Bishop meets with farmers

By LaVon Anderson

"The one thing that gets me the most is the statement that a farmer who goes under is a failure. I would rather have something and go broke by trying, then to have the same thing I started with when I die.

"We all take a risk."
THAT STATEMENT was made by an Emerson farmer during a farm crisis meeting held last Wednesday evening at St. Paul's Lutheran Church in Wayne.

The meeting was one of several being conducted throughout the state by the Rev. Dennis Anderson, Bishop of the Nebraska Synod, Lutheran Church in America.

"That's one of the messages our society transmits," Bishop Anderson told the young farmer from Emerson.

"Your degree of success is dependent upon your net worth. It's not your character that counts."
"That's a strong stream in our society, and we've got to come up with a whole different perspective."

BISHOP ANDERSON told the gathering of approximately 30 farmers, pastors, and others concerned about the current agricultural economy that he had come to Wayne to listen, to share, and to present the Bishop's statement on the agricultural crisis and what the church is officially advocating.

"One of the main things I want to communicate," said Bishop Anderson, "is that the church cares. We don't have all the answers, but the church is a community of caring people.

"We want to listen to your cares and concerns, and learn how we as a church can do a better job of public policy advocacy."

"I'VE BEEN where a number of our people are," added Bishop Anderson. "My dad had a hatchery and I was raised on feed sacks. When my dad died, I inherited 300,000 chickens. Now, when I talk to someone between $150,000 and $1.5 million in debts."
"It was costing us 25 cents a dozen to produce the eggs, and we were getting 17 cents for our product."
"My family has personally been through a crisis similar to what many of you are going through, and it's given me a understanding from the gut level and from the heart level.

"It doesn't necessarily give me any insight, but I do understand."

"I THINK ONE of the problems is that there is a great deal of silence," Mary Monson of Wayne told the farmers — some who had come to Wayne from as far as Nibbrara, Wausa, Wisner and Pierce. "People aren't talking, and as a result, we don't know who's hurting and therefore we don't know who needs help."
"I think we have to reach out and trust one another enough to say, 'I'm hurting, and then try to figure out what we can do together to relieve the pain and fear."

"I HOPE THIS doesn't sound like a naive question," said the Rev. Ted Youngerman, pastor of St. Paul's, "but I'm not sure at this point what the real farm crisis is. I can't fit my own mind pinpoint the problem."
"I would really like to hear from some farmers here tonight so I can better serve my own congregation and community."

"Maybe I can help," responded a farmer from Pierce. "Somewhere between 95 and 90 percent of my income goes to support the local school district. In addition, a little over 40 percent of my earnings last year went to income tax."

"I don't know how much longer my wife and I can stand this. This is a crisis to me."

A RETIRED WAUSA farmer said the problem, as he sees it, is that there is no profit in agriculture. "That's the word (profit) we all want to hear tonight, and we just don't have it."
"When there's no market and when the land value can't go down, then there is no money to run the farm."

Wrage fights for family farms

by Chuck Hackenmiller

It was curiosity that got Emerson's Tim Wrage on the trail of fighting for farmers who were in jeopardy of losing their family farm.

When the Midwest Governor's Conference met in Sioux City, Iowa last November, Wrage — currently a fertilizer dealer in Emerson — joined nearly a dozen other area farmers and ranchers in seeking a certain taste to satisfy their curiosity.

That appetizer has since whetted a challenge within Wrage to fight for the family farm's existence. "It became more of a moral challenge to me than that of personal gain," Wrage said.

"I felt there was a genuine concern that something was not going right [for the family farm owners]," he said.

Wrage has a true admiration for the family farm. His devotion to the rural life shows in his efforts as leader of the 30,000 strong Farm Crisis Committee membership that stretches across the states of Nebraska, Iowa, Missouri, Minnesota and South Dakota.

But it wasn't the Farm Crisis organization which initially made Wrage aware of how important agriculture contributes to the nation's well-being.

Prior to purchasing the Emerson Fertilizer business in 1978, Wrage worked two years as director of marketing for Wayne Feed Company, headquartered in Chicago.

"I was a player in a corporation rat race. I observed my three children losing out on what fun I once had through small town upbringing. Between the office and the airplane, there was not time to spend with them," he said.

"It just wasn't there [in Chicago]. There was nothing left," said Wrage, who graduated from Wayne State College in 1971.

THE FINAL STRAW came, Wrage said, when his wife, Janice, observed him waiting for the commuter bus in typical Chicago weather that was spitting rain and snow.
"A flock of geese flew overhead and I watched and watched their flight. She knew then it was time to pack the bags and go," he said.

He moved back to Emerson in December, 1978 after purchasing the fertilizer business there. Since then the plant has not structurally expanded significantly, but it has still changed with additional services provided.

Even before 1984's Midwest Governor's Conference, Wrage was aware of problems in agriculture simply by looking at his accounts receivable ledger.

"Prior to 1983 we had received only one bad check. Before the spring of 1984 we had three bankruptcies and about a half-dozen bad checks," Wrage said.

"I would have been a damn fool if I didn't know that the farmers were in trouble," he added.
"Now we see businesses closing in Emerson [and other communities]. The whole town is feeling the crunch of this environment," he said.

WHEN THOSE WHO attended the Governor's Conference asked Wrage to be official spokesman of the newly formed Farm Crisis Committee, he accepted.

"I never have been a good follower. Once I get involved in something I commit myself totally to it. I guess that is one of my drawbacks," he said.
"That's one reason I do get in-involved with other organizations. But the Farm Crisis was different because it dealt with moral, economic and survival issues — issues I felt I needed to get involved with," he added.

Since his leadership association with the Farm Crisis organization, he has been to Washington, D.C. three times. The first time in February to testify at a hearing and the second occasion was when he traveled with 48 other Farm Crisis members to lobby for an adequate farm bill. Two weeks ago he was again in Washington.

"Personally, what I think Farm Crisis has done is brought national awareness to the farmer's plight," Wrage said.

"Our presence in March [Farm Crisis representation of 48 people] had a tremendous impact," he said.

Two other farm groups were also present in Washington, D.C. with the Farm Crisis group and they "all pushed for the same concept of the farm bill," he added.

Senator Zorinsky, he said, has changed his farm program thinking and has come to a partial mandatory proposal.

"But it is still not strong enough. It is not enough to save the family farm," Wrage said.

"The administration's feeling now is to save those exports. As a businessman, or farmer, or representative, Wrage said he cannot understand how one can sell his product for less money than what it took to produce the product — just to sell."

"We're not asking to get rich. All we want to do is make a living," he said.

HIS PERFECT farm bill, he described, would be one that controls productivity, includes livestock and is one that will take care of the American family farmer.
"It's high time the American government takes care of the American people," Wrage said.
Farm Crisis' farm bill proposal hasn't changed too drastically. But the Farm Crisis "has changed its tac-

Wayne Herald wins awards

The Wayne Herald received six awards to gather the most sweepstakes points within its circulation class in the 1988 Better Newspaper Contests.

This is the fifth consecutive year The Wayne Herald has finished first in point totals within the Class C division, which consists of all weekly newspapers with a circulation of 2,500 or more.

Announcement of the contest winners took place Friday evening during the 1988 Nebraska Press Association Convention in Omaha. Sweepstakes winners are determined from how the newspaper rated in 24 competitions, ranging from best feature photograph to best editorial.

Five first place awards and one second place finish were received by The Wayne Herald. First places were obtained in the divisions of special section, feature writing; use of color — advertising; use of color — editorial and front page.

A second place was awarded to The Wayne Herald in the General Excellence category.

THE FIRST PLACE entry for special section was the 100 page Centennial Souvenir Edition 1884-1984 which was published last August and distributed to subscribers in celebration of the Wayne Centennial.

Inside the centennial special edition were features and color photographs submitted by the editorial staff, gatherings of past news and old photos (accumulated by 1984 summer intern Michelle Kubik) and congratulatory advertisements from area businesses.

Photographers and feature writers were Kubik, Chuck Hackenmiller, LaVon Anderson and Jackie Osten. Advertising salesmen were Jim Marsh and Dave Diediker.

Involved in the layout of the centennial edition were typesetters Alyce Henschke, Suzanne Gansesoni and LaVonna Sharpe; and composition staff Judi Topp, Trudy Muir and Lori Kay.

Former editor Randy Hascall was also involved in the planning of the centennial edition.

Selected as first place feature story in Class C was a story by LaVon Anderson — written in December about Roy and Mabel Sommerfeld who played the roles of Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus.

A first place plaque was awarded to The Wayne Herald for the best use of color in advertising. The award-winning Rusty Nail advertisement appeared in November.

Another first place honor was obtained in best use of color — editorial competition. Entries submitted were a feature article in May, written by Michelle Kubik; of Ray Kling's bird house hobby, with a background of blue; a photograph by Randy Hascall in April of a Nebraska sunset (background in red); and a four-color separation photograph of the Sommerfeld's taken in December by Chuck Hackenmiller.

INVOLVED WITH the color production of the entries were press foreman Ray Murray and pressmen Al Pippitt and Jeff Sperry.

The Wayne Herald also nabbed first place in Class C division in best front page. All weekly newspapers were automatically entered in this

County selects engineering firm

by Chuck Hackenmiller

The engineering firm of Bruce Gilmore and Associates, Inc. was approved by the Wayne County Board of Commissioners as the special engineers for the proposed Rural Road Improvement District leading to Timpie, Inc.'s location site east of Wayne.

Bruce Gilmore and Associates will be in charge of designing, planning and preparation of plans, specifications and estimates of costs for the construction of improvements in the rural road improvement district.

A representative of the engineering firm, Dennis Hirschbrunner, appeared before the commissioners Wednesday afternoon and said the estimate cost of the road improvement project in Timpie, Inc. would be $270,000. Approximately $235,000 of that amount would be construction, Hirschbrunner said.

The engineering fee would be about $18,750, which is approximately 8 1/2 percent of the total project cost. Fees of the engineering firm would cover preparation of plans and specifications, awarding of contracts and in-specions. Rebalancing balance, would be based on legal and administrative costs and contingencies, he said.

If selected, he said, the coordination between the county and the city on the proposed project would be a lot greater. He emphasized to the county that selection of engineers should be made soon because it would be another 45 to 60 days before the county can open bids on the proposed project.

Waiting too long could result in almost missing the construction season for this year, he said.

THE WAYNE COUNTY commissioners asked Hirschbrunner if the engineering cost could be lowered.

"I could give you the figure of $10,000. But as an engineer, I can't spread that time and give you the best project for $10,000," Hirschbrunner said. "If I didn't have time to do what needed to be done with the plans and specifications, you [the county] are going to pay for it on the other end."

"You'll get good service and a good project for $18,750. If we go lower than that, we'd have to cut services somewhat," he added.

"The lowest dollar figure of the engineer is not always the best way to go. What you have to do is look at the expertise and service being rendered by the engineer. Not all engineers are the same," he said.

"We will be out there to see that the contractor doesn't cut corners and you get what you pay for."

Wayne County commissioners introduced a resolution on April 16 for the creation of a rural road improvement district (No. 85-1) leading to Timpie, Inc.

That resolution will be considered for passage at a meeting to take place at the Wayne County Courthouse on May 7 at 10 a.m. Owners of property within the proposed rural road improvement district may appear and make objections to the proposed improvements at this meeting. The resolution could be passed as originally proposed or it can be amended and passed as amended by the commissioners.

Pioneer families

Dick Sorensen, president, and Arnold Marr, secretary of the Wayne County Fair Board, are seeking the identity of local pioneer farm families. Those who qualify will receive the Nebraska Pioneer Farm Award during the Wayne County Fair.

The special award, now in its thirtieth year, was designed to pay tribute to pioneer farm families of Nebraska who have owned the same land for 100 years or more.

The program is a joint venture between Ak-Sar-Ben, Omaha, and the Nebraska Association of Fair Managers. Beautiful walnut and bronze plaques and handsome framed certificates will be presented to each family that qualifies.

Eligible families are urged to contact Arnold Marr, Secretary of the County Fair, who will submit the nominations from this county to the state committee.

Deadline for receiving nominations is May 15.

Monthly testing of sirens

The City of Wayne will conduct the monthly testing of the Civil Defense Outdoor Warning Sirens at 11 p.m. on April 26.

All siren signals will be tested in the silent mode, with the exception of the following:

ATTACK: This signal will be allowed to run approximately 15 seconds to test the effectiveness of the system.

If any resident living near a siren location should fail to hear the Attack Signal, please contact the Police Department promptly, so that the siren can be checked for malfunction.

Horizons Honors Program

Sixty-six high school seniors from 42 Nebraska cities, Colorado, Missouri) and one foreign country have been selected for membership in the Horizons Honors Program at Kearney State College.

Among those selected was Kolllette Frevert of Wayne.

Youth for Understanding

Now is the time for families to apply for hosting students from other countries. April and May are the best times to apply because it gives a host family a good selection of students to choose from and allows time for the two families to correspond before the students arrive in mid-August.

The 15 to 17-year old students stay for an 11 month period, attending high school here and leaving in mid-July of the following year. Host families provide housing, meals and treat the student as one of their own children. The students have their own money for incidentals and clothing and have medical insurance provided through the program. Host families are not required to have children of high school age in order to participate. Interest, humor, support of other family members, flexibility, intellectual curiosity and openness to new ideas are some of the characteristics which are helpful for a host family.

For more information and/or an application form, call Carol Gamble at the Y.F.U. Regional Office 1-800-672-0200. Those in the Des Moines area please call 276-6405.

Highway work proposed near Emerson

The Nebraska Highway Commission and the Nebraska Department of Roads are offering the opportunity for a public hearing on the design of the proposed removal of a viaduct and an improvement to a portion of Nebraska Highway 9 in Emerson, between Mill and Warnock Streets.

If a public hearing is desired, a written request must be made to the Nebraska Department of Roads, c/o John W. Rosecrans, Box 94739, Lincoln, 68509, on or before May 10.

Construction features include removal of the viaduct over abandoned railroad right of way and construction of a new 42-foot wide road. In addition, portions of Front Street which now parallels Highway 9 will be closed.

Front Street will be extended east of the highway for one block to Dakota Street. Sidewalks will be constructed and street lighting will be upgraded. Additional right-of-way will be required, including the taking of the second and third house on the east side of Highway 9 just north of Mill Street.

Preliminary project plans are available for inspection at the DOR's District Office, at 408 No. 13th Street in Norfolk and at the DOR Field Office in Wayne.

If no requests for a hearing are received by May 10, the Department of Roads will complete the preliminary design work and present its recommendations to the Highway Commission for approval.

Late registrants are up reports Selective Service

During the last 10 months, the number of late registrants has increased from some 250 to about 2,500 in Nebraska, said state Selective Service Director Col. Malcolm D. Hardin.

According to Hardin, the problem is attributed, at least in part, to a lack of national publicity reminding young men of their obligation to register with Selective Service no later than 30 days after their 18th birthday. Another reason, he stated, was that some men do not understand that they are among those who must register.

Current Selective Service policy is not to penalize late registrants. According to Hardin, all men who were born on or after January 1, 1960 should be registered, except active military persons and lawful-entry non-immigrant aliens. Those who have passed their 18th birthday and have not registered, should do so immediately, said Hardin. No penalty will be imposed and no questions will be asked, he emphasized. "I don't want any young man in Nebraska to be penalized for failing to register with Selective Service," said Hardin.

The registration process is simple. A young man should stop at any U.S. Post Office and fill out a brief registration card.

During a 10-day period in late April, Army National Guard officers, who are members of the Selective Service section, spent their time in their respective areas of the state working with local Selective Service boards, visiting high schools, and providing information on registration in their areas.

"We want to make sure that every young man knows of his responsibility under the law," said Hardin. Even though there is no draft in effect, failure to register could subject a young man to a $10,000 fine and possible imprisonment for up to five years.

viewpoint

Reducing the trade deficit

Time to renegotiate beef, citrus quotas

The last trade agreement with the Japanese, completed in April 1984, raised the quota of imported American beef to 30,800 metric tons by 4,900 metric tons per year for four years. Although this 90 percent increase in beef imports was considered generous by the Japanese Government, it meant only two additional ounces of beef per Japanese citizen per year.

The Japanese consumer has for years desired to purchase greater quantities of beef to supplement their diets. Unfortunately, Japan's merger beef industry and the quota on imported beef have priced beef out of the reach of most Japanese consumers. The reluctance of the Japanese Government to further relax its import quota on American beef illustrates population. At present, the Japanese Government continues to deny the vast majority of its population nutritious, high quality, low-cost beef.

As the world's largest producer of beef, the United States is in the best position to fill the demand of Japanese consumers for more quality beef. At a committee hearing in Washington last week, I asked Under Secretary of Agriculture Dan R. Amstutz, and Assistant U.S. Trade Representative James Murphy to put back on the negotiation table an upward renegotiation of beef and citrus quotas.

In spite of the fact that we have three more years to ponder the present agreement, I think it would be well worth while to begin immediately to try to increase the quotas on both beef and citrus. At best, we would persuade the Japanese to eliminate these quotas entirely. At

At the least, we can attempt to negotiate an increase. These quotas could be considerably relaxed without Japanese jeopardizing their own beef industry. A higher quota, or complete elimination of the quota, would at least help a bit to reduce the trade deficit between the United States and Japan.

Congressional Pay Reform

I am cosponsoring a bill designed to stop back-door pay raises in Congress. The bill would defer Congressional pay adjustments until an election had intervened and the next Congress was seated. This would prevent Members from voting themselves pay increases.

Recorded votes in both the House and the Senate would be required on a Congressional pay adjustment. This would put all Members on the record. Congressional pay adjustments would be considered separately from other appropriations bills. This would end the too common practice of combining Congressional salary increases with salary adjustments for Federal employees and agency appropriations.

Preserving the past

Wayne State College will be dedicating a Great Plains Room this Sunday, April 28 at 2 p.m.

The area which will be dedicated is the southeast corner of the entrance level in the Conn Library. This will be a pleasant addition to the campus, and to the city of Wayne, because all will benefit by viewing the room and its special contents.

In this room will be the Kind Indian artifact collection, books on the Great Plains, plus books and painting and other artifacts that are unique to Northeast Nebraska.

What people will see from the Fred and Russ Kind Indian artifacts is a collection that includes pipes, ornaments, arrowheads, tools and some fossils. The oldest artifact is a clovis point arrowhead, which is over 10,000 years old and was estimated to have been used for hunting buffalo in this area.

Most of the finds were found on the north fork of the Elkhorn River south of Omaha. The collection has been assessed at a value of near $5,000, but who can put a price tag on the history of the artifacts.

A map will be displayed in the newly dedicated Great Plains Room at Wayne State College to show where the items came from. When the items were used will also be detailed.

This is one dedication which should be appreciated by all of those surrounding Wayne State College. Indian artifacts are only a small part of the Great Plains history, yet they are valuable in providing an indication of how former Great Plains people survived.

We also learn through past documents, photographs and newspaper's accounts of activities as to how settlers got along on the Great Plains.

Beginning next Thursday (May 2), The Wayne Herald will be running a series of articles detailing activities surrounding the history of the Old Settler's Picnic, beginning in 1901.

These interesting articles were written by Lee Koch, who plans to use these reports to stir interest in the Old Settler's celebration. But we feel they are more than public reminders.

They supply informative insight as to the lifestyles of Wayne County residents in the early 1900's, during the roaring twenties, the war torn forties and to the "more modern era."

To those who have lived in Wayne County all their life, the information will bring back memories. Those who are implants should also enjoy the articles.

The Great Plains Room dedication on Sunday and the series of Old Settlers articles are a subtle reminder that while looking to the future, it doesn't hurt to take a peak backwards and not neglect the past.

Legislators debating income proposals

Two-thirds of the current Legislative session is behind us as we conclude this week's action. As we come closer to the end of the Unicameral session both the content and character of the Legislature change noticeably.

This coming week, for the most part, will be used to discuss various revenue measures that have been brought before the legislature. We will be discussing at least six proposals intended to generate income for the state. From the elimination of some of the currently exempt sales tax items to the valuing of farm and ranch land through the use of the income approach, the debate is sure to be spirited.

Today we saw the introduction of the first recommendations to the full Legislature from the Appropriations Committee. These include state agency appropriations, and budgets, state employee salaries and others.

by sen. gerald conway

before receiving final legislative approval.

As a backdrop to this change in legislative orientation, a good number of bills have completed the process in one way or another. Nearly half of the 720 bills that have been introduced this year have already either been rejected or approved. We've significantly pared the number that remain to be dealt with.

For the most part, I am pleased with the decisions made by the body. I believe that valuable ideas are being acted upon and some others are deserving of the quick burial they received.

IN ADDITION to the normal processing of bills, an occasional hearing is still held to examine issues that arise after the commencement of the session. One of these is Legislative Resolution 57, a measure that would return civil and criminal prosecu-authority in selected cases within the borders of the Winnebago reservation from Nebraska back to the federal government and the Winnebago tribe.

This past Wednesday evening I participated as a member of the Judiciary Committee which conducted a public hearing on the "retrocession" resolution until nearly 1 a.m. A considerable amount of give-and-take occurred between members of the Committee and those who testified on the issue.

Within the next few days, the other Committee members and I will continue to examine the issues involved. The question before us is a sensitive one to those living in and around Thurston County. The solution, when reached, should be one that demonstrates attention to the need for self-determination of a people, as well as the continuity and security for all residents of the reservation.

Engineer choice

The Wayne County Commissioners' selection of Bruce Gilmore and Associates as special engineer to the Timpte site improvement project (following a 2-1 vote) last Wednesday was a good choice.

Wayne's city council had already appointed Gilmore and Associates for its special engineering work performance on their share of improvement work. Now that both government entities have the same engineer, we hope there will be better coordination between the county and city in preparing the site for Timpte, a representative from the engineering firm said last Wednesday.

Any stalemate resulting from questions between the city and county concerning the site improvement for Timpte would likely delay the project construction. To avoid this is to have well prepared plans and specifications and continual on-site inspection — something which Bruce Gilmore and Associates have the expertise and experience to offer both the county and the city.

Q. My husband died leaving about $200,000 in assets, all in joint ownership with me, so the estate passed to me without taxes. Now, if I put the assets in joint ownership with my children, will they have to pay taxes when I die? Would it be easier to put everything in trust?

A. Generally speaking, whether you put the assets of your estate in joint ownership with your children, or put everything in trust, there is virtually no way you can pass your estate on to your children without some taxes being assessed. For this reason, an "estate plan" is very important. The purpose of an estate plan is to make the best use of your financial assets while you are living, avoid the payment of unnecessary taxes, and determine how your property will be distributed upon your death.

A good estate plan can be accomplished by using a number of devices including a will, life insurance policies, various types of trust arrangements, joint tenancy or other methods of property ownership, retirement plans, gifts, a life estate arrangement and other devices. You should work with your lawyer to determine how to tailor an estate plan to fit your particular situation and meet your goals.

Although joint tenancy is generally acceptable between spouses, it is often not recommended between a parent and children. A "pay on death" account with a child having a durable power of attorney may be more advisable.

Hardships ahead

I wonder how many people feel like I do — If Von-Minden was still our Senator LB 662, the school reorganization bill, would not have passed. The legislature enacted it on a 25-23 vote.

Our present Senator (Conway) voted for it because he said he heard from 30,000 people when he was campaigning, asking for property tax relief. I'm sure he did hear from a lot of people with that request because our taxes are out of control! How will the passage of LB 662 reduce our taxes and if it is going to cost more money? Whether you pay sales tax, state income tax or property tax, it still money out of your pocket.

LB 662 will cause hardship in many sparsely populated areas and will also mean building new schools in some areas where the present schools are adequate.

I really feel our present Senator is only a rubber stamp for the NSEA. Name withheld by request

Prom Party Thanks

I would like to personally thank the Carroll, Haskins, Wayne, Winside and Norfolk merchants for this years generosity of gifts and donations to our second Post Prom Party. I feel that many of you have become more aware of what a post prom party is and what it accomplishes. Each of you should feel a sense of pride and personal warmth knowing that because of you many of our youths will be having a fun and SAFE prom night.

As we have concluded our door-to-door campaign, we may have missed some of you who truly wanted and intended to contribute something to this worthy cause. If we have done so, please give a call to Mrs. Judy Carlson at 375-2370 or myself at 286-4504 and we will be happy to make arrangements for picking it up before our April 27 party.

Again, thank you so much for your gifts, we could not possibly accomplish our goal without you!

Spring comes to Wayne

Annual festival features clowns, crafts and contests

Area residents were given an opportunity to have fun — while enjoying art — during Saturday's Spring Arts Festival, sponsored by the Wayne Regional Arts Council, and SpringFest '85, sponsored by the Wayne Chamber of Commerce.

"Klutes, Kids and the Colors of Spring" was the theme for an art contest entered by pre-school through sixth graders. Pictures colored at various area schools were returned to the Wayne Regional Arts Council for display and judging on Saturday morning inside the Wayne city auditorium.

Winners of $5 prizes for first place in four divisions were Leon Brusch, fifth grader at Wayne Middle School; Kim Imdieke, fourth grader at St. Mary's School; Tami Fork, second grader at Carroll Elementary School; and Jelene Jager, kindergarten at West Elementary School.

RESIDENTS ATTENDING the festival at the city auditorium also viewed artwork by Marlene Mueller, Wayne Anderson, Ray Replogle, Sue Replogle and Faye Mitchell; photographs by Bill Jammer, Rae Kugler and Chuck Hackenmiller; and woodcarvings by Mike Fluett and by Bob Delata, who demonstrated his work during the festival.

Craft items for sale were furnished by Frances Kingston, by Darold Kraemer, who makes wooden toys and household items; and by Ingonie Brash of the Craft Corral, whose stick horses were ridden home by several youngsters.

Keith Brusch of Wayne Monument Works displayed samples of sand-blasted glass. Sandblasting results in a frosted pattern similar to that achieved when etching glass with acid.

Name plates and other "executive gifts" made of marble also were shown.

A SPECIAL DISPLAY of "artistic" T-shirts was provided by Lyle George, Dean Craun, Gail Korn, Misty Trezona and Mario McCue.

The first signs of Wayne's 1985 Chicken Show also were evident during Saturday's Spring Arts Festival.

T-shirts from all previous chicken shows were exhibited, and 1985 T-shirts were available at a reduced price. Chicken crossing signs also were for sale.

Nearly a case of Bon Ami, along with instructions for the Bon Ami Pan-tine contest held each year in conjunction with the Chicken Show, was distributed to persons planning to participate this year.

A "Spring Thing Guess" contest, in which persons paid a penny to guess how many hardware items were in a large jar, resulted in a three-way tie between Dusty Soddin, Sue Ensz and Heather Schwartz.

Gary Weldon, SpringFest '85 entertainer, broke the tie at the end of the day by having the three finalists guess a number between one and 15. Sue Ensz was declared the winner and received $5.

DRAWINGS WERE held during the day for art work donated by Wayne Regional Arts Council members Gail Korn, Mike Fluett and Sue Replogle.

Winners were Dale Gutshall, a basket crafted by Korn; Bill Jammer, a weaving by Replogle; and Veronica Trezona, a sculpture by Fluett.

FESTIVITIES OUTSIDE the city auditorium began at 12:30 p.m. with "Klutzy the Clown" (Gary Weldon of Missouri Valley, Iowa) performing his magic act.

He also made balloons for the youngsters and directed contests and games.

Weldon also entertained both children and adults with his wooden friend "Woodstock" during the ventriloquism portion of the show.

Assisting Weldon during the day were his daughters, Melissa and Vanessa, along with Misty Trezona of Wayne.

Afternoon activities culminated with the awarding of over 100 prizes donated by 64 SpringFest sponsors.

Karla Burbach April 13 bride of Mark Korth at Randolph

St. Frances De Chantel Church in Randolph was the setting for the April 13 wedding ceremony uniting in marriage Karla Burbach and Mark Korth.

The bride, daughter of Cliff and Marlee Burbach of Carroll, is a 1983 graduate of Wayne-Carroll High School and a 1984 graduate of Bahner College of Hairstyling in Fremont. She is employed at Ellis Barber Shop in Wayne.

The newlyweds traveled to Colorado following their wedding ceremony.

Vocalists were Tamera Loftis of Waterloo and Deb Karnes of Merriam, and organist was Linda Rogers of Randolph.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride chose a white Chantilly gown designed with a jewel neckline enhanced with lace motifs. A Victorian V-shaped bodice was traced with ruffled lace that topped the shoulders.

The long, puffed sleeves were cuffed in Venice lace, and the bouffant skirt was dramatized with a wide cascade plounce of organza and chantilly ruffles which draped to a full chapel train.

Her tiered fingertip veil of bridal illusion was edged in lace and attached to a Juliet cap of string pearls and iridescent sequins.

Club-of-the-month Sunshine Club focuses on family, community

The following is the seventh article prepared by home extension clubs in Dixon County as part of a club-of-the-month series. Each month, a different extension club in Dixon County reports a brief history of the club, its membership and some of its major activities. Extension clubs are a part of the University of Nebraska Cooperative Extension Service. The extension homemakers program in Dixon County is directed by Anna Marie White.

For 40 years the Sunshine Home Extension Club in Dixon County has focused on learning to improve homemaking skills and being of service to their community.

The club was organized in the mid 1940's by homemakers in Silvercreek Township.

Their source of educational lessons was the Dixon County Cooperative Extension Service Office, located at that time in Allen.

THE GROUP meets the first Tuesday of each month in the homes of members to discuss and study current issues related to homemaking and family living.

Members share the responsibility of leading discussions or teaching the lessons. Community projects and neighborhood service activities vary greatly.

Each year the Sunshine Club serves the Newcastle Senior Citizens and they take gifts to residents at Elms Nursing Home in Ponca.

They participate in county fair activities by hosting the exhibit area and displaying a club booth.

When the damaged gate of Silver Ridge Cemetery was repaired and installed, the Sunshine Club took charge of painting the fence and the gates.

FAMILIES ARE important to club members. They have family picnics, birthday parties and Christmas parties.

Neighboring homemakers are invited to join the Sunshine Home Extension Club and are invited to attend guest day meetings.

Mrs. Orval Curry of Ponca is the only charter member still participating in club activities.

Mrs. Carl Armstrong, Ponca, has held the offices of Dixon County Home Extension Council vice-chairman and county chairman.

Currently, Mrs. Loren Lund of Allen is serving as county family well-being leader; and Mrs. David Manz of Newcastle is the county council secretary.

Other members are Mrs. Sam Dickey, Mrs. Lois Millie, Mrs. Paul Millie and Mrs. Mark McKinley, all of Newcastle, and Mrs. Aaron Meyers, Mrs. Roy Gunderson and Mrs. Fred Stark, all of Ponca.

schools, and the towns, and the townships, and the counties."
"The thing that concerns me the most is the farmer. It's that somebody, maybe not in my lifetime, food is going to be a scarce commodity because we (farmers) can't keep on going backwards."

A RESIDENT OF Beemer told last Wednesday night's gathering that he can't believe what has happened in the past four or five years, "and to some of the very best operators."

"We're not poor operators, we're victims of high interest. I told my banker the last time I visited him that he wasn't giving me a call when he was giving me a liquidation loan."

"I think we've had a lot of things thrown on us from our government and we're suppose to absorb them all."
Farmers may be good shock absorbers, but I'm all shocked out. I just have to turn it over to the Lord because I know I can't manage it alone."

"THERE'S ONLY one long-term solution that I can see," said yet another farmer.

"We enjoy a standard of living better than any other third world country. I don't feel that I'm better than them, or that I deserve it. I just happen to be born in this country."

"If our government would adopt a policy to export educational and technological know-how, then maybe these other countries could produce for themselves."

"If our government would help them realize their potential instead of holding them back, we would have orders we couldn't fill for the next 100 years."

"I'm sorry, but I get very emotional over this whole situation."

BISHOP ANDERSON told the gathering of farmers that in terms of pastoral care, the church needs to help people theologize about circumstances that are beyond their personal control.

"What we feel truly does affect how we reach," added Bishop Anderson.

"We need to help people get rid of the feeling that God is punishing them," he said.
"We need to counsel all participants in the agri-community crisis — including the bankers. They're hurting inside too."
"We're all of one family and sometimes we forget that we need to counsel persons in all ends of the system."

BEFORE THE evening closed, Bishop Anderson outlined a statement concerning the agri-community crisis which was reviewed during a conference of Lutheran Bishops held last month in Minneapolis.

The statement objects to administration proposals that would — at this time cut farm price and income support programs and base payments on market prices rather than the cost of production — pare down the federal commitment to the Farmers Home Administration by withdrawing from credit programs for low income and beginning farmers; — reduce federal support to conservation projects.

THE STATEMENT, as prepared by the Bishops, calls on the Congress to develop instead a national farm and food policy based on "principles of economic justice that would protect the rights of farmers and those who depend on their production skills."
Central to this policy would be goals of:

- an adequate supply of safe and wholesome food at affordable prices for those able to pay, subsidized for those without adequate resources;
- development of economic policies that foster strong growth in the export market taking into account third world development;
- fair prices and legal protections for farmers and farmworkers;
- prudent and effective stewardship of land and other natural resources;
- equitable access to and widespread distribution of farmland and other production assets; and
- short term farm debt relief by making adequate funding available and by the lowering of interest rates.

Wrage

Wrage said.
"We're planning another gathering (rally), concentrating more on Middle America to get more Main Street involvement," he mentioned.

At one time Wrage was not so politically inclined. It's different now.

"I'll never revert to being a non-activist again," he said.

HE EMPHASIZED that farmers today are not producing for productivity, but producing for government programs.
His work with the Farm Crisis has not been without his own difficulties. "This has been a severe drain on me, both mentally and physically. It's been just like fertilizer season since December 1984," said Wrage.

"It's a seven day a week job. The phone never quits ringing," he said. So he is just as busy with his work with the Farm Crisis as with his employment with the business firm in Chicago. But he would do it all over again, he said, because "it is a worthy cause."

Financially, I've got a lot of personal money in it (Farm Crisis organization). And we've hired another full-time man at the fertilizer plant. Money has been a constant battle for the organization and we have tapped communities to the hilt," Wrage said.

HAS HIS business climate improved since his involvement with the Farm Crisis organization?

"I haven't seen any changes in my business. And I haven't capitalized or taken advantage of the situation to benefit my business; I have not asked members of the Farm Crisis Committee to become my customers," Wrage answered.

This is what Wrage would say as a guest speaker to future farmers if provided the opportunity: "There is a future in agriculture. Just like agriculture rebounded after the 1930's, I'm optimistic about agriculture, but I'm pessimistic about it for the near future."

In the long run, I think agriculture will become very strong," he said.

All businesses go through a cycle, he said, and agriculture is in this cycle right now. What the Farm Crisis groups are trying to do is flush out the cycle and stop it now, to keep it from continuing.

"Left alone, it will affect too many people. The obituary column for agriculture would run too high if we let the cycle run its course without interference," he said.

There is a current natural tilt with the Farm Crisis Committee as farmers are in the fields. "But they haven't forgot about it. The proposals are still there. It's now just a matter of priorities," he mentioned.

They are still fighting for the long-term of agriculture.

And some are fighting this year just to obtain financing so they can farm this year. Wrage said he has noticed an increasing number of people coming to the Farm Crisis Center in Emerson, seeking advice for financial help.

In a sense I feel the banks are doing everything in their power to be sure everyone is able to farm as long as they are protected through the loan guarantee program, he said.

Another rally is being planned in the upcoming month that is expected to be larger than the one in Ames, Iowa, he said. The date and time of the rally has yet to be determined.

At one time, Wrage could take his children Buddy, Ginny and Becky to the river for some relaxing fishing on a slow Saturday or Sunday. Now he spends his weekends carrying a briefcase traveling to speaking engagements or meetings with national agriculture officials.

Shoss he thought would last him a lifetime have worn to the soles. But his family understands. Wrage is one that takes farming to heart.

Awards

The Nebraska Press Association's Central Office selects, by secret chance drawing, several front pages of the weeklies that were published in 1984. Judging is based on layout and design, newswriting, use of artwork and use of headlines.

In the General Excellence Class C category, The Wayne Herald finished second behind West Point. Judging was on editorial coverage and quality of writing, headline language, quality and use of picture and art work, mechanical, editorial page, front page, women's page, sports page, advertising and treatment of public notice.

On Saturday evening at Ak-Sar-Ben, The Wayne Herald received an honorable mention during the 111th Nebraska Press Association Ak-Sar-

Ben Community Service and Service to Agriculture awards banquet, contest.
The newspaper's entry was a scrapbook showing coverage throughout 1984 of the Wayne centennial celebration.

Capturing the Mark E. Cramer Sweepstakes Award with the most points of all weekly newspapers was The Milford Times (competing in Class A, circulation up to 1,499) with 109 points. The Gothenberg Times, winner of the Class B division and last year's sweepstakes winner, finished second with 87 points.

Wisner News-Chronicle, competing in Class B, finished third with 63 points. The Wayne Herald was fourth with 57 points.

TOP WINNER among Nebraska daily newspapers was The Scottsbluff Star-Herald. Norfolk News finished second with 72 points and the Fremont Tribune captured third with 53 points.

This is the second year of the Mark E. Cramer Sweepstakes Award, presented to the top weekly. Sponsor of the award is J. Alan Cramer, publisher of The Wayne Herald and son of Mark Cramer.

Mark Cramer, who for many years published The Wayne Herald, was killed in an airplane crash in 1954 at the age of 50. The award is a bronze statue, crafted by Herb Mignery, former Hastings artist.

It depicts a farm woman standing beside her rural mailbox reading the newspaper, which has just been delivered. It is a traveling trophy which goes for one year to the sweepstakes winner.

This year's contest was judged by publishers, editors and staff members of Iowa newspapers who are members of the Iowa Press Association.

Engineers

and Bob Nissen voted in favor of the resolution to approve Gilmore and Associates as special engineers for the project. Merlin Beiermann voted against the proposal.

"It is my own personal feeling that the engineer's work should be big," Beiermann said. The bidding could make a difference in project costs, he said.

He said he would also like to see the estimate cost of the project broken down instead of completely lumped together, showing the amount of dollars for that amount of work.

Athletes from around the area gathered at Wayne State College's Memorial Stadium on Saturday afternoon for the annual Special Olympics.

The Wayne Special Olympics have been held for some time, including the past three years. Events included running and throwing events and a new division for preschool boys and girls.

The event was sponsored by a variety of Wayne community and Wayne State College organizations and featured a wide variety of athletic competition, special activities and entertainment for the over 50 athletes, parents and friends that were on hand.

Those groups and individuals involved in organization and direction of the meet were the Wayne Kiwanis, Knights of Columbus and Wayne State's Circle K, Tau Kappa Epsilon, Sigma Tau Gamma, Theta, Phi Alpha, Kappa Delta Gamma, Fellowship of Christian Athletes, Les Smith (meet director) and Frank Teach (announcer).

According to Herb Roof, associate professor at Wayne State College and an organizer of the event, the Wayne Special Olympics try to provide an easy format structure and allow those athletes in the area who cannot stay involved in the state-wide program the opportunity to compete.

Special olympians

THEY WERE ALL IN the winners circle Saturday afternoon during the annual Special Olympics invitational track and field meet at Wayne State College. There were softball throwers and frisbee tossers, high jumpers and long jumpers, all with one thing in common — the winning smile of accomplishment. Participants from northeast Nebraska competed in the meet, and numerous volunteers offered plenty of love, hugs, and words of congratulations. Activities included a softball throw, frisbee toss, log roll, high jump, long jump, 25-yard assisted walk, 400-yard wheelchair event, 50-yard dash, 200-yard dash and 400-yard relay. In the top photo at left, young Marcus Jenkinsen of Foster is assisted in the 25-yard walk by his big brother, Matt. Control of dandelions
Scattered plants are effectively controlled by digging. Use a butcher knife or special dandelion digger. Cut the root 4 to 5 inches below the ground. Deep cutting is necessary to prevent regrowth from the root. Killer Kanex can disperse a "sausage" of herbicide on the center of individual plants work on scattered plants.

Heavy broadleaf weed infestations are best controlled with 2,4-D, mecoprop (MCPP) and Banvel. They are available as granular formulations as well as liquids for spray application. Granular forms are often combined with fertilizer for a once-over weed and feed treatment.

Liquid formulations for broadleaf weed control are applied with pressure sprayers and zero pressure fog applicators. When using pressure sprayers, keep the pressure as low as possible. This produces a coarse spray that is less likely to drift. Treat when there is little or no wind movement. Nozzle applicators that fit on gallon jugs are effective, safe to use and low in cost.

Amino formulations of lawn herbicides are safe to use. Ester formulations give off damaging fumes at temperatures above 80 degrees F. This includes so called low volatile esters. If spray accidentally gets on a desirable plant immediately hose it down with plenty of water.

Besides dandelions, other spring weeds including common chickweed, shepherd's purse, pennywort and mustards are also controlled with herbicides.

Preemergence weed control
The first three weeks in May is the best time to apply Dacthal, Betanone and Balan as preemergence herbicides for lawn weed control.

Preemergence lawn herbicides control primarily annual grasses — crabgrass, foxtail, goosegrass and barnyard grass. Dacthal also controls prostrate spurge and purslane. None of the preemergence materials control perennials such as dandelion, field bindweed and ground ivy. Holding off on preemergence applications until just prior to weed seed germination extends effective control later into July and August. A second treatment around July 15 is necessary for season long spurge control.

Tupersan is a special long spurge product that can be applied when plants are a bluish green. It is usually designated "For New Lawn Seedings." Tupersan controls crabgrass and foxtail without harmful effects on the grasses if label directions are followed. It is especially useful if a new lawn planting is delayed until May or June.

Vegetable, fruit crops offer options

Expanding the production of vegetable and fruit crops in Nebraska is a move that could benefit some farmers individually and the state as a whole, according to cooperative Extension Service agents and specialists working with Nebraska growers.

Agents are promoting the idea of "expanding agriculture" to supplement farmers' incomes and to provide Nebraska grower products to the state's food processing industry.

"We look to this as an extra income for farmers, going into other things they can grow," said Chris Carlson, agent chairman in Stanton County. Carlson works with the 150-member Northeast Nebraska Vegetable Growers Association and has met with state officials about area-wide marketing programs.

Bob O'Keefe, extension potato specialist with the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, Panhandle Research and Extension Center at Scottsbluff, has researched alternative crops for 35 years. He sees great potential for the state in growing and marketing vegetables for use by the food processing industry.

With its underground water supply and favorable climate, "Nebraska may be able to take the place of traditional vegetable growing areas that are now getting out of it" like Arizona and Texas, O'Keefe said.

Vegetable and fruit crops are attractive because they offer high returns for the effort, O'Keefe said. The input is much higher than for other crops — for example, $1,000 per acre compared to $300, he said, but the return can be as high as $5,000 per acre.

"The risk is greater, the cost is greater, but the return can be much greater," O'Keefe said.

Nebraska Farmers interested in expanding their operations to include alternative crops are fortunate because the state's varied soils and climates are adaptable to many vegetable and fruit crops, for example, sandy soils found across the state, the warmer temperatures of the southern half and the low rainfall of the west are conducive to many vegetables.

The state is a veritable road map of food products: onions and potatoes grow for years. In the west are expanding in popularity throughout the state, melons flourish in the sandy soil of parts of central and northeast Nebraska, and fruit thrives best in the rainy, hilly southeast. The list of crops being grown in Nebraska seems endless, including cucumbers, beans, tomatoes, peppers, popcorn, asparagus, carrots, turnips and celery.

The actual scope of alternative crops grown in Nebraska is not known. The Nebraska Food Processing Center at UNL in cooperation with the State Department of Economic Development has sent out 50,000 surveys to determine the extent of alternative crops being grown in Nebraska, McAuliffe said.

Despite renewed interest in alternative crops of late stimulated by the current farm economy, specialists like O'Keefe emphasize that the idea of growing vegetables and fruit in Nebraska is nothing new.

Potatoes have been a major part of the development of the Scotts Bluff valley and irrigated agriculture in that part of the state, O'Keefe said. The St. Louis and Norfolk areas are well-known for their melons, and the southeast corner of the state has been an important apple-producing area for many years.

Bill Buxton, extension horticulturist at the UNL Southeast Research and Extension Center, said southeast Nebraska led the nation in apple production until lack of barge transportation dried up the market for commercial sales of the apples, and a devastating freeze dealt a death blow in the 1940s. Still, the crops are important to southeast Nebraska, he said, with 500 acres of trees creating a $1 million industry.

"I don't see why you couldn't have a large commercial industry in fruit," Gustafson said, "but you would have to have processing and farmers would have to have experience and skill."

"Developing markets for alternative crops will add to the state economy in terms of jobs and investment of capital," O'Keefe said. This high labor input industry requires large numbers of people to work not only on farms but also in processing plants, warehouses, transportation and packaging.

McAuliffe sees two types of growers able to provide for the needs of the commercial food industry — large growers with enough capital to invest in a large-scale operation, and collective groups of smaller growers who could share the risk and the markets.

"I don't see many individual farmers having the ability to do the quality and yield needed for the first few years (of vegetable operation)," McAuliffe said. "It usually takes about three years to make that shift and get the quality right."

Farmers are encouraged to start small, paying close attention to what markets are available and what crops are needed. O'Keefe suggests starting with no more than five acres.

When establishing habitat it pays to help wildlife

The last two winters have been extremely hard on our wildlife. The snow covered what little habitat they had as well as their food supply. Those birds that made it through the tough winter had to cope with an unusually wet spring that either washed out their nests or made it near impossible for their young chicks to survive, as they hadn't developed their feathering and were very susceptible to the dampness that we had so much of.

This winter has been a good one for both man and wildlife alike. The temperatures have been warmer and we haven't had the heavy snows that we did the last 2 years.

One would think that this warmer winter would help our bird population to come back, and make a good population of birds for next fall's hunting season.

This is not necessarily so, as without an area for the birds to roost, loaf and raise their young, we won't have the birds.

These areas for the birds are getting fewer and fewer as the agricultural methods have changed and fence to fence farming is being seen as the only way to farm.

The old farmsteads and woodlots have been bulldozed to make way for irrigation systems and this has destroyed much of the habitat that was available to our wildlife.

Pastures, road ditches and windbreaks are being over grazed in an effort to get the most out of the land. The birds and other wildlife have been forced out of the areas and are in desperate need of a place, or to survive.

Much of the nesting that is done by the birds is done in alfalfa fields and when its time for the first cutting, these birds are still on the nest. Many nests as well as hens are destroyed by the windrower as it makes its way through the field.

What can be done to help the wildlife? There are many things that you can do to improve the habitat.

You could keep your livestock from grazing the goves and windbreaks. This will allow the undergrowth to grow back making a fine nesting, loafing and travel area for the birds.

By not burning or grazing the road ditches, you will leave an area where the birds can nest and raise their young.

Leave the trees in as they will provide a place for wildlife as well as protect your home and your livestock.

You could also enter into an agreement with the N.R.D. and Game and Parks to set aside a wildlife habitat area under the Wildlife Habitat Program.

Payment can be made for establishing a wildlife habitat area as small as 3 acres or as large as 80 acres.

Information on these and other programs can be obtained by contacting the Wayne County Soil Conservation Service office at 120 Logan in Wayne, NE.

Wildlife is an important part of our ecological system, but in order for them to survive and prosper, we are going to have to give them a little help.

Army cutworms

Army cutworms may delay green-up as much as three weeks by feeding in established alfalfa, but insecticide treatment is seldom profitable. However, new alfalfa seedings and sometimes corn planted in alfalfa ground may need treatment. Lorsban 4E has given consistent control at a rate of one quart per acre.

Army cutworms resemble black cutworms but are usually found only in alfalfa and wheat. Stan Stirling, Extension Agent in Dixon County, suggests checking fields closely for the grayish, fat-bodied larvae, and treating if excessive thinning of a new stand occurs. Treat in the evening, since army cutworms feed at night and hide in the soil around the base of plants during the day.

Calibrating for rootworm insecticides

Insecticide failures often are actually under-application problems. On the other hand, over-application is an inefficient hidden cost. Don't count on equipment to continue to deliver the proper amount year after year, suggests Stan Stirling, Extension Agent in Dixon County. Equipment setting can easily change more than 10% after one day of use under certain conditions. Granule size may vary from lot to lot and even from bag to bag. Flow rates change.

Calibrate in the same soil texture you will be planting in, and at the same planting speed. Weigh granule output on a good scale, graduated in ounces, over a distance of at least 250 feet. Calibration tubes are less accurate than weighing. Use product information to get the number of ounces needed per 1,000 feet for different formulations.

Different row spacings will change the pounds applied per acre, but using the suggested amount per 1,000 feet of row will give the correct amount for all row spacings. A comparison example of the amount to use per 1,000 feet of row is as follows: 10 G (12.2 oz./ft.), 14-G (8.75 oz./ft.), 15-G (8.16 oz./ft.), 20 G (6.12 oz./ft.)

4-H Computer Club

A group of Dixon County parents and 4-H members want to start a 4-H Computer Club. Anyone interested in helping with the club or enrolling a youngster should contact Stan Stirling, Extension Agent in Dixon County, by calling 884-2234 or writing the Dixon County Extension office at Concord.

A new Dixon County Fair class has been added which is patterned after the Ak-Sar-Ben computer contest. This will enable youngsters age 14 to 19 to exhibit programs which can later be entered in the Ak-Sar-Ben contest. Grand prize for the Ak-Sar-Ben contest is a new IBM personal computer. Dixon County may add another county fair, appropriate for younger members if there is enough interest.

Anyone with an interested youngster, preferable with access to a microcomputer, is eligible to join. They do not need to be a current 4-H member. 4-H members enrolled in other clubs can also join the new club.

Wayne County Farm Bureau meets

The Wayne County Farm Bureau held its regular monthly meeting April 15 at the office in Wayne. Don Leidman presided over the meeting. Roll call and minutes were read by secretary Joanne Ekberg who reported that the safety seminar will be held June 3, 4 and 5 at Camp CoMcCa in Cozad. Any high school sophomore or junior is eligible to attend. All those interested are encouraged to contact Joanne Ekberg or the Farm Bureau office in Wayne. A spaghetti and pie supper will be held April 27 from 6:30 to 9 at St. Mary's School. Cost is $3 for adults, $1.50 for children 6-12 and ages 5 and under free. Tickets are available from board members or at the door. Board members are reminded to bring a pie.

Field services representative Shawn Kai was in attendance and showed the group a very interesting film. There will be no meeting in May.

the farmer's wife

Last year at this time, I was complaining about mud and cold. This year, until Sunday night, I was worried about lack of rain and heat. It's true, farmers are always complaining about the weather. Problem is, the weather affects us so much. Last week I kept wondering: if we have July weather in April, what will July be like? Then the tornado warning began, and it was a more typical Nebraska spring—Monday morning after worrying about dry weather, I had a basement full of wet weather and wondering where I could get a wet vacuum. But at least the house was still standing, and the roof hadn't blown away. As I kept telling the folks in the South, you have to be tough to live here.

This community celebrated National Baby Week with lots of new babies. Trouble is, I remember when their parents were babies and the time has gone by so quickly. The saying "As baby is God's opinion that the world should go on" keeps coming to mind. The trees seemed to leaf out overnight. Nebraska is celebrating Arbor Day in grand fashion this year. In fact, the whole year has been designated The Year of the Tree. A spaghetti and pie supper will be held April 27 from 6:30 to 9 at St. Mary's School. Cost is $3 for adults, $1.50 for children 6-12 and ages 5 and under free. Tickets are available from board members or at the door. Board members are reminded to bring a pie.

Field services representative Shawn Kai was in attendance and showed the group a very interesting film. There will be no meeting in May.

This is National CPR week. Citizen CPR has proven its worth. Better check that card in your wallet and see if you need recertification. It's been proven that we forget a large portion of the class within six months. Certainly, we should refresh in two years. Cardio-Pulmonary Resuscitation should be used in case of "sudden and unexpected" death. My most memorable case was when a little lady walked into the emergency entrance of the hospital and announced she hadn't been feeling well all day. She collapsed on the floor, but she revived with CPR and later that night, I helped with a pacemaker implant. As she recuperated, she complained of chest soreness from the compressions, but she did it with a smile on her face. I get a Christmas card from her every year.

I've not been a tree climber, except to pick apples. I left that to my brother. But I get very sentimental about trees, and feel sad when some have to be cut down. The men got rid of some around the house last month. The one that held the 6 1/2 acre tree, one that contained the tree house, were spared. The kids spent many summer hours in it.

IRONICALLY, OR, maybe it's playful, the weather is as hot as the final Volunteer Week. Most CPR training has been done by volunteers. If we had to reimburse for their time secretaries are people who make the coffee (at least in the pot), make the plants, sooth the boss, and answer all the phones. Should be a good week for hugging!

No-till soybean stubble

By Don C. Spitzer
Wayne County Extension Agent

Many farmers, for the first time this year, will be planting corn into soybean stubble without tilling the soil.

One of the main advantages of no-till is the reduction in erosion by using no till. The recent heavy rains attest to the fact, that although erosion in soybean stubble is not eliminated, it is greatly reduced when compared to ground worked with a disk or other tillage implement.

A recent experiment of erosion on soybean stubble on land with a five percent slope and two inches of rain erosion was reduced on no-till compared to disk and plant by 52 percent; no-till compared to field cultivate and plant 33 percent and no-till plant on soybean stubble compared to moldboard plow reduced erosion by almost 65 percent.

Importance of Herbicides
The key to no-till is weed control and since even a tillage program using a field cultivator can increase soil erosion by 33 percent a good herbicide program is a must.

Here are some suggestions for good herbicide weed control program on no-till corn into soybean stubble.

- Build the program around Bladex 4L or atrazine 4L. Both these herbicides have foliar activity on emerged weeds, as well as providing residual weed control. Lasso or Dual can be tank-mixed with the Bladex or atrazine for grass weed control but they do not have foliar activity on emerged weeds.

- The rate of Bladex or atrazine has to be adjusted for soil organic matter. I know of at least one commercial company that is offering a guarantee using the above products.
- Emerged weeds should be three inches or less when the herbicide is applied. To increase the probability of grass weed control, add one quarter acre of crop oil concentrate. Ogal 1 is greatly reduced when compared to ground worked with a disk or other tillage implement.
- Nitrogen solutions and complete liquid fertilizers are the preferred carriers for the herbicide. If a water solution is used, always use the crop oil concentrate. If a nitrogen solution is used as the carrier, it could be the only carrier. If a dilution is made with water, probably at least five gallons per acre of nitrogen solution should be combined with the water.
- If weather conditions permit a relatively early planting of corn and emerged weeds are small, plant corn first and then spray on the herbicide solution. If emerged weeds look like they will be larger than two to three inches at the expected corn planting date, then applying the herbicide early preplant should be considered. If the herbicide is applied before corn planting the carrier should be sure the planter will not cause a lot of soil disturbance and hence herbicide displacement from the crop row area.
- If you have questions about the herbicides and rates to use on this no-till program contact the Extension Service.

LOWER ELKHORN NATURAL RESOURCES DISTRICT

Conservation of soil and water

By Steven G. Diltman, General Manager, Lower Elkhorn NRD

In the 1970s during the extensive dust-bowl days, the U.S. Congress created the Soil Conservation Service (SCS) as an agency within U.S.D.A. The legislation, called for the 48 states to pass parallel law creating Soil Conservation Districts as local political subdivisions with a Board of Directors elected by resident voters of each district. All states eventually created such districts with a total of about 3000 districts throughout the USA today.

Pursuant to the creation of districts, each ultimately signed a "Memorandum of Understanding" with SCS-USDA. Such memorandum provides that soil conservation technical personnel or federal employees be utilized in each district to assist the landowner in planning and constructing conservation on their land. Such arrangement continues today in Nebraska through the Natural Resources Districts and each Soil Conservation Service, USDA, field office.

Along with SCS districts, Congress later created the Agricultural Conservation Program (ACP) administered by the Agricultural Stabilization & Conservation Service (ASCS). Providing cost-share dollars for land owners to cover part of the cost for construction of conservation practices on their lands. This program (ACP) remains today, however, at a much lower level of federal dollars than in past decades. Thus, several states and some local districts have created cost-share programs for conservation to supplement not replace ACP dollars. Any landowner or tenant is eligible for such cost-share by applying at your local ASCS or SCS office whether cost-share dollars be ACP/State/NRD or a combination thereof.

Within the Lower Elkhorn NRD, 85% of the lands are tilled and cultivated. Much of the land is rolling lands, thus making them prone to severe sheet erosion. Also, the eastern third of Nebraska, and western third of Iowa receives the most intensified thunderstorms in the spring and early summer as anywhere in the continental U.S.

We have recently documented through Agricultural Research Service that if a landowner curtails soil erosion (movement of sediment) he is assured of keeping 85% plus of the agricultural chemical applied to cropland from entering our streams and lakes.

Also, recent studies document that it costs $1.10 to control a cubic yard of sediment through construction of conservation practices on the cropland whereas it costs on the average of $4 a cubic yard to remove the same from a county road ditch.

With these and other factors in mind, each landowner and tenant must make a sincere effort to control erosion on property they own or operate. For assistance, landowners and operators should utilize their local SCS office personnel.

On behalf of the Lower Elkhorn NRD Board of Directors, we pledge our continuous support to the landowners, tenants, and cooperating agencies to make Northeast Nebraska a strong Soil Conservation area for the betterment of future generations.

Soil stewardship week is May 12 - 19

The Soil Stewardship Week observance, by its very nature is one to be joined in by everyone who shares a sense of personal responsibility under God for the care of soil, water and the other vital elements making up our environment. Soil Stewardship Week had its origin more than 1500 years ago. The National Association of Conservation Districts has sponsored Soil Stewardship Week in the United States since 1955.

Each year the theme is focused on a key issue of the relationship between man and the Natural Resources entrusted to him by the Creator. With the assistance of leading clergymen of all faiths, church-bulletin covers, inserts and other materials have been made available to all churches throughout the nation. The theme of Soil Stewardship Week this year will be: "Tomorrow Together."

Thousands of questions about nature — about a life process so surprisingly intricate and interdependent — have stirred the minds of men since the beginnings of recorded time. Nature is really, the "interlocking sum" and substance of our daily lives, including the spiritual, physical and intellectual forces which affect us around the clock. You are a part of nature.

If you or your clergy are interested in obtaining bulletin covers, inserts or educational supplements please contact the Lower Elkhorn NRD, P.O. Box 16, Clarkson, NE 68629 (Phone: 692-3441).

Environmental education institute for teachers

Every year the Little Blue, Upper Big Blue and Lower Big Blue NRD's join together to sponsor an Environmental Education Institute for elementary and secondary science teachers. This year's camp will be the 10th, runs from June 3 through June 14, 1985. This is an excellent opportunity for teachers to strengthen their knowledge of natural resources and shows them how to utilize the outdoors as a classroom. There will be excellent instructors from Hastings and Kearney State Colleges, and teachers successfully completing the course earn 3 graduate credits transferable to any institution.

This year the NRD's are working with the Nebraska Department of Education who is very supportive of the program and would like to improve conservation education across our state. They have offered an incentive of $300 to any institute participant who successfully completes the course and prepares a conservation related lesson plan for the Department's use.

The camp will be held at Camp Jefferson near Fairbury. Field trips and tours are an important part of the education program. Participant's families are welcome to attend.

If you are interested in this type of learning format please advise the Lower Elkhorn NRD for registration forms or contact the Little Blue NRD, P.O. Box 100, Davanport, NE 68635 (Phone: 694-2145).
