,000 or more in state or federal funds has to have an Affirmative Action program. For a number of years Region IV has had Affirmative Action statements, but has not had an actual monitoring program.

At a later date a proposed Sexual Harassment statement will be added. The Governing Board also heard a report from Region IV Fiscal Director, Craig Tiedtke of Wayne, on plans designed to bring Region IV into compliance with the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act. Region IV lost its exemption to these regulations when the U.S. Supreme Court, recently overruled a 1974 ruling excluding certain state and local government services from minimum wage and overtime regulations.

The proposed plans could cost Region IV as much as $150,000 in implementation and as many as 20 staff people could have their job status changed because of the proposed rescheduling of many of the residential staff. Overnight scheduling and pay in the group residences throughout the Region will see the most changes under the plans being put forward. One advantage to this rescheduling is increased staff hours with the clients.

The plans have yet to be approved by the Department of Labor in Kansas City. As of now it is not known when the regulations must be implemented.

German Club honors

Nine students from the Wayne High School German Club traveled to Omaha on March 30 in order to attend the ninth annual convention of the Nebraska Association of Students of German. The meeting was hosted by the German students at South High School in Omaha and attracted about 300 students from 12 junior and senior high schools. Students were able to participate in both individual and team contests, could also attend non-competitive events, such as cooking and singing, and could get information on traveling abroad.

Students from Wayne High School entered a team in the Knowledge Bowl contest, took part in the poetry contest, and the talent show, and submitted a cassette for the music video competition. The day ended with an awards banquet.

The Wayne team won first place trophies for Knowledge Bowl (level 11), for short play (Lori Baker and David Zahnsier), and for their music video. Vini Johar placed fifth in the poetry contest out of a field of 40 contestants. Each poetry contestant had to recite from memory one compulsory poem and one of his own choice.

Wayne students attending the convention were Scott Johnson, Monika Metz, Jeff Simpson, Jassi and Vini Johar, David Zahnsier, Lori Baker, Paula Koplin, Beth Nelson, German Club sponsor is Edith E. Zahnsier, Karen Hansen, librarian at Wayne High School, did the camerawork for the video.

Tornado season upon us

Their time on earth is short, and their distinctive paths are rather small. Yet, when one of these short-lived local storms marches through a populated area, it leaves a path of total destruction. In seconds, a tornado can reduce a thriving community into rubble.

By definition, a tornado is a violently rotating column of air in contact with the ground. The air column may sometimes only be seen when it contains condensation in the form of a cloud or when it begins to pick up dust or debris. Often its appearance is the result of both. When a funnel touches the ground, there usually is a swirl of dust and debris — even when the visible cloud portion is missing or fails to reach the ground.

Tornadoes vary greatly in size, intensity, and appearance. Most (82%) of the tornadoes that occur each year fall into the weak category. Wind speeds for these range 100 miles per hour or less; and they account for less than 3% of the tornado deaths. About one out of every three tornadoes are classified as strong. Wind speeds in these average 200 miles per hour, with paths approximately nine miles long and 200 yards wide. Almost 30% of all tornado deaths that occur each year stem from this type of storm.

Every tornado, regardless of its size, is a potential killer and carries with it a potential for mass destruction.

With tornado season upon us, it is time to review in your mind the basic rules of survival. There may not be time to do so if you should be confronted later by one of these killer storms.

It is dangerous, if not darn right fool-hardy, to attempt to flee to safety in your automobile. Tornadoes often travel in pairs. Trying to outrun one funnel may very well place you in the path of another. It is best to leave your vehicle and seek shelter immediately.

In your home, go to the basement and take shelter under the stairs, or in an area away from the windows. If you do not have a basement, small rooms, such as an interior closet or bathroom near the center of the home, offer the best shelter. Be sure to stay away from all exterior windows and doors.

Never stop to open (or close) your windows. Most structures have sufficient venting to allow for changes in atmospheric pressure. By opening the window you may actually increase the damage to your home and it will most certainly place your life in danger. Once the warning sounds, you may have but a few seconds to react. Don't waste it.

If you live in a mobile home, leave it immediately and seek substantial shelter elsewhere. Make arrangements with a neighbor or friend who has a basement to do there when a watch is issued. Don't wait for the warning sound.

If you are in an office building or shopping center, stay there. Seek shelter away from windows and large span roofs. Many businesses have designated shelter areas where you will be protected.

And most importantly, remember to pay attention to the weather when a watch is issued. This should tell you that a potential exists for a tornado in your area. Don't ignore these watches. It may well save your life.

Fuelberth awarded scholarship

Dean Fuelberth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Darrell Fuelberth of Wayne, has recently been awarded a Cooperating Schools Scholarship to attend Wayne State College.

Cooperating Schools Scholarships are awarded to graduates from high schools in which students from Wayne State College have taken their directed teaching. Recipients must rank in the upper half of their senior class and are selected by high school officials. Cooperating Schools Scholarships provide for half tuition and are renewable for eight semesters.

Dean will be a 1985 graduate of Wayne High School where he is active in varsity band, stage band, choir and swing choir. Dean will be a freshman at Wayne State College this fall.

Students interning at college relations

Six Wayne State College students are learning about public relations through an internship-like study in the WSC College Relations Office.

The students work about one to two hours per week in the College Relations Office as a part of their three-credit public relations class taught by Herb Meinert, assistant professor of humanities. The College Relations Office handles WSC's information, advertising and other visibility activities.

The students involved are Kathy Helsing, Randolph; Sue Sheffloe, Omaha; Marilea Voss, Fremont; Tore Nelson, Emerson; Deann Clyde, O'Neill; and Doreen Augspurger, Columbus.

Working under the supervision of Steve Jones, director of college relations, the students have the opportunity to learn some of the functions of an actual public relations office. Some of the projects they have done include researching and writing basic news releases, writing stories for WSC's alumni newspaper, Hear's News, writing about students for hometown newspaper and writing feature stories for area newspapers.

Sheffloe commented she is "glad to have the opportunity" and that she is getting experience that she might not have received before.

The cooperation between the College Relations Office and the public relations class is a very beneficial experience for those involved, Augspurger said, and added that she would like the arrangement to continue as a part of the WSC public relations/communication program.

faculty accomplishments

He will be doing research on the Muslims of Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union.

This is the newsletter of the Organization of American Historians, the leading professional organization of historians of the United States. Personality and conflicts

A three-credit graduate or undergraduate course entitled "Personality and Politics" will be offered at Wayne State College in the July summer session.

The course will be taught by Allen O'Donnell, associate professor of social science and director of the Wayne State Public Affairs Institute. It will be especially valuable to teachers and future teachers, O'Donnell said.

"The world of today confronts us with terrible realities," O'Donnell said. "In the face of a shrinking resource base, nations continue to spend over a trillion and a half dollars annually on armaments and armies. The developed countries of the world with less than a quarter of the world's population, consume up to 20 percent of the world's resources."

"The two most powerful countries in the world each have the power to destroy the human species many times over. Economic and social injustice are present in virtually every human society."

In light of these few factors, O'Donnell said, the study of political psychology and political personality is obvious.

"Given the realities of these times, it seems that rational people would want to know the 'why' of what is going on," O'Donnell said.

He added that the problems of the world are not only nuclear weapons, but "hunger in the face of plenty; disease in the face of miracle drugs; ignorance in the face of giant centers of learning and they ought to be studied."

For more information about the course, contact the Wayne State registrar's office or Allen O'Donnell at 402-375-2200.

Bill of Rights emphasized

Teacher workshop on law at WSC

For the fourth consecutive year, Wayne State College and the Nebraska Bar Association will offer a workshop for teachers on law in the classroom.

The program, June 24-26, is 40 hours in length and is a graduate level three-credit course.

"As in the past, the course is quite comprehensive and will offer presentations by learned attorneys, judges and experts in the field," said Allen O'Donnell, associate professor of social science at WSC and law coordinator for the program.

Wayne Kunz of the Nebraska Bar Association coordinates the program for Nebraska. The 1985 workshop will emphasize the inclusion of the Bill of Rights into classroom materials and curricula.

The United States will be celebrating the 200th anniversary of the Constitution from 1987 through 1989. O'Donnell, director of WSC Public Affairs Institute, believes that this is an excellent opportunity for all classroom teachers to "celebrate the birth of our Bill of Rights—including freedom of speech, press and religion" with their students. He sees this as a means of "educating American children—and teachers—in the free way of life as seen through the eyes of our founders."

The workshop can hold up to 30 teachers and WSC will accept them on a first-come, first-served basis.

For further information contact Allen O'Donnell at Wayne State College, 402-375-2200.

FOOD AWARENESS By Ann Crowley R.D., Ph.D.
AN IRON PLAN
QUESTION: My doctor has told me my blood is low in iron. It is not low enough to be called anemic, but he suggested I eat more foods containing iron. I asked him to recommend foods containing iron. His reply was liver, which I do not care for. What else can I eat to increase the iron in my blood?
ANSWER: There are two sources of dietary iron. One is from eggs and animal meats, the other from green leafy vegetables, beans, and fortified cereals and breads. The animal sources are more readily utilized by the body. A serving of cooked meat contains approximately 1 1/2 to 3 milligrams of iron. The recommended dietary allowance of iron for a female is 18 milligrams.
The amount of iron fortification for cereals and breads will vary. Most fortified cereals will supply 10 to 25% per serving of the iron requirements. The best way to check the amount of iron contained in the product is to read the label.
Research has shown that dietary iron is absorbed best when eaten with foods containing vitamin C, such as citrus fruits and with a mixed diet. For instance, the iron is better absorbed if meat and bread are eaten at the same meal.

campus briefs

Fuelberth awarded scholarship

De. Fuelberth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Darrell Fuelberth of Wayne, has recently been awarded a Cooperating Schools Scholarship to attend Wayne State College.

Cooperating Schools Scholarships are awarded to graduates from high schools in which students from Wayne State College have taken their directed teaching. Recipients must rank in the upper half of their senior class and are selected by high school officials. Cooperating Schools Scholarships provide for half tuition and are renewable for eight semesters.

Dean will be a 1985 graduate of Wayne High School where he is active in varsity band, stage band, choir and swing choir. Dean will be a freshman at Wayne State College this fall.

Students interning at college relations

Six Wayne State College students are learning about public relations through an internship-like study in the WSC College Relations Office.

The students work about one to two hours per week in the College Relations Office as a part of their three-credit public relations class taught by Herb Meiner, assistant professor of humanities. The College Relations Office handles WSC's information, advertising and other visibility activities.

The students involved are Kathy Helsing, Rahdolph; Sue Sheffloe, Omaha; Marilee Voss, Fremont; Tore Nelson, Emerson; Deann Clyde, O'Neill; and Doreen Augspurger, Columbus.

Working under the supervision of Steve Jones, director of college relations, the students have the opportunity to learn some of the functions of an actual public relations office. Some of the projects they have done include researching and writing basic news releases, writing stories for WSC's alumni newspaper Here's News, writing about students for hometown newspaper and writing feature stories for area newspapers.

Sheffloe commented she is "glad to have the opportunity" and that she is getting experience that she might not have received before.

The cooperation between the College Relations Office and the public relations class is a very beneficial experience for those involved, Augspurger said, and added that she would like the arrangement to continue as a part of the WSC public relations/communication program.

faculty accomplishments

Dr. Frank Praher, head of division of mathematics and science, Dr. Fred Webber, professor of mathematics and science, Cheong Youn, instructor of mathematics and science, and five students attended the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics Convention in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Feb. 14-16.

Alli Eminov, associate professor of social science, has been appointed as an Associate of the Summer Research Laboratory on Russia and Eastern Europe of the Russian and East European Center, University of Illinois in Champaign-Urbana. He will be doing research on the Muslims of Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union.

Dr. Joseph Fleck, dean of graduate studies and head of education division, and Herbert Roof, assistant professor of education, presented a paper on "Pre-Professional Skills Test" and Entrance to Teacher Education: A Quantitative Analysis at the 1985 national conference of the Association of Teacher Educators in Las Vegas, Nev., Feb. 21.

Joann Bondhus, assistant professor of business, has been selected to present her paper "To Tell the Truth: The Use of Business Administration Association Convention. The convention is scheduled for March 28-29 in Chicago, Ill.

Doug Taber, assistant professor of social science, delivered a paper at the Mid-American Medieval Association meeting held March 1-3 at the University of Missouri-Kansas City.

Dr. Donald W. Whisenunt, vice-president, has published an essay "The Reading of Papers at Historical Meetings," in the DAH Newsletter. This is the newsletter of the Organization of American Historians, the leading professional organization of historians of the United States. The essay provides suggestions and techniques for reading papers at history meetings, but, as Dr. Whisenunt says, "It can be used by anyone who presents formal, prepared speeches, especially if a time limit is established."

Personality and conflicts

A three-credit graduate or undergraduate course entitled "Personality and Politics" will be offered at Wayne State College in the July summer session.

The course will be taught by Allen O'Donnell, associate professor of social science and director of the Wayne State Public Affairs Institute. It will be especially valuable to teachers and future teachers, O'Donnell said.

"The world of today confronts us with terrible realities," O'Donnell said. "In the face of a shrinking resource base, nations continue to spend over a trillion and a half dollars annually on armaments and armies. The developed countries of the world with less than a quarter of the world's population, consume up to 60 percent of the world's resources.

"The two most powerful countries in the world each have the power to destroy the human species many times over. Economic and social injustice are present in virtually every human society."

In light of these few factors, O'Donnell said, the study of political psychology and political personality is obvious.

"Given the realities of these times, it seems that rational people would want to know the 'why' of what is going on," O'Donnell said.

He added that the problems of the world are not only nuclear weapons but "hunger in the face of plenty, disease in the face of miracle drugs, ignorance in the face of giant centers of learning, and they ought to be studied."

For more information about the course, contact the Wayne State registrar's office or Allen O'Donnell at 402-375-2200.

AN IRON PLAN

QUESTION: My doctor has told me my blood is low in iron. It is not low enough to be called anemia, but he suggested I eat more foods containing iron. I asked him to recommend foods containing iron. His reply was liver, which I do not care for. What else can I eat to increase the iron in my blood?

ANSWER: There are two sources of dietary iron. One is from eggs and animal meats; the other from green leafy vegetables, beans, and fortified cereals and breads. The animal sources are more readily utilized by the body. A serving of cooked meat contains approximately 1/2 to 3 milligrams of iron. The recommended dietary allowance of iron for a female is 18 milligrams.

The amount of iron fortification for cereals and breads will vary. Most fortified cereals will supply 10 to 25% per serving of the iron requirements. The best way to check the amount of iron content in the product is to read the label.

Research has shown that dietary iron is absorbed best when eaten with foods containing vitamin C, such as citrus fruits and with a mixed diet. For instance, the iron is better absorbed if meat and bread are eaten at the same meal.

this and that

Ornamental Peppers in the Flower Garden

Many home gardeners must shift gears mentally to visualize peppers as a garden flower. But one planting is sufficient to convince most skeptics. Many ornamental pepper varieties have delicious fruit with flavors ranging from mild to very hot. While standard pepper plants are fall, rangy and scantily covered with fruits, the ornamental varieties have thick foliage, heavy fruit loads and are often compact so they fit in as landscape plants.

The choice in fruit shapes and colors won't disappoint you. Some varieties change color from yellow to purple to red; others from purple to red. The variety Thai Hot bears one-inch long fruit which turn a brilliant scarlet on shrubby plants which only reach eight inches in height. Another ornamental pepper which does well in Nebraska is Tequila Sunrise: its fruit are a peachy orange, born on densely-foliated plants 16 to 24 inches high.

Growing Grass in Shade

Shade trees in the home landscape are great assets for the beauty and cooling effects they provide, but present a problem for gardeners who want to maintain a turf underneath them. Several ground covers are well suited to the shaded conditions that large trees create. Carpet bungalow has its best foliage color in shade, but accepts full sun. Creeping mahonia is an evergreen ground cover with bluish-green, holly-like foliage that requires moist soil and winter protection. Drought-tolerant goutweed or Bishop's weed can be grown in either shade or sun, and will spread vigorously. Plantain Lily or Hosta is available in hundreds of selections that vary in leaf color and bloom color. Specific information on each of these ground covers, as well as plants suited to other situations, is included in the NebGuide "Selecting a Ground Cover," G84-698.

Wrapping Newly-Planted Trees

Wrapping newly-planted trees is a good practice. Sun scald can cause severe injury to smooth barked trees such as maples, lindens, ash and fruit trees unless the main trunk is wrapped. Rodents feeding on the main trunk near the base of the trees can also cause serious damage.

Paper tree wrap, aluminum foil and a commercial available plastic coil wrap are effective in preventing sun scald damage and rodent injury. The commercially available paper tree wrap will also aid in the prevention of borer attack to certain trees.

Cats sharpen their claws on young trees and puppies will chew on the bark. Tree wrap will aid in preventing this injury as well.

Be aware of price movement

Farmers should sell 1984 corn 'a little at a time'

Farmers with 1984 corn available to sell should hesitate in selling or committing it all right now despite an upward trend in corn futures in late March and early April. But they should be equally wary about "sitting on it too long," in hopes of squeezing out a few more cents a bushel and then getting caught in a possible price plunge this summer.

That's the advice from Lynn Lutgen, University of Nebraska-Lincoln extension economist-grain marketing, who favors farmers selling small lots of corn during the spring "to follow the market up." With this approach, he said, producers will realize sure gains from modest price rises, rather than taking a chance on holding their whole supply in an attempt to hit the ever-elusive market price peak.

Forecasting the duration and strength of the current price rally on the corn futures market is a challenge for farmers and the grain trade, as well as economists, Lutgen said.

AN UPTURN in prices during late March and April has moved past "a resistance point" of $2.81, he said, with further market resistance expected at the $2.84 to $2.88 level. "If the (corn futures) price passes the $2.88 mark, there's a chance of reaching $3 bushel on the Chicago Board of Trade," he said.

Both technical factors and the rate and volume of grain moving off farms could effect the trend in the near future, the economist said.

Heavy selling by farmers, either to meet cash flow demands of a new cropping season, or in belief corn prices might falter, would reduce the odds of corn futures reaching the $2.90 or $3 mark, he said.

A weakening of the basis — the difference between the cash and futures prices for corn — may indicate more corn moving off the farm than the market can handle, Lutgen said.

Current weather conditions will have an effect on marketing patterns, because if farmers are busy in the field, they traditionally don't take time to get grain loaded and on the market. Good weather in March and the mild winter have put many farmers even with or ahead of the game in field operations.

THE U.S. Department of Agriculture's recent announcement of a 43-cent-a-bushel deficiency payment to producers for 1984 corn after the market price stayed below the target price for five months will help cash flow for many, he said, and might discourage selling stored corn. And, paradoxically, producers tend to hang onto corn in a bullish period, Lutgen said.

There's a lot of corn out there, Lutgen said, with more than one billion bushels under government loan, in both on-farm and off-farm storage, on Jan. 1 of this year.

While watching the market closely, most producers with corn in storage will have until summer to decide whether to put remaining stocks in the reserve, he said, and by that time, will know whether predictions of a summer price slump are valid. While some Nebraska corn went into storage in November, many producers did not store it under loan until after January 1, he said, which means that decision time — the months from storage placement — will be July for some, August and September for many.

In analyzing alternatives for marketing, producers are advised that there appears to be "strong downside resistance" on corn prices this spring. However, if 62 million acres of corn are planted, as USDA predicts, prices could worsen this summer, he said. Selling small lots of corn is "an insurance strategy" to avoid losses in emptying the bin as the market bottoms out, Lutgen said.

"All marketing plans need to be changed as conditions dictate," Lutgen said. Producers will need to accelerate or slow down corn marketing as factors such as the volume of exports, weather conditions in the Corn Belt and world crop prospects change the present outlook, he said.

Nebraska district 4-H shows

Dates and locations for eight district 4-H horse shows, to be held prior to the State 4-H Horse Exposition at Fanner Park in Grand Island July 22-25, have been announced by R.B. Warren, University of Nebraska-Lincoln extension 4-H horse specialist.

The district shows are for level II 4-H competition only, Warren said. "There are no level III qualifying shows this year."

Level III riders may enter directly in the state show in the following events: calf roping, dally roping, headers, dally roping, heelers, green hunters, dressage, advanced English and western pleasure, advanced English and western horsemanship, western riding and two-year old snaffle bit western pleasure.

Warren said the makeup of the 1985 shows is based on the 1984 enrollment, balance of show size and new sites.

Potential entrants in the 1985 district shows range from 406 at McCook to 446 at Fremont, he said. Level II English event... also will be offered at Theford, McCook, York and Fremont.

The schedule: June 24, Kimball; June 25, Theford; June 26, McCook; June 27, York; June 28, Neligh; July 1, Kearney; July 2, Fremont; and July 3, Syracuse.

PIK-related SBA loans processed

Nebraskans seem to be getting their share of the loans available through the Small Business Administration's (SBA) Federal Action Economic Injury loan program, Representative Doug Berube said recently.

The loan program, a result of the 1983 Payment-In-Kind (PIK) program, is aimed at helping small agribusinessmen who suffered economic setbacks because of PIK. According to SBA officials, there have been $20.8 million in loans approved thus far nationwide in a program that is budgeted for $100 million. Of that $20.8 million, just over $5.5 million has been approved for loan applicants from Nebraska. The Grand Prairie, Texas, SBA disaster assistance office works with loan applicants from the midwest. Of the 45 loans approved by that office by late last week, 23 were Nebraska applicants, Berube observed.

About 75 percent of all eligible counties in the United States are in the midwest. According to SBA officials, the average approved loan is for about $170,000.

NPPA board of directors met

Gene Lutt of Wayne, attended the quarterly meeting of the Nebraska Pork Producers Association Inc., State Board of Director on April 1, in Grand Island. Gene is a member of the Wayne County Pork Producers Association.

Committee activities and issues were reported. A Swine Health/PRV Task Force comprised of representatives from various segments of the swine industry has been selected to study current laws and regulations pertaining to pseudorabies. Gale Pohlmann of Plymouth is chairman of the task force.

The board recognized and gave their support to Ron Kahle of Kearney, who was elected president of the National Pork Producers Council at the 1985 American Pork Congress.

The separation of the Holt-Boyd Pork Producers Association was approved by the board thus making a total of 42 organized area associations in the state.

The directors selected Norfolk as the site of the 1985 annual meeting and banquet, to be held Jan. 10 and 11, 1986.

Deficiency payments to eligible corn, sorghum producers to total $1.7 billion

Eligible corn and sorghum producers will receive an estimated $1.7 billion in deficiency payments for their 1984 crops, Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block said.

Most of the 760,000 deficiency payment checks should be in farmers' hands between April 10 and 15, Secretary Block said. Corn producers will receive about $1.55 billion and sorghum producers around $150 million, he said.

Deficiency payment rates are calculated as the difference between an established target price and the higher price support loan rate, or the national average price received by farmers during the first five months of the marketing year. For corn and sorghum, the first five months of the marketing year are October through February.

National weighted average market prices for the first five months of the marketing year are $2.60 per bushel for corn and $2.30 per bushel for sorghum. Eligible corn producers will be paid a deficiency payment rate of 43 cents per bushel for their 1984 crop, based on the difference between the $3.03 target price and the $2.60 farm price. The eligible sorghum producers' deficiency payment rate will be 46 cents per bushel, based on the difference between the $2.88 target price and the $2.42 loan rate.

Producers can estimate their individual deficiency payments by multiplying their planted acreage times their farm program yield times the deficiency payment rate. For example, a corn producer who planted 100 acres in the program and had a farm program yield of 100 bushels per acre would receive a deficiency payment of $4,300 (100 acres x 100 bushels x 43 cents per bushel).

Block said payments will be issued through local ASCS offices.

To insure survival

Procedures important in planting, care of trees

In a couple weeks, tree planting will begin across the state. Windbreaks and shelterbelts will be planted for wind protection, snow control, shade, wildlife habitat or a variety of other purposes. To ensure good survival and promote the best possible growth for these seedlings, some important procedures should be practiced.

First, if the trees are being sent directly to you be careful with the seedlings. How the seedlings are handled could make the difference between planting healthy trees and planting dead trees. Keep the tree roots damp. Do not let the roots dry out. In the same sense do not drop the trees. Young seedlings will drown if placed in a bucket of water and allowed to set over 6 or 8 hours. If the trees are to be planted in one or two days they can be kept in a cool, dark location (root cellar, or the garage) until they're planted. If it is going to be awhile before the trees will get planted, hold in the trees in a narrow trench in a sandy site until they are needed. Also be careful when handling the seedlings to avoid breaking off buds and tops of small seedlings.

Secondly, proper site preparation is a pre-requisite to a good tree planting. Unless the trees are to be furrow planted, (as is the case in sandy soils with conifer seedlings), a good planting bed is essential for initial survival of the tree seedlings. If the ground was not worked up last year, the site should be worked up as early as possible. A well prepared site will provide a good soft planting bed for the tree planter. This will also improve packing around the seedlings. Also, better weed control will be realized.

In addition, the newly planted trees need to have a good solid contact between their roots and the surrounding soil. If the trees have airpockets left around their root systems, they will perish. Also, if the roots don't have a solid contact they can not absorb the necessary moisture or nutrients and the crown will die back between the roots. Whether the person is hand planting or having a crew machine plant the trees, each individual tree should be straightened and packed in firmly.

Weed control is the other essential element for good survival and growth of a young tree planting. Weeds can rob moisture, nutrients, and sunlight from young tree seedlings. Robbing moisture is probably the major crime of weeds. When weeds are allowed to grow in and around tree rows, the trees will be stressed for moisture and will not grow well and in extreme instances, perish.

Trees should be viewed as any other "crop." Just as a farmer prepares his fields and controls the weeds for his crop of beans, corn or wheat, and the gardener works his garden and keeps it weed free to improve his production of vegetables, so must a person with a tree planting to get the best growth from his trees. If that view is followed, the tree planting will be able to provide its intended use a great deal sooner than if the tree planting had little care.

If you are thinking of planting trees this spring, but haven't ordered your trees yet, there is still time to order seedlings from Halsey. Contact your local Extension, SCs, NRD or District Forester's office to place your order. Trees are around $33.00/hundred trees this year.

the farmer's wife by pat metherney

Even with the snow showers, this year's Easter was glorious compared to the last two! Kay and I rolled out at 4 a.m. and were at church at 5. Russ Prince was attaching the propane tank to the gas grill. So, Billy Brudtgen was mixing pancake batter with a paint mixer in a big bucket. Julie Kant put on the big enamel pots for eggs and coffee. Gary greased the grills. Sandy warmed sausages and kept the roasters from blowing fuses.

At 5:30, the brass choir was warming up. Sleepy people were wishing "Happy Easter" blessings.

Seniors fried the pancakes. Freshman poured coffee. Guys dispensed juice and milk. We in the kitchen heard the service over the loudspeaker. Ushers sneaked down for rolls.

The sun came in the East windows. Promptly at 7 a.m., church was over and the congregation trooped downstairs for Easter breakfast.

She brought three sorority sisters who were determined to see the birth of a calf. They checked on "the girls" between three-wheeler rides. Jon made the last check at 3 a.m. and Mike went up at 5. One sneaked in between and they missed the whole show. I told them "a watched pot never boils."

At least I've had my quota of hugs this week. On Saturday the 30th, I went from Columbia to Raleigh to see our best man and wife. I got a really special weekend rate on the plane fare.

The temperature got to 90 degrees and I got sunburned. We retired to the kitchen for air conditioning. Six of their friends, all originally from the North, came over.

The conversation went from kids to politics to hog raising, just as it does in my kitchen. Swede, a biochemist at NC State, raises pigs. You can find farmers anywhere. Another old saying, "You can take the boy off the farm..."

The coffee and conversation were so great, I missed the 7 p.m. plane back, had to stay all night, and go at 11 a.m. the next day.

Also had lunch with classmate Sandy, who works in open heart surgery at Providence Hospital in Columbia.

On Monday, April Fool's, sister-in-law Linda took us to Charleston. I stuffed myself on fish and picked up some shells, marvelled at the giant Angel oak tree, and took a 45-minute carriage ride around the old restored part of the city.

Our driver was Rebecca and the horse's name was Charlie. The horses really do wear diapers in Charleston; they call them Emission Control Devices!

I learned not to say "Civil War," but "War Between the States." We visited the Old Market and bought fresh flowers from the Black "flower ladies." I learned about the crab soup and oyster bars, why Charleston was called "the Holy City," (church spires everywhere) and marvelled at azaleas of every color and size.

On Wednesday, we hugged Jim and Linda; Ross and Jay, at noon; Dori and Mary at 4 p.m. In Omaha I gave Mom a hug and drove for home.

On Thursday, we had old friends from Omaha visit; on Friday, a nurse friend from Kansas.

I hugged Max Schneider at church Wednesday night because I couldn't believe he was recuperated from surgery already. And on Sunday, I hugged five dear young people as they headed back to Lincoln.

Oh, yes, I hugged the Big Farmer when I got home. Twelve days is a long time!

Then I finished a full week by watching Florence Nightingale on the tube on Sunday night. What a lady! Medicine came a long way in one hundred years. Vacation's over. It's back to work today.

ANNA SEZ:

Holla Everyone!
A nice warm morning for a change with light gusts of wind. A typical spring day. The fog slowly pushed through the snow drifts south of my window. Hope it will not be a killing frost when they are headed. Welcome to Jim Hanson who came to the home Saturday. Hope that you enjoy your stay with us.

St. Paul's residents here and the Presbyterian residents held their communion service here this week.

Our church members will be at St. Paul's Sunday, March 31st. Church of Christ, Sunday, April 7, both baptisms; Sunday, April 14, Redwood Lutheran, Sunday, April 21, Wesleyan Methodist.

Activities here

St. Mary's Ladies will be here Monday with coffee and cake.

On Tuesday will be about day for the men. Frisk is played with the donuts are "frisky." It is shocking how much we have forgotten but also surprising how much we can recall on a moments notice too. On the following Tuesday will be about day for the women.

Harry Wallace will be here on Tuesday, April 9 in the afternoon to entertain us with special organ music.

On the first and third Thursdays of each month the Senior Citizens will be here to entertain.

On Mondays there is movie and popcorn.

On Wednesdays there are cards and dominoes.

On the third Thursday we have our birthday party for the month when we sing the birthday song and have treats.

We have a new series of Bible class on Tuesdays. I come 3 times weekly to keep our fingers loosened.

There is Bible study on Tuesdays in the dining room.

There will be 6 residents seated around the birthday table: Marie Knuth, April 6; Gertrude Nelson, April 7; Bernice Paterson, April 11; Herbert Lurbeck, April 19; Ellen Hansen, April 22; and Julie Koff, April 21.

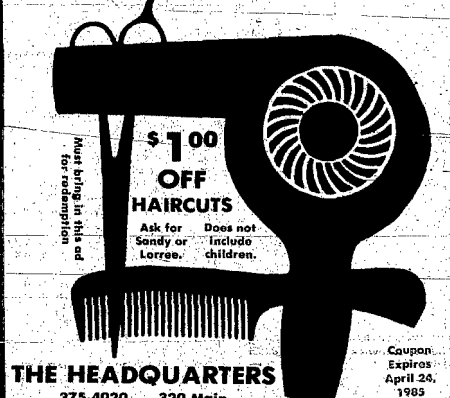

Thanks again to the Student Senate and sponsors. It really made our Easter complete.

Thanks to Susto and Ann Nichols for our special Easter treats and favors—Easter nest cookies.

Until next time, have a nice Easter and a good week.
