Wayne to get airport grant

Word came Friday morning from Congressman Doug Bereuter's office that the city of Wayne will be receiving a $24,300 airport improvement grant from the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA).

The grant money will be used at the Wayne Municipal Airport for the purpose of replacing the old runway lights, according to Wayne Airport Authority officials.

When the northeast paved runway was extended last summer by 400 feet, new lights were installed on both sides of the extension at approximately four to five feet apart.

These and the replacements for the old lights, will be widened to approximately 10 feet for runway maintenance purposes.

The FAA grant will cover 90 percent of the light replacement cost, while 3 percent is paid by the state and 7 percent is designated as local. The runway lights will be similar in type to the old lights, with medium intensity. Included in the project is the purchase of a regulator to control the intensity of the runway (which range in costs up to $6,000).

"The old one burned out," said Orin Zach, manager of the municipal airport.

Project cost also includes new wiring and conduit, according to Zach.

Hoskins, Western and Sondregger, Inc. of Lincoln are the engineers of the project. No date has been established as to when the runway lighting project will begin.

Mishap claims Laurel man's life

A motorcycle accident near Laurel Thursday evening claimed the life of a 23 year old man.

Bradley Saunders of Laurel, son of Anita Saunders of Dixon, was killed in an accident that involved drivers of two other motorcycles which happened on Highway 20 two miles west of Laurel.

The State Highway Patrol reported Friday evening that Saunders was riding his motorcycle eastbound on Highway 20 and lost control, flipped the cycle and slid down the highway.

Behind Saunders was another motorcycle driven by Patrick O'Neil of Ponca, who hit the wreckage of the first motorcycle, lost control and went into the ditch. O'Neil was taken to Providence Medical Center in Wayne for back injuries. It was reported.

A third motorcycle, driven by Robert Duncan of Hubbard was following at a distance behind the first and second motorcycles. Duncan swerved to avoid the accident scene and lost control, also going into the ditch. He was taken to Marian Health Center in Sioux City. A passenger on the Duncan motorcycle, Kenneth Ellis of Allen, was taken to Providence Medical Center.

Saunders grew up in Dixon and was a 1979 graduate of Laurel Concord High School. He was a member of the Dixon United Methodist Church and was employed at Eagle Aerial Spraying Inc. in Laurel.

Services for Bradley Saunders will take place today (Monday) at 2 p.m. at the Dixon United Methodist Church in Dixon, and burial will be in the Concord Cemetery, with Wilhelms Mortuary in Laurel in charge of arrangements.

FUN Camp scheduled June 17-21

Today (April 15) is the last day of application acceptance for FUN (Fine Arts and Unique experiences in Northeast Nebraska) Camp, scheduled for June 17-21 at Wayne State College.

The event is sponsored by Wayne State Extended Campus Division.

The camp is developed to better meet the creative needs of students in fifth through eighth grades. Students will have the opportunity for creative learning not ordinarily possible in the regular classroom.

Cynthia Swartz said:

FUN will offer courses emphasizing creativity in problem solving, movement; music; theatre; writing; visual arts and Ameslan — a sort of American sign language. Swartz said the FUN camp is the only one of its kind in Nebraska.

Any student presently in the fifth through eighth grade is eligible to apply for FUN. Nominations to the camp may be initiated by teachers, parents or students. All students wishing to participate must complete an official application form and accompany it with three letters of recommendation (one each from a teacher, parent or guardian and the student).

Faculty members for FUN include Mary Ann DeNaeyer, Joyce Mitchell, Ted Blendersman, LeAnn Johnson, Mary Halverstad, Eleanor Jones and Nigel Buss.

Camp tuition is $125 ($25 in advance deposit) for those requiring housing and $75 ($15 deposit) for commuting campers. The fee includes housing, food, use of facilities, supplies and teaching staffs.

All participants of FUN will be housed with families in Wayne. Deposits will be refunded if the student's application is not accepted.

To obtain an application or more information, contact Swartz at 402/375-5251 or the WSC Extended Campus Division at 375-2200.

Mule power

GERALD STANLEY (scooping the oats in the old sower) and Don Cunningham (team driver) work four mules on a seven acre patch on the Dwan Stanley farm about 3 1/2 miles northeast of Dixon. Both men thought it would be fun to sow oats the way it was done years ago. "We can't afford a tractor, anyway," they joked.

GARY WELDON and his friend, Woodstock.

Variety show part of retail promotion

by Chuck Hackenmiller

Gary Weldon started out his performance at the Wayne Senior Citizens Center last Tuesday afternoon with two gospel songs, accompanying his solo with some fancy piano playing.

Afterwards, he introduced to the senior citizens audience, a friend, Woodstock, who took no effort in holding back insults to one or more members of the audience.

Woodstock is the Don Rickles of wooden "dummies."

Weldon, a ventriloquist, has many talents and one of them is making Woodstock come to life. "Woodstock is sometimes a smart-aleck, saying things to get me in trouble," he told the senior citizens.

He is from Missouri Valley, Iowa and has been entertaining since 1958. Before Weldon got into the entertainment business, he worked five years in a children's hospital patient credit department.

That occupation didn't fulfill his ambitions.

"I decided I would rather make people laugh than make them cry, he joked.

He first played at dances and then branched his talents into ventriloquism, clowning and magic.

His new sideline has now become his main source of income. During the past year and a half, he has appeared in 59 grocery chain stores as promotion entertainer.

Over the past years he has appeared as a warm-up act with the following stars: Tommy Cash, Jeanie C. Rittzy, Del Reeves, Don King, Faron Young, Billy Walker and other country singers.

He has also performed at many fairs and school shows.

WHAT BRINGS HIM to Wayne is his affiliation with retail promotions which began four years ago. On Saturday, April 20, he will be providing his wide variety of entertainment through a promotion arranged by the Wayne Chamber of Commerce in conjunction with the Wayne Regional Arts Spring Festival.

His schedule of performances that day will begin at 12:30 p.m. as he begins with one of his personal talents — becoming Klutzy the Clown.

Some of his Klutzy antics will include a magic show and making balloon animals for kids "from 1 to 100" he said.

There will also be an hour of games for the kids, with such events as a water balloon toss and shoe kick. His final performance of the day will be when he gets out of his clown costume and allows everyone to meet his little wooden "dummy" Woodstock.

Throughout the course of the afternoon, an estimated 60 door prizes will be given away, Weldon said.

His wife and two young children assist in the making of "balloon animals" and the children games. So his profession is "a family type of thing," he said.

The 200 block of Pearl Street will be closed off on the day of his performance.

Weldon's goal is simple, yet can be complex.

His entertainment goal, he told the Wayne senior citizens, is to do all he can to remove some of the tension in this world by getting people to laugh and to forget, at least for awhile, their problems.

And laugh they did.

NPPD rates rise if federal rates become effective

The Nebraska Public Power District (NPPD) announced recently that if the proposal to drastically increase federal electric power rates were to become effective in 1985, rates for NPPD's total requirements wholesale customers would go up approximately 3.7 percent.

NPPD serves 52 municipalities and 26 other public power districts and rural cooperatives with their total power supply requirements.

The District said that using today's rates, if the federal increase were in effect, the electric rates for NPPD's 108,000 retail customers would go up approximately 2.4 percent.

The specific proposal to increase rates from the federal hydro projects in the Western Area Power Administration (WAPA) is being suggested by the Federal Office of Management and Budget (OMB).

NPPD Assistant General Manager D.J. Blatchford said that NPPD's total wholesale and retail power costs would increase approximately $10 million if the new rate was effective this year. He said NPPD purchases about 8 percent of its total energy requirements from WAPA.

Blatchford said that NPPD and other Nebraska utilities would continue to oppose the proposed rate increases through the Nebraska Power Association. He said it is just speculation now that the increase as proposed by OMB will ever be enacted and if so it may be a year or two before it would become effective.

NPPD said that some municipalities in Nebraska that purchase a large part of their power and energy requirements from WAPA could be faced with substantial rate increases if the OMB proposal is enacted.

The other day I did something which I never did before in Wayne. I shaved off my beard.

That beard was started in 1983, was worn through the Wayne Centennial in 1984 and up until a couple weeks ago was considered permanently glued on my face because people recognized me as "that broad-shouldered guy with the beard."

This spring it was time to shed the beard, I decided. No more curling the beard (most people twiddled their thumbs or doodle to pass the time; I twiddled my beard); enough of biting my beard every time I took a gulp of food; worrying about going to the barber every four or five weeks to get it trimmed; sick of having babies play tug of war with it; tired of scratching it.

People like to spring clean their house and lawn. But before I started on that, I wanted to do some spring cleaning on myself.

Hence, the new look.

Those whiskers were eliminated from my mug about three weeks ago. It took awhile for people to become accustomed to my appearance without the beard.

Now I'm at a moment of indecision. I've been making a feeble attempt at letting it grow again. The decision has to be made before the ugly growth starts turning into a bonafide manured beard.

I hate these pressure choices.

SOME FACES were just meant to have beards. I'm tired of being called baby-face; of cleaning-up the miplature hairs that had been hacked away from the electric razor every morning; of seeing the red rash marks on my neck because of my sensitive skin.

I can remember being in high school, anxiously waiting for the day when I would be eligible to have a shave. Kids used to brag about it.

Now I'm not writing about those days when you'd stir up foam, lather it on your face and then get out dad's old "straight" edge (that was razor sharp and could split a hair off your head right down the center).

During my time of "first shaving", we were able to use dad's hand-me-down electric shaver — the ones where the triple-head had only two heads or the trimmer wasn't functioning properly.

These early electric shavers might not have got as close as a straight edge, but it sure beat the dickens out of looking like you had a fight with an alley cat after using a straight edge razor.

Nowadays a good share of kids look beyond the first shave and anticipate with mild excitement their first signs of a moustache or beard.

I'm still undecided as to what to do with my beard. Maybe by Tuesday, I'll have the answer.

I like to keep them guessing here at the office.

The search continues

It was December (smack dab in the middle of the Wildcat basketball season) when it was announced by the Wayne State College administration that Rick Weaver would not be retained for the 1985-86 basketball season as head coach.

Since then, Weaver has found another head coaching job beginning this fall at Baker University in Baldwin City, Kansas. He is already on the recruiting trail for Baker University.

Yet Wayne State College — some four months after it was announced a new coach would be found for the 1985-86 season — has been unable to fill the head coaching position.

It's not that the recruiting staff at Wayne State College hasn't made strong efforts in finding a new coach. Over the past weeks, reports of three prospective coaches that were high on the list of consideration (none of the names were released voluntarily to this newspaper by the college administration) toured the college campus at different times.

It turned out that of the three prospects, two were moving up in the ranks within the NCAA Division I schools and the other has decided to stay where he is at.

Now the search committee is back to looking at more applications. In the meantime, the recruiting time frame in gaining high school or junior college athletics is growing shorter and shorter.

Ron Jones, Wayne State College athletic director, said the search process "has proved to be very effective, but frustrating."

We can understand the frustrating part of the coach recruiting process. Having three coaching offers rejected by highly considered quality candidates can be a disheartening thing.

One wonders if the administration had any idea this position would be so difficult to fill. To what extent does a college have to go in drawing the best possible candidate to the position? More benefits and incentives? Increase in the wages? Or is it just the unfortunate case of "being at the right place at the wrong time?"

Jones said in a previous news release that expediency in filling the position is still a major concern, and that the temptation to make a hasty decision must be avoided. We agree with both his comments.

The sooner the position is filled, the quicker the new coach can recruit basketball players for his future teams and get to personally know the returning Wildcat players.

Bill passed for repeal Revisions on IRS law inadequate

Record Keeping
In recent weeks I have heard from a number of Nebraskans who are very upset about a new Internal Revenue Service rule that people who want to claim a tax deduction for business use of a passenger vehicle keep "contemporaneous records" of their mileage.

The requirement makes extensive record-keeping mandatory for farmers and people involved in small businesses so that they can deduct mileage on vehicles used for business. It means that taxpayers who want to claim the business deduction must keep logs with individual entries specifying dates, names, purposes, mileage and times of use. And, all of the information must be entered in the log at the time the vehicle is used.

Obviously, this system is not going to work. Even though the Internal Revenue Service has issued revised regulations to alleviate the impact of this regulation, the revisions don't go far enough.

Last week the House of Representatives passed a bill I cosponsored that would repeal the law that brought about these regulations. The bill repeals the requirement that records be contemporaneous and generally reinstates the law that has applied in past years. A similar bill has been introduced in the Senate.

This is an important piece of legislation for both the House and Senate to act on expeditiously in view of the amount of confusion that has been created with respect to the recordkeeping provisions. As one of my colleagues said when the bill to repeal was passed, this was a true victory. It was a victory for those people who drive the trucks, pick the crops, and oversee the small businesses. It was a victory for the people who were asked to drive with one hand and keep records with the other. And it was a victory for people who believe in common sense.

Mandatory Insurance
Recent bank and savings and loan failures, and concerns about runs on financial institutions have underlined the need for consistent deposit insurance systems. Therefore, I have introduced a bill that would require all depository institutions to carry some form of deposit insurance, whether federal or state-level. If the latter means stringent federal standards.

When money is deposited in a financial institution — a bank, savings and loan, or a credit union — the depositor has to have confidence in the security of that money. When the deposit is insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, or the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, or the National Credit Union Administration Board, it is secure. Never has an insured depositor lost money when it was insured by one of these insurance systems.

My bill, H.R. 1564, impowers the FDIC, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, and the National Credit Union Administration Board to jointly issue rules to ensure that state-level insurance programs can meet claims under all reasonably foreseeable circumstances. It provides for an orderly transition in the deposit insurance system by granting interim insurance to institutions which do not qualify for federal insurance.

The interim insurance would guarantee amounts up to $10,000. Financial institutions which do not immediately qualify for broader coverage would be allowed five years to remedy the problems that cause denial of more comprehensive insurance.

conditions are entering into this increase," he said. "However, many persons whom I've talked to think this might have an effect."

Schneider noted that the number of youths participating in tractor training programs is increasing this year. This may indicate that farmers are planning to use more of the family members in the farm operation.

"Accidents need not happen," said Schneider. "If good safety procedures are followed, farm work can be just as safe as any other occupation."

Nebraska farm fatalities on the increase

It is possible for a Nebraska farmer to be involved in any one of about 35 different types of farm-related accidents, according to Rollin D. Schneider, extension safety specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Schneider said a farmer may use four or five different machines during the production of one crop. "So, the person may be involved with machines that have different characteristics," he said.

crushing under combine headers; buckets on loaders and between equipment and structures.

According to Schneider, safety lockouts were available in a few of the fatal incidents, but they were not activated by the person working on the equipment.

"At one time the tractor overturn accident was high on the list of accident causes. Now overturns are only second or third as a cause of farm accidents," he said. "The roll-over protective structures, now available on both farm and industrial tractors has helped in that reduction."

Power take-off accidents have also been reduced. Schneider said that better shielding of moving components has helped to cut down the power take-off accident numbers. However, there are many instances where the user of the equipment has not activated safety devices that are built into the equipment.

This year's 38 fatalities represent a slight increase over the prior two years, Schneider added that it may not be due to the economy.

Q. My husband died one year ago. Six months later, his uncle died. His uncle left a will stating that his property was to be divided between his two nephews (my husband and my husband's brother) and his niece, or their survivors. Since my husband died before the uncle did, I believed that my husband's share of the uncle's estate should go to our four children. Instead, his share was divided between the two remaining siblings (my husband's brother and sister). The amount is substantial. Is there any way my children can recover their share? My husband's brother was the personal representative, so of course he stood to gain more if the word "survivor" was interpreted to mean him and his sister, rather than his brother's children.

A. It is difficult to determine what your children's rights would be without knowing the exact wording of the will. Furthermore, even if the exact wording is known, its interpretation by a court is difficult to predict without knowing more about the surrounding circumstances of the case. However, if there has not already been a formal probate hearing or other court determination closing the estate, you should be able to petition the court to interpret the wording of the will. If there has been a final order or decree by the county court regarding the distribution of the uncle's estate, you may be able to appeal to the District Court if it has not been longer than 30 days since the order or decree was handed down.

To find out if your children have a potentially valid claim to a share of their great-uncle's estate, you should consult an attorney. He or she can examine the precise wording of the will and help you to predict how a judge would interpret it in light of the surrounding circumstances and all available evidence. In addition, your attorney can help you to determine whether you can currently raise a valid claim or are prohibited from doing so because of a previous court determination or for any other reasons. Finally, your attorney can help you to institute and prepare your claim if appropriate.

Sister Sophie Damme

'Life as a deaconess enriching, rewarding'

By LaVon Anderson

She's been involved in full-time church work for over 40 years.
She never married — and yet the gleam in her eye, lightness in her step, and twinkle in her smile is evidence of a woman in love. And she is in love — with the world and with people.
She grew up on a small farm tucked away in the hillsides of northeast Nebraska — and yet she attended conferences in England and committee meetings in Switzerland.
She's met with renowned church officials from across the country and around the world — and she's worked side by side with the poverty-stricken.

SOPHIE DAMME, a native of Wayne, has served as a deaconess of the Lutheran Church in America for the past 42 years.
During those years, her work has included serving on the staff of the Lutheran Deaconess School, holding various positions on the national staff of the Board of Parish Education of the Lutheran Church in America, and serving as a guest professor of Christian education at the Lutheran Theological Seminary in Philadelphia.
Most recently, until her retirement in 1982, she was director of the national deaconess community — a position she was elected to in 1978.

TODAY, ALTHOUGH at age 70 Sister Sophie refers to herself as retired, she remains active in church work and is involved with international deaconess activities.

Though she maintains legal residence in Philadelphia, she has spent the past two winters residing in Wayne with her aunt, Mrs. Lottie Schroeder.
While in Wayne, she serves part-time as parish deaconess at Redeemer Lutheran Church — her "home church."

"That's pretty much an open position which mainly involves work in Christian education and leadership development," explains Sister Sophie, who served as parish deaconess at Redeemer Lutheran from October 1983 until leaving Wayne in April 1984.

She assumed the position again when she returned to Wayne in September of 1984.
Sister Sophie will leave Wayne again this week to attend an executive meeting early next month of the International Diakonia, which has representation from diaconal groups all over the world, including Africa, Asia, Europe, Australia, and the Pacific Islands.

She plans to return to Wayne in mid-October.
"This may seem strange, but I really enjoy the winters in Wayne," smiles Sister Sophie. "I find the air most stimulating."

ONCE YOU'VE talked to Sister Sophie, you come away with the distinct impression that winter air isn't the only thing she finds invigorating — it's life itself and the entire world that surrounds her.

The world is a much smaller place today than it was for the young girl growing up on a small farm south of Wayne over 60 years ago.

Sister Sophie Damme

One of two daughters born to Ed and Emma Damme, Sister Sophie graduated from Wayne High School and Wayne State Teacher's College, with a degree in music.
She taught two years in Wayne County School District 68 before returning to college to receive her bachelor's degree.

After earning her degree, Sister Sophie taught music for one year in a city school at Hooper before coming home to District 68. She remained there for the next two years before going to teach at District 34 in Wayne County.
After 10 years as a school teacher, during which time she also gave private piano lessons in the homes of rural children, Sister Sophie quit teaching and enrolled at the Lutheran Deaconess School in Baltimore, Md.

The year was 1943.
SISTER SOPHIE said the decision to train for deaconess service did not come easy.
"Actually, I struggled with the decision for probably five years before making it," she smiles.

Although she "thoroughly" enjoyed teaching, Sister Sophie said she was also very busy in church work at Redeemer Lutheran and enjoyed all those activities as well.

"But, I decided I would do one or the other."

Sister Sophie said her final decision to become a deaconess came after hearing about a deaconess at Tashita Home in Lincoln who was working with children.
"I felt I would transfer my working with children in school to working with them through the church."

SISTER SOPHIE pauses to explain that a deaconess is someone who works full-time in the church, but is not ordained.

In the United States, there are deaconesses in just the Methodist and Lutheran Churches. However, on other continents, there are deaconesses from other denominations as well.
In the United States, the LCA Deaconess Center is located in Gladwyne, Penn., a suburb of Philadelphia.

Sister Sophie explains there are approximately 140 deaconesses in this membership, with only about 40 in residence.

"The odds are," explains Sophie, "work individually as far north as Alaska, west as Alaska, south as North Carolina, and in Canada."

"They do many different kinds of work," she adds. "While some work within a parish, others are administrators, nurses, activity directors and chaplains in nursing homes, some teach kindergarten, and others may work with the retarded or emotionally disturbed."

SISTER SOPHIE was 28 years old when she enrolled in deaconess school.
Her three years training involved studies in Bible, church history, Christian education, liturgy and theology.

It also included field training in parish work and in teaching children and youth in the church.

One year of internship was spent at the Lutheran Settlement House, a social service agency located in a poverty area of Philadelphia.

"It was during the summer that I was assigned to the Lutheran Settlement House," recalls Sophie.
"I expected it to be miserably dirty, smelly and crowded — and it was all those things. But, after four days, I thoroughly enjoyed it."

WHEN HER TRAINING was completed in 1947, Sister Sophie was recognized as a deaconess in a special service of setting apart — which she explains is comparable to a pastor's ordination.
"It's a very serious and meaningful ceremony."

For the first 10 years she served on the staff of the Lutheran Deaconess School in Baltimore, teaching Christian education and guidance counseling.
During that time, she earned her master's degree in religious education at New York University.

In 1957, Sister Sophie was offered a position on the national staff of the Board of Parish Education of the Lutheran Church in America, headquartered in Philadelphia.

There, for the first five years, she served as a field secretary and traveled across the country conducting leadership training meetings.

Her next five years on the national staff, until 1967, were as coordinating editor for children's Christian education materials.

In 1968, when the deaconess school and center in Baltimore combined with a similar center in Gladwyne, Penn., Sister Sophie was called to serve as director of education for deaconess candidates.

During that time, she also was a guest professor of Christian education at the Lutheran Theological Seminary in Philadelphia.

"DEACONESS candidates," explains Sophie, "must meet requirements similar to those of pastoral candidates."
The deaconess candidate's first professional requirement is to receive, in her own locality, whatever special training she needs to carry out the job she plans to do.

After that, she must receive at least one year of theological training in either a Lutheran seminary or Lutheran college before entering the deaconess center.

After approximately three months of deaconess orientation — learning what is involved in deaconess service — the women are invested in a service. Afterward, they must return for one year in the field they have chosen.

DURING THE investiture service, which Sophie compares to capping ceremonies for nurses, the women receive their official deaconess garb for the first time.

The garb is a simple black dress with a white collar on a V-neckline.
"I always wear my garb when I'm at church," says Sophie, adding that most deaconesses wear the garb for two reasons — convenience and identification.

AS DIRECTOR OF education for deaconess candidates, Sister Sophie's job was to keep in touch with the candidates and guide them along their educational paths.

She served in that position for five years, until 1972, when the position as editor of Christian education materials opened up again on the national Board of Parish Education.

In 1978, Sister Sophie Damme was elected director of the national deaconess community for a four-year term.

"Yes, I recall the installation service," smiles Sophie. "It did not seem like it was real."
There, in 1982 and at the age of 68, Sister

Sophie felt it was time to quit. "Even if they reminded me of Ronald Reagan," she laughs.

"It was time for a different kind of leadership, and I felt it would be to the advantage of the deaconess community to hand that leadership over to someone else."

ALSO, BY THAT time, Sister Sophie had accepted the responsibility as chairman of the Central Committee of Diakonia of the Americas.

As chairman, her work mainly involves preparing for and directing a conference of those groups every four years.

It also involves being a member of the executive committee of the International Diakonia which meets yearly.

In addition to her international deaconess activities, Sister Sophie spends most of her summer substituting for members of the deaconess center staff in Gladwyne.

In June, she will also chair a conference of the Diakonia of the Americas in the Philadelphia area.

DOES SISTER SOPHIE have any regrets about her life?

"My life has been so much broader than anything I could ever have dreamed of. If anyone had told me years ago that I would be attending a conference in Coventry, England, or a committee meeting in Frankfurt, Germany, I would have told them they were out of their mind."

Sister Sophie says in the days when she entered deaconess training, people thought the only normal thing for a woman was to marry and raise a family.

Women who chose the life of a deaconess were set apart.
"Now," she smiles, "you can see how my life was enriched by the opportunities which were opened up to me as a deaconess."

ALTHOUGH deaconesses are allowed to marry, Sister Sophie was never wed.
"Sure, I would have been happy to have my own family, but it didn't work out that way."

Sophie's family does include two nephews and a niece residing on the east coast. She plans to visit them this summer.
Their mother and Sophie's sister, Ruth DiMaio, died of cancer in 1968. Sophie's father died in 1961, and her mother in 1975.

"One advantage of being a deaconess is that you have two families."
"It's certainly a wonderful option for someone who is seeking a special way to serve the church. It's a stimulating and enriching way of life, although it is demanding."
"But," adds Sophie, "most everyone's life is demanding."

Fitness: Fit it in
You see them everywhere. People jogging, bicycling and walking. Everyone is enjoying the unseasonably warm weather.
Now is the time to make regular exercise a part of your life. There's no more enjoyable time to begin an exercise program than the spring.
Enjoy the rebirth of nature and a rebirth of better health through exercise.

A REGULAR exercise program will benefit your health and the health of the entire community. Rising health care costs are, in part, a result of people avoiding responsibility of their physical well being, according to Anne Klink. Klink is the director of health enhancement services for Bryan Memorial Hospital in Lincoln.

Everyone can find a few new ways each day to add some physical activity to their lives. Over a five to 10-year period you can keep from gaining the weight many people assume they have to gain as they get older.
An exercised body is more relaxed, feels better and responds better to the stresses of modern life.

Reducing your heart rate by 10 beats per minute, through aerobic exercise, saves that muscle five million beats per year.

WITHOUT REGULAR exercise, people are more prone to debilitating diseases as they grow older. Heart disease, obesity and osteoporosis have all been linked to lack of physical activity.

Mental health also can be a factor of physical well being. Exercise can make people feel more independent, relieve stress and improve general feelings of well being. Research has shown the many positive effects of exercise on mental well being.

Poor physical well being is more than a health issue. Exercise is also important to your pocketbook.

After spending money to operate a car instead of walking, and money for extra food, we gain weight and must spend more money on new clothes and exercise classes.

Begin today by walking instead of driving and plan to make exercise a part of your life.

Former resident to be installed April 21 in Massillon, Ohio

The Rev. Connie Sue Jones will be installed as assistant pastor at Faith Evangelical Lutheran Church in Massillon, Ohio on Sunday, April 21.

She was born at Wayne and was baptized and confirmed at Redeemer Lutheran Church, Wayne, by the Rev. S. K. DeFosse.

After moving with her parents to Cape Coral, she graduated from Cypress Lake Senior High School in 1971. Between 1971 and 1975 she worked at various occupations, the last as a dental assistant.

PASTOR JONES entered Florida Atlantic University at Boca Raton in 1975 and graduated in May 1979 with a bachelor's degree in philosophy.

WSC coaching search to reopen

Wayne State College Athletic Director Ron Jones announced late Wednesday afternoon, April 10, that the search process for a head men's basketball coach at the school has been reopened.

"After a long and arduous process in our search for a new head men's basketball coach, the search committee has decided to reopen the search for the opportunity to look at some additional candidates," Jones said.

Wayne State will accept applications from new candidates and re-activate the files of former candidates if they wish to reapply, Jones said. The closing date is Friday, April 19.

"The search process has proved to be very effective, but frustrating," Jones said. "Of our top three candidates, one has an opportunity to improve his position at an NCAA Division I program, another moved to an NCAA Division I school and the other decided to remain at this present position. It proved the people we were looking at were top-notch candidates."

Jones said the search committee wants to find the best possible person as soon as possible. "Although expediency is still a major concern, the temptation to make a hasty decision must be avoided," he added.

The decision is made

WAYNE HIGH standout basketball player Rod Dahl signed an NCAA letter of intent on Friday afternoon to attend the University of South Dakota. Dahl announced earlier in the day his decision to attend the University of South Dakota and participate in the Coyote basketball program.

Above, Dahl (at left), makes the final signature in the presence of USD assistant basketball coach Brian McDermott. Along with the letter of intent, Dahl also signed a letter of intent for the North Central Conference, which the Coyotes are a member of. A senior on the 18-3 state tournament Blue Devil team, Dahl led rebounding with an average of 10.2 boards per game and was second in team scoring with a 14.4 ppg. average. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ken Dahl of Wayne.

you start your I.R.A. today

Get in on a good thing. You have until April 15th, 1985, to open an I.R.A. and deduct the amount you deposit on your 1984 income tax return. Aside from giving you a tax break now, you'll be started on the road to a brighter financial future. You can shelter up to $2,000 (individually each year; $4,000 for a married, working couple) and the high interest you'll earn is also tax deferred. Ask us.
