Seminars offered by Chamber

Making good businesses better is the aim of three upcoming business training classes, sponsored by the Wayne Chamber of Commerce.

The seminars are offered at little or no cost and are open to managers, night and employees of Chamber businesses.

"Visual Merchandising" classes will feature topics such as mannequins, sign-making, background, budgeting and planning for visual merchandising, window lighting, window structure and color schemes, using themes, creating a feeling, focal point, spacing and overlapping.

The class will meet four times, April 29, May 1, 6, 8, each session from 7 to 10 p.m. The initial class will be at the Chamber office and is $10 for all four classes.

"Loss Prevention" deals with in correct pricing of merchandise, inventory shrinkage, inventory control, shoplifting, profit drain and employee pilferage. The class meets once, on May 20, from 7 to 10 p.m. at the Chamber office. Cost is $3.

"Customer Relations and Marketing" discusses how to promote business, channel products, assist salespeople in good customer relations, develop selling power, deal with customer complaints and bolster employee confidence.

It is designed for salespeople, clerks, receptionists, owners, employers and managers.

The class is free and is scheduled for May 14, 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the Women's Club Room in the Auditorium. For registration or information, call the Chamber at 375-2240.

On-the-job training information for employers and job seekers will be available in Wayne every Wednesday at the Wayne Chamber of Commerce, from 8 a.m. to 10 a.m., to discuss training needs.

Under the On-The-Job Training program, employers are reimbursed 50 percent of job training wages covering the length of job training. Open to public or private sector employers, the program can be utilized for one or more people who are hired and trained for permanent full time positions.

Individuals seeking employment are encouraged to also visit the representative. Job hunters may fill out applications to see if they qualify for the program and discuss possible employment.

Individuals unable to make the Wednesday morning office hours are encouraged to call the Chamber of Commerce at 375-2240.

School bill signed by Kerrey

Governor Robert Kerrey signed into law, on Wednesday evening, a bill that will require most Class I elementary school districts in Nebraska to merge with a neighboring school districts that have high schools.

This affiliation is to be completed by September of 1987.

There are currently 10 operating Class I schools in Wayne County. Enrollment numbers released at the beginning of the 1984-85 school year are as follows: District 5, 11 students (board members from Wisner and Wayne); District 9, 35 students (board members from Hoskins); District 15, 12 students (board members from Wayne and Wakefield); District 25, 22 students (board members from Pender and Wakefield); District 33, 4 students (board members from Wakefield and Wayne).

District 47, 6 students (board members from Wakefield); District 51, 33 students (board members from rural Wayne); District 57, 50 students (board members from rural Wayne); District 59, contracting; District 76, 12 students (board members from Randolph); and District 77, 6 students (board members from Hoskins).

KERREY, IN HIS statement upon signing the bill, said there is the risk that "this legislation will be seen as a victory of largeness over smallness of government over the individual citizen."

"In signing this bill, I urge all Nebraskans to join in the effort to prevent this [the risk] from happening. In signing this bill I have made the judgement that it is not only possible but desirable to continue the pursuit of quality and excellence within the framework of local K-12 districts," Kerrey said.

"I believe the uniformity of taxation which is possible under LB 662 is so desirable that I am willing to run the risks which now surround the tasks that face us," he said.

During the past two weeks, Kerrey had visited with Class I school districts. "I like them very much...The achievement levels of the students and the pride of the parents are not only worth preserving but also worth emulating," he mentioned.

He urged Nebraskans to consider that the legislation may have preserved something which can be useful as "we look for ways to encourage alternatives within our education system."

"I believe the K-9 school, under the active control of the parents and with the flexibility to experiment could be a model for urban parents who until now have only found this opportunity in private schools," Kerrey said.

"We must be careful, in short, that we give every rural Class I school which wants to survive the opportunity to do so. We must also be bold enough to acknowledge that there is something which could help our cities as well," he added.

HE REFERRED TO his visit to rural schools in Phelps, Buffalo, Lancaster and Otoe Counties, saying to them, "State government is not going to abandon you."

"To the thousands of parents and children who have called or written urging me to permit their schools to stay open, I promise you that your voices have been heard," he said.

Kerrey said he will call a special session of the Legislature within 90 days after adjournment of the regular session to meet on the following proposals:

• To consider and enact more detailed and flexible procedures for implementation of LB 662.

• To consider and enact other changes as needed in the structure of the state's primary and secondary schools to achieve the desired goal of tax equity and educational diversity.

• To consider issues of funding including the shifting of tax support of education away from property to sales and income tax, and the funding of salary increases for Nebraska's elementary and secondary teachers.

• And to consider ways of encouraging the diversity, variety, and alternatives within the public education system.

Kerrey also said he will work with the Legislature to accomplish objectives — including the passing of legislation to strike the funding provisions of LB 662 and to redouble efforts in exerting fiscal restraint in the current budget process.

Current financing tied in with the bill would put a 45 percent cap on local property taxes for the support of public education and raise the state sales tax a cent — up to 4 1/2 cents — that is, if Kerrey's request to revamp the financing of the bill is turned down.

Close-up brings students closer to national politics

The following is a report of six Wayne-Carroll High School students and one instructor who are participating in the Close Up program at the nation's capital.

The Wayne Herald has made arrangements with a member of Congressman Doug Bereuter's office in Washington to follow the students and write about their reaction.

A weary but enthused group of Wayne-Carroll High School students returned to Nebraska on Saturday after an intensive week of study of the federal government in the nation's capital.

The six Wayne-Carroll students and social studies instructor Bill Sharpe have been participants in Close Up, a citizenship education program that is non-partisan as well as non-philosophical.

Since last Sunday night they have been studying government and its history on a daily basis from breakfast until nearly 11 p.m.

The information and experiences afforded the Wayne students have been massive. "Right now, I think they're overwhelmed," Sharpe said at midweek. Days have been filled with seminars and workshops at a variety of locations throughout Washington.

IN ADDITION TO meeting with members of the Nebraska congressional delegation, the students have met with such speakers as Frank Lavin, who formerly served in the White House Office of Public Liaison, and also with a counsel for the House of Representatives Budget Committee.

Visits were also scheduled at a foreign embassy and on Wednesday, a seminar took place at the Vietnam Memorial with Jan Scruggs who conceived the idea of a memorial and who was primarily responsible for its construction. "They'll have a better understanding of how the government works," Sharpe said. "When you talk about the House and Senate, they'll have a picture of what it is like in their minds."

Close Up is almost a semester course paced into a single week. "It's a good program," Sharpe said. "I don't have any criticism of it. We need two weeks instead of one. We need a month."

Wayne-Carroll junior Judi Brodersen said Washington met one of her expectations.

"I pictured it as rush, rush and big — and it is. There are lots of people and different sorts of jobs," Brodersen said.

Brodersen and junior Val Stalling feel Close Up is giving them a new perspective on the national issues. Stalling said one reason she elected to attend Close Up was to "see how government is run and see the views everyone has."

"It'll give you a little more insight on the issues," Brodersen said. "They give you different views and opinions."

BRODERSEN SAID even though Close Up is no vacation, the chance to travel was a lure for her participation.

"I've never been to Washington D.C. before. I wanted to see how everything works," she said.

"I thought this would be a chance to get away and learn something at the same time," she added.

Sharpe said the hands-on concept of learning that is employed by Close Up makes government and history vivid. "Anything you can use, especially in social studies, to make it more relevant is a valid thing. It's too bad we can't bring everyone."

Wayne students met with Sharpe Monday evening for a short evaluation after a day filled with three seminars, a workshop, and a two-hour walking tour of Capitol Hill to orient the students to various buildings for Tuesday's activities.

The Wayne students are among approximately 150 Nebraskans enrolled in Close Up this week with the state's delegation paired in a Crystal City hotel with students and teachers from Alaska. Students have one roommate from their own school and are then placed in a hotel room with two other students from other schools or states.

"It's a good deal they can allow them to room with someone they know. But when they put them in with other kids from other communities and states — there is a value there," Sharpe said.

The Nebraskans flew home Saturday morning and Sharpe has no illusions as how peppy the Wayne students would be. "They'd have to be totally dead," he said.

Others beside Brodersen and Stalling who are participating in the Close-Up program from the Wayne-Carroll School are Penny Paige, James Prodent, Valerie Rahn and Dale Tonack.

NRD anniversary

After all the steady rainfall this area has received during the past week, we should learn to appreciate soil conservation and the efforts of officials in the Natural Resource District.

This is the 50th anniversary of the soil conservation district, now called natural resources districts across Nebraska, according to an article by Keryle Knake-Steinkruger, a soil conservation service volunteer.

It began when farmers and ranchers, frustrated with hot winds blowing away topsoil during the Dust Bowl years and later, heavy rains that eroded the soil, joined together in related districts.

The first Nebraska Soil Conservation District was formed in 1937 and included portions of Washington, Douglas and Sarpy Counties. The last district to form was Perkins District in 1950.

What did these districts provide? Mostly assistance. They helped farmers construct terraces, waterways and plant windbreaks to prevent soil erosion.

They sponsored seminars on new farming techniques and irrigation methods. District staff encouraged soil conserving practices, like contour planting and mulch tillages.

But then things became confusing. In 1972, there were 87 soil and water conservation districts and 67 small watershed planning boards and watershed conservancy districts.

Nebraska's Unicameral came to the rescue and passed a bill creating Natural Resources Districts, dwindling the 154 varied districts into 24 multi-purpose districts.

Boundaries of the new district were based on hydrologic lines and they were given the ability to budget from property taxes in their area — one mill levy, $1 tax for every $1,000 of assessed property in the district.

Natural Resources Districts perform the same functions as soil conservation districts — preventing soil erosion, improving irrigation systems, monitoring ground and water levels.

They also check streams and rivers and keep a check on their safety and quality.

Ranchers work with the NRD to conserve grasslands and try to prevent erosion and overgrazing by planting windbreaks and rotating pasture lands.

Districts provide flood control through flood management and the building of reservoirs.

These projects create wildlife habitat and recreation areas that the NRD's and the Game and Parks Commission develop and maintain together.

The NRD's are also involved in waste disposal, storm water management, land use planning and forest management.

The NRD performs valuable functions which should not be taken for granted and should be congratulated on the 50 years of service it has provided to the ag community.

It's not unusual for people to have "bad weekends" that occur at inopportune times.

But golly — some weekends you just can't win!

My problems began early on Friday morning as I strolled, instead of drove, to work at The Wayne Herald.

My car was being tuned and given an oil change at a nearby filling station. At least that's what my appointment with the car mechanics was for.

My wife and I were planning to leave later on Friday afternoon to attend the Nebraska Newspaper Convention at the Red Lion Inn in Omaha.

The telephone call came at about 10:50 a.m. Friday morning. "Alfred I got some bad news for you," said the attendant on the other end of the line. "The brakes are bad in the front, bearings are shot and the tailpipe is in-bad shape."

"You would have never got to Omaha if the car was left as it was," the attendant told me.

Knowing that the car was our only transportation to Omaha, I told him to go ahead and fix the vehicle. Later that morning he phoned again and pointed out another defect in the car.

It turned out to be the most expensive oil change and tune-up I ever had.

THE AUTO mechanics did a good job of patching the car together and we were assured it would get us to Omaha and back.

On the way to West Point to allow mother-in-law to watch our young one, round two of weekend disaster occurred. We don't know if it was an omen, but our two-year old got car sick near Beemer and he "well, you probably can guess what happened" on the front seat.

He was fine after that traumatic experience. We left him off in grand-mother's care and headed for Omaha.

We found the Red Lion Inn right away. But, not being used to the parking streets, I realized my country driving skills were no match for the smooth urban traffic flow. I circled around the block of the Red Lion so many times that people walking the block probably figured right away I was having my troubles.

Round 3 of this episode began prior to the Friday night Nebraska Press Association (NPA) Awards Banquet. We were all gathered in the social chambers when NPA's Jim Raglin gathered the group together and asked everyone to walk down to the street level of the hotel.

Someone had spotted a tornado in Omaha. My wife and I ended up in a room with a banjo player, who tried to erase some of the fears and uneasiness with some happy tunes. It got a little hot down there.

FORTY-FIVE minutes or so later, we all were allowed to go back upstairs and participate in the banquet.

No complaints about the rest of the evening at all — because we received some nice awards. We were anxious to get on with things on Saturday — I at the seminars and my wife visiting some Omaha friends.

Round 4 — Mary Ann awakened early Saturday morning feeling the effects of a flu bug. She was confined to her hotel room the entire day. More storm warnings were on for Saturday evening, the night of the fabulous Ak-Sar-Ben banquet.

A city bus took the newspaper group to Ak-Sar-Ben, but it was crowded and I stood in the aisles the entire way. The driver boasted that he knew of a shortcut to the racing track and he followed up on his word.

We were the first bus to leave and the last bus to get there. So much for shortcuts. I returned from Ak-Sar-Ben, happy but sleepy and hoping my wife was feeling better from her bout with the flu.

Round 5 began at Sunday, 2 a.m. My wife was feeling better, but I was not. The flu bug got me and hit me hard.

It was the longest ride back to Wayne on Sunday that I had ever experienced. I cringed at each bump and tried to relax my aching muscles.

It was good to be home again after all that.

This was my first Nebraska Press Convention. And I'll never forget it as long as I live.

Jobs for teenagers

by Richard Leshar

Summer is nearly upon us, and it's time to start making sure there are summer jobs for these teenagers wanting to work during their school vacations.

But teenagers with no job skills, no developed work habits and no employment record often just aren't worth the federal minimum wage of $3.35 an hour to employers. So they are not hired.

The only way to increase their chances of summer employment is for Congress to pass the Youth Employment Opportunity Wage Act which would allow employers to hire teenagers for temporary summer jobs at $2.50 per hour or, when higher, 75 percent of the minimum wage.

This law could add 400,000 new jobs for teenagers — 640,000 jobs if those states with their own minimum wage laws followed suit.

In January, unemployment among all young people aged 16 through 19 was nearly 20 percent. Among black teenagers, it was a whopping 42.7 percent. And remember, this was during the school year. Without the creation of a large number of summer jobs, it will surely be much higher once school lets out.

The Act would authorize the $2.50 sub-minimum wage from May 1 through September 30 for the next three years.

Opponents of the plan argue that if employers are able to hire teenagers at $2.50 an hour, those employers will displace more highly paid workers.

THERE ARE two reasons this won't happen.

First, what employer in his right mind would hire a trained and productive worker and hire an untrained teenager to save 85 cents an hour during the summer months? If just wouldn't pay.

Second, the Act makes the discharging, demoting or transferring of current employees to hire sub-minimum wage teenagers illegal — and that prohibition has teeth. Violators could be liable for up to a $10,000 fine, six months in jail and payment of back wages. This truly would be a high price to pay for a small savings.

The business community is not alone in backing the idea of a youth wage. Among the proponents of the bill are the Boys Clubs of America, the National Coalition of Hispanic Mental Health and Human Services Organizations, the Fraternal Order of Police and the National Conference of Black Mayors — organizations whose members know first-hand the negative impact of high youth unemployment.

Of course, what's being considered is just an experiment. Although the backers are convinced it would work, we can't be sure until we try.

Thus, another feature of the proposed legislation — it is a temporary program which expires in September 1987. It does work — and many of us are sure it will — then the "proof" would be in hand and the law could be extended. If it doesn't work, that would be the end.

But whichever way things turn out, a subminimum youth wage is worth a try. The high unemployment rate among the young people is too critical a problem to ignore. The youth differential is an area where we should pay particular attention to plan which would not only provide additional jobs for teenagers, but which would cost no taxpayer dollars.

The Youth Employment Opportunity Wage Act — will give our young people a chance to get into the job market. They will be able to gain the experience and job-related skills they need to get higher-paying jobs and become self-supporting adults.

Leshar is President of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Seat belt bill on hold

by Melvin Paul
After four hours of unproductive debate on the issue, Speaker William Nicoloff of Scottsbluff last week removed from the agenda LB 496, the mandatory seat belt bill.

The bill, which is awaiting a third and final round vote, won't be re-scheduled for at least another week, Nicoloff said. Nicoloff expressed hope that some of the differences on the issue can be attended to without continuing too much more floor time.

The bill would impose a $25 fine on drivers and front seat passengers for failure to wear seat belts.

Supporters of the bill say a mandatory seat belt law would increase their usage from about 11 percent to about 60 percent of all drivers. Statistically, such an increase in usage would save 50 lives annually in the state through decreased traffic fatalities, they say.

Chambers, views the bill as an effort by the automobile industry to save money by avoiding the increased cost of air bag installation. Other opponents view it as an unnecessary intrusion of the federal government into their private lives.

Senator Pat Morehead of Beatrice, the bill's chief sponsor, said LB 496 remains strong despite the apparent lack of progress during debate last week.

Although the bill advanced from each of the first two rounds of debate with 35 votes, the minimum requirement, Morehead said she believes she could muster the 30 votes needed to override a veto, if the need arises.

Lawmakers are under pressure from the automobile industry to pass the mandatory seat belt bill. Unless states representing two thirds of the nation's population have such laws by 1989, the U.S. Department of Transportation has indicated that it will require installation of air bags in new automobiles.

Nebraska motorists face the possibility of a 16 percent increase in their fuel taxes beginning in July as a result of actions under consideration by the 1985 Legislature.

Depending on what lawmakers finally decide, the fuel tax could increase to 17 cents a gallon during the next fiscal year. The tax has averaged 14.7 cents for the four quarters of the current fiscal year. At the moment, motorists are paying a state tax of 14.5 cents a gallon.

Lawmakers currently have under consideration three proposals that would affect the existing fuel tax rate:

A state road construction and repair budget approved by the Appropriations Committee for next year of $133.9 million. The proposed funding level, a 6.7 percent increase over the current year, would add an estimated 1.5 cents per gallon to the tax. Despite the tax increase, the state Department of Roads estimates that construction and repair would continue at approximately the same levels as the current year.

LB 112, a bill to increase the fuel tax by one cent per gallon. The bill, which was introduced by Senators Ron Whitham of Papillion and Paul Harriet of Bellevue, would provide additional funding to cities and counties for their road construction and repair. On April 4, the bill advanced from first round debate on a vote of 28-1.

LB 346, a bill to reduce the five cent a gallon exemption for gasoline to 3 cents. The additional revenue raised from reducing the exemption would allow a reduction in the tax for gasoline, diesel fuel and other types of fuels of about 0.2 cent per gallon. LB 346 is awaiting final passage by lawmakers.

State lawmakers recently voted to reconsider an earlier decision to kill a bill, permitting commodity check-off boards to spend part of their funds on legislative lobbying.

On a 25-18 vote, lawmakers revived the lobbying bill, LB 60. It now awaits first round debate. Lawmakers earlier had voted 24-22 to kill the bill, which was introduced by Senators James Pappas of North Platte and Carson Rogers of North Platte. With the 1985 session two-thirds finished, the bill isn't expected to be debated until next year.

National Prayer Day May 2

Thousands of Washington, D.C., workmen will find that their lunch packets for the next few days contain something extra: a small filler reminding them that Thursday, May 2, is the National Day of Prayer.

Travelers arriving at Las Vegas, Nev., or leaving, will see the same basic information, displayed on prominent electronic "reader boards" near the airport, with others in the downtown shopping area and near the famed Las Vegas "Strip."

In Parkersburg, W.Va., a wax of prayer-related activities will climax on May 2 itself, the thirty-third consecutive National Day of Prayer since the Eighty-second Congress made the Day an annual observance in 1952.

It would be impossible for any one person to know about all that was taking place, of course, but we are excited about the many activities we do know about — and we believe they represent only a small fraction of the whole picture," said Mrs. Bill Bright, co-chairman of the National Day of Prayer Task Force.

Herbert E. Ellingwood, chairman of the U.S. Merit Systems Protection Board, also serves as co-chairman of the independent, nonprofit group, which helps publicize the National Day of Prayer and encourages broad grassroots involvement.

The Task Force is especially urging that all Americans "Take a 12" — take at least five minutes at noon on May 2 — to express their thanks to God and pray "for His continued blessings on the nation and its leaders," Mrs. Bright said.

The 1985 presidential proclamation setting aside the National Day of Prayer was issued by President Reagan on Jan. 29. Mrs. Bright noted that her office has learned of at least 10 counter-part proclamations by state governors, with others expected, in addition to numerous local proclamations, prayer breakfasts and luncheons.

Most numerous of all the activities, though, she believes, will be those that never come to national attention, such as prayer-related worship services on May 2, and "millions of cases in which individuals or small groups simply stop for a few minutes, give thanks to God, and pray for the nation," she said.

Allen presentation

I want to congratulate the Allen seniors and their sponsor for the enjoyable presentation at the school last Monday evening. The actors and actresses really put themselves into their parts and you had the feeling the roles were written precisely for these stars.

We also admire an author who is able to compose an outlet for those teenagers' expressions. As you could see they were having a good time. Although, I do not agree with what was implied as the usual for home life in the actions of parents and young people. Granted some fathers may drink beer and get "loaded" while on a supposed hunting trip. But please young people, all homes are not that way. For a play involving young people and for presentation to young people I feel this was in very poor taste.

We turn around and make a big plea for young people to leave alcoholic drinks alone while they are celebrating after prom and graduation. What do you think they believe, what we say or what we do? This is a problem, in our whole nation, a double standard.

The implication that drinking is the usual in homes is so wrong. Well, maybe in some homes it is normal but not in all. I want you young people to know you can have a good time and have lots of friends without losing control of yourself through the crutch, alcohol.

news and notes

Life insurance comes in many shapes and sizes. Variety and flexibility are two words to describe life insurance options in today's market.

Life insurance used to come in two basic styles — term and whole. Both provide money to your dependents in case you die and your earned income stops.

Term insurance usually provides protection only, paying the face value at death. There is no savings component as part of term insurance.

Whole life may cover you for your entire life, providing you keep the policy in force. If you die, your beneficiaries get the face value of the policy. If you give up the policy, you still get the cash value which is savings you have accumulated over the years. The premiums stay at the same level, which usually means they are higher than term insurance premiums when you are old.

RECENTLY introduced life insurance policies, among them Universal Life and Adjustable Life, offer more flexibility.

Many of them, eliminating the need to choose between whole life and term protection, combine elements of both in one policy. They are tailored for each family's situation with a variety of savings and protection options over the lifetime of the policy.

Thus, as your circumstances change, you can raise or lower your premium payment period, or add to or withdraw from the cash value.

However, you still need to ask yourself the bottom life question — Does the new flexibility provide more protection at a lower cost?

Klick, Klatter meeting held

"Listening With Your Heart as Well as Your Ears" was the lesson presented by Viola Meyer at the April 9 meeting of Klick and Klatter Home Extension Club.

Fourteen members attended the April meeting in the home of Phyllis Beck, answering roll call with a favorite verse. Receiving the hostess gift was Irene Victor.

President Joyce Niemann opened the meeting with the reading of the collect in unison.

Marlan Jordan thanked members for the jonnaki she received while hospitalized.

TRINE VICTOR led in the singing of "Easter Parade," accompanied by Marlan Jordan.

Viola Meyer gave a reading, entitled "Easter," and interesting facts about April were given by Marcella Larson, citizenship leader.

President Niemann reported on the council meeting and announced that the extension club spring tea will be held April 29 at 7:30 p.m. in the Carroll Methodist Church basement.

Several clubwomen reported visiting the Health Fair at Wayne city auditorium on March 28.

A committee reported on plans for a tour.

STELLA LISKA read an article, entitled "Do You Think We Are Expecting Too Much of Our Children and Grandchildren?"

Avoiding cancer was the health topic presented by Loreene Gildersteel.

Colon cancer screening slips were distributed to each member to send for a testing kit.

Mrs. Gildersteel will be the May 14 club hostess at 7 p.m.

BEFORE you purchase one of these flexible policies, compare costs and yields. Also, consider if you would be better off to buy term insurance for the protection it offers and put the money you save on premiums into a savings account that earns money market rates.

When considering flexible policies such as Universal Life, look beyond the advertised interest rate. Ask what costs are involved, such as set-up costs.

After deducting the insurance agent's commission and these costs, what is the actual amount of money that will be earning interest? The actual net rate of return may be lower than the advertised rate.

ON THE OTHER hand, if you're not sure you have the discipline to save regularly and refrain from withdrawing the money until you no longer need life insurance protection, a flexible Universal Life or similar policy may be worth investigating.

In short, you need to analyze your situation before trying policies on for size. In addition to determining your ability to save on your own, ask other crucial questions such as: Who are my dependents? How much money will they need if I die? How long will they need it?

Once you know what you need, shopping for life insurance will be a lot easier. You will go out and buy a policy instead of letting yourself be sold one — and your policy will be more likely to fit your particular needs.

How can you guarantee that you could replace your home?
No problem.
Auto-Owners Homeowners Policy offers optional guaranteed home replacement cost coverage for homes that qualify. It's broader coverage - so you'll never run out of money for covered losses. It may be more economical than your current policy that doesn't include guaranteed home replacement. Just ask your "no problem" Auto-Owners agent to tell you how Homeowners protection can be no problem for you and your home.
