Fire demolishes home

A TUESDAY morning fire destroyed the rural home of the Ernie Paustian family, located eight miles west and a mile north of Wayne. The Carroll Volunteer Fire Department received a call on the fire at 10 a.m. When they arrived, the house had already been engulfed in flames. Ernie, his wife and son were not at home when the blaze started. Cause of the fire remains uncertain at this time.

If valuation formula approved

Area ag land valuations to increase

Agricultural land valuations in Wayne, Dixon and Cedar Counties would increase if a proposal to change farmland valuations beginning in 1986 is approved by the Nebraska State Legislature.

The bill (LB 271) was voted to advance by the Legislature's Revenue Committee to the full legislature on Tuesday. The lone dissenting vote against the formula was filed by Elroy M. Hefner, vice-chairman of the Revenue Committee.

All the northeast Nebraska counties he represents would have increases in ag valuations and he said the bill needs to be "fine-tuned" to save his and other counties from valuation they couldn't handle.

He said the new proposal would not try to measure actual incomes of farmers and ranchers, but would be based on county and state information on historic crop yields and operating expenses.

Statewide agricultural land values would decrease 1.9 percent from 1984 figures under the proposed assessment.

The new formula is proposed as a way to implement Amendment IV, the constitutional amendment on farmland valuation approved by voters in the November general election, Hefner wrote.

Hefner said that by county, however, the formula would produce substantial variations. Total valuation would drop in 51 counties, rise in 41 and remain the same in one county.

He said that under the proposed formula, irrigated land would gain in value, dryland cropland would gain slightly and rangeland would drop significantly. Counties in District 19 would rise slightly in land valuations.

DISTRICT 17 farmland valuations would also rise.

"The proposal has stirred controversy among senators. Those senators who represent counties with large increases in valuation say the formula used to devise the figures is inaccurate. Some farmers have also expressed their concern. Other senators say the proposal should work," Hefner said.

Wayne County agricultural land valuation would rise 6.6 percent. Dixon County's ag land valuation would hike to 12.4 percent and Cedar County would increase 10.5 percent.

The formula considers factors such as soil class, irrigation and average yields, prices and expenses to determine income. Earnings from the land which would occur in the future are included and discounted to what their value would be today through a capitalization rate.

Changes in the method of valuing agricultural land stems from a 1984 Nebraska Supreme Court decision, when it was declared unconstitutional to assess ag land at less than half of its market when urban and other types of property had been assessed near market value.

Amendment 4 was adopted as a constitutional amendment by voters last November to permit the Nebraska legislature to create a "special class" for agricultural land (for taxation purposes).

Chairman of the task force which researched the proposal, Senator David Landis, was reported as saying in the Unicameral Update, April 5 edition that the market value system for taxation of ag land is flawed because there are relatively few sales of farmland each year, which makes it difficult to determine the market value of a piece of property.

County considers road to Timpte

Wayne County Commissioners approved a "notice of intent" on Tuesday to form a new rural road improvement district 85-1 that will meet with the Timpte, Inc. building site.

Only a county has the authority to create a road district and the only way this road can be built is by creating this road district," said Wayne County Attorney Bob Ensz to the county commissioners.

The road district is described as beginning on the south line of Section 7, Hunter Township (T-26-N, R-4-E) along Highway 35 and 150 feet west of the southeast corner of Section 7.

The proposed road would be constructed north 2,800 feet, east 300 feet and then south and parallel with the west line of Section 8 in Hunter Township 2,800 feet, westward along the south line of Sections 7 and 8, 300 feet to the point of beginning.

Improvements mentioned in the intended resolution include grading, curbing, guttering, drainage structures, concrete paving and storm sewers. An engineer's cost estimate for the project is $275,000. Ensz said the cost figure is only an estimate and not binding.

A resolution to appoint a special engineer for Road Improvement Project 85-1 was filed by the county commissioners until a future date.

Sidney Saunders, County Highway Superintendent, said there is some good news.

"I can notify the State that we have weight limit signs on all the bridges and they have been either fixed or closed," he said.

"They State [Department of Roads] should be satisfied," Saunders added.

THE BRIDGE postings pertain to a letter sent by the Department of Roads regarding the updating of weight limit signs on several bridges in Wayne County.

Paul Schlauffmann, Cuming County Highway Superintendent, met with the commissioners to discuss engineering bids submitted for the bridge construction project on the Wayne and Cuming County line.

The Wayne County commissioners recommended to Schlauffmann that Porter-Ripa of Lincoln do the engineering work. Schlauffmann plans to take the commissioners' recommendation and copies of all submitted bids to the Cuming County Board of Commissioners for review.

Porter-Ripa had bid the job at $4,724.

LeRoy Janssen, sheriff of Wayne County, informed the commissioners of his decision to purchase vehicular repeaters with mobile units from the Motorola Co. to take advantage of Motorola's 1983 contract prices.

"We will purchase the repeaters as long as I can stay within the budget," Janssen said.

The total price for three repeaters will be $6,379.95.

Janssen added that the advantage of having vehicular repeaters is that an officer no longer needs to be in his car.

Spring celebration this weekend

Spring's arrival will be celebrated in Wayne this Saturday at the Spring Arts Festival, sponsored by the Wayne Regional Arts Council, and SpringFest '85, sponsored by the Wayne Chamber of Commerce.

Displays of art and photography, performances of music and drama, demonstrations of folk arts (tattooing, quilting), sales of craft items and baked goods are scheduled from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. inside the Wayne City Auditorium.

Special events for children include the judging of an art contest centering on the theme "Kites, Kids and the Colors of Spring", face painting, and chances to guess the number of items in a jar.

Adults will likely be more interested in taking a chance to win one of three art pieces — weaving by Sue Replogle; sculpture by Mike Fluett; crocheted May basket by Gail Korn.

Outside the auditorium a special show is planned for the afternoon. Klutzzy the Klown will perform his magic for the crowd.

Magic is only a part of his performance. Gary Weldon, popular performer from Missouri Valley, Iowa, has other talents that will be presented from 12:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. on Saturday.

His wooden friend "Woodstock" often says things to get Weldon in trouble during the ventriloquism portion of the show.

Weldon also plays music and performs magic, but it is his creation of pink, blue, green and yellow animals from balloons that never fails to delight children from "1 to 100."

The day's activities will culminate between 4 p.m. and 4:30 p.m. with prizes from Wayne area merchants awarded by Klutzzy.

Businesses in Wayne will also be participating in the fun with special sales promotions on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Helping hints on planting trees

This is the first of a two-part series of articles detailing tree planting and the species suitable for this area. In this year designated as "Year of the Tree", many tree plantings will likely take place throughout Nebraska.

The article was prepared by Don C. Spitzo, Wayne County Extension Agent.

American elm was one of the most popular shade trees in Wayne County until Dutch elm disease came along and began killing the trees off.

Their death, along with the loss of many other shade trees due to many causes has left many homeowners with few trees to provide shade and beauty.

There are several points which you should consider in selecting shade trees to plant," said Don Spitzo, Wayne County Extension Agent.

They include:

- Mature height and width. Trees that are ideal for the first few years after planting may grow into large trees that block driveways, hide the house, grow into utility poles and be too close to other established trees and shrubs. Available at the extension office is a free leaflet titled "Landscaping Your Home" which provides ideas on where to plant trees for the most pleasing appearance.
- Growth rate and life expectancy. Some people have a need for quick shade so they want a quick-maturing tree. Other people are willing to plant a tree that grows slower and takes longer to mature. Life expectancy in trees is referred to as short (less than 30 years of life), medium (30 to 80 years) and long (more than 80 years).
- Personal taste: Everyone has different tastes as far as shape, color of fall foliage, desirability of having flowers or fruits, and the shape of the leaves.

Additional information on trees available from the Wayne County Extension Office includes: Landscaping Your Home; Quick Guide to the Chemical Control of Diseases of Evergreen and Shade Trees; Quick Guide to the Identification of Physiological Disorders of Landscape Plants; Pruning Ornamental Plants; Landscaping Resource Guide; and Basic Landscaping.

STEPS IN tree planting for bare root trees are as follows:

1. Unpack tree immediately. Do not allow roots to dry out. Immerse roots in water or then mud for several hours before planting.
2. Have hole deep and wide enough to accommodate roots in a natural position.
3. Plant tree one to two inches deeper than it stood in the nursery. Untangle and spread roots before covering. Fill hole two-thirds full with loose soil and water.
4. Fill remaining hole with soil and water two or three times and let settle.
5. Mulch with one or two inches of dry soil. Leave basin to aid in watering.
6. Prune top to compensate for loss of roots in digging.
7. Stake the tree if over five feet tall. Support is needed for first year until roots are established.

For planting balled, burlap trees:

1. Dig hole two feet wider and six inches deeper than the root ball. Always lift the tree by the ball and never by the stem.
2. Fill hole until top of root ball is one to two inches below soil surface.
3. Fill hole half full with loose soil. Water and let settle.
4. Be sure the rope twine or wire around the trunk or stem is cut. Leave burlap on ball.
5. Fill hole with soil and water two or three times and let settle.
6. Mulch with one or two inches of dry soil.

Steps for container-grown trees:

- Remove container before planting.
- Other steps in planting container-grown trees are the same as for balled and burlap trees.
- Upcoming: The variety of trees suitable for this area and their advantages and disadvantages.

JILL SULLIVAN, daughter of Robert and Julie Sullivan and a student at Allen Consolidated School, does her part to promote 1985 as "The Year of the Tree." Jill, along with other second grade students, planted 50 trees last week in the school lawn. More photos are on page 4B.

Koenig honored at local dinner

Wayne High varsity wrestling Coach Don Koenig, who will be stepping down as his coaching position at the end of the school year, was the guest of honor at an appreciation dinner held at the Wayne City Auditorium on Saturday evening, April 13.

Koenig initiated the wrestling program at Wayne High 18 years ago and served as the only coach in that time. He plans to continue working with the middle school wrestling program and his teaching duties.

OVER 250 friends and former athletes attended the dinner, which featured a variety of skits, speeches and entertainment. Following an introductory speech by Athletic Director Harold Maciejewski, testimonials were presented by Koenig's assistant wrestling Coach Lonnie Erhardt, former football coach Stu Cline and former wrestlers Jim Meyer, Rick Johnson, Kelly Hansen, Ward Wacker, Aaron Schuett and Brad Pflueger.

The Wayne High 1984-85 wrestling team presented a skit pertaining to the team's preparation for "Albion Week", and a band consisting of Keith Kopperud, Ted Blendenman, Robert Stoberg, Stu Cline and Ron Carnes performed several humorous selections.

Senior wrestler Tim Book, representing the present wrestling team, read a letter written by the team and announced that the squad was planting a blue spruce tree on the east side of the high school Sunday afternoon. He also presented Koenig with numerous cards and letters which had been received throughout the past few weeks. A letter received by Koenig's sister in Wisconsin was read aloud by committee member Sandy Elliott.

DEAN BRUGGEMAN, on behalf of the Wayne Little Wrestlers, presented Koenig with a plaque and t-shirt, and a poem was read by Joyce Mitchell.

John Murrbaugh, who will be replacing Koenig at the helm of the varsity wrestling program, was introduced to those gathered, and all those former wrestlers who returned were also recognized.

The event was organized by a 12 member committee, with assistance from a large number of friends and community members.

Carnes appointed to athletic director post at Wayne High

Administrators at Wayne-Carroll High School announced earlier this week the appointment of Ron Carnes to the position of athletic director.

Carnes will assume his duties this fall, following the retirement of Harold "Mac" Maciejewski at the end of the 1984-85 school year.

SUPERINTENDENT Francis Haun stated that position of athletic director was added to Carnes' extra-duties contract late last week after a decision was made within the administration. That contract will be presented to the Wayne-Carroll Board of Education at their regular meeting on Tuesday, May 14. "The board allows us (the administration) to make extra-duty assignments at our own discretion and will normally ratify them during a board meeting," said Haun.

Haun added that the administration made an effort to appoint someone to the position from within the school system, due to their familiarity with the school and the athletic programs. "Carnes had the longest tenure of any of the applicants we had (20 years), and with his varied coaching experience, we found him to be the best candidate," Haun said.

"He knows what the job takes, and it's a job he will enjoy doing as well as being conscientious about it."

A native of Auburn, Carnes earned his bachelor's degree in physical education and social studies from Peru State College in 1962 and his master's degree in social studies from Colorado State University in 1974.

HE JOINED THE Wayne High staff at the beginning of the 1964-65 school year as a physical education instructor and freshman football and basketball coach. During the years he moved to assistant coaching position at the varsity level in both sports and added social studies to his teaching duties. Carnes will continue to serve in those assistant coaching positions.

Carnes noted that since scheduling of athletic events for the 1985-86 school year have already been completed, he will be working on the 1986-87 school year sports calendar when he takes the athletic director position.

Carnes and his wife Pat have two sons, Regg and Nell.

There was also discussion between Janssen and the county commissioners on plans to deputize individuals for the 1985 Old Settlers celebration in Winside. Before Janssen does this, he wants to make sure the county is not responsible for situations such as a false arrest was made. It will be the intention to have Winside Insurance cover this responsibility — not the county.

CHINESE VEGETABLES

QUESTION: Ann, I have seen several different kinds of vegetables at the store lately. I guess these are Chinese vegetables. Can you tell me something about them?

ANSWER: Four favorite Chinese vegetables that you will see more often in the produce area of the supermarket are bok choy, napa, bean sprouts, and snow peas.

Bok choy is a stalk vegetable that's similar to Chinese cabbage and pascal celery. The stalks are crisp and tender, and they do not contain the strings that are found in celery.

Bok choy can be eaten raw, or cooked in soups, and casseroles. The napa is a type of cabbage that grows in a flat stalk rather than a round head. It can be used in salads or vegetable dishes, or is also good pickled.

Bean sprouts, which are tender and crunchy, are the early growth of the mung bean. They are used fresh in salads or added to meat dishes.

Snow peas, which are picked before maturity, have a very tender pod. They are cooked as a vegetable or combined in meat or fish dishes.

All these vegetables are good sources of vitamins and minerals.

Stored Grain

Grain is free of stored grain insects when harvested. All major insect infestations occur after the grain is placed in storage. The recent warmer weather means that now is the time to begin checking farm stored grain. Plan to check the condition of the grain every 2 weeks or so. Aerate grain carefully. Your objective is to maintain uniform temperature within the grain while keeping grain temperature within about 10 degrees of the average outside temperature. Large temperature differences can result in moisture condensation. Insect reproduction will be minimized if grain temperature in mid-summer can be maintained around 60 degrees F. Small air coming through the grain immediately after the fan has been turned on for detection of any off odors. Examine and probe grain regularly to detect insect reinfestation. Remember: Crops growing in the field can often compensate or recover from stress and direct damage. In contrast, stored grain can only decline in quantity, quality and value following prolonged storage. Check regularly for moisture, crusting, insects, and molds.

Is Potash Needed?

The soil test for potassium does measure what is considered to be available potassium to the plant. The "available potassium" measured by the soil test is also sometimes called "exchangeable."

Exchangeable potassium is associated with the soil clays and organic matter in the soil. There is also a large amount of potassium in the soil that is not available or is "non-exchangeable." This potassium is found primarily in soil minerals that become only slowly available with weathering. It is this large mineral supply of potassium that is unavailable to plants.

Actually fertilizer potassium (or often referred to as potash) applied to most Nebraska soils will probably revert to non-available forms. This is because most Nebraska soils contain large amounts of both exchangeable and non-exchangeable potassium.

We do not have any evidence that fertilizer potassium will reduce the incidence of stalk rot in corn unless the available potassium level in the soil is low. Since we have few low-potassium soils in Nebraska, it is doubtful that such application will be of any value.

Bereuter announces ag questionnaire results

First Congressional District farmers, agribusiness owners, and rural community residents show strong agreement that agriculture export policy is very important to the rural economy, Nebraska Representative Doug Bereuter said today.

Bereuter released the results of his agricultural questionnaire distributed earlier this year. Among the results:

• 92% of the respondents agreed that agricultural exports are important to United States Agriculture.

• 95% believe that federal agricultural policy should mandate continued negotiations to eliminate agricultural trade barriers.

• 92% of the respondents support quotas on goods from countries that are inflicting similar restrictions on United States agricultural products.

• 87% would prohibit the use of grain embargoes for reasons of foreign policy or short supply.

• 93% of the respondents would require that ambassadors be appointed only if they see promotion of the sale and export of American products and services, including agricultural commodities and products, as part of their job.

It is his strong interest in export activity reflects my own conviction that agricultural export policy is vitally important to Nebraska's farmers, Bereuter said. "Price, levels and farm income can depend heavily on the level of export demand."

Bereuter pointed to his service on the National Agricultural Export Trade Commission; the Trade Subcommittee of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, and the House Export Task Force as part of his effort to influence United States trade policy.

THE AGRICULTURAL questionnaire was mailed in February to all First District households outside of Lancaster County. The two-page questionnaire included 53 questions covering such areas as marketing, supply management, credit, conservation, and tax policy. Approximately 1,100 families returned the questionnaire. Of those, 65% are actively engaged in farming. In identifying the type of farming operation they represented, 32% of the respondents indicated grain, 22% indicated grain and beef, and 17.5% indicated grain, beef, and hogs.

Bereuter noted that 40% of the respondents expected to have difficulty obtaining operating capital this year and that over 26% expected that they will have to sell capital assets in 1983. Twenty-eight percent had sold capital assets in the past three years.

These figures are a clear indication of the level of distress among our farming families," Bereuter said.

He noted a number of areas where government action is needed. Among these are:

• 90% want to continue funding for the P.L. 480 Food for Peace program to orient foreign aid toward the distribution of agricultural commodities and food;

• 83% would like to expand the use of producer-financed research to increase domestic uses for agricultural commodities; and, 71% want to expand the use of producer-financed research to increase domestic uses for agricultural commodities.

In the area of supply management, 76% reflected the notion of replacing the present farm price support programs with an income insurance program; 70% support retention of the farmer owned grain reserve; and about the same number support limiting the amount of grain to no more than 20% of annual usage. The respondents tended to agree that loan and target prices should be raised and that the $50,000 payment limitation should be lowered or left the same.

There was somewhat less agreement on questions of credit and interest rates. Respondents were evenly divided about whether or not United States agricultural policy should provide for a federal purchase of delinquent Farmers Home Administration and Federal Land Bank mortgages that permit lease-back arrangements for the existing farmer and options for the farmer to repurchase the farm in future years. They were also evenly divided when asked if the federal role in agricultural lending should be increased, decreased, or left the same.

FIFTY-TWO percent favor an interest subsidy program strictly limited to producers who are presently in financial difficulty, but who have a reasonable chance to work out of difficulty. Eighty-three percent believe that if that interest subsidy program were implemented, there should be a maximum on the amount of loan subsidized.

Sixty-eight percent of the respondents say farm credit has been too easily available, and 69% agree that the expenditure of tax funds to help strapped farmers with substantial debt is unfair to those who were more cautious. At the same time, 72% agreed that the state government should take a financial role in helping farmers and small businesses with good or reasonable loan repayment prospects if they were borrowers at failed banks.

There continues to be strong interest in conservation. Eighty-nine percent of the respondents think the federal government should implement a sodbuster bill that denies federal farm program benefits to farmers who plow up fragile, highly erodible soil. Seventy-two percent would restrict participation in price support and federal loan programs to only those farmers who practice specified good soil conservation methods, and 86% believe that the federal role in soil and water conservation should either stay the same or be increased.

Respondents agreed that the accelerated depreciation tax credit should be repealed as part of the effort to achieve a lower overall tax rate, but they did not agree on repeal of other tax incentives such as investment tax credits, capital gains taxes, and cash basis accounting.

The respondents were divided on whether an increase in income taxes or reduced funding of farm programs should be part of the effort to reduce the federal deficit. Yet, 83% backed a freeze on defense spending and 72% supported a freeze on social security payment increases.

Corporations bailed out, but not farm borrowers

Senators Jim Exon and Edward Zorinsky today strongly urged the president to make adequate farm loan guarantee authority available for qualified farmers home administration borrowers.

In a letter sent this afternoon, the two Nebraska senators said that the original allocation of $30 million for farm real estate loan guarantees has been exhausted. These guarantees are necessary for farmers who must structure their debts to remain in business. The Reagan Administration pledged last February to comply with a senate-passed resolution which called for the provision of enough loan guarantee authority to meet the needs of all qualified borrowers. Secretary of Agriculture John Block advised the senate at that time that the administration would "speedily implement" the provisions of the resolution.

Exon said, "once again, we have to keep after the President and Secretary of Agriculture to fulfill their own commitments made to our farmers and ranchers. As agricultural states all over the country are finding, the rhetoric is there but the funds are not."

"It's the same story we keep hearing from this administration," Zorinsky said. "Washington can't help the people who feed our nation but we've got plenty for bailing out multinational corporations and unappreciative foreign governments."

the farmer's wife

"One man's junk is another man's treasure." This phrase has motivated a lot of garage sales. This year, it has motivated some farm auctions as farmers have scrambled for cash.

For years, the Big Farmer has talked of getting all the cream cans, wagon wheels and horse shoes and calling it an antique sale. For years, I've said that if he ever did sell out, it would take three days.

It's a real handcap being a "keeper." When we moved here 25 years ago, Mike brought my belongings in our car. As we moved his parents down the road, I was amazed at their accumulation. If I stay here 40 years, it's going to take a semi to move me.

Dad Melterhenry was a tinkerer and collector. His greatest joy was to attend auctions and bring home a box of "stuff" — and bring it home. Some things he fixed up and used. Of course, some things just stayed in the box. He never had a farm sale.

Machinery no longer used was parked under the trees. Odds and ends were deposited in the "cabin," a little house at the end of the yard.

Thanks to a stallion we kept for some friends, we had all kinds of horses around. There were some young bulls to get rid of. Mike picked out some young cow-calf pairs. And he and Orville Lage set a date. Then my brother called about the visit to Carolina, and then it was Easter. It was postponed to the 13th.

Sue informed us that this was the date of her sorority's mother-daughter luncheon and since I'd not been to one before, I needed to make it to this. A track meet was rescheduled for the 13th, so Kay and Ann would not be here.

BUT SPRING was early, people were already in the field, and it was not feasible to postpone again. The ad went to the paper.

I was surprised at how many people asked if it was "The Farm Sale." I assured them it was just a dispersal sale.

The men worked long hours getting everything running and moving stuff to the field east of the house. There were phone calls about bull pedigrees, old auto parts and directions.

People came to look. One fellow asked, "How long have you lived here?" "All my life," replied the Big Farmer, "and my father before me." "I can kind of tell," smiled the visitor.

I think farm auctions are sad, even when they are planned and the farmer is retiring. Lately, more have not been planned and have even been tragic. Their drama has been highlighted by the media. One local sale was even featured in Newsweek.

THIS ONE TURNED out okay. As with all auctions, some items were "given away"; others brought more than expected.

Jon gave horse rides for two solid hours. We hope the mares make some children happy, as they did ours. Kay, our animal lover, hopes the new owners are good to Babe and Beauty and Sugar Babe. Someone even offered to buy the pup!

People have been coming with pickups and trailers to haul off their livestock. Hopefully, they will also come to pick up the rest of the items in the field. I hope my Chrysler went to a good home.

Life will get back to normal this week. Yard and garden, need some attention. My nephew has been painting the house and the picket fence. He even washed the windows and put on screens while I was gone. Plows and fertilizer spreaders have been in the fields all month. The new calves are, frisky in the sunshine.

Only thing that bothers me is the Big Farmer. He announced at breakfast that he's going to fill up that cabin again and have another one next year! I think he enjoyed it.

Great Plains Room to be dedicated

The dedication of the Great Plains Room in Wayne State College's U.S. Conn Library will be Sunday, April 28 at 2 p.m.

"The Future of the Plains: Will the Good Life Get Better?" is the theme of the event which will culminate in the dedication of the southeast corner of the entrance level in the campus library.

Dr. Jack L. Middendorf, library director, will give the introduction, followed by a welcome from President Ed Elliott.

Other speakers include John Carter, Nebraska State Historical Society, Frederick Luebke, director for the Center for Great Plains Studies at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, and WSC faculty members Donald Whisenhunt, vice-president, Robert G. Foote, associate professor of geography, Donald R. Hickey, associate professor of history, Ali Eminov, associate professor of anthropology and Sayre

Anderson, associate professor of English.

The Great Plains Experience is a project which encourages reading and developing an interest in the Great Plains.

The Great Plains Room will include the Kind Indian artifact collection, books on the Great Plains, as well as photographs, paintings and other artifacts that are unique to northeast Nebraska.

Participants in the 1984 Great Plains Experience in Northeast Nebraska from area libraries are especially invited to attend the dedication, according to Middendorf. Those persons may arrange free transportation by calling: Wayne Highway at the Norfolk Public Library (402-371-4590), Robert Trautwein at the Columbus Public Library (564-7116), Lee Rose at the Hartington Public Library (254-6245) or Kathy Tooker at the Wayne Public Library (375-3135).
