50 years in government

Allen native isn't ready to leave work at Pentagon

The following article was written about Edith Boyle, a former Allen resident, who has been employed by the U. S. Defense Department for 50 years.

By David E. Lynch
Lincoln Star

The Great Depression drove Edith Boyle from her family's Nebraska farm in 1935, the year she began what is now a 50-year career in government that shows no signs of fading.

"The day I don't enjoy coming to work is the day I'll quit," she said in her Pentagon office recently.

"I suppose that will happen someday, but I don't see it happening soon."

BOYLE, A native of Allen, who refuses to give her age or fall for playful ploys aimed at extracting that information, has served under 17 secretaries of war and defense.

She is one of only a handful of women to serve in government for a half-century or more, and the only woman to do so at the Pentagon. She knew Dwight Eisenhower when he was a lieutenant colonel.

Valedictorian of the Allen High School class of 1932, Boyle was awarded a college scholarship, "but there just wasn't any money to go to college at that time."

"It was the depths of the Depression," she said. Allen High School "had all the grades in it, but they still called it a high school. It's still there."

THE NEW Deal provided the work opportunity Boyle had been seeking for three years after graduating from high school. So she packed her bags in 1935 and moved to Lincoln where she began her government career as a secretary for the Works Progress Administration.

She moved into a rooming house when she first arrived in Lincoln.

"I can't remember the address right now," she said. She later set up light housekeeping ("Something you would have no idea of," she said) in an apartment.

She took a job in Washington four years later with the intelligence division of the War Department, and three years later moved into the Pentagon, which was still under construction. She has been there ever since.

Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger recently presented Boyle with a small gold and diamond pin to mark her 50 years of service.

CURRENTLY, Boyle is administrative assistant to the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Manpower, Installations and Logistics.

Based on the congratulatory letters she received on her 50th anniversary, she's much more than that. She's the institutional memory for the Pentagon.

ACCORDING TO a letter from a retired Navy captain, Boyle could "describe from memory not only the event, but its history, its players and its outcome, and then more times than not, know exactly where in the files of antiquity to find the supporting documentation."

Boyle doesn't like to talk about her memory, because much of it involves military secrets, always a touchy subject, but even more so in the wake of recent espionage arrests.

"I know a lot," she said. "Anybody who has worked here as long as I have knows a lot. But I can't tell anybody anything."

AFTER 46 years in Washington, Boyle has few ties to her home state. Her sister Irene Armour, a widow, still lives in Allen, and visits Boyle in Washington once a year.

AFTER 50 years in civil service, and at the end of an unusually busy week, Boyle might give some thought to retirement.

But her batteries are recharged by Monday, and she's back to work at the Pentagon she helped open some 43 years ago.

Crops blessed with rain

IMMANUEL LUTHERAN CHURCH provides a picturesque setting amid corn fields northeast of Wayne. Rain showers during the past few days, ranging from 1.25 to 2.50 inches across the county, continue to brighten the 1985 crop outlook as the fall harvest countdown progresses. Don Spitze, Wayne County extension agent, said corn and soybeans in Wayne County are in pretty good shape moisture wise, although there is some concern about the maturation of crops due to cool, cloudy conditions experienced in recent weeks. Spitze added, however, that the 1985 crops are ahead of this same time last year.

Arson charges filed

Second degree arson charges have been filed in Wayne County Court against four men charged with allegedly setting fire to a barn in the early morning hours of July 17.

The barn was located on a vacant place owned by Steve Glassmeyer, located four miles south, one west and 1/4 south of Wayne.

The barn, which was engulfed in flames by the time Wayne firemen arrived, contained 1,000 bales of straw and a plow. Damage to the barn's contents was estimated by the insurance company at $1,500.

CHARGED WITH allegedly setting the blaze are Thomas Sherry, 21, of Wayne; Lonny Grashorn, 19, of Wayne; Tom Biggerslatf, 20, of Wisner; and Ivan Jensen, 19, of Wayne.

Wayne County Attorney Bob Enz, who filed the charges, said second degree arson constitutes a Class III felony which carries a minimum penalty of one year imprisonment, and a maximum penalty of 20 years imprisonment and a $25,000 fine.

The county attorney added that it appears the blaze was allegedly set with a lighter. No apparent motive has been established.

INVESTIGATION into the incident was conducted by the State Fire Marshal's Office and the Wayne County Sheriff.

Money 'put back on land'

The Lower Eikhorn Natural Resources District board of directors presented the proposed fiscal year 1986 budget at a public hearing on Aug. 20 in Norfolk.

The proposed budget called for total requirements of $1,786,504, of which $911,966 would be raised from local property taxes (approximately, .033 cents per $100 valuation).

Following the hearing, board members took action on the budget, raising total budget requirements to $1,939,504 with no change in property tax requirements.

A SPOKESMAN FOR the Lower Eikhorn NRD said a rapid increase in demands for conservation cost-share funds made the budget modification necessary to accommodate land owners who wish to install soil and water conservation practices.

Fiscal year 1986 requests for cost-share funds have already reached $763,735.88, which prompted directors to remove $153,000 from a conservation sinking fund and make it available for cost-sharing on conservation practices.

In making the motion to increase cost-share funds, Director Dennis Newland of Norfolk said "we set up the sinking fund for years of greater need. Now that we have the need, let's put the money back on the land."

MAJOR BUDGET items include $733,000 for land treatment; $140,485 for a wildlife habitat program; $130,000 for project land rights; $75,000 for intergovernmental cost-share; and $73,300 for project construction (including $50,000 for picnic facilities at Maskenthine Lake).

Catalog

The closing day for the Wayne store - Sept. 5 - also marks the first anniversary of the Shufelts in the Montgomery Ward Catalog Agency.

The Montgomery Ward Catalog Agency has been in Wayne for approximately 15 years.

SHUFELTS SAID they will continue to take catalog orders until Wednesday, Aug. 28. They added that all orders taken by that time should be in the Wayne store before the doors are locked on Sept. 5.

"There is a system to let people know where and how they will get their orders," said Donna, adding that "she will do her darnedest to make sure people understand what to do."

Shufelts said they are liquidating their entire Montgomery Ward stock in the store, with prices going down every day.

The couple intends to expand their Wall to Wall Decorating business in the space presently occupied by the catalog agency.

SHUFELTS ADDED they are sorry that Wayne is losing its only two catalog agencies.

"We really enjoyed working with the people," said Donna. "We'll miss them."

Although there will be no more general catalogues, Donna said Montgomery Ward will still be putting out a 1985 Christmas catalog and several sales catalogues in an effort by the company to slowly phase out of the catalog business and rid itself of stock.

"I'd advise customers to place their Christmas orders early," said Donna, "because the catalog items when they are gone."

STALSBERG SAID she too is very sorry to see the catalog agencies leaving Wayne.

"I'm always sorry to see any business leave a town," said Stalsberg, adding that Sears officials cited decreased sales as the reason for closing the Wayne office.

Although she did appeal to the Sears company to take a second look at the community, Stalsberg said she was officially notified last Tuesday that the Sears Catalog Agency would be closed as of Sept. 30 - after 20 years in Wayne.

STALSBERG, WHO has operated the Sears Catalog Agency for the past three years, said the company will continue to take orders until the end of August with delivery to the Wayne catalog agency. Orders must be picked up by Sept. 15.

From Sept. 1 to Sept. 30, the catalog agency will continue to take cash and account orders, with the orders being shipped on a direct basis to the customer.

Stalsberg added that items now on back-order can still be picked up at the catalog agency in Wayne through Sept. 30.

In addition to operating the Sears Catalog Agency, Stalsberg also is manager of Wayne Derby Station. She also is employed by H & R Block and operates Pack n' Ship.

Stalsberg said plans are yet uncertain as to whether the H & R Block office, along with Pack n' Ship, will still be located in the Sears building or will move to another location.

'hacken' away

by chuck hackenmiller

This could be an inspirational column. Or it can be considered wishy-washy. Inspirational because I'm going to tell of a personal experience that happened to me. Wishy-washy because it is not what interests some people.

Earlier this year I wrote a column relating to an anniversary — 10 years as a journalist working for three publications. This week I reflected a bit on those 10 years and the lessons learned, not in the classroom but by actual work experience.

Back in 1975 I was a struggling business school graduate, one year out of private school, who lost two accounting jobs because of company lay-offs and a steel salesman job because I failed at it. My father gave me compensation for helping on the farm, but other job opportunities were scarce.

Accounting was my ambition and I was losing it fast.

Then, an individual who prepared income tax returns asked me to help during the tax season — I had thought for helping fill out returns. It turned out the same individual owned a newspaper.

I don't think I put a pencil to income tax forms. He put me to work on the newspaper. "Me working for a newspaper?" I asked.

It was something different. I tried it and I liked it. After a two-week course in how to write news stories and features, the confidence in me returned. I had a new ambition.

FIVE YEARS at this newspaper of 1,500 circulation and I thought I knew everything. (Later on, you find out that one never quits learning in this business).

Then a job opportunity opened up for me at a weekly newspaper with 4,500 circulation.

The editor there was articulate, specific and one who demanded preciseness. Things were not going well. I would write a story with sincere effort and the editor would whittle it down to nothing and ask me to do better.

"One can only do the best he can and no use worrying about it," was my philosophy. I got better at it, learned more about photography and three years later gathered enough confidence to make the move to Wayne. My boss said he was even sorry to see me go.

It gives me personal satisfaction to know I've reached this stage not because of a journalism degree but because of struggles and the "hands-on" experience during the past 10 years.

Don't mistake this column for someone who is tooting his own horn. It isn't like me to turn a column into an autobiography.

But this column is geared toward those who have realized they are about to lose what they've known how to do for years, be it farming, business or employment.

There are other areas to pursue. Ten years ago I was offered a second opportunity working with newspapers when an accounting career was passing me by. I took it up.

And there haven't been any regrets, on my part, since.

Insurance dilemma?

Wayne County Board of Commissioners are in the midst of coming up with what they feel is a complicated decision concerning health insurance coverage for its approximately 43 county employees.

All three commissioners are aware that the difference in annual premium costs between the two insurance companies which they are seriously considering — Aetna and Central Life Insurance — are wide in variation. Aetna, according to the commissioners, offers the lower of the two in premium costs.

Taxpayers cringe a bit on paying additional taxes to compensate for excess government spending.

But what makes this decision for the commissioners so difficult is that their current Central Life health insurance has provided them and county employees excellent coverage and has a good track record in following through on claims that had been filed.

One commissioner said it was analyzed that Central Life looks better on paper in regard to insuring the smaller claims — more so than on major claims, and that more small claims are filed by Wayne County employees than major claims.

Another commissioner expressed concern as to how a different insurance company [than the present insurance company with the county] would be willing to handle the transition. Would claims submitted and presently being processed at the current insurance company get lost in the shuffle if a different company was chosen, asked another commissioner.

The county commissioners give county employees a strong health insurance benefit plan to compensate for the healthy raises which the county employees "haven't received" in past years. A cost of living increase had been approved earlier this year by the commissioners.

What the commissioners decided on Tuesday was to table the decision until an outside source, with insurance background, makes an analysis of the two insurance company proposals.

It would also be helpful and interesting to figure the premium cost of both policies annually, then break down that total as to what each insurance policy will end up costing one county property owner in taxes.

From the insurance analysis and premium breakdown per taxpayer, the commissioners should be able to make their choice of insurance companies.

Farmers upset with export program

By the National Corn Growers Association

"Disappointed and frustrated over the lack of any concrete results from the Export Enhancement Program (EEP)" were the remarks of several farmer members of the Advisory Committee on the Export Enhancement Program (EEP).

These remarks were made following the initial meeting of the Advisory Committee on Aug. 14, 1985, in Washington.

This EEP Advisory Committee is chaired by Dan Amstutz, USDA Under Secretary for International Affairs and Commodity Programs.

Joining in these remarks and comments were the following EEP Advisory Committee members:

Varol Bailey (Iowa), President, National Corn Growers Association; Erv Friche (Nebraska), Vice Chairman, U.S. Wheat Associates; Fred Kerr (Kansas), Farmer, Kansas State Senator; Richard E. Bell (Arkansas), Chairman, Agriculture & Trade Police Committee;

T. L. "Sam" Irmen (Ohio), First V.P., National Grain & Feed Association;

Myron R. Laserson (New York), President, North American Export Grain Association.

THE FACT THAT the detailed mechanisms to implement the Export Enhancement Program are coming on line is encouraging.

However, Committee members pointed out the time of uncertainty between announcement and implementation has been costly to U.S. agriculture because of delayed purchases by the only two foreign buyers.

Committee members encouraged broadening the scope of the program to more countries and more commodities. In addition, plans to make the program more flexible to move more quickly were presented.

These plans included ways for our regular customers to participate: a program to capitalize on the growing ethanol industry; a premium export grain quality program; and, ways that commercial exporters can initiate sales.

THE EXPORT Enhancement Program has two billion dollars of CCC-owned commodities to use over the next three years. This could increase U.S. agricultural exports by meeting foreign competitiveness and countering unfair international trade practices.

According to the USDA Chairman of the EEP Committee, criteria for the program are:

- Sale must result in additionality to the world;
- Sale must be positive to the U.S. economy;
- Sale must be commercial;
- Overall program must be budget neutral;
- Sale must coincide with overall international trade policy of the U.S. and supportive of the strategy in anicipation of the upcoming multilateral round of international trade negotiations;

- Sale may be part of a commercial credit package to a particular country;
- Sale must have U.S. Government interagency clearance.

"THE ADVISORY Committee pointed out that the restrictive criteria for the program may prevent it from dealing adequately with the enormous and growing inventory of agricultural commodities.

USDA officials were open to suggestions and proposals. The next meeting of the EEP Advisory Committee will be announced soon.

Other agricultural industry members of the EEP Advisory Committee are:

Harry Bell (South Carolina), President, South Carolina Farm Bureau; Don Butler (Arizona), President-elect, National Cattlemen's Association.

Working women entering new era

By Winifred Lethbridge
National President
National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs

Working women and the organizations that represent them are entering a new era.

Women all over America are looking to their organizations to help answer the question: Where do we go from here?

Change and progress are always difficult, especially because we have already achieved so much. And the process of change has not been made any easier by the popular wisdom which may be popular, but is not always wise.

FOR EXAMPLE, the purveyors of popular wisdom have told us the women's movement forced a woman onto a national presidential ticket because we were so powerful.

Then they said that our failure to elect this ticket proved we were powerless.

Now they are saying that American women are in disarray, retreating from our reasonable goals and forsaking our hard-won achievements.

They are wrong. The 15,000 members of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Club, Inc. (BNPW/USA) have not, and will not, swerve from our patient and persistent quest for fairness and equity.

OUR QUEST GETS its energy and leadership and commitment where it always has — in cities, towns and villages, in school districts and voting precincts — in places all over America where women are using their clout not just for themselves but for their families and communities.

In Los Angeles, a city councilwoman and BPNW member is leading the fight for fair pay for the women who work for her city.

And in 45 of the 50 states, pay equity is on the economic and political agenda. That's clout.

In Montana, fair insurance with no sex bias is state law.

In Pennsylvania, the courts have ruled that sex-based auto insurance rates are unconstitutional.

In more than a dozen states, insurance non-discrimination legislation is under consideration. That's clout.

In addition, we're guarding the rights of handicapped voters in South Carolina, helping build a better school system in Georgia, and providing a strong consumer voice on the Illinois utility board.

WHEN MY organization was founded in 1919, women were still a year away from the right to vote.

When many of us decided in the 1940's and 1950's to join a BPNW chapter, the popular wisdom told us a woman's place was in the home. Today, we are expected to be Superwomen. But we are still denied many of the tools we need to do our best.

The working women of America — and we are all working, be it in our offices, our factories or businesses — aren't asking to be placed on a pedestal of phony privilege.

What we want is a strong ladder of equity on which we can climb toward our economic goals.

WE NEED A Bill of Rights for women, and it would include the following:

- an end to sex discrimination in the insurance industry;
- a tax system which acknowledges the accomplishments of single parents and the sacrifices of two-earner families;
- a partnership with business and government to provide our children the best possible day care and education;
- the restoration of equal education rights of women;
- passage of the Equal Rights Amendment.

JUST 64 YEARS after women won the right to vote, we had the opportunity to vote for the first woman running for national office. That was just 66 years after our organization was founded with the slogan "Make No Small Plans."

Women are participating in our economy and our government in astonishing numbers.

In short, working women are proud of historic breakthroughs which have occurred in recent years.

And, we are prepared to continue working on our long range agenda for economic, political and social equality.

Q. We borrowed money to buy a car, and we are having trouble repaying the loan. We still owe $2,500 on the note. (I don't think the car is worth that much now.) If the bank repossesses our car, does that wipe out our loan from the bank?

A. No. If the bank repossess your car, they will sell it and apply the proceeds of the sale to your loan. However, if a balance remains on your loan after the sale, you are still obligated to repay it. If you fail to repay it, the bank may sue you and obtain a judgement against you for the balance. They would then be able to use other legal means, such as garnishing your wages or selling other property which you own, to satisfy the judgement.

Q. If we can't pay our rent on our apartment, can the landlord just take our furnishings and put them out on the porch, and tell us we are evicted?

A. No. The uniform Residential Landlord and Tenant Act, passed in Nebraska in 1974, provides that if a tenant fails to pay the rent, the landlord must give the tenant written notice that he or she must vacate the premises if the rent is not paid within three days. This does not mean that you have three days to vacate the premises. It is a demand for payment of the rent. If you do not pay within the three days, the landlord must go to court to get an eviction order. But the landlord may not simply evict you on his own.

New school year may mean adjustments

Where has the summer gone? That seems to be the most popular question you hear these days. The beginning of school has arrived for some students and is just around the corner for others.

Each school year new subjects, teachers and classmates call for a certain amount of adjustment by the student. Just because your child did satisfactory school work last year, doesn't mean he or she will automatically perform the same this year. Each child's manner of adjusting may vary from year to year.

One year your child may return to school and the parent will barely notice any change. The next year, the child may become "cocky" or moody and quiet.

PARENTS NEED TO be patient, understanding and encouraging. Your child is not the same person he was last year.

Not only has he grown physically, but changed mentally and emotionally. Interests have changed, new doubts risen, and old friends may have moved.

All of these factors and more mean your child must redesign a few aspects of his life.

Change is not easy for children or adults. There is always the fear of the unknown. "What if I don't make new friends?" "What if everybody laughs because I'm shorter, taller, or different than my classmates?"

These are very real problems for your child. Parents need to help children understand that change is constant and that adjusting is possible.

MOST OFTEN, the best help a parent can give is to listen to their child. Pay careful attention to what your child says, and how he or she says it. Are they enthusiastic, angry, frightened or worried?

Try to spend a few minutes each day talking one to one, without distractions. Put down the paper, meal preparations or whatever and focus on your child. You don't have to spend hours baring your souls to each other. A few minutes of concentration can go a long way. If your child is having a problem adjusting, you may need more time that day to talk.

After a few weeks most children will adjust to the new school year. Don't let your listening ear disappear once you think everything is okay.

Knowing that their parents are available will help make children cope with other problems throughout the school year.

Wildcats ranked 15th

Wayne State College was ranked in a tie for 15th place in the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA) Division I preseason national football rankings released Wednesday.

Wayne State, 8-3 last year including a forfeited win by Ft. Hays, received 88 points to share the 15th spot with Concord, W. Va.; Missouri Southern and Presbyterian, N.C.

Carson Newman of Kent, Tenn. was ranked first. Carson Newman received 14 of the 16 possible first place votes. Central Oklahoma and Wayne State each received one first place vote. Wayne State head coach Pete Chapman granted the Wildcats his first place vote. The 15th place ranking is the highest a Wayne State football team has been ranked since 1971 when the Wildcats qualified for the Mineral Bowl and were ranked as high as seventh. Last year, Wayne State was ranked No. 20 at one time during the season.

Wayne State's Central States Intercollegiate Conference (CSIC) Joe Kearney State College is ranked No. 19 in the preseason rankings.

Kearney State was picked to win the CSIC by the conference coaches and Wayne State was selected to place second. However, Kearney State head coach Clair Boroff picked Wayne State to capture the conference crown.

1985 limits changed

Dove season opens Sept. 1

LINCOLN-It won't be long now, Nebraska's long-awaited 1985 dove hunting season will open Sunday morning, Sept. 1, and if the weatherman cooperates it should be another exciting, enjoyable season for shotgunners.

This year hunters will enjoy a 60-day season, 15 days longer than last year, will be able to take 15 doves per day and have a total of 30 in possession, thanks to action recently taken by the Game and Parks Commissioners to offer dove hunters additional hunting opportunity in line with guidelines set down by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

The dove population is high again this year in Nebraska, South Dakota and Kansas, the three states that have the highest breeding populations of the 14 states in the Service's Central Management Unit. Anyone who has occasion to take a drive in the country will attest to the fact that there are plenty of doves around now. On paper it looks like things are shaping up for a great season, and it will be, if the weatherman can be persuaded to keep cool temperatures out of his forecast until later in the year. All it takes to cut the season short is for him to slip in three or four nights of temperatures around the 50 degree mark, because as soon as a dove starts to shiver he packs his bags and follows his chattering beak south to warmer climates.

Nebraska's dove population usually peaks at about 12-to-15 million birds by late July or August. Each year the state's dove hunters, about 30,000 of them, harvest close to one million birds.

Most Nebraska-reared doves begin to migrate to southern wintering grounds in mid-August, about the same time birds from the north begin their migration south through the state. If temperatures along the migration route are warm, the migration is leisurely, which results in excellent hunting opportunities for shotgunners. If temperatures are cold the birds travel rapidly and hunting opportunities are reduced.

Because of the dove's small size and the fact they are fast and highly maneuverable fliers, they are known as a great gamebird capable of testing any hunter's skill. The challenge of dove hunting is two-fold, first to learn to connect with such a tough unpredictable target, and secondly to do it consistently with the fewest number of shells possible. On the average, Nebraska hunters fire between six and seven shells for each dove they bag, which means over six million shells are expended by dove hunters in this state each year.

Dove hunting is also attractive because it allows the hunter to use his favorite techniques to bag his birds. He can shoot from a blind near a waterhole, pass shoot, jump shoot, or hunt the edges of fields where birds feed. Discarded and burned wheat stubble are particularly attractive dove feeding areas, as are patches of sunflowers and hemp, and small ponds with bare, muddy banks. Since the season is open in late summer and early fall before a killing frost, cover is usually heavy and a well-trained hunting dog is a real asset in locating downed birds.

This year's season will be Sept. 1 through Oct. 30. The daily bag limit is 15 doves, the possession limit is 30 doves. Hunters 16 years of age and older are required to have a current Nebraska hunting license and habitat stamp in their possession while dove hunting. Shooting hours are 30 minutes before sunrise to sunset.

Duck and goose hunters must use steel shot this season

LINCOLN-With autumn just around the corner, now would be a good time for duck and goose hunters to begin laying in a supply of steel shot shotgun shells for the 1985 waterfowl hunting seasons.

The 1985 seasons are the first in which steel shot will be required for all waterfowl hunting across the state. In 1982, the Game and Parks Commissioners passed a resolution stating their intent to require a complete conversion to steel shot for all waterfowl hunting in Nebraska by January 1, 1985.

That step was taken as a means to help reduce the annual nationwide loss of an estimated two to three million ducks and geese to lead poisoning. That loss is ten times the total number of waterfowl harvested each year in Nebraska.

Poisoning from lead shot is a problem in Nebraska. Studies show that three to five percent of the waterfowl sampled here have ingested lead shot, and the main source of the problem is spent lead shot in marshes and fields where birds congregate.

Steel shot will also be required for all shotgun hunting on some federal and state waterfowl production areas which were purchased primarily for waterfowl use and production.

Steel shot is now being manufactured in a variety of common waterfowl hunting loads and shot sizes in 10, 12 and 20 gauge and should be available at reasonable prices to most selective early shoppers.

WSC gets extra '84 victory

A forfeit by Ft. Hays State of last year's win over Wayne State has changed the Wildcats' 1984 football record and conference standings.

An ineligible player apparently participated in the game for Ft. Hays, according to Wayne State athletic director Ron Jones. Jones was notified of the forfeit by Ft. Hays officials at the conference football meetings.

The official record for the 1984 football team is 8-3 overall and 5-2 in the Central States Intercollegiate Conference (CSIC). The change moves the Wildcats up one spot in the conference standings, tied with Missouri Southern for second place.

Pittsburg State names new coaches

PITTSBURG, KAN.-Pittsburg State Athletic Director David Suenram has announced coaching and administrative changes for 1985-86 which are a part of a long-range plan to enhance and possibly expand the University intercollegiate athletic program.

A major coaching realignment has made Mary Nutter head women's volleyball coach this fall in addition to the Gussies' softball mentor. Russ Jewell, graduate assistant track coach the past two years, has been appointed as a full-time assistant coach for men's cross country, and track and field.

Bill Samuels, assistant football coach who has also served as an assistant to Suenram for two years, has been named associate athletic director. Assistant athletic trainer Julie Bruns will serve as assistant athletic director.

Samuels will have primary responsibility for administrative details of both the men's and women's intercollegiate programs, according to Suenram. Bruns will have responsibilities for facilities.

"We're very pleased with the advantages the university, our programs and our athletes will have through these realignments," Suenram said.
