Sheriffs investigating auto theft

Both the Wayne County Sheriff Department and the Dixon County Sheriff Department are investigating a car theft that occurred on May 22. The car, belonging to Stuart Nissen of Sioux City, was taken from Fredrickson Oil Company of Wayne on Wednesday morning, May 22. On May 27 the vehicle was reported stolen when the owner returned to Fredrickson's station to pick up the car. Tuesday morning (May 28), the vehicle was located after being towed in from Dixon County, where it was driven into a fence line five miles east and 2 1/2 miles north of Wayne. Considerable damage was done to the vehicle and an AM-FM radio was stolen, according to Wayne County Sheriff LeRoy Janssen. Also, the Norfolk Area Crime Stoppers is seeking information leading to the arrest and conviction of individual(s) involved in another break-in in Wayne. On the early morning of Wednesday, April 3, unknown individual(s) broke into the Wayne Sporting Goods Store located east of Wayne and took numerous jogging suits, several pairs of Brooks and Converse basketball shoes and several pieces of Wilson brand tennis and golf equipment. A $250 reward is being offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the individual(s) involved in this crime. Those with information about the crime can call the Norfolk Area Crime Stoppers at 371-7300. The call must be received within seven days.

To achieve independence

League aids the disabled

by Chuck Hackenmiller

Handicapped is not the word to use when writing or speaking about someone with a physical disability. Peg Henke, project coordinator of the League of Human Dignity, said the word 'handicap' got its origin when disabled individuals stood on corners with hats or caps asking for money hand-outs from passers-by. "Because the individual is disabled certainly doesn't mean the person is handicapped," Henke said. People with disabilities are not necessarily handicapped. The term handicap refers to environmental barriers preventing or making it difficult for full participation or integration.

It is this image that goes against the philosophy of the League of Human Dignity, the non-profit organization headquartered in Lincoln with a branch office in Norfolk and a satellite office in Wayne. "Our premise is independent living — to help the individual realize their goals toward independent living," Henke said.

The organization's services extend to individuals with physical disabilities such as those with amputations, arthritis, paralysis, heart problems, diabetes, cerebral palsy. "We're an all-encompassing resource for persons with disabilities," Henke mentioned. Some individuals with disabilities are often caught in the trap of becoming dependent on others rather than taking care of themselves. "We can tell them what options are available to them in the way of equipment, information and service," she said.

Through the aid of League of Human Dignity, individuals can learn how to cook, how to drive, or even how to operate from a checking account, minimizing their weaknesses on the way to becoming more independent. "It depends heavily on what the individual wants," Henke said. Consumers set their own goals and the League staff members provide assistance in realistically reaching those goals.

THE LEAGUE OF Human Dignity

Overcoming the barriers

Deb Matcha, project coordinator of the League of Human Dignity, said she is now working toward her master's degree at Wayne State College in Lincoln.

Matcha is a member of the League of Human Dignity and has been an independent living advisor, serving as a staff member at Wayne State College. She works Monday through Friday, from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m., at Wayne Chamber of Commerce office building.

One case which illustrates the type of service which League of Human Dignity provides was Matcha's recent efforts in assisting a woman in making a home accessible to the disabled by leveling steps to the door. She recalls another case where she has aided an individual with the setting of a speech.

"I enjoy what I do, going out meeting and helping these people. It's like to see these people (with physical disabilities) get out into the community," Deb said. Deb knows what it is like to become independent after a physical disability.

She was born with a hearing impairment and it was when she was in fourth grade when the physical disability was diagnosed. "With a lot of help from my parents and others, I learned to get along on my own," Deb said.

"I really wanted to come to Wayne State College," she said. After testing was done on her hearing impairment, she was advised not to go to college. She shrugged off that bit of advice and went on to earn her bachelor's degree.

"I have a hearing impairment, but not, she said. Deb said she has witnessed lots of changes for the better in Wayne from the viewpoint of making the community accessible to the physically disabled.

All this adds up to what is needed in making the physically disabled more independent, more in control of his or her own life, which is the philosophy of the League of Human Dignity.

is a private non-profit organization, funded through a federal grant from the Department of Education, Division of Rehabilitation. "The office in Norfolk covers 13 counties in northeast Nebraska," Henke said.

Every other Tuesday, the Wayne division office (located in the Wayne Chamber of Commerce office site) is staffed by advisor Deb Matcha. Matcha is also at the Allen office the second Thursday of each month, from 10 a.m. to noon, and at the Wakefield Senior Citizens Center the third Thursday of each month from 1:30 to 3:30.

Henke said the organization has been serving the northeast Nebraska area since 1980.

"We started with four counties (in Northeast Nebraska) and have expanded to 13, based on need," she said.

"We wish we were also independent rather than dependent on public funds," she added.

The League began an extensive mailing campaign designed to raise funds for League programs and is also actively seeking money from private foundations and individuals. "We choose to charge a minimal fee for our services, she said.

HENKE SAID the League's function is different than Home Health Care or an agency which meets the medical needs of the individuals.

"Home Health Care basically cares for people who are sick — meeting the health needs in the home. People with physical disabilities normally don't have medical needs. We could be considered a non-medical model," she said.

She is emphatic in stressing the need for the League of Human Dignity.

Using the general population figures, 17 percent of Nebraska is handicapped. See LEAGUE, page 10.

Whisenhunt named interim Wayne State president

Dr. Donald W. Whisenhunt will be Wayne State College's interim president.

During a meeting at Peru State College Friday, the Nebraska State College Board of Trustees appointed Whisenhunt to the interim president's position.

The appointment is effective July 1. Whisenhunt, 47, has been vice president of Wayne State College during the past two years. He assumes the duties of Dr. Ed Elliott, who earlier in May announced his resignation as president of Wayne State College to take the presidency of Central Missouri State University.

Board of Trustees Vice Chairman J. Alan Cramer, Wayne, was appointed today to chair the Board Task Force to find a permanent replacement for Elliott. Also on the Board Task Force are Board of Trustees Chairman Carroll Thompson of Lincoln; and Trustees Tom Morrissey of Tecumseh and Gretchen Reeder of Omaha.

An advisory committee made up of Wayne State and Wayne community members will also be formed.

THE BOARD DID not set a target date to hire a new president, but has already advertised the position locally and nationally and set July 8 as the closing date for applications.

The board of trustees will conduct a very aggressive state, regional and national search for college president candidates. Emphasis is on an external search at this time.

Whisenhunt came to Wayne State in 1983 from the University of Texas at Tyler, where he had been Vice President for Academic Affairs and Professor of History since 1977.

Prior to that, he was Dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences and Professor of History at Eastern New Mexico University.

He has also taught at Texas Tech University, Murray State University and Thiel College.

A 1960 graduate of McMurry College, Whisenhunt earned his MA and Ph.D. degrees from Texas Tech University. All three degrees came in history.

Whisenhunt has written numerous books and also reviews books for various journals, reviews and newspapers. He also had many articles printed.

He and his wife, Betsy, have two sons, Don Jr., 18 and Ben, age 16.

IN OTHER action Friday, the board of trustees approved the documents relating to the Bond Anticipation Note (BAN) sale, or short term financing, toward the cost of the addition to the Rice/Carlson Facility at Wayne State College.

expenses to be paid, limitations under which the BANS could not be issued.

An official statement, "This is a document that contains a description of Wayne State College, fees and enrollment data, the Rice project, financial data relative to the BANS issuance and a copy of the auditor's report for 1983-1984."

A resolution, "The resolution is a legal document authorizing the sale of BAN amounting to $4,225,000, pledging of certain revenues and authorizing and establishing the issuance of long-term bonds."

In reviewing a question of why short term financing (BAN) was needed rather than long-term bonds, the answer was that in order to sell long-term bonds, the college has to have the ability to service both the debt service coverage on their present bonds and on the new bond sale.

To be able to do that would require a significant increase in student fees. Selling short term debt allows for the construction to begin immediately without having to increase those fees.

It is anticipated that the long-term bonds will be sold in 1989 and the proceeds, along with surplus funds, will be used to pay off the Bond Anticipation Notes.

THE TENNIS COURT plans, specifications and grading plans, as part of the Rice/Carlson Expansion Project, are nearing completion. The projects will go out for bid on about June 10.

Location of the new courts will be in the area between the college park and the old softball field on the east side of the campus.

WSC administrative officials also presented capital-improvement requests for 1986-87.

Listed as the first priority is to provide $20,000 for formal program planning for an addition to the Peterson Fine Arts Building.

The additions to the Fine Arts Building would bring pottery and sculpture back into the building, away from the Memorial Stadium enclosure and the power plant; larger classrooms with capacities of up to 90 students for Music and General Culture and Art Appreciation Courses; an acoustically correct lecture/recital room with a raised stage; student and staff meeting rooms; expansion for the Radio-TV and Theatre areas in addition to upgrading equipment; scene shop area; and storage of costumes.

It is planned that Theatre and Broadcast Communications would occupy the west addition and Art would occupy the east addition.

Priority number two is the renovation of Cornwell Hall — $5,000 for space needs and utilization study. Listed as a third priority is the paving and surfacing of campus parking lots at $173,110 (pave Morey, Hospital and Bowen Lots).

The fourth priority is the acquisition of property, referred to as the remaining lots between Schreiner Drive and Walnut Street, from 12th to 14th Street.

Preserve resources

Our natural resources are disappearing at an alarming rate. It seems that some people think that mother nature will continually replace things that are used or wasted and that she will be able to do it almost overnight.

Natural resources are those things that were here when man arrived. Natural resources such as the soil, trees, wildlife, water, native plants and grasses are going much faster than mother nature can replace them. All of these resources were put on this great earth for a purpose.

Somewhere along the line these things fit into a chain and they are an important link in this chain.

Take for instance our soil.

Erosion is a natural process, but man has helped to speed it up. By over tilling the soil we make it more susceptible to wind and water erosion. These winds and rains wash away the fertile topsoil causing your land to produce less unless you step up your fertilization.

Trees help to protect our land from wind erosion. As the trees are being removed, the wildlife are loosing their homes and habitat. These wooded areas, that once provided habitat for our wildlife are disappearing. As the habitat goes, so goes the wildlife.

Water is another of our natural resources that people don't give a second thought to. With all the fertilizers and herbicides that are being put on the farm land, our water supply could be in trouble. These chemicals are being washed into our rivers, streams, ponds and lakes.

Our native plants and grasses are being plowed up as the land is being planted to row crops. These plants and grasses helped to hold the soil in place, once they are gone the soil has nothing to prevent it from eroding.

These are but a few of our natural resources that are being abused. Once these are gone, what will there be for the future?

What will your children have left to produce their crops, to drink, to shade their homes and to enjoy?

Conserving our natural resources is up to you as they are disappearing now, and won't be around for future generations unless we do something about it today.

Our cartoonist from Luther, Montana, who draws the cartoon J.P. Doodles which you see every issue on our editorial pages, is the type of guy who likes to get personal with those newspapers using his services.

He will often send a letter which sometimes contains an article clipped from another newspaper, which he feels "presents the humorous stuff the newspaper business is made of."

His most recent contribution with his last batch of Doodles cartoons came from a column written by Joyce Odum, editor of the Goose Creek Gazette.

The actual origin of the content in her column isn't known as of yet.

What she used was a list of sentences which the writer claims have actually appeared in church bulletins.

Now some of these might be offensive to clergy or other individuals, so don't read on.

I find, after being criticized for not covering stories or misprinting a name or using terrible writing style, that it's nice to poke some fun at other writers.

Here is what some of the bulletin blunders mentions:

"This afternoon there will be a meeting in the south and north end of the church. Children will be baptized at both ends."

"Tuesday at 4 p.m., the Ladies Literary Society will meet. Mrs. Anderson will sing 'Put Me In My Little Bed' accompanied by the pastor."

"Wednesday there will be an 'ice cream' social beginning at 5 p.m. All ladies giving milk will please come early."

"Thursday evening the Little Mothers Club will meet. All wishing to become Little Mothers will meet with the Minister in his study."

"This being Easter Sunday, we will ask Mrs. Thomas to come forward and lay an egg on the altar. The service will close with 'Little Drops of Water'. One of the ladies will speak quietly and the rest of the congregation will join in."

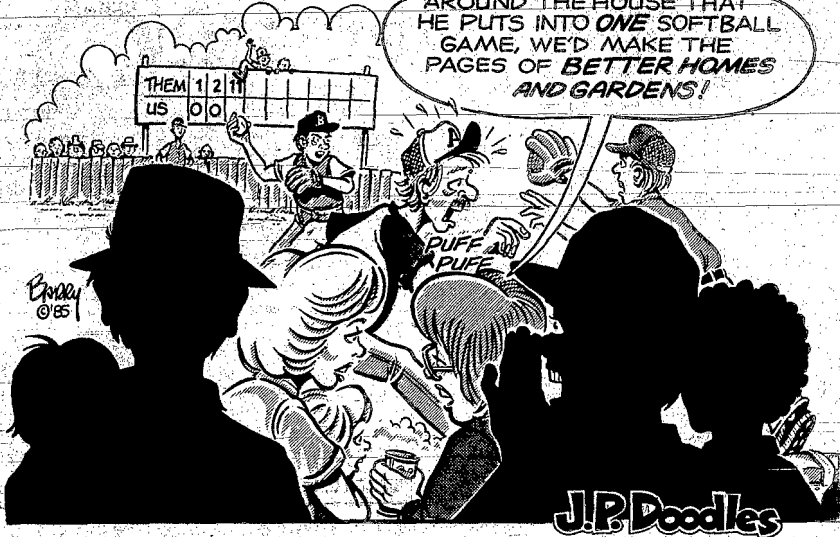

"On next Sunday, a special collection will be taken to defray the expense of the new carpet. All wishing to do something on the new carpet, please come forward."

"The ladies of the church have cast off clothing of every kind and they may be seen in the church basement on Friday afternoon."

"Ladies, don't forget the rummage sale. A good time to get rid of things not worth keeping and too good to throw away. Bring your husbands."

"That's the end of that. Like I said, it's nice to see someone else make mistakes once in a while to let you know nobody's perfect."

Future of agriculture, rural communities topic of discussion at Nebraska Council on Public Relations for Agriculture meeting

Nebraskans "need a new vision" in coping with the impact of the current farm crisis on rural communities around the state, historian Robert Manley told members of the Nebraska Council on Public Relations for Agriculture at its annual meeting here May 24.

Manley, resident historian with the Stuhr Museum at Grand Island, said the inactivity and imagination of such a vision would be similar to that shown by early state and national leaders who developed the Homestead Act, resulting in settlement of much of Nebraska and the Great Plains. While some historians call the Act a failure because of the large number of claims filed in relation to those who actually stayed on the land, Manley disagreed. He said that the relinquishment provision of the Act contributed greatly to the establishment of rural Nebraska communities.

Manley reminded listeners that agricultural crises have occurred several times since the late 1800s, and cycle periods between prosperity and economic depression have been very short.

Developing the theme that agricultural crises have been a feature of the state's history, Manley said "much of what happens today is echoed in the past." Inflated land values, heavy debts and bank closings in the late 1880s led one doom-sayer to lament "the end of Nebraska agriculture."

"How you define a crisis determines its solution," Manley said, urging Nebraskans not to give up on the future of agriculture. Each time agriculture has emerged from a crisis, there have been some gains, he said. "We need more of those (citizens) who concede 'we made a mistake' but are willing to go ahead."

CITING ANOTHER opinion in comparison to many observers of the farm scene, Manley said he is convinced "the key to a successful agriculture is prosperous towns."

Towns and farms are more than a relationship, they are part of the same package, Manley said. Manley called for a rebuilding of Nebraska communities to serve current needs.

Another speaker on the program, Robert Bernier, director of the Nebraska Business Development Center at the University of Nebraska at Omaha, said communities have four sources of income: agriculture, tourism, industry and transportation. Many Nebraska communities' locations were determined as agriculture collection points for railroads, being built through the countryside and do not fit modern market areas, he said.

Bernier ticked off a familiar list of factors contributing to the decline in population and economic viability of small communities: a drop in population because of farm fewer but larger trends; increased mobility of people rising expectations in relation to amenities of life available at larger centers; an aging population; and competition from direct sales which "make it tough on struggling mainstreet retailers."

Bernier said an average of 80 catalogs are received in an American home during the year, and direct sales "outstrip every other mode" of retail sales.

One of the biggest problems, he said, is "what retail outlets in a community are doing to themselves." Discount stores which move into every smaller community hire part-time employees for long daily hours and weekends. Meanwhile operators of local-based businesses may seek a better quality of life for themselves by staying open shorter hours and closing on weekends. Discount stores "are not concerned with lifestyle," he more variety and turn inventory more often. He also mentioned an apparent "double standard" in the perception of customers, who expect to have credit extended by the local drugstore, but would not expect to "receive it" at chain pharmacy outlet, for example.

He emphasized the need for the "entrepreneur" approach of building building hope, building business and building communities. Some potentials exist, he said, offering a real life example where, in a western Nebraska community, a large vacant store was rehabilitated, with one business using half the building, and three other formerly home-based business sharing the other half. The four proprietors shared cash-register duties and other functions, allowing the complex to stay open more hours with a minimum number of employees and still allowing workers time off.

The "highest paid qualities" in the United States, he said, are enthusiasm, which demands the greatest return business and the community; and "intellectual curiosity."

"There are lots of 'buds waiting to blossom' in potential business establishment and expansion in Nebraska communities," Bernier said, with the right application of ingenuity, creativity and hard work.

Gambling bill

A mounting gambling bill was derailed on May 15 when a majority of the State Senators, including Senator Elroy Hefner of the Legislative District 19, voted not to consider LB 144. That is the video slot gambling bill. Their responsible action caused the bill to remain on General File.

I would hope that the people of this particular legislative district will recognize that the action taken by their senator is indeed commendable. All of us can be made glad that we do have a core of senators who yet believe that ultimately the responsibilities and laws of government are "to provide for the common defense and the general welfare" of the people. Open gambling laws, slowly but surely, erode that principle.

Allow me to urge the citizens "to practice some positive citizenship" by applauding the stand taken by this elect official. The stratagem being reported to by the proponents of the bill is devious and it demands your senator's continued attention. LB 144 hangs like the "Sword of Damocles" over their heads.

The senators also need our encouragement because the pressure for them to alter or trade their votes being greatly intensified, due to the powerful influence of the large number of highly paid lobbyists who are working hard to get the video slot gambling bill passed. Your senator deserves your appreciation and support. Thank you.

Bridal display at museum

By La Von Anderson
Bridal gowns dating back as far as 1888 are being displayed during the month of June at the Wayne County Historical Museum, located at 7th and Lincoln Sts. in Wayne.

The collection, featuring approximately 25 wedding dresses, has been put together by the Wayne County Historical Society and the Confusable Collectables Quilters Club.

Loreta Tompkins, Quilters president, said the public is invited to tour the museum and view the special display each Sunday afternoon during June from 2 to 5 p.m.

Also on display are wedding pictures, gifts, trousseaus, and a framed marriage certificate from 1912.

TOMPKINS SAID the bridal display is designed to re-acquaint the public with the museum and help increase visitor attendance. "So many times our local people feel that once they have visited the museum they've seen it all," said Tompkins, adding that the museum has more items than room to display them.

She said the special showings are a way of displaying the museum's many collections and encouraging the public to return again and again.

ALTHOUGH THE bridal display is being featured during the month of June only, the museum is open each Sunday afternoon throughout the summer months.

Special tours can be arranged by calling 375-1513 or 375-2120.

No admission is charged, however donations are appreciated.

Visitors to the museum during the bridal display will be treated to iced tea and cookies. Visitors also will have an opportunity to sample an old-fashioned wedding cake made from an 1880 recipe.

Families can cope with change
Families can never predict all of the changes they will face in the future, but there are ways to cope with the stress of those changes.

Successful coping can lead to a stronger family, and strong families often cope better.

HERB LINGREN, extension family life specialist, feels there are two major components in coping with change — patience and time.

"We have to improve areas of weakness within the family so that when change is required, the family system will respond and adapt rather than crumble," he said.

Change and stress go hand in hand. The amount of stress depends on the type of change and how the family reacts to the change. Basically, there are four types of change that families face.

EXPECTED AND UNEXPECTED changes, like a marriage or vacation cause minimal stress.

Expected and unwanted changes like the physical changes of growing older or paying taxes can be more stressful.

Some unexpected changes may be pleasant, such as a promotion at work, but less stressful than negative unexpected changes.

The hardest changes to cope with are the unexpected and unwanted. These include accidents or the death of a loved one. Usually a family can handle one or two stressful events.

When several changes occur simultaneously the family can suffer from stress pile-up. Imagine a family that experiences a major illness, vacation, and job relocation in just a few months.

Not all of the changes have been negative, but the family may still have problems coping. The family may begin to feel that things are changing too quickly and family members are losing touch.

THE FAMILY that can concentrate on individual and family strengths during times of change will cope more successfully.

In times of stress and change, the family needs to keep the lines of communication open. They need to take time to talk with each other, listen to each other's feelings, and work out the difficulties.

The final type of change is a long term stressful event. A lengthy illness or long period of unemployment is especially difficult to cope with successfully. Family members may become drained and abandon successful coping methods.

The challenge is to keep family members concentrating on their strengths in times of stress.

Wayne girls add two wins to record

The opening week of summer softball action for the 18-under girls team was a successful one for Wayne, as they picked up an additional pair of wins in their latest outings.

On Wednesday evening, May 29, Wayne hosted Emerson in their first home game of the season and held on for a 7-5 win. The following night, Thursday, May 30, Wayne went on the road and trounced Thurston in a 16-4 ballgame. With an earlier win over Homer and a forfeit win over Walthill, the local girls record moved to 4-0.

The Wayne 18-under girls, along with the 15-under girls team, are scheduled to play at Pender tomorrow (Tuesday) evening and will meet Wakefield for games on Wednesday night, June 5.

WAYNE HELD OFF a late rally in the top of the seventh inning by Emerson to preserve their win on Wednesday. With two out in the top of the inning, Emerson capitalized on a pair of walks and base hit to score their final runs.

A Sarah Lebsack triple in the first inning brought in two of Wayne's three runs to help them obtain the lead, scoring Lisa Jacobsen and Karen Longe. A double by Longe in the third inning scored Paula Koplin and was the only other extra base hit of the game. Jacobsen popped out a single to account for Wayne's third hit.

Roni Johnson went the distance on the mound for Wayne, striking out nine Emerson batters, walking four and allowing five hits. The Emerson pitcher gave up five walks in the game.

Coach Marilyn Sirato, in her first year with the team, was pleased with the squad's play and their ability to handle difficult defensive situations. "Our defense played good...they were able to get us out of the inning in a couple of bases-loaded situations, which was a key.

THE LOCAL GIRLS had an easier time with Thurston in their Thursday night game, coming up with a nine-run third inning to rap up a 16-4 win.

Wayne held a healthy 7-1 lead going into the top of the third inning and more than doubled their point total with four hits and three walks in their turn at the plate. With one out, Sarah Lebsack belted a home run to score Lisa Jacobsen and Koleette Frevert for three runs, followed by a trio of walks and consecutive base hits by Lori Jacobsen, Roni Johnson and Amy Jordan to load up bases and set up Wayne's scoring.

Lebsack's home run was the only extra base hit of the night. Johnson rapped out two singles and Lori Jacobsen, Jordan, Leslie Kealing, Laura Kealing and Frevert all collected one base hit.

Johnson pitched the first three innings, striking out six batters while allowing three walks and one run. Laura Kealing finished out the game with three walks and one strike out.

SEVERAL RESIDENTS of the Wayne Care Centre got together one sunny afternoon and planted a garden south of the facility. Within a few months, they will likely be enjoying the yield from their own little plot.

League

residents have experienced physical disability. "I never had any reason to believe that those figures were lower in the rural areas of the state," Henke said.
Overall, the Norfolk office has provided its services to nearly 300 individuals. The organization also serves as an advocacy agency in the area of keeping areas accessible to the disabled.
"We're not watchdogs. But we do observe when buildings are being built in communities," she said.
Wayne is "better than some communities" in providing accessibility to the handicap, she said, mentioning the handicap parking signs and curb cuts along Main Street.
The organization also works with Home Health Care, Social Services, Goldenrod Hills, Wayne Care Centre and Region IV and is involved in public speaking. "We would like to do more of public speaking. It allows us to talk about disability awareness and help spread the word," she said.

SERVICES WHICH League of Human Dignity lists include counseling, case management, independent living skills training, peer counseling, equipment loan and rental, barrier removal, consultation, public education, information and referral and the personal care attendant program.

Organizational staff and advisors help recruit people to work as personal care attendants. Individuals with physical disabilities can call the League of Human Dignity requesting a personal care attendant.
"The people with the disability do the interviewing, hiring and training. The contract stays in their hands. The attendants are generally paid minimum wage and are occasionally live-ins," she said.

Henke said that getting disabled individuals to use the service is the same as it would be for any other group of people, embarking on something new. "Some are well-aware of individual goals they know they want and are ready to problem solve. Then there are some that are not aware of the options."
"Some are uncomfortable about losing their dependence," she said.
Generally, these people will choose what goals they want to have more control of in their environment and lifestyles, she mentioned.
Some agencies can be frustrated with those with severe disabilities. But not the League, according to Henke. At times, agencies need to be creative, off-the-wall and extraordinary in dealing with the severely disabled.

Because of the technological era this nation is in, Henke said "we always find that there is a way to aid the disabled."

Anyone from this area wanting to get involved with the League of Human Dignity or who is interested in their services can call Matches at the Wayne Chamber office (375-2200) or the Norfolk League of Human Dignity office at 700 1/2 West Benjamin (371-4475).

The Family

I've been praying for rain so the Big Farmer would get out of the field and take me to my high school alumni banquet, but it doesn't look as though we are going to make it.

We are going to York on Memorial Day for a family reunion, though. I have cousins here from Arizona, Colorado and Texas for Bradshaw's alumni banquet, so we thought we'd get together a monthly early to see them. These opportunities are too few and far between. As we get older, we cherish them more.

This one reunion enables me to see a lot of relatives, since my Mom's sisters both married cousins of my Dad, and they are half-brothers! No one is his own grandpa that I know of, though.

Their last name is Stuhr, my grandmother's maiden name. Stuhr is a common German name in Nebraska, and we've not been able to find any link between our family tree and that of the Stuhr Museum at Grand Island.

My mother's name was Kruse, another common Germanic surname. But my maiden name was Staehr, pronounced stare, which is not so common. In fact, if they carry that handle, they're probably related to me. I was telling some friends how small the world really is at lunch the other day.

WHEN I WAS a student on affiliation at Denver Children's Hospital, a little patient was all excited one day because his vicar was coming to visit.

He introduced me to a pleasant young man as his nurse. The vicar looked at my name pin and exclaimed, "Staehr, that was my mother's name!" Indeed, he was the son of my father's cousin. And after I had lived in Wayne County a few years, I discovered that the young man had graduated from Carroll High School when his father, Martin Reetz, was the pastor there.

Six years ago, at an international convention of a woman's organization of our church in Omaha, I was visiting with a lady from Montana. She mentioned she had relatives at Waco, the Nabers. I asked if that had been her maiden name. She replied, "No, my name was Staehr."

Her grandfather, Carsten Staehr, had been a brother to mine, had lived in North Dakota, and I had only met him once. So we had a good visit, and I plan to see her again in Ames in July.

Incidentally, my brother-in-law was born in Wayne 40 years ago in August, and was adopted by a couple at York. He would love to meet his birth mother.

DID YOU happen to see "Do You Remember Love?" on CBS last week? Joanne Woodward started as a 50-year-old college professor afflicted with Alzheimer's disease. It was very well done.

The support group postponed its meeting by one week so its members could stay home and watch.

Miss Woodward's own mother has Alzheimer's, which is why she agreed to the part. Actually, I believe she is a better actor than her husband; but, of course, Paul has those blue eyes.

The February newsletter of the Lincoln ADRDA group had this by Kathleen Siegle of Cleveland, Ohio: One of my Grandmas Gives me hugs. And sends cards in the mail On my birthday. And sometimes, "Just Because." One of my Grandmas Can't remember Why I am. Or what day it is. So I give her hugs. "Just Because."
