Engineers select new well field site for Wayne

by Chuck Hackenmiller

Consulting engineers, who say that eight years from now Wayne will be experiencing a water shortage, have recommended a well field north of the city limits as an additional water supply source.

John Franklin, a professional engineer from Howard R. Green Company of Spirit Lake, said Tuesday evening the recommended site is in the vicinity of Section 11 and 12 in Wayne County's Wilbur Township. Estimated costs, he said, in constructing a water transmission main from the proposed well field to Wayne and the development of the well field is $2.1 million, according to Franklin.

Franklin told the city council the first study by Howard Green Company of Wayne's water supply began 15 months ago — to evaluate the current well fields. "It was determined then that in eight years Wayne could be experiencing a water shortage," he said.

The basic reason for this statement, he said, was that the water table serving Wayne during the last 50 years has dropped 38 feet. "And in the long run, it will continue to drop." Wayne draws its entire municipal water supply from five wells, in a small aquifer under the northern and eastern fringe of the community.

Despite having a high degree of alkalinity and hardness, four of the five current city wells have good quality water. The fifth well contains manganese.

IRRIGATION WELLS tapping the aquifer in the last few years has become a major concern to city officials, which is why consulting engineers were commissioned to find out where else the city could get its water.

A study by the consulting engineers was conducted on two areas outside the city — the east half of Wilbur Township and the central and southwest area of Hunter Township.

"We collected data on existing wells in both those areas — both domestic and irrigation wells," Franklin said. Next, the company verified the location of sand and gravel deposits between the wells. They were also able to determine the thickness of the sand and gravel.

In Wilbur Township, the thickness of the sand and gravel deposits ranged from 40 to 120 feet or more. Thickness of the deposits in Hunter Township were from 20 to 60 feet.

Water quality evaluations were completed on 24 wells. "Pooling all areas of the study together and looking at the various areas, the only area not a serious problem (for the proposed well field) is the north one-half of Wilbur Township. It has the sand and gravel thickness and the water quality similar to what Wayne has now," Franklin said.

Compared to Wayne's present water source, the four significant parameters in the water quality evaluation conducted in the proposed well field sites — manganese, nitrate, iron and total hardness — were about the same or lower in amounts, he said.

THE CONSULTING engineers recommended the new well field be located along the south side of Sections 11 and 12 of Wilbur Township for the following reasons:

- Capacities of wells in Wilbur Township were generally higher than those found in Hunter Township.
- The alluvial sand and gravel deposits (deposit of sand or gravel formed by flowing water) in the north one-half of Wilbur Township are considerably larger and deeper than that found in Hunter Township. This indicates the Wilbur Township location is able to support more large capacity wells than in other areas studied.
- The best quality water in the study area is found in the northeast quarter of Wilbur Township.
- The aquifer is 120 feet thick in one area of Wilbur Township and the quality of the sand and gravel is such that the site would be excellent for a high capacity well.

"A pipeline of about six miles length would be needed to connect your (the city of Wayne) distribution system to the proposed well field," he said.

The pipeline would be constructed in county road right-of-way and in Highway 15 right-of-way from the well field to the city of Wayne.

WELL WITHIN the Wilbur Township proposed well field could have the capacity of producing "in the neighborhood of 1,000 gallons per minute or more," Franklin added.

It was previously assumed that five wells, pumping out 500 gallons of water per minute, would be required in supplementing Wayne's current water distribution. However, those figures have been altered since the discovery of the recommended site in Wilbur Township, Franklin mentioned.

"We now recommend three wells that pump 1,000 gallons per minute each. After the first well is dug, that amount may be refined even further, or it could be increased. If all depends on the pumping test conducted on the first well," he said.

The estimated cost of the development of a complete well field, as a single project rather than in phases, would be $2.1 million and would include the following: 12,000 linear feet of 12-inch water main ($75,000); 32,000 linear feet of 36-inch water main ($960,000); seven 81/2" release valves ($10,500); three wells, average depth of 350 feet at 1,000 gallons per minute ($480,000); $100,000 in miscellaneous expenses; contingencies, $163,000; legal and administrative, $63,000; land and easements, $7,500; engineering, $147,600; and construction supervision and staking, $120,900.

The cost estimates were prepared using March, 1985 costs, according to Franklin.

ALONG WITH the recommendation for the proposed well field site, the Howard Green Company officials also recommended a time table to follow in development of the site.

"This year the city council and city staff should work in providing input toward obtaining options on the future well site. "The design of the well field cannot be started until it is known where it is going to be," said Franklin.

It is recommended that the first of the three wells be constructed in 1986, the second in 1990, and the third in 1992. "We're looking at three to four years before the first water from the proposed well field comes into town," mentioned Franklin.

He also mentioned to the city council during Tuesday's regular council meeting that because of the low water pressure which the city is currently experiencing, there is a need for a new elevated water tower. "With the advent of additional industry (in Wayne) you should be considering it," he said.

At Tuesday evening, the city council revised an original ordinance that passed in November, 1984, on the regulation and registration of water wells.

Highlighting the less restrictive revisions, according to city attorney Ken Swartz, is that all wells have to be registered and permit applications must be filed. However, individuals with new wells pumping less than 100 gallons per minute would not be required to pay a permit application fee.

Any new well that pumps over 100 gallons per minute will be subject to a public hearing. Any new wells less than 100 gallons per minute may or may not need a public hearing, depending on the circumstances.

Also, the revised ordinance states that no new wells will be constructed within the Wayne city limits and that non-conforming wells (or those operating presently in the city) have until 1995 to be terminated and abandoned.

Osten resigns as Herald sports editor

Jackie Osten has resigned as sports editor of The Wayne Herald to become a secretary in the student activities office at Wayne State College. She begins her secretarial duties on June 3.

Jackie started as interim assistant editor on May 1, 1984. She was named Wayne Herald sports editor in July of 1984.

She is a graduate of Wayne State College with a bachelor of science degree in broadcast communications and journalism, with a master's degree in physical education.

"The sports editor position is a demanding job, covering Wayne, Wilsdale, Wakefield, Allen and Laurel high school sports and other sporting events in the communities. It requires a sense of dedication and persistence, plus writing and photography skills," said Chuck Hackenmiller, managing editor.

"Jackie possessed all these qualities and her talents will be missed," he added.

Interviewing is now being conducted to fill the sports editor vacancy. Because of the present shortage in staff members, we ask all coaches to bring in their game stories and statistics promptly.

Chicken parade theme set

The fifth annual Chicken Show Parade, this year featuring the theme: "The 101 Year Old Chicken" is set to hatch at 11 a.m. the morning of July 13.

Many parade features are already booked including a brood of "Clowns of America" from the Greater Kansas City area.

The Wayne Eagles Auxiliary, having flown the parade in past years, will again coordinate the event.

Many inquiries concerning the Chicken Show are being received, and the Chicken Show committee anticipates more visitors this year than ever before.

Contact Myler Barghoiz, 375-3246, to enter the parade, or to learn her of "wing ding" ideas. Local entries are needed to enhance the event. Prizes will be given in several categories according to the "101 Year Old Chicken" theme.

Wacker gains 'Hats' Award

Herman W. "Bud" Wacker, electric superintendent of Wayne Municipal Light and Power Company (at right), received the American Public Power Association's Seven Hats Award for outstanding electric utility management. The award was presented May 8 at the association's national conference in Los Angeles.

American Public Power Association's (APPA) presents the Seven Hats Award to exceptional managers or superintendents of member utilities that serve 2,500 or fewer households and businesses.

As managers of small utilities, the award recipients typically wear "seven hats" in the areas of: planning and design, administration, public relations, field supervision, accounting, personnel or employee relations and community leadership.

Wacker has been with the Wayne utility for more than 35 years. During his tenure, the municipal light plant's kilowatt capacity increased more than 600 percent and the distribution system has been constantly upgraded and expanded.

During the past three years, Wacker also has promoted energy conservation and loan management as a means of serving current and future community electric needs. Wacker is active in the Nebraska Utilities Section and is involved in many community groups.

APPA is the Washington, D.C.-based national organization representing more than 1,750 local publicly owned electric utilities in the United States.

Wastewater treatment plant nears completion

by Chuck Hackenmiller

It will be another two or three weeks before Wayne's new wastewater treatment plant will be ready for final certification. That is what the Wayne City Council learned Tuesday evening as told by Dennis Hirschbrunner of Bruce Gilmore and Associates, engineers of the project.

Hirschbrunner said the plant has been operating since the first of April with minimal problems. "Structurally the plant is very sound. There is a nice growth of bacteria on the rotating biological contacters. The plant will be in fine shape in July," he said.

Bacteria on the rotating biological contacters eat away at the waste water until the "clearer sewage" leaves and enters the final clarifier.

Among the 10 to 15 items remaining on the list to complete is sod and seeding around the plant. The city still needs to get the computers out there, Hirschbrunner said.

Mert Marshall will be the primary operator of the new plant. The city's current aerated lagoon system currently being used by the city was not large enough to conform to state standards.

In other action Tuesday evening, Councilman Freeman Dacker asked other councilmembers and city officials about what can be done to eliminate the humps formed on the downtown sidewalks.

Wayne Superintendent of Public Works, Vern Schulz, said a legal opinion from the League of Municipalities reveals the city is not liable for the sidewalks. However, if the city goes in and repairs the sidewalk, then the liability becomes that of the city, he said.

To compensate for Homestead Exemptions

Assessors request tax loss refunds

Governor Bob Kerrey has been urged by Nebraska county assessors to arrive at a solution to compensate for tax revenue lost because of the homestead exemptions.

Wayne County Assessor Doris Slipp was among nearly 60 Nebraska County Assessors who met with Governor Kerrey at the governor's mansion on Saturday, May 18, to discuss legislation affecting taxpayers.

Slipp said that during the two-hour morning meeting, assessors related to the governor the effects of the ag land valuation formula which was recently signed into law, homestead exemptions and school re-districting.

She said the $3,000 homestead was passed as a law in 1984 and applications for it were taken for 1985.

Wayne County has 1,144 applications for this exemption of value, she said. And it is estimated that it could mean as much as 5% less on an applicant's 1985 real estate taxes.

So far, there has been no money appropriated for refunding the counties for this tax loss, according to Slipp. The county assessors, meeting with Governor Kerrey, urged him to work towards a solution of refunding the counties on this tax loss, as most counties are near their tax rate limits.

She said Governor Kerrey will be calling a special session of the Nebraska Legislature in 1986. He did not promise that he would come up with a solution, but said he appreciated the insights the assessors had provided him.

Hair-raising tales of the IRS

By Richard Leshar

Just when you thought it was safe to pay taxes again, here comes the sequel: "Jaws of the IRS II."

It's brought to you by the same folks who recently gave taxpayers the auto log regulations — you remember, the ones that would have business auto users jolting down mountains at every stop sign. That first episode has just concluded with Congress agreeing to soften the bite of the auto rules on the time and resources of entrepreneurs.

This happy ending represents a victory for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. We were the first to call to the IRS' attention just how onerous these rules were. And our membership, to underscore the case, surely brought the same to Congress' attention. But it's also a victory for common sense — because everyone knows lost time means less income and that means less revenue not more.

But as that scary episode ended, and we settled back into our seats, new horrors burst to the surface. A new computer system employed by the IRS. It was reported, slowed the processing of tax returns. Meanwhile, the computer was also reportedly sending "dunning" letters, falsely informing taxpayers of additional liability — and warning them to pay us or else. Finally, IRS employees allegedly have been destroying returns and other documents — for example, by squirreling them away in the women's restroom in the Philadelphia Center.

THE IRS REACTED? In typical bureaucratic fashion, it deny everything, then investigate. But soon, confirmations flowed like a river.

Yes, the IRS was behind in their processing — so far behind, the Commerce Department estimates, that $6.8 billion in unpaid refunds helped slow first quarter economic growth. IRS' admitted IRS Commissioner Roscoe Egger, 5,000 to 4,000 letters were destroyed in Texas — but no returns.

But then the smoking gun — the General Accounting Office said internal IRS reports confirmed the restroom story, and added that 150,000 taxpayers received incorrect delinquency notices.

MISTAKES AND MISUNDERSTANDINGS occur in government, as in all institutions. But such failings are greatly magnified at the IRS by two factors.

The first factor is the immense power of the IRS. The agency can attach just about any source of income or seize any piece of property of a delinquent taxpayer under a tax lien. It stands first in line in bankruptcy. And this power is backed by an aggressive force of investigators and collectors. An independent commission organized by the Chamber-affiliated grass roots group Citizens' Choice found that IRS agents abuse their authority by obtaining information from the taxpayer ostensibly to discuss payment arrangements, then using the information to levy; proceeding first with a seizure without negotiating with the taxpayer first, and even (through) outright harassment of taxpayers and their families.

The second factor is the IRS attitude that it has first crack at the national income — and what's left over belongs to the taxpayers. That helps explain actions like the auto log rules, in which the IRS overreaches to ensure that not one speck of its "share" escapes its grasp. And an agency with that attitude might be expected to be less than concerned about errors that lead to delays in the taxpayers getting their "share."

This "horror" double feature has surely undermined what little confidence still remains in the taxpayer about the IRS. So, Commissioner Egger, we taxpayers are watching carefully to see how the computer snafu and its attendant abuses are resolved — and we hope Congress is watching, too.

Serious cutting

The Nebraska State legislature in Lincoln will be finishing its regular session in a flurry of activity regarding Governor Kerrey's proposed budget.

And it doesn't look good. There are cuts and eliminations proposed everywhere by the legislative Appropriation's Committee.

Several suggestions in the category of elimination include: Political Accountability and Disclosure Commission; general fund support for intercollegiate athletics at UNL, UNO and state colleges; home economics programs at the state colleges; industrial arts programs at state colleges; all two-year programs at the state colleges; state aid to natural resource districts; emergency medical services in the health department; Aid to Dependent Children unborn coverage; ADC coverage of unemployed parents; general funding of mass transit program; the Vietnam Veterans Student Loan Program; Nebraska State Fair Board subsidy; Equal Opportunity Commission; Nebraska Arts Council; industrial development training program; Crime Victims Reparation Board; Jail Standards Board.

For cuts, some of those listed include: senatorial staff; private vocational and veterans education programs; special education for the handicapped; financing for displaced homemaker programs; adult education programs; vocational rehabilitation; medical student assistance.

There is reduction proposed in Public Service Commission grain elevator inspections; funding of watershed planning; Department of Aging aid and operations; general support for wildlife conservation; Nebraska Liquor Control Commission travel.

Discussion will likely come on the closing of Peru State College, legislators predict.

Some of these cuts and elimination proposals do not make sense.

Eliminating the financing of college intercollegiate athletics from the general fund is not a good idea. Many of the coaches at the colleges are contracted for the upcoming year and if an athletic program is dissolved, the coach may have legal recourse to take against the state college for failing to honor its contract.

That is how one cut could become costly. Another is the proposal for the closing of Peru State College.

The state college is growing fast, according to one state college board trustee. So fast that more dormitories might be needed to compensate for the growing campus population.

Before making a decision on these cuts, we hope the legislators will not rush on the proposals and weigh each one carefully before tallying their vote on the budget reduction package.

We don't envy their task ahead.

92nd Group budget plan in favor of farmers

Alternative Budget

During last week's debate on the Federal budget, I supported an alternative budget proposal presented by a group of House Republicans known as the 92nd Group. The 92nd Group budget proposal offered more for America's farmers than any other budget proposal that came before the House or State. It cut less drastically into agriculture than the Senate/White House approved budget, the Democratic proposal of congressman

ferred by the House budget Committee and eventually passed by the House, or the Lafta budget supported by House Republican leadership.

I participated on the task force that developed the 92nd Group budget, and we were careful to devise a proposal that would not devastate agricultural credit programs. Our proposal was better on price supports and on agricultural credit reform. It was better for American agriculture.

At the same time, by allocation and by making less dramatic increases in defense, we were able to achieve a bottom line savings of $5 billion. Our basic assumption was that there should be an across-the-board freeze on all spending programs. We did not make any changes in Social Security COLA's.

Our proposal, which survived testing by the Congressional Budget Office, did the whole thing with accurate numbers. We didn't use smoke or mirrors.

Veterans' Compensation

A concept that I have supported, that payments by the Veterans' Administration to veterans as compensation for service-connected disabilities should remain exempt from Federal income taxation, received House approval last week. I am a sponsor of a bill that makes that point, and now the House has incorporated the principle in a bill that deals with veterans' compensation programs.

Debt Collection

In 1977 Congress passed the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act. That law was intended to protect consumers from abusive debt collection practices such as calls to employers, midnight phone calls, and disclosing of debts to third parties. The law did not apply to attorneys on the assumption that debt collection is not an actual part of the practice of law. Since 1977, hundreds of attorney debt collection firms have formed, and these firms are legally permitted to engage in debt collection practices that would be illegal for other debt collectors. I am supporting a bill that would make the debt collection restrictions apply equally to all debt collectors, whether the collector is an attorney or not.

Exon proposal aim is to prevent re-activation of WW II battleship

U.S. Senator Jim Exon (D-Nebr) Wednesday proposed an amendment to the Defense Authorization Bill to prevent the Pentagon from bringing a fourth World War II battleship out of mothballs at a total cost to the taxpayers of about $475 million.

Exon is the ranking Democrat of the Armed Services Subcommittees. The amendment, which was defeated in a 68 to 30 vote, would have transferred $53 million designated to reactivate a fourth battleship to instead purchase additional naval munitions. It would have also prohibited any reactivation of another battleship, unless there is a national emergency.

The Defense Department requested $53 million in 1986 for advanced procurement to begin the reactivation of the fourth battleship. The Defense Department is expected to request an additional $422 million in 1987 to complete the project.

"My intent is to end the battleship reactivation program with the third ship that is about to enter service," Exon said on the Senate floor. The Navy currently has two battleships, the USS Iowa and USS New Jersey, in operations. A third, the USS Missouri, is expected to be operational this year. The Exon amendment would not have affected either of the two in service or the one about to enter service. It would only deny the addition of a fourth ship to the fleet.

On the Senate floor Exon stressed that battleships are tremendously expensive to reactivate and operate. "This year's request for $53 million is not much compared to the billions spent on the MX, but next year, the additional budget request to reactivate a fourth battleship is expected to be $422 million," Exon added.

The Nebraska Senator noted that the Navy states daily operating costs for a battleship is $220,000. This is about two and one-half times the cost of operating a Navy frigate. He pointed out that more than 1,500 men are required to operate a battleship, which is enough personnel to operate five Navy destroyers or four Navy cruisers.

Debate over state budget continues

Nearly all of this past week was spent in debate of the state budget. It's not an easy process. Different agencies and departments of state government have made their case for their particular needs. The needs are real and the services important. That is why this process is so difficult. It would be easy to cut the money from the budget if it could be separated

Administrators of the various institutions and departments of state government annually propose a budget that reflects their operating costs. Each of those budgets are submitted to the Appropriations Committee for the very difficult task of assembling the state budget. Hearings are held for each governmental unit so that state spending is also open to input of the general public. The Appropriations Committee makes their recommendations in the form of a legislative bill that goes through the same process as any other legislation. It was during this process that LB723, this year's budget bill was debated.

THE APPROPRIATIONS Committee put together a fair budget that allowed for the continuation of the majority of public services. Because of revenue shortfalls, however, the budget would have a number of increases in taxes. Several of us have joined together to speak out against that. The primary reason for the revenue shortfall is the state of the economy in those states that rely heavily on agriculture. During these times it is simply unfair to raise taxes if there are any other alternatives. This year, there are alternatives.

The revenue shortfall will require approximately $30 million in reductions to avert a tax increase. Through debate this past week, approximately ten million dollars were eliminated from the state budget, but it simply was not sufficient. Debate was heated. Senators argued eloquently to retain program after program. When it became obvious that the budget was not going to be decreased enough, an amendment was introduced for a two percent reduction across all budget items. While this procedure is less responsible than decisions based on specific programs, needs, and fundings requirements, it began to look like the only alternative to a tax increase.

At this point, however, another alternative surfaced, sending the Appropriations Committee back to identify additional program cuts that would accommodate the revenue projections. On Wednesday, May 29th, the committee will present their new budget, reduction package to the full legislature, at which time the debate will continue.

If the legislature is unable to accept the proposals, I am sure the across-the-board cuts will again be offered. Additionally, Governor Kerrey has vowed that he will line-item spending measures in order to bring spending in line with the anticipated revenues rather than allow a tax increase. Next week I hope I can report that a fair compromise has been struck and there will be no need to increase the tax rates.

from the very real needs of people in our state and our desire to invest in the state's future.

At the same time you have legitimately asked that something be done about state spending. In response, I have joined with several state senators who are determined to listen and respond to the request to hold down the costs of state government in order to avoid increasing taxes.

G. I am paying the orthodontist bill for my grandson, which is over $2,000. Can I take this as a deduction on my income taxes under medical expenses? A. Probably not. Federal tax laws allow taxpayers to include in their computations of itemized deductions only those expenses for medical or dental care of the taxpayer, his or her spouse, or a "dependent." Therefore, unless your grandson is your dependent for the applicable taxable year, you will not be eligible to include the amount of his orthodontist bill in your computation of your itemized deductions.

In order for your grandson to qualify as a dependent under the tax laws, you must have provided over one-half of his support for the relevant calendar year. Thus, where a grandparent voluntarily pays a grandchild's medical or dental bills, but does not claim the child as a dependent, the expense cannot be considered in computing income tax deductions.

MRS. MILDRED MONK of Carroll, who recently retired after teaching for 39 years, proudly displays the United States flag she received from the staff at Laurel-Concord Public Schools. The flag was flown over the United States Capitol on Feb. 14, 1985.

Old Glory is the best gift of all

By LaVon Anderson

Her trailer home in Carroll is filled with awards and tokens representing her dedication to the teaching profession. Plaques line the walls, and on the small kitchen table she proudly fingers the many gifts she has received in appreciation of her devotion. There's a red wooden apple bearing signatures of fellow staff members at Laurel-Concord Public School, and a bell engraved with the years 1960-1985. But the gift she says touches her the most files majestically in the front lawn. It's a flag which flew over the United States Capitol on Feb. 14, 1985.

MRS. MILDRED MONK, a teacher for the past 39 years, received the flag from the Laurel-Concord staff during a breakfast May 14 honoring departing faculty members.

Mrs. Monk retired this year after 25 years of teaching fourth grade in Laurel (1960-85). Before that, she taught 14 years in one-room country schools in Cedar and Dixon counties.

The longtime teacher said she was notified that she would be receiving the flag on the day it was flown—Valentine's Day—when she received a special Valentine's card from Laurel-Concord staff members with the announcement inside.

When she was presented the flag May 14, it was accompanied with a certificate announcing that it was flown over the capitol in her honor at the request of the Honorable Doug Bereuter, member of Congress.

MRS. MONK's dedication to teaching is evident by the many awards she has received through the years.

This year she was one of three teachers in Nebraska to receive the Outstanding Teacher Award presented by the Omaha World-Herald.

The award, which was presented on Teacher Recognition Day—March 5—was sponsored by the Omaha World-Herald, AAUW, NSAB and NPTA.

She also was the recipient of the 1985 C. D. Haskell Award during graduation ceremonies May 19 at Laurel-Concord High School.

Recipients of the Haskell Award, which also was presented to Mrs. Monk in 1977, are selected by the preceding year's graduates, school staff, administration and board of education.

One elementary teacher and one secondary instructor are selected to receive the award each year on the basis of having been the most helpful to students while they were in school.

In 1981, Mrs. Monk was one of several teachers across the state nominated for Nebraska Teacher of the Year.

"I LOVE ALL MY gifts and awards," Mildred smiles modestly, "but this flag touches me the most. I'm just thrilled to no end."

Mildred said she and her husband George plan to visit their cabin on the river many afternoons that they, both are retired.

She also plans to do some "sprucing up" of their home in Carroll, and she adds, there is always lots of work to be done in the lawn and garden at this time of year.

Lipp said the marketplace is designed so that those attending Bible school can experience what life was like when Jesus came.

Participants will be part of a typical Jewish family participating in family worship, ritual and responsibilities. They will visit the shops of the marketplace and learn about Bible time occupations by working as apprentices.

Lipp said everyone is welcome, and those planning to attend are asked to call the church office at 375-2231.

Loving, sharing, caring

THEY HAVE LOTS of love to give. They share themselves with others. And they care. They're "God's Doulos" — a Greek word meaning God's servants — and their part of a clown ministry program offered through the United Methodist Church. The clowns were in Laurel last Thursday for a workshop offering others a chance to become a part of their unique ministry. While there, the clowns paid a visit to residents of the Hillcrest Care Center. Pictured, clockwise from top left, are Amanda McBride of Laurel, who shares a hug with an elderly resident of the care center; Roberta Lute of Laurel (Bluebell), visiting with another resident; Margaret Johnson of O'Neill (Buttons), who talks quietly with an older gentleman; and Rhonda Bloom of Laurel (Raggedy Ann) and her son Evan. Young Evan was a definite hit with the residents and staff of the care center and was always ready with a smile and loving hug. God's Doulos were formed by Betty Swarthout, a United Methodist deaconess from O'Neill who serves as a church and community worker for the Northeast District of the United Methodist Church.

Mary Temme, Wayne County extension agent-home economics, will conduct free testing of pressure canner gauges today (Thursday) at Oberle's Market in Winside from 2 to 4 p.m.

She also will test gauges at the Wayne County Courthouse from 1 to 4 p.m. Monday, June 3. In addition, Temme will answer food preservation questions and provide information on current processing recommendations.

The testing is for needle type pressure gauges and the pop-up variety. Gauges that simply sit on the steam valve and rock back and forth cannot be tested.

Temme said pressure canner gauges should be tested annually to insure home canned foods are being processed safely. Makers of pressure canners and University of Nebraska food and nutrition specialists recommend that gauges be replaced if they vary as little as 2 to 3 pounds of pressure.

second for Wayne's next run.

Wayne's big inning started with walks for Mike Meyer and Dennis Danielson, who crossed home on a two RBI double by left fielder John Reed. Bases were loaded following walks for Kim Baker and Mike Braske and a fielder's choice by Todd Dorsey. Baker and Dorsey both scored when a ground ball to third base ended up in right field.

The lone run in the eighth came when Dorsey got on with a fielder's choice. He stole second, advanced to third on a wild pitch and scored on a catcher's overthrow.

Laurel came out strong in the first inning of the game to gain their lead. Rich Thompson scored on a sacrifice fly by second baseman Rocky Thompson for the game's first run, followed by catcher John Manganaro, who belted a three run homer with two out.

Winning pitcher for Wayne was Lenny Klaver, who came in to relieve Doug Carroll after three innings. Klaver struck out three batters and walked on en route to the win. Pitcher John Reed came in to finish up the final two innings on the mound.

A SINGLE RUN in the sixth inning by Battle Creek broke a 3-3 tie and gave the hosts a 4-3 win over Wayne on Sunday evening.

Both teams scored a run in the initial inning of the game. Wayne's run coming when Mike Braske singled to get on base, stole second and scored on a base hit by Mike Meyer.

Annual baseball event

Area battle continues in Chuck Ellis memorial tourney

Sunny skies and warm temperatures greeted area baseball players and fans alike over the past weekend as the opening games of the Chuck Ellis Memorial baseball tournament in Wakefield ushered in the 1985 baseball season.

In the eight-team field, Wakefield, Wayne, O'Neill and West Point all scored victories to advance to the semi-finals which were scheduled for last evening (Wednesday). Wakefield and Wayne squared off in the 5:30 p.m. contest, while the 8 p.m. nightcap featured O'Neill and West Point. Winners of the two games will meet in the championship at 8 p.m. on Saturday evening, June 1 at Eaton Field. A consolation game has been added to the final day of play, and will begin at 5:30 p.m.

WAKEFIELD EARNED their way into their semi-final game with a narrow 8-7 win over Lyons-Bancroft in the opening game of the tournament on Sunday, May 26.

Wakefield scored first in the game when Kipp Utemark cracked out a double and scored later on a base hit by Larry Ballinger. They added another run to their tally in the third inning as Wade Nicholson rapped a double to get on base and crossed home on a similar hit by Utemark.

Lyons-Bancroft bounced back into the game in the fourth inning, tying the score in their half of the inning with a pair of runs, by Kirk Metzger and Shannon Kellogg. Wakefield answered back with runs by Darwin Snyder and Ballinger in the bottom of the inning to re-gain their two-run margin.

Wakefield continued their charge in the fifth inning, adding three more runs to hold a 7-2 lead. The Lyons pitching staff fell upon hard times and walked six Wakefield batters, including Jason Erb, Snyder and Ballinger, all who scored runs.

The visiting team knotted the score with a rally in the top of the final inning, falling five runs on two hits and a Wakefield error to tie the score at 7-7.

A run by Darwin Snyder broke the tie in the bottom of the inning and gave Wakefield the win. Snyder got on with a walk, advanced to second on with a stolen base and scored on an error by the Lyons second baseman.

Brian Soderberg pitched the win for Wakefield, allowing six hits, striking out six batters and walking eight.

THE WAYNE JUNIOR Legion team bounced back from an earlier loss to defeat Sioux City Post 64 by a 13-4 margin. Over the weekend, Post 64 had downed Wayne 13-3 in play in the Wayne Junior Legion tourney.

Wayne opened with two runs in bottom of the first inning when Kevin Maly got on base with a walk and scored, and Steve Overin advanced to first after being hit by a pitch and also crossed home plate.

Post 64 came back into the game briefly in the top of the third inning, scoring a pair of runs on a walk and single.

Wayne exploded for nine runs in the bottom of the inning, starting off with a walk for Dan Gross, followed by a Steve Overin single. Scott Baker also rapped out a single for Wayne's second hit of the inning, but it was four walks which followed that kept the bases loaded and brought in runs for Wayne. Other hits in the inning included a second base hit by Overin and a fielders choice by Jeff Sherer.

Overin pitched the win for Wayne as the team evened their record at 2-2. He gave up four runs on five hits with five strike-outs and four walks.

IN THE OTHER two games played in the tournament, West Point advanced with a 4-1 win over Norfolk, while O'Neill moved on after downing Wisner-Pilger 8-3.

Young Wayne gymnast looks to future with high hopes

At the age of seven and a half, young Jessica Sievers of Wayne is in the swing of things when it comes to gymnastics.

The daughter of Rod and Theresa Sievers of Wayne, Jessica has been involved in gymnastics classes since the age of four, following a doctor's suggestion that gymnastics would be a good route to channel her high level of activity through.

"She is a highly active child and very limber...she seemed to have the knack for gymnastics from the very start," said her mother, Theresa. "It is a fun thing for her to do, and it comes naturally."

Due to her previous background, Jessica was able to start out in the intermediate course and came in as the youngest member of the group. The class sessions usually lasted two hours and were conducted twice a week. Instructors of the gymnastics program at the Norfolk YMCA include Mike Oglevie, program director, and Leifa Thies, along with other assistants.

She was promoted from the intermediate class, and beginning in June Jessica will study in the advanced competition class at the YMCA. "Jessica is really excited about advancing into the older class...the difference in ages doesn't seem to bother her at all," said her mother.

The advanced class will consist primarily of teaching new competition routines to the young athletes. According to Oglevie, the routines which are used for judging and competition on all levels, including the Olympic games, are changed every four years, and 1985 marks the beginning of a new routine schedule.

JESSICA ALSO HAD the opportunity to participate in the Sixteenth State Gymnastics program based in Sioux City, Iowa following an interview earlier in the year. "She would be part of a 'super mini-team' and would prepare for competition in floor exercises and on the equipment in the fall in a number of meets." Theresa said. She added that she and her husband have not decided if Jessica will participate in the program this year, or wait until she is older.

In addition to gymnastics, Jessica, a first grader at Wayne Elementary School, also has been taking a ballroom class under the direction of Mindy Muns of Norfolk to help her with movements in her floor routines. She also maintains an exercise routine and practice schedule at home.

"It's fun...I get nervous at first, but then it's fun," said Jessica. "I just think about what I'm going to do...sometimes I have trouble but when I know the routine, it's OK," she added.

About the future in gymnastics, Jessica has hopes of following in the footsteps of the successful United States gymnasts at the 1984 Olympic Games. "I'd like to be like Mary Lou (Retton)," she smiled.

WSC track results

The Wayne State College women's 800 meter sprint relay team captured fifth place in the NAA Outdoor Track and Field Meet at Hillsdale College in Hillsdale, Mich. May 23-25.

The relay team of Kim Pohman, Kandy Schott, Missy Stoltenberg and Cindy Heesacker ran a season best time of 1:46.0 to pick up WSC's only points in the meet.

Heesacker, a junior from Humphrey, made it to the finals of the 400 meters and finished seventh with a 57.36 automatic timing. In 1984, Heesacker finished sixth at the national meet in the event with a time of 55.47.

Missy Stoltenberg made it as far as the semi-finals in the 100 meters, but her time of 12.7 fell short in qualifying for the finals in the event. She was unable to get past the preliminaries in the 100 meter hurdles and scratched out of the long jump.

Senior Andrea Jones' loss of 430.4 in the javelin, tying her school record, wasn't good enough to advance her to the final round.

Cruickshank earns honor

Wayne State College senior baseball co-captain Gregg Cruickshank has been named to the 1985 College Sports Information Directors of America All-America Second team, according to information released by the WSC Sports Information Office earlier in the week.

Cruickshank compiled a 3.61 grade point average as a history and social science major.

The first baseman from Columbus led the Wildcats in hitting with a .420 batting average this past season. He cracked eight homers for the 26-25 Wildcats and set WSC single-season records with 80 RBIs and 80 hits.

Wayne 18-under girls win season opener with Homer

The Wayne 18-under girls softball team won big in their season opener Tuesday evening, May 28 with a 25-3 victory over Homer on the road.

The Wayne squad was originally scheduled to begin their 1985 season slate last Thursday night at home, with Walhill, but the game was cancelled.

The contest versus Homer lasted just four innings after Wayne sprang to life in the top of both the third and fourth innings to combine for 21 runs and the win.

The local gals started out with three runs in the first inning and added a single score in the second to take a 3-0 lead before Homer made a short-lived jump back into the game, scoring two runs in the bottom of the second.

Homer made a change in their pitching staff after loading the bases in the top of the third, but the effort didn't stop the Wayne team as they came up big innings to put the game away.

Karen Longe led the hitting for Wayne with a pair of doubles. Also rapping out base hits were Paula Koplin, Jody Allen and Laura Keating.

Roni Johnson pitched in the first three innings of the game before Laura Keating came in to finish in the fourth.

Flea Problems

Now is the time to keep an eye out for flea infestation on pets. While flea infestations usually reach their highest population later in the summer, controlling them before they get out of hand may prevent a major problem.

Fleas suck blood, causing irritation and weight loss of dogs and cats. Heavy population can cause anemia, particularly in young, old or sick animals and cause ragged, uneven coats. Fleas also occasionally bite humans, producing small red marks with accompanying itch.

Fleas are about 1/8 inch long with a body that is compressed from side to side like a sunfish. They are brown and have no wings, but their legs are well-developed for jumping.

Fleas have four stages of development and can complete a generation in as little as three to four weeks. Adult fleas stay on the hosts to feed and deposit eggs which drop off into carpets, lawns and pet bedding.

When controlling fleas, both the animals and the infested premises need to be treated. Kennels should be regularly cleaned and bedding thoroughly washed or vacuumed.

Insecticide labels should be read carefully and directions followed carefully. Not all compounds are labeled for use on both dogs and cats.

It takes considerable effort to bring fleas under control. No single application of insecticides to pets or premises is likely to provide satisfactory control.

Algae Growth in Livestock Tanks

Algae and moss can be controlled in stock watering tanks with a low concentration of copper sulfate. Dissolve one ounce of copper sulfate in one pint of water, using a glass jar or enamel container. Don't use galvanized metal containers as the copper sulfate reacts with the galvanizing. Add three tablespoons of the copper sulfate solution for each 1,000 gallons of water in the tank. The treatment is not long-lasting and may need to be repeated when growth resumes. Keep livestock from drinking the water for the first 12 hours after treatment. The extra copper sulfate solution can be saved for future use but be sure to mark the containers and store out of the reach of children.

Has higher energy

Distiller grain useful in dairy rations

Many Nebraska dairy producers now have available another excellent feed ingredient for potential use and should consider including distillers grains in their rations whenever prices are favorable, according to Foster Owen, University of Nebraska-Lincoln extension dairy specialist.

Distillers grains have recently become readily available for many dairy producers in Nebraska because of the new alcohol plants at Hastings and Hamburg, Iowa. "Although the dried product is most widely available, the wet grains are also available in southeast Nebraska." "Primarily distillers grains serve as a protein supplement," he said, "but it also has other valuable qualities as an ingredient of dairy rations."

Compared with corn grain it is about 8 percent higher energy, because of its 10 percent fat content compared to about 3 percent in corn. It also is higher in fiber and very low in starch. Excessive starch and low fiber are common problems in rations of high producing cows.

AMPLE GOOD QUALITY fiber is especially important in milking rations for normal rumen digestion and maintenance milk fat tests, Owen said. Including distillers grains in the rations reduces the ration's starch content.

Substitution of distillers grains for other protein supplements should be determined on the basis of economics. The ration should be rebalanced using the distillers grains in place of the present supplement.

"If the ration is less expensive, the substitution should give more economic production," Owen said. "Because of the several plus factors of distillers grains, one might add something, possibly $3 to $10 per ton, until more data for potential benefits from high producing cows are available."

When computing the value of distillers dried grains itself, the price of alternative feeds must be considered. For example, he said, when soybean meal is priced at $150 per ton and corn is $2.75 per bushel, distillers grains is valued at $122 per ton. The value of distillers grains (with solubles) can be calculated at various prices of corn and soybean meal as follows: $ value per ton of dried distillers grains equals 701 (5 price of corn grain per ton) plus 350 (5 price of 44 percent soybean meal per ton). This gives credit to only its energy and protein value, without consideration of protein quality of other favorable qualities.

"Extra benefits for special qualities may add to the value. For high producing cows I would expect this to be at least $10 to $30 per ton, possibly more," Owen said.

Cow-calf strategies offered

The cow-calf producer is currently under economic stress and whatever can be done must be done to keep operating, according to Bill Zollinger, extension livestock specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Southeast Research and Extension Center here.

"The single highest cost input of the cow herd is the feed bill," he said. "A producer must match the cows' needs to the existing feed resources."

It is not logical, Zollinger said, for a producer to purchase large amounts of feedstuffs to enhance production and increase out-of-pocket expenses beyond expected returns.

"A supply of alfalfa hay may be the best protein supplement source available," he said. If supplements are purchased, they should be well planned.

Zollinger suggested grouping cows according to nutritional needs. "Younger cows (twos and threes) may need additional input and can best be managed in separate pastures and/or pens. The higher quality forages should be fed to young animals and to wet cows."

IF A HERD VARIES in size and/or milk production levels, it may pay to group some on this basis, he said.

Strategies for sale of excess calves (heifers) and cull cows may enhance opportunities for profit. In specific years it may be advantageous to hold cows until prices rise in the spring.

It is a good practice to pregnancy test all twos and try to merchandise the opens as heiferettes in the fall of the year," he said.

"We cannot afford to make a cow a high management machine," he said. "We need to manage the resources and marketing outlets available to enhance profit and reduce loss."

One marketing possibility involves spreading the financial risk. For some, profit is enhanced if the ownership of calves is retained until the highest price can be received. An owner may sell at weaning, or as yearlings, or choose to have his calves custom-fed.

"Some producers are engaging in a joint venture with feedlot operators," Zollinger said. "The cow-calf operator sets a value on the calves and the feedlot operator sets the value of feed and management. Both agree to the appraisal figures and divide the revenues at slaughter on the percentage of their input values."

4-H computer camps set

Two levels of computer knowledge will be handled at two separate Computer Camps offered this summer by the Nebraska 4-H Department, according to Donald Sifring, extension 4-H youth specialist at the University of Nebraska West Central Research and Extension Center in North Platte.

An Introduction to Computers 4-H Camp will be held June 14-16 at the State 4-H Camp at Halsey. Basic understanding of computer terminology, micro-computer hardware, main frames, main BASIC programming, and computer applications will be discussed. Youths interested in the introductory camp should register at their local Cooperative Extension Service office by May 24. Ten hours of instruction and "hands-on" experience with Radio Shack, Apple and IBM equipment will be part of the camp.

An advanced Computer Science Camp will be held at the Halsey campground June 21-23. Sifring said youth at the advanced camp will build skills in developing computer programs on IBM, Apple and Radio Shack equipment. Campers will also learn about AGNET and other main frames. The camp will include instruction and 10 hours of contact time with the computers. Registrations for the Advanced Computer Science camp need to be completed by June 1.

Sifring said the two computer camps, which are also open to non-4-H members, are for youth aged 11-17. Those interested should register early, he said since there is a limit of 30 participants per camp. The $85 fee includes meals, lodging and insurance. Applications are available at local Cooperative Extension Service offices.

4-H horse program scholarship

A scholarship for Nebraska 4-H members active in the 4-H horse program and who plan to attend the University of Nebraska-Lincoln has been announced by Kenneth Schmidt, extension 4-H specialist.

The R. B. Warren Educational Scholarship is offered to encourage 4-H members active in the 4-H horse program to continue their education in agriculture and related subjects. The scholarship was established in recognition of the contribution of Richard "R. B." Warren to the 4-H horse program. Warren is currently an extension horse specialist and animal science professor at UNL. He directs the 4-H Horse projects and the annual state 4-H Horse Show, held each year in July.

The number and dollar amounts of the R. B. Warren Educational Scholarship may vary each year based on the number and quality of applicants; however, each scholarship awarded will be at least $200.

Winner(s) will be announced at the State 4-H Horse Exposition in Grand Island. All scholarships may be used only at UNL's Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, Schmidt said.

The scholarship is available to current Nebraska 4-H members who will graduate from high school in 1985, did not pass their 19th birthday as of Jan. 1, 1985, and are enrolling at UNL in the college of Agriculture.

Applications must be submitted to the State 4-H office no later than June 20. A selection committee will choose scholarship winners.

The top applicants will be interviewed by the selection committee on Monday of the State 4-H Horse Exposition, to be held July 22-25. The scholarship winner(s) will be announced on Wednesday evening, July 24, during the championship finals program.

Applications for the R. B. Warren Educational Scholarship are available at local Cooperative Extension Service offices.

Spills result in animal loss

Practice pesticide safety

A University of Nebraska-Lincoln extension specialist is urging farmers to take special precautions with pesticides following a major chemical accident this spring in which several hundred animals died.

"It's human nature to get a little lax on safety practices when farmers get busy with planting, but improper pesticide storage can cause a lot of problems," said Emery Nelson, UNL extension pesticide training coordinator.

The incident this spring was not unlike those in other years when 13 to several hundred farm animals have been accidentally poisoned at a time, Nelson said. Many accidents happen when farmers are busy in the field and fail to put pesticides back in the right place or in a properly labeled container.

Even small spills can lead to animal deaths, he said, adding that just one tablespoon of some pesticides may be enough to kill a cow.

A farmer may use part of a container of pesticide and set the rest at a corner of a field and plan to pick it up on the way home. If he doesn't pick it up, it may seep into a nearby well or pasture area, contaminating feed or water.

In one instance a farmer put the remaining pesticide mix in an old mineral feed bag. Later that year a brother added what he thought was the mineral mix to his feed, accidentally killing a number of cattle.

Proper storage and disposal of pesticides will prevent many accidents, Nelson said. Pesticides, when not actually being used, should be kept in a locked building specially designated for pesticide storage. Feed and seed products should be kept separate from all pesticides to avoid contamination. Any treated seed should be labeled and stored where it won't be accidentally misused for feed, he said.

Other storage precautions to prevent pesticide contamination include:

- Post warnings on buildings where pesticides are being stored.
- Select a building with good lighting and a cement floor.
- Prevent pesticides from freezing.
- Store pesticide containers off the floor to prevent condensation damage.
- And dispose of all pesticides that are old or will not be used. Follow specific label instructions for proper disposal.

Combating household mold woes

Molds, mildews and mushrooms are fungi—small, inconspicuous plants unable to manufacture their own food which must obtain essential nutrients by decomposing natural and synthetic products. Fungi decay wood, cloth, fabrics, twine, electrical insulation, leather, food products of all sorts, and a variety of other materials, according to University of Nebraska-Lincoln extension plant pathologist John Watkins.

Molds become destructive in the home because they are allowed to contaminate and grow on materials. High moisture, warm temperatures, and low light intensity favor mold growth. Usually household articles become moldy or mildewed because they are stored wet, stored in a closed space with no ventilation, or stored uncleaned or unprotected.

Most mold problems, although not all, are relatively simple to correct or prevent by having some knowledge of the problem and putting that knowledge to use, Watkins said.

He said fungicides are not the soft answer to effective mold control. They have their place, but effectiveness is only as good as the environment in which they are being used. If temperature, humidity and light are favorable, molds will grow often in spite of fungicide treatment. It is usually much more economical to store properly, than to treat with a fungicide. And it is less hazardous.

Certain volatile chemicals such as paradichlorobenzene inhibit mildew on clothing and other apparel when used in packages, trunks or garment bags. (Use about 1 pound of the crystals for 100 cubic feet of air space.) To protect leather, treat with low-pressure aerosol formulations. Check for color changes in the leather before treating. When painting wood surfaces that come in contact with moisture, use a mildew-resistant paint. Basement walls and showers can be wiped with a solution of household bleach prepared as one part bleach to nine parts water.

Aerosol disinfectants can be used for prevention of a number of mold and mildew problems. Mushrooms growing on basement carpets are killed by steam cleaning at 150 degrees Fahrenheit for two minutes. Check with carpet manufacturers before steaming the carpet. Talcum powder sprinkled between pages of books keeps them dry during storage.

There is no one general, all-purpose fungicide. Literally thousands of different compounds have been manufactured and tested as fungicides, and a number of these are very effective for certain purposes. One fungicide may be excellent for fabrics, another for leather, another for stored paper pulp. What is poison for one fungus may be food for another. A compound that serves as an effective fungicide under one set of conditions may be useless under another.

The Wayne Herald, Thursday, May 30, 1985

FmHA celebrates 50th

The Farmers Home Administration is observing its 50th anniversary this year, still providing financial assistance to farmers and other rural residents and communities unable to obtain credit from other sources at affordable rates and terms.

Lavern Ostendorf, FmHA County Supervisor for Wayne and Stanton counties, said that a total of 210 loans totaling $11,119,868 have been made in Wayne and Stanton Counties this year.

Farmers Home is the rural credit agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Its predecessor agency, the Rural Rehabilitation Administration, was created by a presidential executive order in 1935. The Farm Security Administration succeeded that agency in 1938, and was renamed the Farmers Home Administration by a 1946 act of Congress.

"Special emphasis is being placed this year on helping farmers with serious financial problems restructure their debt so they can continue their operations," said County Supervisor Ostendorf.

Experts say shorten beef breeding season

Beef producers should consider shortening or limiting the breeding season, according to Gene Deutscher, extension beef specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's West Central Research and Extension Center at North Platte.

Present economic conditions dictate that beef producers become more efficient in production to have a profitable operation. Shortening the breeding season should improve efficiency and increase return.

"It concentrates the time and labor needed for calving and reduces the expenses," he explained. "Calf losses can be reduced due to more frequent observation and assistance, and there is less personal fatigue and complacency.

Other advantages include a more uniform calf crop, which can be sold easier at a higher price, and more uniform and efficient management of cows and calves. A shorter breeding season also forces the late and slow breeding cows out of the herd, which improves overall herd fertility.

Advantages of this practice, Deutscher noted.

"One disadvantage is that you need to remove bulls from cows and keep them separated during the majority of the year," Deutscher said. "You may also need more bulls. Drought or extreme heat during breeding season may lower conception rates and cause more open cows."

A 60-day breeding season should be sufficient for most herds, he said. Deutscher explained that if a producer decides to shorten the breeding season, it should be done gradually over several years to spread the effect.

"A short breeding season of 40 to 50 days is especially important for replacement heifers to select the most fertile heifers," Deutscher said. "This reduces the calving time labor and lengthens the time from calving to breeding season."

According to Deutscher, an estrus synchronization program can reduce the length of a breeding season by 10 to 15 days and increase the number of heifers calving early.

ARBORETUM Arbor-WHAT??

Do you know what an arboretum is? A Gardeners Dictionary defines an arboretum as basically a zoo for plants and trees. While a zoo generally exhibits members of the animal kingdom, arboretums are much more easygoing than zoos. For example, plant-keepers or curators rarely object if a child should feed a plant a little nitrogen or potassium, and the largest and most ill-tempered of plant species can do little more than stare a nut on your head or shed a branch or two into your path. As for their by-products... well, no one ever complains about getting a little oxygen on their shoes.

Why is a tree called a tree?

"Have you ever wondered why we call trees "trees" and how various trees got their names?"

Entymology (not antmology) is the study of word origins. It is the science used to trace the ancestry or genealogy of words through various languages known to man. The subject is fascinating for it reveals the many relationships words have with one another and how their meanings change with time. A new dimension is added in our appreciation of trees when it's known how trees were named. This knowledge can also inform us the way in which man's mind functions.

Similar spelling of the word "tree" is found in both ancient and modern languages. Modern English "tree" is derived from Middle English "tre, tre, tree." This can be traced further to earlier Anglo-Saxon "treow, treeow," (spelling varied greatly before the advent of dictionaries which helped to standardize spelling). Anglo-Saxons used the same word "treow" for fidelity, faithfulness and truth. Apparently the Anglo-Saxons equated the firmness, straightness and trustworthiness of trees with man's nobler characteristics of fidelity and trustworthiness. Worshipping trees and holding religious ceremonies among trees could have promoted this association.

Maskenthine Arboretum

Maskenthine Arboretum was established in 1976 as part of the Maskenthine multi-purpose project, 1 1/2 miles north of Stanton, Nebraska. The arboretum is a collection of native and exotic tree species to be used by schools and other groups for nature study and general enjoyment. Trees are planted in a natural arrangement with labels to help in identification.

Much of the work in establishing the arboretum was accomplished with volunteer help of civic groups and organizations. Volunteer labor for tree planting or maintenance is still welcome, as well as gifts of trees or shrubs.

Maskenthine Lake is a multi-purpose project of the Lower Elkhorn NRD, located on 400 acres. The dam provides flood control for the town of Stanton, as well as recreation for the citizens of the District. The lake is stocked with largemouth bass, bluegill, channel catfish, northern pike, and walleye. Development includes boat ramp, swimming beach, water system and rest rooms. The area is open to hunting, fishing, boating and swimming. Camping and picnicking are permitted, but no facilities are provided.

While the arboretum encompasses about 20 acres of the area, tree planting is also carried on for wildlife habitat, windbreaks and beautification. Research plantings of cottonwoods and silver maples are being studied by Extension Foresters to improve Clarke-McNary stock which is sold to landowners of Nebraska.

A place of trees

An arboretum is defined as a place where trees, shrubs and herbaceous plants are grown for educational and scientific purposes. Every arboretum has special collections of plant materials that visitors can study and enjoy. Formal gardens, historical and recreational parks, college campuses, natural woodlands and prairies can all be arboretum.

Nebraska Statewide Arboretum

Maskenthine Arboretum is a member of the Nebraska Statewide Arboretum (NSA) formed in 1978 to promote, knowledge, appreciation and use of Nebraska plants. Nebraska Statewide Arboretum also encourages improvement and establishment of arboretums around the state. There are 30 arboretum sites affiliated with the Nebraska Statewide Arboretum. Among these is the Wayne State College Arboretum at Wayne. It is within the boundaries of Wayne State College. There is currently about 150 species of trees and shrubs in the Wayne State College Arboretum.

Persons interested in supporting and participating in the growth of arboretum sites are encouraged to join the Nebraska Statewide Arboretum. For more information contact: The Director, Nebraska Statewide Arboretum, 112 Forestry Sciences Laboratory, UNI-East Campus, Lincoln, NE 68583-0623.

The Heritage Planters Program

The Nebraska Statewide Arboretum and the Nebraska Department of Aging have announced the Heritage Planters Program. The grants will enable local groups of older Nebraskans to purchase and plant trees and shrubs as a way to enhance the environmental quality of their community. The program is funded in 1985 by First Federal Lincoln. The projects are to be planned and carried out by older citizens who have banded together to form a planting committee.

The application process consists of two parts: a) a Statement of Intent (briefly defines the project) and b) a more detailed Application (including a scaled drawing). Grants to a project will not exceed $600 and may be used only to purchase planting stock.

Forms are available from the Lower Elkhorn NRD, Norfolk (PH: 371-7313). The deadline for submission of the Statement of Intent is June 1, 1985 to the Nebraska Statewide Arboretum.

Wayne County Old Settlers

The War Torn Forties and Nifty Fifties... The nation was divided into the isolationists and their stay at home views and the hawks who thought the new Kaiser and the Old Emperor should be given a quick lesson in humility. Neither the staunchest isolationist nor the hardest hawk were aware that the Kaiser and Emperor, mere figurheads, were in fact ruled by a maniac out of work paper hanger and a sterootypical thicked glass war monger both with expansionist ideas who were about to change the course of world history.

One of the most popular stand of the early 1950's was operated by American Legion Post 252 featuring "pop" at 50 cents a bottle... Professional entertainment of a sort was creeping into the festival presented on bridge planks placed on 55 gallon drums at the east end of the park. Meeting the carnival as it pulled into town in hopes of getting a job helping set up the booths and rides for free tickets or an extra buck was the big thing with teenage town boys.
