Wayne Main Street petunia planting to be held May 18

The planting of petunias along Wayne's Main Street will take place on Saturday, May 18. Briefing the volunteers and organization leaders of the project will take place at 1 p.m. at the Dairy Queen parking lot and the actual planting is scheduled to begin at 2 p.m. Community beautification project sponsors are hoping for an even greater turnout than last years.

Area organizations and individuals interested in assisting the Wayne Kivans Club in planting the petunias along Main Street on Saturday, are urged to call Sam Schroeder at Wayne County Public Power District (375-1300) or Ken Hall at Wayne Greenhouse (285-3527).

Schroeder said they will try to assign the organization members and others offering volunteer assistance to specific blocks "up and down Main Street."

Those offering spontaneous assistance will be able to fall in with the groups already on the block.

"Kivans members will be at the intersections where possible to instruct the individuals on how to plant the petunias and direct the people where to begin planting," Schroeder said.

Participants of the petunia planting are asked to bring either a planting trowel or old kitchen spoon — the equipment necessary to keep fingers from getting scraped or cut from pieces of glass that could be along Main Street," he said.

Twelve thousand petunias from Wayne Greenhouse will be implanted along both sides of Main Street. Last year, 200 workers showed up to plant an equal amount of petunias — a project that took approximately one hour and 15 minutes.

Fiscal year begins July 1

Nebraska budget preparation underway

By Melvin Paul
Talk of budget cuts and tax increases seemed to be everywhere around the Statehouse recently.

Prompted by a significant drop in April tax collections, lawmakers have been scrambling to revise downward the state budget that is in the works for the fiscal year that begins July 1.

In addition, a consensus among lawmakers has been building for an increase in the 3.5 percent state sales tax rate or in the 19 percent state income tax rate.

The Legislature's Appropriations Committee met last Thursday to trim $10 million from the $846.3 million general fund budget it had earlier recommended.

The reduced budget would represent a 1.6 percent increase over general fund appropriations for the current fiscal year.

The committee's proposed cuts were to be offered as a floor amendment when the fiscal year 1985-86 state budget was considered on the floor earlier this week.

Lawmakers began to consider tax rate increases and spending cuts when net April tax collections fell $15.9 million short of projections. Preliminary revisions in the state revenue forecasts indicate the state will collect about $33 million less during the next 14 months than had been expected.

A proposal to have University of Nebraska regents appointed rather than elected failed to advance on a legislative vote taken last week, but its chief sponsor said the proposal is far from dead.

Senator Peter Hoagland of Omaha, the sponsor, said supporters will attempt to push the proposal, Legislative Resolution 32, to the third and final round of consideration during the few remaining working days in the 1985 session. Lawmakers are expected to adjourn for the year on May 31.

If final passage appears in doubt this session, Hoagland said, L.R. 32 may be held over until the 1986 session.

The resolution, which has the support of Democratic Governor Bob Kerrey, failed to advance from second-round debate on a 23-22 vote. The resolution needed 25 votes to advance.

The vote generally followed partisan lines, with legislative Democrats voting 19-5 for advancement of the Kerrey-backed proposal. Republicans voted 5-17 against advancement.

The resolution proposes to place on the November 1986 ballot a constitutional amendment that would call for gubernatorial appointment of regents. To be placed on the ballot, a constitutional amendment needs 30 votes on its final vote.

Breaking a long tradition of promoting from within, Governor Bob Kerrey has appointed Robert L. Tagg of Lincoln as superintendent of the Nebraska State Patrol.

Tagg, 62, will replace Colonel Elmer J. Kohmetscher, 56, who will take early retirement on July 1 after a 30-year career with the patrol.

Tagg, a former FBI agent and former executive director of the Nebraska Sheriffs and Peace Officers Association, is the director of the Nebraska Commission of Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice.

In making the announcement last week at a Capitol press conference, Kerrey said Tagg will retain dual responsibilities as patrol superintendent and crime commission director. Both positions are gubernatorial appointments under state law.

Tagg currently earns $28,000 a year, and with his new responsibilities, he'll be given the equivalent of Kohmetscher's $40,000 annual salary, Kerrey said. Under state law, Tagg will assume the rank of colonel when he takes over as superintendent.

Since its creation by the Legislature in 1977, no outsider has been appointed as superintendent. All others have risen through the ranks.

Of his departure from tradition, Kerrey said: "I'm not going to have time to do an in-depth search for a replacement. I'm very lucky to have Bob Tagg around."

Elliott moves on

The recent announcement of Wayne State College President Ed Elliott leaving to become president of Central Missouri State University in Warrensburg, Missouri leaves our local college in an uncomfortable position.

Since becoming president of Wayne State College, Nebraska's fifth largest four-year college saw its enrollment increase every year. Last fall's enrollment was the largest in school history outside of 1967-70. The number of first-time, full-time students was up 22 percent in the last two years in a time when most schools are seeing a decline in that category.

Numerous projects were started and completed during his time as president, including the first Achievement Day which honored Wayne State's first honorary doctor's degree recipient. The alumni association was revived and now has active, organized chapters for six states.

Fund raising for the Wayne State Foundation has increased dramatically. Elliott was responsible for the Presidents Society, an organization for high-level giving to the foundation. To date, the President's Society has over 90 members.

What has been a project from the start for Elliott will now continue without him.

Just this spring, Elliott and his administrative staff cleared the way for Wayne State College to build a $3.14 million addition onto the college's physical education complex — a project now referred to as the Rice-Carlson Addition.

And this fall, Wayne State has plans to celebrate the 75th year of operation of the college.

Because he has seen the groundwork completed on both the recreation building addition and scheduling of anniversary activities, he will likely, and deservedly, leave the campus with a sense of accomplishment.

No, the college will not crumble. Other presidents have left, each with their own list of accomplishments. Elliott came through the ranks of Wayne State College 14 years ago as assistant professor of health and physical education. Two years later he was named dean of special studies and a full professor in the department of Health, Physical Education and Recreation.

He was vice president for academic affairs from 1975-1980 and vice president of the college (responsible for day to day operations from 1980-1982). He was selected as president of the college in 1982.

His depth of knowledge and experience, particularly of the Wayne State College education, arts and athletic departments, has been instrumental in his promoting and governing of the institution and has helped him to achieve many of his accomplishments.

His track record speaks for itself. Wayne State College has lost a good, active president and good promoter within the Wayne community.

We wish him well in his new position with Central Missouri State University.

Crisis in agriculture

National policies a threat to the family farm

by Cyril (Cy) Carpenter
The economic crisis in rural America is not just painful, it is lethal.

Farm debt as of January 1985 stands at approximately $213 billion. Interest payments on this massive debt have exceeded net farm income for the last three years. Recent surveys show that of those farmers grossing between $40,000 and $200,000 in sales per year (typically family-owned and operated farms and ranches), one-third have debt-to-asset ratios of between 10 and 40 percent, which suggests financial stress. Of those farmers, 31 percent have debt-to-asset ratios above 40 percent, which, according to the Federal Reserve, places them in the financial "danger zone."

There are currently about 2.4 million farms in the United States, the vast majority of which are family-owned and operated units. These are the farmers and ranchers who are being squeezed the hardest in this economic crisis. If immediate action is not taken, it is estimated that 200,000 of these farmers will be forced out of business through liquidations or foreclosures this year alone.

What can be done to stop this devastation of rural America? The answer is two-fold. In the long run, the only way to assure that our agricultural system continues is to be sure that farmers and ranchers are paid fairly for what they produce. The average cost of producing a bushel of wheat in the United States is more than $6 per bushel; today's farmer receives about $3.35 per bushel for that wheat. If the farmer received the cost of production on that bushel of wheat, the cost of a loaf of bread should only increase 4 to 5 cents.

We are faced with an emergency today, one that has to be addressed in the short term. We must take action within the next 60 to 90 days if we are to keep a majority of those 200,000 farmers who face liquidation in business. This is the critical time for farmers to receive funding for their 1985 crops — they must have access to adequate credit now to continue producing.

poses a six-point plan that will underpin our producers and also be cost effective.

• The President should declare immediately an economic emergency in rural America.

• The President should direct all federal agencies to implement a 120-day moratorium on all federal foreclosures and forced liquidations.

• All federal lending agencies serving agriculture and small businesses to institute an interest buy-down on troubled loans.

• Emergency operating loans from both the Farmers Home Administration and the Small Business Administration should be made available for operating loans to allow farmers to put in their crops this year.

• Finally, the President should encourage private lenders and the Farm Credit System to implement restructuring programs, including offering federal loan guarantees to those lenders who participate.

These may sound like radical or drastic steps to some, but the federal government in recent years has used the same measures to insure the solvency of banks, cities, auto manufacturers, and railroads. Should it not have the same responsibility to America's basic industry, the source of food and fiber?

The disaster in the farm economy will not be alleviated solely by credit measures. The fundamental problem is the lack of fair prices for farm commodities. Without improved returns on farm marketings, credit steps will only prolong the agony. Fair policies would be an affirmation of federal responsibility to assure that Americans continue to enjoy an abundant, reasonably priced supply of food and fiber.

Cyril (Cy) Carpenter is President of the National Farmers Union representing more than 300,000 families in 24 states.

Poppy day

In May we observe Memorial Day. In the American Legion Auxiliary we also observe Poppy Day in May.

Poppy Day is a memorial to American war dead and a tribute to disabled servicemen originated after World War I. Soldiers returning from Europe in 1918 were familiar with the wild poppies which bloomed in the battlefields of France and Flanders. The American Legion Auxiliary adopted the poppy as its memorial flower at the organization's first convention in Kansas City in 1921. Wearing a poppy on Poppy Day will honor the more than a million wounded during both World Wars, the Korean War, and the Vietnam War.

These red crepe paper poppies are handmade by disabled veterans in government hospitals and special convalescent workshops maintained by the Auxiliary. Making these poppies aids the veteran both financially and psychologically. They are paid for the work they do and the job itself is a relief from long hours spent in a hospital.

Poppy Day is usually held the week preceding Memorial Day. So when you are asked to wear a poppy, wear it proudly. All contributions raised on this day go for rehabilitation of the veterans and child welfare work.

Mayor proclaims today as Poppy Day in Wayne

Mayor Wayne Marsh this week proclaimed today (Thursday) as American Legion Auxiliary Poppy Day in Wayne.

Members of the auxiliary will be selling the red crepe paper poppies in downtown Wayne throughout the day.

THE POPPIES are handmade in poppy shops run by auxiliary volunteers. In these shops, disabled and hospitalized veterans make the flowers by hand as part of a physical and psychological therapy program.

The poppies are purchased from the shop by the auxiliary and offered to the public for a contribution.

POPPY CHAIRMAN Helen Siefken said Poppy Day is held each year as a reminder of America's war dead.

Poppy Day is a tradition which began in the years following World War I. Veterans of the war remembered the wild poppies which lined the devastated battlefields of France and Flanders.

Four Wayne seventh graders take part in Duke University Talent Identification Program

Four students of Wayne Middle School took part in a Duke University Talent Identification Program earlier this year which seeks to identify gifted seventh graders.

The Wayne seventh graders, including Eric Rasmussen, Martin Rump, Ryan Shaw and Sarah Glocksmann, were tested last January in Norfolk.

Cyndi Swarts, language arts instructor at Wayne Middle School, said Rasmussen was among top scorers from across the nation and was invited to attend a grand recognition ceremony on May 18 at Duke University.

Both Rasmussen and Rump also received word that they will be honored during a state recognition ceremony on June 6 in Omaha.

SWARTS SAID the Duke University Talent Identification Program has found that the SAT (Scholastic Aptitude Test) has validity in predicting scholastic achievement for very gifted seventh graders.

She added that the SAT has two special virtues for the talent search in that it is difficult enough to differentiate among the abilities of the brightest junior high students, and it provides separate information about mathematical and verbal abilities, thus allowing more intelligent educational planning.

The team, which finished fifth in the NAIA national event in 1984, received word Monday that they hadn't been selected for one of the seven at-large bids in the national field.

Wildcats end year at district tourney in loss to Kearney

The 1985 baseball season came to an end for the Wayne State College Wildcats over the past weekend after a loss in the championship round of the NAIA District 11 tournament to Kearney State College.

WSC split in their four games at the annual district tournament, winning a pair over Bellevue College and falling in two games to the Antelopes in the two day event in Kearney.

Second-year Coach Lenny Klaver's Cats posted a 26-25 record during the year, a mark just two wins shy of a school record for most wins in a season.

IN THE TOURNEY, Wayne State rallied from an 8-2 deficit in the closing innings of their opening game with Bellevue College on Thursday to take a 10-9 decision. After the Bruins ran up eight runs in the opening three innings, Wayne State came back with strong hitting power to score four runs in the fourth inning and go on top 9-8 with two runs in the seventh.

After increasing the lead to 10-8 in the bottom of the eighth, Bellevue threatened with a lone run in the top of the ninth before the Wayne defense shut them down.

The Cats failed 17 hits in the game, to none for Bellevue College, led by senior Kurt Brosamel with a three for five performance at the plate.

Pitcher Kevin Hoffart came in after two innings in relief and gave up just one run and two hits while striking out seven batters.

The tables were turned on Kearney State in their second-round game, as they watched a 10 run lead slip through their hands enroute to a 16-15 loss to Kearney State.

Trailing 15-5 after seven innings, the Antelopes capitalized on a pair of WSC errors to open the floodgates and score eight runs in the bottom of the eighth to jump back into the ball game 15-13. KSC added two runs in the ninth to tie the game 15-15 and send it into extra innings before logging a single run in the bottom of the tenth for the win.

Jeff Strain took the loss on the mound for the Wildcats.

THE CATS THEN had to face Bellevue College a second time for the chance to advance to the finals and logged a high-scoring 17-14 win on Friday.

Wayne State needed a pair of wins over Kearney State to claim the district crown in the double-elimination tourney, but the Antelopes came up with an 11-3 win in the opening game to clinch the title and the right to go on to Area III play this month. Kearney recorded seven runs before WSC got on the board with a score in the top of the sixth inning, and added four more in the bottom of the same inning to jump to a 10 run lead and ease to the 11-3 victory.

Runs for WSC came on a two RBI homerun by Pete Saccone, and a three for four hitting streak by Kurt Brosamel with one RBI.

"We hit the ball well," said Coach Klaver. "Coming up with 59 hits in four games...we had the power to win. Our pitching depth had been a question for us following the CSIC conference tournament, and it may have fallen off a little at the end of district," he added.

THE WAYNE STATE team was on a record-setting binge all season long, breaking and establishing 16 new school records on their way to a 26-25 mark.

The squad showed a strong amount of power and supported a team batting average of .354. The weather was also a factor in the season, as the good conditions allowed the 1985 Wildcats to play more games in the season than any other WSC team.

The record set included:

Most RBIs — Gregg Cruickshank, 80.
Most hits — Gregg Cruickshank, 80.
Most at bats — Gregg Cruickshank, 186.
Most runs scored — Jeff Strain, 64.
Most stolen bases — Dale Clayton, 31.
Most doubles — Jeff Scharf, 17.
Most triples — Pete Saccone, 9.
Most walks — Jeff Strain and Pete Miller, tied at 55 each.
Most errors — Dale Clayton, 44.
Most innings pitched — Jeff Rohrock, 87.1.
Most walks allowed — Mark Priegnitz, 68.
Most hits allowed — Jeff Rohrock, 114.

Nuclear weapons build-up concerns local peace chapter

Members of the Wayne Chapter of Nebraskans for Peace met Tuesday to plan for the coming year and to exchange ideas with Jose Soler, Field Development Co-ordinator for Clergy and Laity Concerned, Soler was in Wayne as part of a midwestern trip involving visits with several chapters of NFP, which is a chapter of CALC.

Among the issues the group discussed were the current efforts to end Apartheid, the state-sanctioned system of racial segregation in South Africa and the continued attempt to reverse the nuclear arms race, especially focusing on the development of the "Star Wars" program.

Members of the local chapter felt that the issue most affecting people's lives in the Northeast Nebraska area was the farm crisis, but made many issues concerning CALC and the members of rural communities, in South Africa, for example, part of the government's practice for maintaining "Apartheid" involves forcible relocation of Blacks from productive farms to "homelands" — arid, unproductive areas where they are not able to work as farmers. The relation between the arms race and the farm crisis was also stressed, as members pointed out the expanding portion of our national budget going to weapons production instead of needed relief and loan programs.

AFTER THE meeting, Soler said in an interview that he was especially concerned with recent developments in the Caribbean. According to evidence presented by the Institute for Policy Studies in Washington, D.C., there is reason to suspect that the U.S. is building up an arsenal of nuclear weapons, especially submarine-borne, under water, between Puerto Rico and La Jolla, a major oil route. Groups monitoring this evidence have cited the presence of nuclear weapons-carrying submarines at the Roosevelt Roads Naval Station and Orion 3 planes carrying nuclear bombs.

Soler, a native of Puerto Rico, pointed out that this is a direct violation of the Treaty of Tlatelolco, which the U.S., Canada, and most Latin American countries signed in 1967, and which made Latin America a nuclear free zone.

Soler urged all those concerned about the possible presence of nuclear weapons in the Western Hemisphere, and about possible U.S. violations of this treaty, to contact their congressional representatives, and urge them to look into the matter. He also pointed out that nuclear weapons in the Caribbean could escalate the danger of major conflict in Central America, which is already troubled by armed conflict.

THINGS JANICE ELLIS CAN'T KEEP QUIET ABOUT

The fast buck versus the slow dough.

Quoting pie-in-the-sky returns is a game Northwestern Mutual Life doesn't play. When an insurance company starts projecting hot figures, look at its track record; if you look at ours, you'll see that Northwestern Mutual has increased its dividend scale for the twenty-fifth year since 1952. Imagine — actually lowering the cost of our life insurance.

How can we do it? With a portfolio which includes high quality, high yield inflation sensitive investments that work better for you over the long haul. It's a tough act to follow — that keeps getting tougher.

A World of Fun for all

WAYNE-CARROLL High School's choir was invited to participate in the "Festival of Choirs" last weekend at Worlds of Fun in Kansas City. At far left is one of the thrilling rides at the amusement park. To the right is Val Stalling on the carousel.

DALE HANSEN, Vini Johar, Julie Metfeer, Ben Whisenhunt and Lori Anderson ride the rapids.

PRIOR TO THEIR performance, the choir was drenched by heavy rain and 70 mph wind. The rain ponchos certainly came in handy, although many viewers had thought UN-L choir was going to be performing.

Down the horse path

MEL LARSEN of Wakefield, with his splendid team of horses, gave free wagon rides to those attending the Pet Show on Saturday at the Wayne Veterinary Clinic east of Wayne.

Infections reported in other countries

Swine diseases affect humans, too

The frequent appearance in Nebraska of a swine disease that can be transmitted to humans is reason for caution and prompt action by producers, according to a University of Nebraska-Lincoln veterinarian.

Dr. Denis Erickson said streptococcus suis is now one of the most common diseases found in pigs submitted for analysis at the UNL Veterinary Diagnostic Center. The bacterial infection is causing economic losses in Nebraska's swine industry, Erickson said, but so far no human infections have been reported in the state.

The bacterial infection attacks pigs from a few days to several months old, causing such diseases as brain, lung and joint infections. Symptoms of the disease, shaking and paddling, can be confused with other infections like pseudorabies, Erickson stressed the importance of calling veterinarians and veterinary diagnostic services when symptoms appear.

"If the swine producer gets on top of it in a hurry, there's very good chance of saving most of the swine population," he said. "The disease is treated with antibiotics, but can be a stubborn problem in large herds."

THE "EXACT" COURSE of the disease in young swine is not well understood, he said, but it probably enters the swine's respiratory system through the mouth or snout. Because of this, housing conditions such as poor air flow and over-crowding can set the stage for streptococcus suis infection.

"The disease is a relative newcomer in North America," he said. "There have been indications of it since the late 1960s, but only in the last five years have we seen substantial numbers of the infection in the pig population."

No cases of human infection of the disease, which manifests itself as meningitis, have been reported in the United States yet, he said. However, human infections have been reported in European countries and Canada, some resulting in death.

"I have little doubt the potential is there for human infection," Erickson said. Streptococcus suis is one of several zoonotic diseases that can be transmitted to humans from animals, he said.

Poor hygiene when working with swine is likely the reason for most infections of humans with streptococcus suis, he said. Those who have contracted the bacteria are people in close to direct contact with pigs — producers, veterinarians or even butchers.

To avoid any such problems, the veterinarian said use of common sense — cleaning up after you, keeping open wounds covered — is important in working with swine, whether streptococcus suis is present or not.

Safe environment stops lead poisoning

this and that

wayne county extension agent
DEN C. SPEARS

Lead poisoning is not uncommon among Nebraska animals and can best be prevented by providing a safe environment, according to University of Nebraska-Lincoln veterinarians Dr. Norman Schneider and Dr. Duane Rice.

Increase in lead toxicosis in cattle is seen each spring when the animals, curious about objects in their environments, are turned out to pastures containing dump sites, the veterinarians said. Agricultural waste unobserved or buried for many years can be uncovered in the spring by the lack of fall-vegetation, the freeze-thaw action on soil or heavy rainfall.

Soil and forages in Nebraska only infrequently contain excessive lead content. Animals usually become exposed to lead by eating other things. The veterinarians urged animal owners to check their farms and premises and remove potential lead sources, then evaluate management practices to minimize lead use around animal operations in the future.

Lead sources include discarded vehicle storage batteries and cables, old painted surfaces and glazing compounds, wheel balance and fishing weights, old water pipes, certain lubricants, used crankcase oil, workshop sweepings, and old insecticides such as lead arsenate. Containers that have held such substances also are potential sources of lead if not disposed of properly. Even "no-lead" paint can contain up to 1 percent lead, the veterinarians said.

CATTLE ARE most frequently poisoned from chewing on lead grids from vehicle batteries and drinking used motor oil. Dogs, usually puppies, are especially vulnerable because of their chewing habits. Use of lead in farm shop welding or body repair operations also could result in excessive lead exposure in dogs that sleep or eat in contaminated environments. Swine seem to be remarkably resistant to lead poisoning, the veterinarians said, and probably carry a larger body burden of lead without exhibiting signs of toxicity.

Poisoning may develop after a single acute exposure to a large amount of lead, or after days or weeks of repeated smaller amounts. Signs of lead poisoning may include both neurological and digestive disturbances. Blindness, depression and convulsions commonly are seen in lead-poisoned calves. "Lead colic" also may occur.

A diagnosis cannot be made on clinical signs alone, and high blood lead concentrations can be present without clinical signs. Lead analyses in blood, urine or tissues also are necessary to support a diagnosis. The veterinarians said specimens may be forwarded to the UNL Veterinary Diagnostic Center for analysis, evaluation and interpretation.

Treatment of lead poisoning in surviving animals first involves removing animals from the source. Prompt consultation with your local veterinarian is important. In some cases, the removal of ingested lead helps prevent further lead absorption. Thiamine (vitamin B-1) and supportive fluid therapy may also be indicated. The Nebraska Veterinary Medical Association has stocked antibiotic depots in the Lincoln and North Platte diagnostic laboratories for emergency chelation therapy involving multiple toxicoses or herd exposure.

Local veterinary consultation can provide more information on this subject, the UNL veterinarians advised.

Blight of peonies

Bofrytis blight is the most serious disease of peonies in Nebraska. The symptoms occur on the young leaf bases in the spring when the shoots are about one foot long. The leafy shoots will suddenly and fall over. A brownish black rot can be seen at the base of the leaves and stem.

Just above ground level the stalk will be covered with a gray mold which contains many fungus spores. These spores are spread by wind and insects to leaf and bud scales to cause leaf blight and bud rot.

Use fungicides to control Bofrytis blight of peonies. Maneb, ferbam, or Bordeaux mixture are recommended. A fungicide should be applied several times in the spring, beginning when the young tips break the ground. Drench the soil surrounding the plant with the spray. In addition to thoroughly covering the plant.

Fertilize peonies when flower buds are 1/4 - 1/2 inch diameter.

Black spot of roses
Roses require special care throughout the growing season. This care should include fungicidal control of Black Spot, a common destructive disease on roses grown in Nebraska.

Black Spot is caused by fungus which remains alive throughout the winter in partially decayed plant residue. As spring temperature becomes warmer, the fungus produces spores which will infect this year's foliage.

This disease continues to develop throughout the summer. Symptoms appear as black spots which have a "feathery" type margin. These lesions may vary in size from small dots to spots one-half inch in diameter. The infected leaves tend to turn yellow and drop, often causing extensive defoliation. When this occurs, the plants are weakened and become subject to winter injury and other diseases. Defoliated plants will also produce fewer blossoms the following year.

To prevent an outbreak of black spot, control should begin in the fall. The removal of leaves and refuse surrounding the plant will help to decrease disease potential.

Phallan or Benlate are the preferred fungicides for black spot control because they also control powdery mildew. Daconil 2787, Dyrone, or products containing Maneb, Zineb or Captan also give good control of black spot but not mildew.

Field Scout Training at Northeast Center
Field scouting is becoming a standard management practice in Nebraska. Proper field scouting can provide farmers with important information concerning pest present in the field, pest populations, and proper timing of pesticide application, if necessary.

The University of Nebraska Integrated Pest Management (IPM) staff will be conducting a Field Scout Training Session at the Northeast Research and Extension Center, one mile east of Concord, on Wednesday, May 22. The session will begin at 8:45 a.m. and last until 3:15 p.m. Emphasis will be on the identification and biology of weed, insect and disease pests of corn, soybean and alfalfa. Control measures will not be emphasized but will be discussed.

Farmers, agribusiness fieldmen, summer field scouts, and any other interested persons are invited to attend. There will be no registration fee, and it is suggested that you bring a sack lunch. A comprehensive scout manual will be available for purchase at $15 each for those interested.

In May, life on the farm gets crazy. There are so many things to do! Somehow, in the farmer's head is stored all kinds of information: what variety of corn will go in which field, what size planter plates it takes, and which tractor will pull which piece of equipment I hear from discussing the 706, the 1046 and the 656. When they say tractor numbers, farmers see horse power in their mind's eyes. I find it totally confusing.

I do know that the big tractor is in the shop and needs a major overhaul, which is expensive and comes at a crucial time. And, while farmers are seeing "the big picture" in their minds, they are taking care of details like making sure the sick calf in the barn has nursed. Jon and his Dad were there with a nipple bottle at midnight the other night.

Of all times, Marvin has wrenched a knee, torn some ligaments, and ended up in a leg cast. After a week of sitting around, very difficult for a farmer in May, he showed up for work last Monday. I was touched by his sense of responsibility and loyalty, and my heart goes out to him as he hobbles around. Says the darned thing gets heavy by 5 p.m. I can imagine! But every available hand is needed in May. And though some have their corn planted, others remember that it was after May 22nd when it went in the ground last year, and there were some record yields.

IN THE MIDST of all the hustle and bustle, there are graduations taking place. We had kind of an important one yesterday. Sue graduated from college.

We started the day with breakfast at a farm home near Roca. The Luelth's are old friends from Waco and are currently the owners of Arby's restaurants in Lincoln. They have helped the finances of many young people with York County ties with part-time jobs during college years.

Mutual friends, the Ellison's from Rising City, had a son in the graduating class at UNL on Saturday. So the two graduates were honored with breakfast, and their parents had a fun bag-test. A special way to start the day.

The weather was absolutely gorgeous. Sue deserved a nice day. It snowed for confirmation, and poured rain for high school graduation.

We drove to First Methodist Church across from Wesleyan's campus for a bacchanalante. As the honorees in black gowns and mortar boards processed in to the congregation, singing "O God, Our Help in Ages Past," I said to my mom, "I'm going to bawl!" And I did.

Members of the senior class council lead us in liturgy and prayers, and the Rev. Methodist bishop gave the class a challenge to live a life of service to others — upon which real happiness depends.

The class sponsor reminded them that acts for character, not vice versa, and that since "You are what you habitually do. It matters what you do."

Governor Kerey was the commencement speaker. He really is a handsome, polished politician, very gracious at the reception following. But our graduate admits to feeling sleepy and being glad when the ceremony was over.

Wayne County Old Settlers

The Roaring Twenties and Dirty Thirties
The signing of the Armistice agreement ending World War I marked the beginning of 10 riotous years known as the Roaring Twenties. A new prosperity swept the nation and the pride of having participated in and helping win the war to end all wars threw the American people into high gear.
The Old Settlers Picnic of 1919, going along with the times, was a four day celebration with the middle two days set aside as a home-coming festival for Wayne County's doughboys. The Walter Savidge Amusement Co. provided the entertainment and village residents were asked to use as little electricity as possible between the hours of 8 to 11 p.m. The attraction had to have sufficient lighting and the village power plant couldn't handle the additional load. This is one of the first mentions of a traveling show at the picnic.
During this time Old Settlers was always held in the last two weeks of August — a time when the farmer had harvested his 33 bushel per acre oats and prior to picking his 39 bushel per acre corn. The change of location of the annual celebration from Wayne to Winslow led to increased attendance since the latter town was more centrally located in the county. The advent of the automobile made travel easier but the majority of the celebrants still arrived by horse, wagon or rail.
Since the area population was predominately rural with two farmers for every city slicker, owning horses and wagons made more sense than buying a new Model T which couldn't pull a gang plow over the average 223 acre farm of the time.
People in record numbers were attending the festival with a reported crowd of around 4000 in 1925 with 1000 fans watching the baseball game. The fun living twenties had the American people in a state of euphoria with no end to the good times in sight. Wayne County's most pessimistic citizens would not have believed that the Dirty Thirties were hovering overhead like an ominous cloud heralding a bleak future.
The Stock Market crash leading into the thirties and shortening up many a bank account didn't seem to lower attendance at the picnic but ready cash was hard to come by. With corn at 10 cents a bushel and coal at $12 a ton many farmers turned to burning corn for fuel. Workers on the new road from Pierce to Wayne and connecting Carroll in 1933 were earning 40 cents an hour for a 30 hour week and didn't have much left over to waste on the kids at the carnival.
A continuance of entertainment of the homemade variety was predominant. In 1932 Dr. B.M. McIntyre won first prize in the Whisker Club contest by sporting a bushy beard with full blown sideburns while dressed in a high silk hat and swallowtail coat. Mrs. Emma Agler, 80, was the oldest Wayne County Settler and lived 10 more years, passing away in 1942.

Girl Scout Troop 179 met May 9 at the firehall with nine members and leader Peg Eckert present.
The girls went out to their leaders house to plant trees for a step to a badge.
Upon arriving, the girls were to have a sampling of Chinese food for a step toward a different badge.
The girls planted five Ponderosa pine trees at the Stanley Soden farm. These trees were obtained from the Nebraska Games and Park Commission.
Each scout was given a tree to plant at their home and care for it in working toward another badge.
On May 18, the scouts will meet at the St. Paul Lutheran Church parking lot at 1 p.m. for a bicycle safety course given by a Wayne County Deputy.
The next meeting will be held today (Thursday) after school at the firehall.

Give thy thoughts no tongue,
Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar.
The friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,
Grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel;
Beware of entrance to a quarrel, but being in,
Bear't that the opposed may beware of thee.
Give every man thine ear, but few thy voice;
Take each man's censure, but reserve thy judgement.
This above all, — to thine own self be true;
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man.

*Polonius Advice to Laertes —
Hamlet, Act I, Sc. II
William Shakespeare*

Dear Senior:

The words above are five hundred years old; they still apply today; they also illustrate the fact that advice is cheap, and has always been here. In fact, you have already had enough advice to fill volumes; but, only the smallest part of your life is over; history will judge you on what happens from this day on.

Remember that your parents love you; they love you so very much. They cried when you suffered the outrageous pains of childhood; they laughed when you squealed with delight at being young. They applauded your success, and minimized your less successful moments. They still do: they always will. And, they ask nothing; they can only pray that you will love them in return.

Find out who you are: few of you know, really. If it takes some time, take it — you have a ton of it to spare! Enjoy life, as it is yours to enjoy. "Observe everything closely once" (Lord Byron). "Spend a few bucks; you have the rest of your life to save money" (Heckathorn). Everything in this world is either illegal, immoral, or fattening anyway, so enjoy yourselves and forget it.

Do not poison your body with tobacco or drugs: you are beautiful enough without it. If you want a high, run a mile, date a pretty girl (or handsome boy), take a kid fishing, tell your Mom you love her, give your Dad a hug (Fathers like hugs too); and, tell both of them that you are sorry that you were such a jackass when you were growing up! No, kids, you don't need that junk; my generation was stupid, don't have history say the same about you.

Please do not kill yourself in an automobile; nothing is as precious and as easily squandered as life. Start right now! This is graduation season, and you will have your parties; but keep them close to home and be careful! I don't want you dead! I love you too much. I've buried too many kids already, and there just aren't enough tears to ever save the pain. Give us the greatest thing you have — your life; it's really all we ever wanted.

And, be useful — above all, be useful. Faust, a mythological German magician created by Goethe, sold his soul to the devil for one moment of contentment; he then found said moment in the selfless act of helping others. I have a friend of whom it is often said, "When you are in trouble or need help, he will be there." No greater thing can be said of anyone. George Forman, the great heavy-weight fighter in a conversation with Muhammad Ali stated "Jesus doesn't want your money, he wants you!" How true — how true. Give of yourself, and your name will top the list.

God bless you all. And welcome to the world.
