Groundbreaking at WSC

Grant award to Wayne State

A $176,600 federal grant has been given to Wayne State College by the United States Department of Education, according to Dr. Donald W. Whisenunt, vice president of Wayne State College.

The development grant, under the Institutional Aid: Strengthening Program of Title III of the Department of Education, was funded in three main components.

One will strengthen the college's planning, management and evaluation capabilities, Whisenunt said. The areas to be affected are institutional research, automated information handling, techniques and information-based planning and evaluation.

The grant will also fund the planning and development of a commercial art program at Wayne State. The program, Whisenunt said, will complement the college's existing studio art program.

Money will also provide for improvements in student advising, fund a program to study student attrition rates and improve student skills through the college's Teaching Learning Center.

The grant has been approved for three years, with Wayne State receiving $176,600 for the first year on Oct. 1, the beginning of the new federal fiscal year.

Wayne State also will submit proposals for funding the remaining two years of the grant.

Colleges to decide fate of cuts

by Chuck Hackenmiller

The Board of Trustees of the Nebraska State Colleges voted 5-1 on Friday to allow each state college institution to collect its own shortfall of intercollegiate athletics funding independently.

Casting the lone vote against the proposal was Alan Cramer of Wayne, who was elected Friday as president.

For the fourth time — of the state college trustee's board.

During the final days of debate on the appropriations bill this year, cuts were made in the General Fund support of intercollegiate athletics. Wayne State College's share of the total $303,000 cut from the General Fund was $68,738.

Kearney State College would have the greatest reduction, $104,490 while Chadron State's would be $70,345 and Peru State's cut would be $39,427.

These figures were based on what is half of the current year's intercollegiate athletic budget.

Cramer had introduced a motion earlier in the meeting to eliminate, from the state colleges of Peru, Kearney and Chadron, intercollegiate sports which Wayne State College does not have.

Each state college would have eight major sports, including football, volleyball, men's basketball, women's basketball, women's track, men's track, baseball and softball.

"Sports such as swimming, wrestling, golf, tennis and, in Chadron's case, rodeo, would be eliminated," Cramer said on Friday.

His motion failed to pass by a 5-1 margin.

"So a motion was made to let each college find the money [to compensate for the general fund reduction] the best way they can," he said.

CRAMER SAID Kearney and Peru are considering adding a cost per each student of $10 per semester, labeling the excess cost as an emergency fee.

It was also reported that Kearney State officials are considering dropping its first football game this fall.

All state colleges, Cramer said, will be looking at reducing athletic activities, possibly cutting out games or reducing the load of coaches and having the coaches put more time in to teaching, decreasing equipment costs and holding down on travel expenses.

Wayne State, he feels, will be getting its money for its present intercollegiate athletics program eventually because it "can't lose any of the intercollegiate sports it already has."

Cramer summed up the importance of athletics at the state college level during Friday's meeting.

"From the days of the Normal Schools, to State Teachers Colleges and today as state colleges, a primary mission of these institutions has been teacher training," Cramer said.

"Last year, teacher candidates comprised the second largest graduation group — second only to business," he said. "Teaching includes coaching. Contracts offered our graduates often require coaching — Science and coaching, English and coaching, Math and coaching."

HE SAID THE athletic fields of the State Colleges are laboratories for Nebraska's future teachers, every bit as much as science labs, computer labs and language labs. Not only for hundreds of coaches but for Nebraska's future band and music directors, her future cheerleader sponsors and teachers, her future athletic trainers and sports writers.

"Young men and women that want to coach — even though they might not participate in college — won't attend institutions without athletic programs."

Cramer said their choices are to attend the University of Nebraska if they can afford it, attend a community college, go elsewhere, or don't attend college at all.

"These are reasons athletics are important, serving more students than any other program at the state colleges," he said.

"But we cannot ignore problems of the state any more than we can ignore the problems of Nebraska's high schools and grade schools. The legislature has told us to look at intercollegiate athletics and we have done that," he added.

ALSO ON FRIDAY, the Board of Trustees voted to increase the tuition at the state colleges 5.5 percent. The 5.5 percent increase will result in the following rates: Resident, from $27.50 this year to $29 in 1985-86. Non-resident, from $46 this year to $48.50 in 1985-86.

The tuition percentage hike will increase the cash funds at Wayne State College by $86,228, according to a report filed by Richard Bringetson, secretary and executive officer of the state college board of trustees.

In addition to the tuition hike, the board of trustees accepted the preliminary budget of the four state colleges, board officers and the state college system.

Wayne State College's fiscal year appropriation for 1985-86 is anticipated to increase over the previous year by 32 percent in the general funding; 4.5 percent in the cash funding; 7.8 percent in federal funding; 6.9 percent in revenue funding for a total 2.7 percent increase.

The allocations are to be viewed as preliminary, pending outcome of the board of trustee's decisions on salary increases; acceptance of any reallocations created by the decreased funding for intercollegiate athletics; final health insurance costs for 1985-86; decisions on distribution of discretionary funds by the board of trustees; adoption of the tuition rates for 1985-86; and additional revenue sources.

Wayne State College officials had originally requested an 11 percent increase in allocations. Governor Kerrey sliced that amount down to a 6.3 percent increase, which was decreased even further by the Appropriation Committee to the 2.7 percent figure.

Brothers and sisters meet after 37-year separation

By LaVon Anderson

The brothers and sisters are seated around the table — each a little reluctant to begin. Each looking to the other for reassurance. Soon, smiles become intermingled with tears as their stories unfold and the years that have kept them apart seem to fade.

Marketa, Clara and Henry, the oldest of the family, are seated on the other side. Their children's memories still haunt them after 37 years. They're here, willing to go back.

ABSENT FROM THE gathering is Lucille. The brothers and sisters believe she may be living in the west. Fred's place at the table was filled in a car accident in Arizona in 1948.

John, the alien as he was nicknamed by his 12-year-old sister, the youngest of the eight children, he stayed with his wife, Wilma, and was unable to return to Nebraska for 37 years. He was the other five brothers and sisters, but together for the first time in nearly 40 years.

The family was reunited in the home of the brothers and sisters, Bob and Marie Miller, at the farm home of Bob Miller's next door neighbor, near Wayne.

John, who was never married, was the only one of his brothers and sisters who was never married. Standing next to Bob was his wife, Marie, who was born in 1914.

Clara, who was married to a man who died in 1948, was the only one of her brothers and sisters who was never married. She was the only one of her brothers and sisters who was never married.

Cutting sports

There was a viewpoint drawn out during discussion at Friday's Nebraska State College Board of Trustees meeting in Lincoln which is certainly worth investigating and pursuing.

Newly elected president of the Board of Trustees, Alan Cramer, indicated by motion he would like to see the three other state colleges (Kearney, Peru and Chadron) scale down their intercollegiate sports level to match the number of intercollegiate sports (eight) offered by Wayne State College.

Those sports include football, volleyball, womens and mens basketball, men and womens track, baseball and softball.

Years ago, WSC had wrestling and swimming teams added from its athletic programs. Most recently, golf was an activity that was severed from the program.

Cramer's motion was turned down by a 5-1 vote. That is unfortunate.

Now WSC will have to deal with how to cope with $68,000 of less funding for its intercollegiate sports.

WSC's athletic program is certainly on the upswing in both mens and womens sports. Singing out any additional WSC sport to put on the chopping block would be difficult to do, since the fat of the sports program has already been trimmed to the bare bone.

To reduce any more WSC sports, without eliminating some of the other sports at Kearney, Chadron or Peru, would be unfair and certainly not in the best interest of the state college system.

Wayne State College has endured with its earlier intercollegiate sports cost. Couldn't the other state colleges to the same?

Good story or good government?

It was the kind of story they love here. Dr. Donald Devine, director of the Office of Personnel Management during President Reagan's first term, was fighting for reconfirmation when a "smoking gun" appeared.

Dr. Devine, it seems signed an order before his term expired preserving many of his powers as an assistant to the acting director. Amidst the blistering indignation of a Senate committee reviewing his reappointment, Dr. Devine withdrew.

But if you believe that this tiny tempest was the real reason for Dr. Devine's downfall; let me offer you this deed to the Brooklyn Bridge. The fact is, Dr. Devine ran afoul of the federal employee unions and the liberal Washington establishment.

Devine aimed an arrow right at the heart of the run-the-country-from-Washington crowd by targeting the size and scope of the federal bureaucracy and its independence to carry out policy contrary to the expressed wishes of the people.

He reduced civilian employment in non defense agencies by the full-time equivalent of 75,000 persons — both through reductions in force and through reforms like increasing the use of temporary employees. He attempted to ensure that federal employees are rewarded and promoted on the basis of merit, and worked to bring federal pay and benefits more in line with that in the private sector. He cut his own staff and budget 25 percent — almost unheard of in Washington.

It is estimated that his efforts could save a total of $44 billion by 1986. In short, Dr. Devine did what the American people Elected President Reagan to do in 1980 and 1984 — reduce spending, pare waste, eliminate bureaucracy and restore power to the people.

INSTEAD OF REAPING the due reward for his efforts, Dr. Devine became the latest victim of a form of Washington trench warfare which works something like this:

"An interest group or disaffected holdover employee will leak some 'dirty' about an administration official to a congressional staffer. The legislator involved alerts the media, calls a hearing, and in full view of the television cameras, goes into high dudgeon about the breach of ethics or moral behavior. Sensitive supporters back off — and the targeted official resigns or is fired.

The beauty of the whole process is that an outright illegality or breach of ethics isn't even needed. In scandal-mad Washington, a hint of "conflict of interest" or "the appearance of impropriety" — catchall phrases that allow opponents to throw everything but the kitchen sink — is enough to get Congress, the permanent bureaucracy and the news media hounding at one's door.

But the real scandal is that this process, as in the case of Dr. Devine, is used to block not appointees, but policies — policies the people want, but the liberal Washington establishment does not.

Besides the inane response Dr. Devine received, for his achievements, all Americans should be concerned about the message sent by this episode. That message is: "If you as a government official intend to do what the American people want — to — and of Congress, the federal bureaucracy and interest groups, in the process — we be lieve you. No effort will be spared, and no stone unturned, to keep you from accomplishing your goals."

Good managers inside government, and out, are quickly getting the message. Will we see another Don Devine anytime soon?

Once in a great while, we achieve a "first time for everything" at the Wayne Herald office.

Wednesday, as we all know, was a day for staying inside — for making paper dolls, taking naps, laying out a newspaper (sometimes done all at once) — because it was raining constantly. Nobody in their right mind would want to schedule an outside activity.

The ballgames were called off. But the Rice-Carlson addition groundbreaking ceremony was to go on as planned.

Naturally I anticipated the important event to be inside, since water from the Rice Auditorium drain pipes was flowing like a jet stream and everyone would look like drowned rats, if they decided to have the groundbreaking outside near the north tennis courts.

One of the custodians at the college said everyone was outside for the ceremony. At this time it was raining terribly hard. I had an umbrella with me which proved helpful in some ways and but was a hindrance. In all practicality (I'll explain about that a little later).

I made a mad dash to the canopy where approximately 20 or more individuals found protection from the pelted raindrops. I managed to squeeze my front toe inside the canopy while the rain umbrella protected me from rain in other directions.

WHILE MOVING around the fringes of the canopy, I decided there was no way a photo could be snapped without stepping into this heavy rain. I grabbed the umbrella and proceeded toward the front of the speaker's podium, where President Ed Elliott had the floor. I tried holding my un-brella and the camera at the same time without getting either for the $500 equipment full of moisture.

As the shots clicked off, the raindrops clicked on to my lens. The umbrella — well, it was like trying to drive a Volkswagen with the top down in a downpour.

I managed to squeeze back in the tent in time to hear that it was time for the three dignitaries — our publisher Alan Cramer, Mayor Wayne Marsh and Elliott — to dig into the mud.

Again it was out in the rain. This time I was joined by two other photographers, Dick Manley and Steve Jones. Because of the moisture falling on my camera, my Nikon's light meter malfunctioned and I had to guess on the fow much or how little my camera settings should be.

The three groundbreaking diggers went at it long and hard. Actually, I think they were just bailing out the water inside that canopy.

By this time, I didn't care about myself getting drenched. I was more worried about the camera. At this point I realized my camera bag with all the lenses was left open in the back of the canopy.

Later on, there was this picture possibility of water gushing wildly down the steps leading into Memorial Stadium. To get a good angle, I needed to step right in front of the rushing water as it rolled down the steps.

At least I found out whether or not my shoes hold water. They don't.

All in all, it was a most unique afternoon and one of the most unusual groundbreaking ceremonies that I've ever been involved with.

But oh, how that rain was nice for the agricultural outlook. I think both the Rice-Carlson expansion and the rainfall were welcomed with optimism.

REMEMBER, KIDS...

"SOME FIREWORKS ARE A NUISANCE..."

"SOME ARE DANGEROUS..."

"AND SOME ARE ILLEGAL!!"

Council offers tips for safe July 4

Each year, thousands of people require emergency room treatment for injuries associated with fireworks, according to the Safety Council of Nebraska.

Many states have laws which prohibit or restrict the use of fireworks. These laws vary state to state and often lack proper enforcement. The Safety Council of Nebraska says that a total ban of all fireworks, except those used by professional pyrotechnicians under controlled circumstances, is the best way to minimize firework-related injuries.

The Safety Council of Nebraska recommends visiting a professional fireworks display. However, if a home display is shown, the following safety advice should be heeded.

• Store all fireworks in a cool, dry place. Handle each device carefully to avoid damaging the fuse.

• Always read the directions which explain how to properly ignite the device.

• Never allow small children to handle any kind of fireworks. Although fireworks such as sparklers are not considered "dangerous fireworks," their estimate burning temperature is more than 1000°F.

• Always ignite fireworks outdoors, in a clear area away from people, houses and flammable materials.

• Never place fireworks in a container; flying particles can injure bystanders.

• Never experiment with fireworks by taking them apart or combining them with other fireworks devices.

• Light one device at a time and stay a safe distance away from it.

• And keep water or a fire extinguisher nearby for emergencies.

Tax center reviews impact of reform proposals

Part II. Beneficial's Tax Center offices have received a steady flow of inquiries from their tax preparation customers about the impact that various reform proposals might have on their financial situations.

These questions and answers are based on our current understanding of the President's package. President Reagan's proposals are not law. They will be debated for some time in Congress, and some of the provisions could be changed before they are brought to a vote.

STATE AND LOCAL TAXES

(Q) - Will state and local income taxes be deductible?

(A) - No. State and local taxes will not be deductible unless they are incurred in a business or income-producing activity (e.g. rental property).

(Q) - Will state sales tax and personal property taxes be deductible?

(A) - No. These taxes are included in the general definition of state and local taxes and would not be deductible, again, unless incurred in a business or income-producing activity.

(Q) - Must I have paid all 1985 state and local taxes prior to January 1, 1986?

(A) - As a matter of sound tax planning, it is generally a good idea to accelerate deductions into the current year to obtain tax benefits as early as possible. However, this is not required. Further, you should not accelerate the payment of your 1985 state and local taxes solely on the premise that they will not be deductible in 1986. The President's proposal is just that, a proposal, and several changes could be made in Congress before any provisions are enacted into law. A prudent idea would be to continue to monitor the proposal's progress in Congress through the remainder of this year to see where it is headed. If, in November, or December, it appears that the President's package might be enacted into law next year, it would be advisable to pay all 1985 taxes prior to January 1, 1986, in order to obtain the full benefit of the deductions.

CHARITABLE CONTRIBUTIONS

(Q) - How will charitable deductions be affected?

(A) - Taxpayers who itemize deductions would be able to continue to fully deduct charitable contributions. However, short term filers will lose this deduction.

PERSONAL EXEMPTIONS AND OTHER DEDUCTIONS

(Q) - How will personal exemptions status change?

(A) - Each exemption would increase to $2,000 from the current $1,200. Elderly or blind taxpayers would no longer receive an extra exemption. However, the current tax benefits for the elderly, blind and disabled would be combined in a single credit.

(Q) - How much will my standard deduction be?

(A) - The standard deduction (zero bracket amount) would increase from the current $2,390 to $2,900 for single filers, $2,390 to $3,600 for head of household filers, and $3,540 to $4,000 for joint returns.

(Q) - In the past, I have claimed a two wage-earner deduction. Can I continue to do so?

(A) - No. Under the proposal, this deduction for working couples, formally designed to reduce the "marriage penalty," would be eliminated. Presumably, this lost benefit would be offset by the reduction in tax rates and increase in personal exemptions.

INCOME AVERAGING

(Q) - I have averaged my income. Can I continue to do so in the future?

(A) - No. This method would be eliminated under this proposal.

IRA'S AND 401 (K) PLANS

(Q) - How are IRA's to be affected?

(A) - A non-working spouse would be eligible to make a maximum $2,000 contribution instead of the current $250. All other rules remain the same.

(Q) - I have a qualified 401 (k) salary deferral plan. Will it continue?

(A) - Yes. However, it would be subject to an overall limitation of the lesser of 10 percent of your salary or $8,000 per year. In addition, any contributions made by you to your IRA would reduce this amount. For example, if you contribute $2,000 to an IRA, the maximum amount which you would be allowed to contribute to your 401 (k), for the year, would be limited to $6,000.

BENEFITS

(Q) - Will I pay taxes on my unemployment compensation?

(A) - Unemployment compensation now partially taxable, would be fully taxable under this proposal.

(Q) - Will I be taxed on my health benefits paid for by my company?

(A) - Yes. Under the proposal, a single individual would be taxed on the first $120 of employer contributions to a health care plan. A married individual, with coverage for his entire family, would be taxed on the first $300 of such contributions.

(Q) - Will my social security benefits be taxed?

(A) - There is no change in the present law. However, taxpayers currently having income in excess of the base amount (a) $32,000 for filing status married filing joint, (b) $0 if married filing separately, and (c) $25,000 for any other filing status, may have a portion of their benefits taxed.

(Q) - Will the money I pay for child care still be deductible?

(A) - Yes. However, the current tax credit would become a deduction subject to a maximum allowance of $2,400 for one child and $4,800 for two or more.

Putting food by

Saving something you have in abundance now for the time when you will need it is "putting food by."

That early 19th century phrase still applies to food preservation today. Canning, freezing or drying the summer abundance means a taste of summer during the dead of winter.

Today, fresh fruits and vegetables are available year-round in supermarkets. Putting food by is still a way of saving money for some families.

A well stocked freezer or rows of canned goods can mean lower bills at the grocery store.

THE AMOUNT OF money saved depends on several factors. The equipment you have available, cost of products, and the time needed to preserve the food are the major considerations.

People with special dietary needs for low salt or sugar free foods may save even more money over commercially prepared foods.

Whether you preserve food to save money, for enjoyment, or to use excess garden produce, being safe is of prime importance.

Freezing or drying foods usually do not present as many safety concerns as canning foods. Most times, keeping a sanitary work space and following freezing or drying recommendations will insure a safe product.

THERE ARE MORE variables in canning foods at home and can be more chances for food spoilage.

The main reason for canning spoilage is using an unsafe recipe or method. Some methods suggest canning foods in the oven, a crockpot, dishwasher or microwave oven. Recipes often suggest adding aspirin or vinegar to some low acid foods.

None of these methods or recipes is safe.

THERE ARE 20 safe ways to can foods. The boiling water bath is used for high acid foods such as fruits, tomatoes and pickles.

The pressure canner is used for low acid foods including vegetables and meats.

Using the wrong method can result in illness, loss of time, money and food. New every canning series cookbooks have been tested for safety. Compare new recipes to recipes that have been tested by the USDA or canning equipment companies.

Companies such as Kerr or Ball test recipes and have current canning recommendations in their canning booklets.

AN EXCELLENT source of canning, drying and freezing information is your cooperative extension service. Current processing times and recipes are included in several free bulletins named NebUpdates.

There are NebUpdates on jams and jellies, pickles, freezing and canning fruits and vegetables, making jelly and canning meat.

There also are two learn-at-home packets available for a small fee that include complete information on home food preservation or drying foods.

Reunion

"I ran away when I was 16," adds Marketa. "I just couldn't take it anymore."
"We were just plain neglected," adds 54-year-old Clara, the second born. "Mom also was never home and we kids were left to care for ourselves. She (mom), just abandoned us."
"We all have very, very bad memories of those years," interrupts Bob. "I think each of us has buried the past and put a tombstone there."

IN 1946, THE juvenile authorities came into the Marten home and took all the children — except Marketa, who had earlier run away, and Clara, who was already in a juvenile center — to the Nebraska Children's Home.
"We had been taken away twice before," says Bob, "but mom and dad would come around with a song and dance, and the authorities would send us back home with them."
When the youngsters were taken from their home for the last time in 1948, their ages ranged from Hank, who was 13, to little Allen, who was just a toddler, approximately one year of age.

That same year, 1948, after they had been taken from their home, the youngsters' father, Fred, died when he fell from a bridge.
Their mother, Linzie, died of cancer in 1974.
Clara and Marketa, who still reside in Omaha and in later years kept in touch with their mother, were with her when she died.
"When mom was dying," recalls Clara, "her last wish was to see her children."

Hank just shakes his head.
AS THE BROTHERS and sisters sit around the table, Bob's wife DeAnn shows a scrapbook of pictures and clippings she has obtained of the family from the Nebraska Children's Home.
Among the yellowed photos is one of the children on the day they were taken from their home.

Tears well in each of their eyes as the brothers and sisters stare at the picture of themselves taken 37 years ago — in dirty, torn and ragged clothing, their hair matted to their heads. All staring into the camera with utter hopelessness.
"That's not a bad haircut," sobs Belle as she looks down at the photo. "That's where the rats gnawed on my hair."
Belle's photo taken on the day she entered the Children's Home, at age four, was later shown throughout Omaha on buses and flyers as the city's Community Chest Poster Girl.

AN OMAHA WORLD Herald article which was written at the time Belle was placed for adoption, just six months after entering the Children's Home, describes all of the youngsters as being found hungry, dirty, sleeping on rags and trying to care for themselves.
The article also tells how the children were taught to wash properly and brush their teeth.
Orders had been signed making all six of the youngsters available for adoption.

IN THE MEANTIME, Marketa, the oldest, had run away from home in 1945 and had no idea that her youngest brothers and sisters had been taken from her parents.
"I worked odd jobs until I was married," recalls Marketa, adding that following her marriage she wrote to a shirttail uncle asking how she could get in touch with her mother.
It was in 1951 that Marketa once again met her mother and learned the fate of her brothers and sisters.

"Twice divorced and the mother of five children, Marketa was recently laid off from her job at Marchioes Cate in Omaha and today lives in Omaha with Clara.
CLARA, THE second oldest of the Marten children, had been placed in the Riverside Juvenile Home in Douglas County at the age of 14. She remained there until the age of 18 when she was placed in a foster home. From there, she worked in a nursing home until her marriage in 1950.
Today, Clara works as a dietary aide at the Lutheran Home in Omaha. "I took two days off for this occasion," smiles Clara as she looks at her newly found brothers and sisters.

AT AGE 13, Hank was the oldest Marten child to be placed in the Children's Home with his five other brothers and sisters.
He was placed with a foster family and later returned to the Children's Home.
Although he was never adopted, Hank remained with his second foster family, Quinton and Bessie Smith, until entering the service in 1953.

The Smiths, who had four children of their own, resided in western Nebraska and later moved to Littleton, Colo. where they owned a dairy operation.
When Hank was discharged from the service in 1957, he followed the Smiths who had since moved to Seattle, Wash.
Divorced after 17 years of marriage, Hank, 50, continues to make his home in Seattle where he works as a carpenter. He is the father of two children.

SHORTLY AFTER entering the Children's Home, six-year-old Bob was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Leao Behlers and grew up on a farm east of Wisner.
Although his father died nine years ago, Bob's mother Hildegard continues to reside in Wisner.
Bob graduated from Wisner High School and today, at age 42, farms west of Wisner. He and his wife DeAnn are the parents of one daughter, 10-year-old Annette.

FOUR-YEAR-OLD Belle was adopted by Kenneth and Lorene Hopkins just six months after entering the Nebraska Children's Home.
She grew up on a farm near Scottsbluff and graduated from Banner County High School in 1963.
Belle attended Junior College at Scottsbluff before marrying Bennarr Penick in 1968. Today, the Penicks live at Lakin in southwest Kansas and are the parents of three children.
Belle also has an adopted brother, Monty, who farms in Banner County.

THE YOUNGEST of the Marten children, Allen, or Jerry as he was later named, grew up in Beatrice and later moved with his family to Arizona. He is employed by AT&T in Willcox, Ariz.
Lucille, the fourth born, also was adopted, however the brothers and sisters have been able to find out little information about her.
"We don't know her name or where for certain she is living," says Bob's wife DeAnn, "but we believe she is somewhere on the west coast."
Fred, the fifth child, also was adopted. His brothers and sisters learned from the Nebraska Children's Home that he was killed in an automobile accident in 1966.

"WE WERE ALL separated from one another from the very start," says Hank, adding that the youngsters never knew what became of one another.
Because Clara and Marketa remained in Omaha, they later met up with one another at their mother's home.
"Mother contacted me in 1950," recalls Clara, and it was all mother's house that Marketa and I met one another after losing touch for several years.

"I was always concerned about what happened to the other kids," recalls Clara, "especially Henry because he was nearest my age and we were very close."
Although Clara contacted the Children's Home, she received little information regarding the fate of her brothers and sisters.
"Laws were very different back then," says Clara, adding that the laws protected the privacy of the adoptive families.

HANK ALSO BEGAN searching for his brothers and sisters in the early 1970's.
"I always thought about looking for them," says Hank, "but I was so far away and I knew I would involve some time."
This was not to be a waste of time. In 1974 Hank was laid off from his job. The search was on, and Hank began in Leigh, Neb. where he and sisters Clara and Marketa were born.

"I remember I pulled in front of a little store and asked an old gentleman if he remembered my folks."
Not only did the stranger remember Hank's parents, he told him about a cousin still residing in Leigh. The cousin put Hank in touch with his mother's sister, Aunt Mae of Schuyler, who told him where to find Clara and Marketa.
"I felt really guilty when Hank came to the door in 1974," recalls Clara. "I asked for his credentials to prove he was my brother."
He showed me his driver's license, I let him in, and we both broke into tears," smiles Clara.

ALTHOUGH HANK, Clara and Marketa had found one another, there still remained the questioned of whatever happened to Lucille, Fred, Bob, Belle and Allen.
"I too visited the Children's Home to see if they could offer any help," says Hank. "But the only information they could give me was that I had a brother who was killed in a car accident."
THE BREAK CAME in January of 1984 when Bob and DeAnn also wrote to the Children's Home in an effort to locate Bob's family.
"It seems that at some time or other throughout the years we had all been searching for one another," says Bob, adding that he was able to obtain much more information than either Clara or Hank because of laws in recent years which have opened up the books for adopted brothers and sisters looking for one another.

About three weeks after writing to the home, Bob received a letter with the address and phone number of younger sister Belle.
BOB'S VOICE cracks as he remembers that first telephone call to the sister he hadn't seen in 37 years.
"When he said he was my brother Bob, the world just caved in," says a teary-eyed Belle. "I can't even describe my feelings."
Bob and Belle met each other on April 6, 1984 at Minden, Neb. At about that same time, Bob received another letter from the Children's Home telling him of the whereabouts of brother Allen.
And, last Memorial Day, Bob learned that Clara and Marketa were still residing in Omaha. Through them, he and Belle were put in touch with Hank.

LAST WEEKEND, with the help of their mother's Aunt Mae of Schuyler, the five Marten children met with relatives for a picnic in Schuyler.
Although Clara, Marketa and Hank had been in contact, and although Bob and Belle had met nearly a year ago, it was the first time that all five had seen each other together.
"It was all kind of strange at first," admits Bob. "None of us were quite sure how to react."
Of course, missing from the reunion was brother Jerry, who was unable to make it back from Arizona, and sister Lucille, who still hasn't been located.

"And, although he died in 1966, brother Fred was alive in the memories of his brothers and sisters as they reminisced and became re-acquainted.
ALTHOUGH the reunion with relatives was in Schuyler, the brothers and sisters spent the weekend at the Behlers farm home.
"If we didn't feel like family at first, we do now," says a gleaming Bob. "This is dream come true," adds Clara. "It's really beautiful."
"It's a dream come true that I never thought would come true," echoes Marketa.

"I knew I'd find them before I died," states a confident Hank. "I just knew it."
THE BROTHERS and sisters returned to their homes last Monday night with promises to continue their search for sister Lucille.
"We're still looking for the last one," says Bob. "Hopefully," adds Hank, "Lucille will be with us the next time we're together."
The emotions flowed as the brothers and sisters said their good-byes and headed back down the Behlers lane.
Once again, after nearly 40 years, they were a family.
"We were never strangers," smiles Bob.

SUZY LUTT of Wayne's 15 and under girls softball team drives a pitch to the infield in Friday night's game against Norfolk. Wayne won 18-0.

15 & Under girls

win over Norfolk

The Wayne girls 15-Under team recently defeated Dixon in two games: 14-11 and 14-3, and Friday evening hosted the Norfolk Golden Girls and won by a score of 18-0. Against Dixon in the first game, the 14-11 Wayne win was pitched by Shannon Janke. Dana Nelson, Kelly Fleming and Tonya Elsbeyer each had two hits in the game; each had a double and single. Karmyn Koening placed two hits, one a home run, and Janke had two doubles for Wayne. Getting one hit each were Tracy Gamble, Betsy Lebeck and Tonya Erleben. Dixon socked out 12 hits, including four doubles and two triples. In the second game which Wayne won 14-3 over Dixon, Suzy Lutt was perfect from the plate going four for four and hitting a double and a triple. Dana Nelson had three hits, including a double for the winners. Robin Luff poked three singles. Others getting hits for Wayne were Shannon Janke, Leslie Keating and Amy Schluns. The winning pitcher for Wayne was Schluns. Against Norfolk, Wayne had only three hits — two of those by Dana Nelson — but were issued 16 walks as they won by an 18-0 score. Nelson pitched the win, allowing just one hit in four innings of play; walking only one and striking out two Norfolk batters. Wayne scored 10 runs in the first inning off of Norfolk on just one hit. Getting Wayne's only other hit was Amy Schluns, a triple in the first inning that drove in two runs.

Record 18 strikeouts

Larsen chucks a Wayne win

Wayne's Don Larsen retired 18 of 31 batters on strikeouts and scattered just three hits in picking up a close 3-1 win Thursday night in a Junior Legion game played at West Point. Larsen walked seven West Point batters. Combine that number with his 18 strikeouts and three hits and that left the Wayne Junior infield and outfield with only three fielding opportunities — a ground-out to the second baseman and a pop-up to the shortstop. He struck out the side in the first, fourth, sixth, and seventh innings. Wayne's bats were equally as silent, but a bit more productive as they also had three hits.

Centerfielder Kevin Maly led off the top of the first with a double. He advanced to third base when Dan Gross lofted a sacrifice fly. Maly later was driven in after Steve Overin hit into a fielders choice. Wayne loaded the bases with Overin and both Larsen and Hausmann (who each reached on a walk), but West Point's pitcher got Jeff Sherer to ground out and end the scoring threat.

Wayne upped its lead to 2-0 in the second after Shannon Dorcey led off with a walk, advanced to second base on a wild pitch and was sacrificed to third base after a deep fly ball hit by Tim Fleming.

Maly then sacrificed home Dorcey on a bunt.

West Point narrowed the lead to 2-1 by picking up a run in the bottom of the second inning when Landholm, Brockman and Hoffman were walked by Larsen. Larsen then walked Peltz to score Landholm.

Wayne added an insurance run in the top of the fourth inning after Sherer reached on a first baseman's error. Dorcey sacrificed Sherer to scoring position on a bunt and after Fleming walked, a ground out by Maly on a sparkling play by the second baseman brought home Sherer.

Two runners were left on base by Wayne in the fifth inning. West Point had a runner as far as third base in the sixth inning when Landholm singled, stole second base and moved to third base on a wild pitch. However, Wayne pitcher Larsen retired the next three West Point batters on strikeouts to get out of the jam.

Third baseman Steve Overin led the Wayne batters with two hits, a double in the third inning and a single in the seventh. Maly's double was Wayne's only other hit.

Brockman, Oligmueller and D. Landholm each had one hit for West Point.

Junior Olympians

FOUR WAYNE-CARROLL track members, from left, Holly Paige, Shelley Gilliland, Dana Nelson and Kristy Hansen, competed recently in the Midwestern Association Track and Field Championship Youth Division at Columbus. They finished second in the 4 x 100 in the non-club division and fourth in the event all-around, running the relay in a time of 54.7. That time was 1.2 faster than their first place qualifying time at South Sioux City, but .5 of a second short of going to the regionals in Minneapolis.

Midgets get 10 run win over West Point

The combination of Wayne's Jason Jorgensen and Rob Rabe was too much as both Midget pitchers put together a strong performance and limited West Point to only two hits in a 1-11 win Thursday night.

Jorgensen started the game for Wayne, allowing one hit and walking two in three innings of play. Rabe came in and retired five of the next six West Point batters to pick up the save.

Wayne scored their 11 runs on seven hits — two of those hits by doubles by Bill Landanger. Landanger also scored three runs in the game.

The local Midgets got their first run in the first inning when Landanger led off and reached on an error. He later scored on a ground-out by leftfielder Russ Longe.

West Point came back to tie the score at 1-1 in the bottom half of the inning when Russ Rasmus walked, stole second and third base and then scored on a single by Tom Noffleman.

In the second inning, Wayne scored three runs after Scott Nichols was safe at first on a fielders choice. Rob Gamble singled and after Ted McCright flew out to leftfield, Mark Creighton walked and Landanger smacked the first of two doubles. Wayne got two more walks before Steve Luff flied out to centerfield to end the inning.

After a scoreless third inning, Wayne broke through with five runs in the fourth on four hits.

Creighton, who scored three runs for Wayne, led the inning off with a walk and he scored on Landanger's second double. A walk to Rabe and then an error by the West Point centerfielder on a ball hit by Longe followed. Luff, Jorgensen and Nichols each hit consecutive singles to bring in more Wayne runs.

Two more runs were scored by Wayne in the fifth inning after Creighton singled and Landanger walked. An infield error on a hit by Luff brought in more runs.

After retiring West Point scoreless in the fifth, Wayne was able to pull out the win because of the 10-run rule.

Conservation tillage tour

IS IT A helicopter? Is it a windmill? Is it a lawn sprinkler built for giants? It's none of these. It's a Rotary Boom Rainfall Simulator that simulates different rates of rainfall so that the amount of erosion can be measured during a few minutes of demonstrations (plus several thousand gallons of water). This demonstration can be seen on the conservation tillage tour of Wednesday, July 3 at 1:30 p.m. starting at the Stan Baier field four miles south and 3/4 east of Wayne. The tour will also include a herbicide demonstration on no-till corn, a farmer's field of no-till corn, a look at soil compaction and root development. Extension Specialists on insects, weeds and soil fertility will be present to answer any questions. Refreshments will be served at the end of the tour.
