Council approves ordinance on charging of filing fees

This was the third and final reading of the ordinance.

At the last council meeting, the ordinance failed to pass at the second reading by a vote of five for the filling fee and two against. The passage of the ordinance requires three quarters of the council members' approval.

At that meeting, City Ad-ministrator-Phil Kloster told the city council members that currently, if there was to be an analysis of a rate increase request by Peoples, the burden of that cost for the analysis would fall on every property tax owner in town.

With Peoples paying the filing fee of $3,500, the cost will be applied to the gas rate structure so that rate payers pay it through the proportion of gas that is used.

These property owners who use electricity instead of gas, he reflerated on Tuesday, would not have to absorb the cost of the analysis since they are not users of natural cas.

Conneally also said the comprehensive filing forms "may be more information that the city would want." He added: that "it does cost to accumulate all the data [for the filling forms]."
Councilman Darrel Heler pointed out, as he did at the previous city council meeting, that if the city's filling fee is set high, it can be amended at a later time.

customer will fill out a slip with his or her name, address and amount of purchase... The slips will be collected in each of the stores prior to each drawing date and combined with slips from all of the participating businesses for the drawing.

of the participating businesses for the drawing.

The drawing will then be held with the winners receiving Chamber Gift Certificates equal to the amount of purchase indicated on the slip.

As an example, if a winner's slip is drawn and it shows the amount of purchase as $6.33, he or she will be issued a gift certificate for $6 (figure rounded to the nearest dollar).

For purchases of over $50, winners, will be limited to certificates for $50. For example, if an individual spends $63 or $630, his or her gift certificate will still be $50.

Chamber membership stores can do so without a purchase and they will be eligible to win a $1 gift certificate. The Chamber Gift Certificates will be good only in participating Chamber businesses.

AT EACH DRAWING, winners will be drawn until the combined Giff Certificates given away for that week total $550.

There will be four weekly drawings, which means that $2,000 in Chamber Giff Certificates will be given away during the Christmas season in Wayne.

Group seeking toys, gifts for area needy

A number of area organizations have offered assistance to the 1985 Northeast Nebraska "Toys for Tots" program this holiday season.
This effort has been coordinated by Goldenrod Hills Community Action Council since 1980.

Although response to the project has not been as extensive as in the past, participating groups have been located throughout the 12-county Goldenrod Hills service area-lowever, persons or organizations wishing to offer their time, money or toys are urged to contact the Tim Tushla, agency Public Relations director.

"Many of those currently involved have made this their annual Christmas project," noted Tushla. "They have helped by serving as drop sites for donations; fixed, cleaned and painted items and donated money for the purchase of new toys."

Items which are in short supply are toys for children under 12, which are new or in reasonably good condition. In conjunction with this drive, canned goods are also collected for the elderly household food basket Christmas delivery.

Those closest area communities serving as collection points for "Toys for Tots" are: Wisner (Murphy Law Offices) and West Point (Sunshine Senior Citizen Center and Schmidt Monument).

Also, area county extension offices in Cedar, Cuming, Dixon and Wayne counties are cooperating in this effort. IBP of West Point is having a toy drive and the town of Wisner held a day-long collection at Rabe's Liquor on Saturday.

interested persons are urged to contact the nearest participating group or call any of the following Goldenrod Hills Outreach workers:

Area farmer injured in harvest-related accident

Lawrence Sprouts of rural Wayne is certainly an individual who feels more thankful than others as this nation celebrates the upcoming Thanksgiving holiday:

He experienced more than the flesh and muscle tear or the burns on his arm He suffered through the terror of being drawn into a life-threatening situation

Sprouls had been combining throughout the night when at about 6:30 a.m. on Nov. 15, he pulled in his farmyard (south of Wayne) with a hopper loaded with corn. The corn was unloaded and he had cleared some mud from the bottom of the combine. As he turned away from the combine, his sweatshirt caught on a coffer key that was on a shaft behind the front wheel of the machine.

The combine, in gear, did not let go. It began pulling Sprouts to the shaft. He grabbed his pocket knife with his freeh hand and opened it with his teeth, beginning to cut away at his sweatshirt and coveralls. But the knife dropped to the ground:

His clothes began to burn and with one final exasperating effort he used his feet and pushed himself away from the combine.

He is now waiting at Providence Medical Center to undergo skin grafting and other-rehabilitation for his arm. For now, he is still recuperating from the burns he suffered on his arm.

"It was one of those things. I didn't really know how long I could keep it up,' Sprouls said when commenting on how he broke loose his arm from the combinations."

Sprouts said when commenting on how he broke loose his arm from the corbine's grasp.

"I took one big lunge, raring back and out the arm came," he said.

Surviving together

So often the phrase is heard: "This community cannot si

So often the phrase is heard: "This community cannot survive without farmer and is dependent on the ag economy."

Putting this comment in the perspective of Wayne's economy, the statement holds true in every sense.

But there is another aspect to consider when mentioning in the same breathe of how farming and the community are intertwined, particularly as both make efforts to survive.

Jean Karlen, associate professor-social science at Wayne State College, said during a program at the weekly Kiwanis Club meeting, that the task ahead is to focus on small communities as a mechanism for the farmer.

In her talk, she pointed out that while communities need the farmers, the farmers need the communities also.

Many small farmers are existing in their operation because of the small community, she mentioned. In some instances the community has the availability of jobs for farmers, who can supplement their farm income.

The job found in the community allows the farmer to stay on the farm.

And thus the importance of community development and the opportunities it opens up.

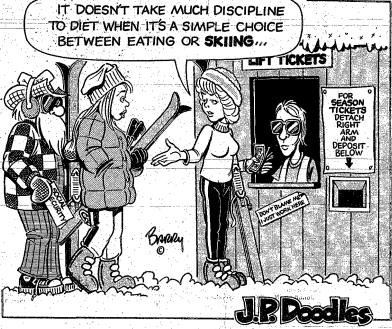

Karlen said that community development can stem the tide of decline in the number of farms in the area. Timpte, Inc. of Wayne, when in operation, could be considered a factor in helping farmers stay on the farm, she said.

And those communities striving to bring in more development with business and industry should keep in mind that sometimes it takes two jobs for families — both urban and rural — to survive. Job opportunities should also be available to women as well as men.

Karlen said farming is no longer a unique enterprise. That we agree with, simply because most small farms can no longer be self-sufficient in the earnings it makes from what is produced. Dependency on jobs in surrounding communities, either by the farm wife or farmer himself, brings a closer tie between rural and urban and moves farming away-from a uniqueness image.

Widespread confusion

Farmers not entitled to embargo compensation

We Goofed!

There is enough confusion on the subject, and I'm sorry to have contributed to it. Last week in this column I discussed an embargo compensation law passed during the 96th Congress. Some farmers have the impression that the law makes them eligible for money from the Federal government—as—compensation for losses they suffered as a result of the 1980 grain embargo: In fact, according to Mickey Stewart, director of the Nebraska Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, there is no law entitling farmers to money as a result of the embargo on grain sales.

n last week's column I discussed law in question, Title II, Secion of P.L. 96-494, authorizes the use Commodity Credit Corporation funds to purchase and handle agricultural products, "other than grains." In the second paragraph of that column a line was dropped. I in-tended to say, "The Language of the law specifically excludes grains. The section was intended primarily to authorize purchases of poultry and meat."

I hope that this correction will clear things up.

ings up. Bank customers could

Bank customers coun, use money sooner
All too frequently we hear stories about college students who deposit checks from their parents in theirown accounts and then do not have access to the money for two or three weeks. For many students, that can mean a lot of lean days.

Several years ago one of my staff members, in the midst of a move from Nebraska to Washington, opened a checking account in a Washington area bank with a cashier's check from her Nebraska bank. She was told that she could not take money from the account and that it would not earn interest for two weeks.

Last week the House Bankling Committee, on which I serve, took action of a bill that will limit the number of days that a bank can restrict access to funds deposited in an account. The bill requires that banks: gradually reduce holds over the next three years. Initially, cash deposits would be available for withdrawal on the next business day; funds from local checks must be available within two business days after deposit: Out-of-state checks must be cleared within six days. One year after enactment, local checks must be cleared after one business day.

Limits would remain on new accounts, but institutions would have to start paying interest immediately on deposits in interest bearing accounts.

O. I am divorced, and my wife has custody of our two children. Last summer, I had the children for two months so I did not pay child support during that time. I was told that I did not have to since I would be the one supporting the children during those two months. Now my wife has asked the court to make me pay what she calls "past due child support." Was the information I was told incorrect? Am I I liable for this support?

A. When a court decree is entered ordering the payment of child support, you cannot decide, on your own, not to pay the amount ordered just because you are caring for the children for a certain period of time. There is a specific legal procedure which must be followed. The non-custodial parent must file an application asking the district court to modify the support order to suspend child support during the extended period of visitation.

If the court does not order the suspension of child support payments, you must continue making the payments regardless of who has the children. The non-custodial parent should bear in mind that child support payments. The non-custodial parent should bear in mind that child support payments. The non-custodial parent should bear in mind that child support payments allow the custodial parent to maintain a home for the children. The payments allow the custodial parent to maintain a home for the children and to provide for their needs on year-round basis. The home must be maintained even when the children are gone for a period of time.

The requirement that an application must be filled and a court hearing held before child support payments can be suspended or changed is of value to both parties. It protects the custodial parent from having support payments stopped without notice, while also allowing the judge to review the circumstance and make allowances for the non-custodial parent in the situation you describe.

Superfund excise tax realistic answer by Charles J. DiBona, President American Petroleum lastitute Unfounded criticism of Congress's nell proposal for extending and inlarging the Superfund program yould serjously weaken this nation's ifforts to clean up abandoned hazar-lous waste sites.

Afforts to clean up abandoned hazardous waste sites.

The senate has passed and the flouse Ways and Means Committee has approved a Superfund excise tax (SET), which is a workable and quiltable broad-based tax on hanufacturing sales. The SET is the best means — short of using general revenues — of applying the concept that the poliuter should pay. The house should adopt legislation along these lines without delay.

Some have criticized the SET, ertoneously claiming that it does not make an adequate connection between those who pay the tax and those who caused the hazardous waste proflems. This criticism is based on a fundamental insunderstanding of who contributed to the abondoned waste sites.

aste sites.

It's important to keep in mind that is purpose of the Superfund law is to san up dump sites which have been pilluled in the past — some of them y companies that has gone out of usiness or can no longer be identiced. Current wastes are covered neer a different law, and Itability sats directly with those resonspible in the waste disposal.

The Superfund tax under existing law has virtually no connection with the companies that contributed to the problem at Superfund sites. Companies in only two industries — petroleum and chemical — pay nearly all of the feedstock tax that currently finances Superfund. Yet, thousands of companies in virtually every U.S. Industry — plus government, universifies and even religious organizations — have contributed to the problems at abandoned waste sites.

organizations — have contributed to the problems at abandoned wastesites.
For example, at one Superfund site in California — the Stringfellow site near Los Angeles — the Environmental Protection Agency has identified nearly 300 potentially responsible parties, public and private. Very few are petroleum or chemical companies. It appears that the largest waste contributors have paid no Superfund taxes under existing law; only a few of the contributors have paid any.

SIMILARLY, AT an Indiana site — the Northside site at Zionsville — EPA identified an equally, broad cross section of more than 200 waste contributors. The largest is a pharmaceutical manufacturer. The second largest is the Indiana Public Works Department. The rest of the list is a "Who's Who" of Amerian Industry, including food, beverage, paper, metals, fransportation, electronics and many other companies. The point is vividity reinforced by the attached list of identified contributors to the Northside and Stringfellow sites.

In all, EPA has identified more than 4,000 existing businesses and other concerns as potentially responsible parties at Superfund sites. The existing Superfund law appropriately provides that any of these or other solvent companies found responsible will have to pay their share of the cleanup. The Superfund monies are designed to cover wastes from unidentified or defunct companies. The best information available about those responsible for these wastes is EPA's. list of responsible parties—an all-encompassing cross section of American business and government. Again, many of these parties paid no Superfund taxes. And, in fact, it is these very parties that are opposing any new Superfund taxe had, in fact, it is these very parties that are opposing any new Superfund taxes. And, in fact, it is these very parties that are opposing any new Superfund taxes had, in fact, it is these very parties that are opposing any new Superfund taxes had, in fact, it is these very parties that are opposing any new Superfund taxe had would apply to them.

Superfund problems are not those of a handful of companies or industries. These problems are a crucial national concern caused by many and affecting many. Clearly, the Superfund tax base under existing law — primarily just two industries — bears little relationship to the long, diverse list of those who caused the problems.

The SET is the best means of establishing a link with the concept that the politure should pay. The SET would be a broad-based, simple excise tax — easy to administer and similar to many other such taxes already in effect. It would exempt small companies, retailers, wholesalers and distributors. It would be import-export neutral giving no advantage to foreign competitors. It would be dedicated to the specific, limited purpose for which Superfund was created, and it would expire when the problem is solved.

oxper told was cealed, and wools oxper told was cealed, and wools considering funding Superfund at least partially through waste taxes. These faxes are not the answer. They would be a poor alternative because they would penalize companies that invest inwaste treatment and safe disposal pratices, would provide an uncertain source of revenue and would worsen the country's international trade problems. Moreover, because they are all based on wet weight as opposed to dry weight, they would result in a tax on water in many cases—instead of cousing on the hazardous constituents in waste water that may end up in waste sites.

On such a critical issue, Congress cannot afford to head down blind alleys. The nation needs an approach that is fair, that follows the "polluter pays" concepts, and that will accomplish the vital task of cleaning up abandoned hazardous waste sites. The Superfund excise tax, adopted by the Senate in September and approved by the floors was and Means Committee last month, is the only realistic answer.

ever seen a high school athlete have.

It was 1978 and Etzel and were teammates on Sloux City North's baseball team. North had a pretty good season that year, and most of it was that year, and most of it was that year, and most of it was that it is a statistics now, but he hit approximately .560, clubbed about a half-dozen homers and led the team in RBI and fielding percentage.

But despite all those excellent credentials, Etzel only made honorable mention all-state.

YOU ARE PROBABLY asking yourselves what all this is leading to Well, the point is that all-state, all-conference and yes, even all-area teams sometimes leave deserving

I didn't sit down and analyze statistics. But rather I based my selections on a player's attitude, how he responded under pressure and the way he car-

This year's Wayne Herald All-area volleyball and fööfball teams are a first for me. And to be honest with you, I'm not totally at éasé with either team. Don't get me wrong. The players I chose are, in my mind, the best in the area. In my opinion, both all-area teams have the best players around. What bothers me is I think there were several players that deserve more recognition than they received. For example, Jyoti Kwankin of Allen rushed for over 700 yards this year. And Wayne-Carroll's Ted Lueders passed for 898 yards and seven touchdowns. But neither—of these guys made the all-area team.

The all-area football team.

these guys made the all-area team.

The all-area football team wasn't the only difficult squad to select. Believe me, the all-area volleyball team was no plece of cake either.

Kristi Chase of Allen, Wakefled's Kristi Miller and several others had sensational seasons, but didn't make the all-area team.

I thought about expanding the number of selections on both teams, but I realized that no matter how many players made. the all-area team, there would always be a couple of deserving athletes left off. If I went with 24 football players instead of 22. Kwankin-and Lueders would've made it. But the Jon Stottenberg's, Doug Mundil's and several others still wouldn't have. You get the lede— it in ever ends.

and 142 carries for Wakefield this year.

Although only a 5-9 junior, Lund is a powerful runner, who averaged 6.5-yards—a carry—and scored—15 touchdowns.

Wilbur on Lund—"Brad is a great offensive threat because he runs well and is also a fine receiver. He's a powerful and consistent runner."

MARK LUNDAHL

Lundahl is a two year selection to the all-area team and is one of the best offensive lineman in the area.

Lundahl was a key to Wakefield's weer offense and the Trojans averaged nearly six yards a carry when they ran to his side.

Wilbur on Lundahl—"Mark was questionable at the start of the year because of an old injury, but he turned into a fine player by the end of the season."

BRIAN MALCOM

BRIAN MALCOM
At only 57 and 135 pounds, Malcom might not appear too intimidating.
But the Allen senior still totaled 103
fackles, including 50 unpassated stops and recovered seven fumbles.

McCright is a repeal selection to the all-area team and he was named honorable mention in 1983.

The 150 pound senior was Wayne-Carroll's fourth leading tackler totaling 59 stops, including seven soles from the middle guard position.

Eirhardt on McCright.— "Jon was a three year starter on defense. He is one of the best defensive players I've had-play-for me considering his size and the players he's gone up against."

Noe was one of the leading receivers for Allen this year as the 6-3, 170 pound senior hauled in 31 catches for 226 yards and scored four fourthdrains

Uldrich on Noe — "Craig is one of the finest ends in Northeast Nebraska He had. I believe, i0 more catches than anybody else in the Lewis and Clark Conference but still didn't make all-conference — what a crime. Craig blocks welf down field and he's a fine all-around affilier."

Although only 5-8 and 165 pounds, Prescott still totaled 140 tackles this year for Laurel-Concord.
Prescott was also versafile as the sophormore started at fullback late in the season.

Hamilton on Prescott — "Brad was a delermined player and came on strong at the end of the season. He's deserving of recognition."

BRENT PICK

Ehrhardt on Pick — "With his size and athletic ability, Brent has the potential to play college football, probably at tight end."

RANDY SHERRY

Although only a sophomore, the 5-10, 767-pounder totaled 135 tackles this, year for Laurel-Concord.

Sherry also finished with 25 stops in the Bears' final game of the season and started at offensive guard. Hamilton on Sherry — "Randy plays hard, this tackling statistics prove that, He's a hard worker and is deserving of recognition."

4-H Youth Exchange reaches 50,000

The youth of Nebraska can play an important role in dispelling misconceptions about the United States and U.S. agriculture, according to John Orr, extresion 4-H specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. They can also help people back home understand the links that make up the chain of international interdependence, Orr said.

"I think this is especially crucial at this time, while we are under some economic stress in the area, to understand, that the international economy, is a part of our own economy," he said.

By representing their country in-international 4-H Youth Exchange programs, youth and young adults ages 16-30 can have an impact on about 50,000 people each as they travel abroad, Orr said. An IFYE representative speaks to more than 50 different groups while living in a host country. Orr estimates that reaches an extremely large audience.

Rural and urban youth represent both Nebraska agriculture and agricultural products, and learn about international agriculture by visiting farms abroad and by living in both rural and urban homes. "Just the fact that you share lives with other possible is enriching," he said. The wordspreads again when the student returns home. The program emphasizes sharing the lesson learned about the international agriculture, culture and the value of international experience with other 4-H groups, civic organizations and the public at large.

AN ORIENTATION session helps repare these students for the role they play in communicating American lifestyle to their hosts economic situation.

B IFYE representatives visit about nine families during the 6-month stay, changing families every three weeks. This gives a wider view of the country, sald Jana Lamplot, an IFYE student from Pender.

Pender.
Lamplot, who spent six months in Talwan in 1983, said she visited 17 families during her stay. She spent a month with her first family, then stayed on farms and in homes across

"They see an honest-to-goodness American in a working situation and say, 'This isn't Clint Eastwood after all," Orr said.

THE IFYE program has made a special effort to "connect" with Japan. Two years ago with project Link, Nebraska sent 10 outstanding 4-H'ers to Japan, and again this year a delegation of 10-15 Nebraska youth will join 750 students ages 12-19 from Since 1972, more man power Japanese students have been hosted in Nebraska communities. During the summer of 1987, Southeast Nebraska again will host a number of Japanese youth, Orr said. Host families will be needed to share their famility life and work for one month.

me six to 10 IFYE exchange students arriving in Nebraska next summer: 1FYE is seeking about 30 families who will share their homes and their families for three weeks this summer. Rural families are preferred, but urban families also are needed, Orr said.

Orr also encouraged young adults ages 16 to 3º to check out the IFYE exchange trips available. They IFYE Representative program lasts six months. Participants live in familles for 3 weeks at a time, are involved in programs similar to 4.4 and improve language skills and cultural awarenes, Orr said. "This is not 6 tourist experience, you really get into family life." he said.

The six-week Ambassador program, for youth ages 16-26, includes family living for just over a month, and a 10 day tour of countries in Africa and Europe or Australia.

Orr said that scholarships are avialable to IFYE participants. Youth chosen to participate will promote Nebraska products and develop communication and leadership skills. More information about these programs is available through local Cooperative Extension office.

Evaluate Cow Herd at Weaning Time

at Weaning Time

Weaning time is a good time for the commercial cow-calf producer to evaluate the cow herd for productivity, to assess herd management practices and to review management for an economical program.

Producers are urged to look at the number of calves weaned compared to the number of cows and helfers exposed to bulls the previous year. Look at how uneven the calves are in weight and apparent age. These provide information with regard to several areas of management including nutrition, disease prevention and bull fertility.

When producers look at reproductive performance of the herd, it's suggested that they consider prepanery testing the cow. This would be especially appropriate for first and second calf helfers and for older cows if the herd had a history of low conception rates or it is some condition focuses attention on the cow conception rate this past breeding season.

Weaning time also is a good time to evaluate the quality and performance of the calves. Are they of the type and quality you want and also are calf weights what they should be for your production conditions?

If the caltel are not of the quality desired or are not as heavy as they should be, then a producer needs to look at two things.

1. Genetic ability of bulls used.

2. Pasture availability, quality and management.

Since replacement heifers are initially selected at this time, emphasize weight, sound structure and quality. Helfers born early in the calving season, and those of heavy weight at weaning, will tend to be larger and conceive earlier next spring.

Raising Ducks

A lot of ducks will find their way onto platters highlighting holiday dinner tables in the next few weeks. While many ducks are imported into the state, there are good potential outlets for home and farm raised ducks.

About 10 million ducks are raised annually for meat in the United States. Raising ducklings can be a profitable enterprise if the producer manages the flock well.

Competition exists in the marketing of ducklings, and producers who raise small numbers should develop a local market. NebGuide G84-712, "The Home Duck Flock", provides information on setting up a home duck flock — breed selection, feeding, brooding, and rearing, selecting breeding stock and incubating eggs.

The Dec. 2 meeting of the Dixon County Farm Bureau will provide an opportunity for Farm Bureau members and other interested citizens in northeast-Nebraska-to-tearn-about-legislation-that-has-been-enacted_as-well as legislation that will be considered during the 1986 session of the Nebraska State Legislature.

Resolutions that will be considered at the State Farm Bureau Convention in December will receive special attention.

Naomi Brummond of Rosalle will be the speaker at the Dec. 2 meeting of the Dixon County Farm Bureau at 8 p.m. at the office in Allen.

Mrs. Brummond is serving her third term on the state board of directors of the Nebraska Farm Bureau. She has a long-term interest in public affairs, and has been deeply involved in the legislative process. There will be an opportunity for questions from the audience.

Following the program and coffee break, the regular meeting of the Dixon County Farm Bureau board will conclude the evening.

Maynard Warne of Wayne recently attended a three-day sales meeting sponsored by DeKalb-Pfizer Genetics at the company's headquarters in DeKalb-III. The meeting, held Nov. 13-15; was attended by 30-DeKalb-Pfizer district sales managers, each having an average of 20 years' service to the company.

The meeting included discussions by senior management on product research and testing programs, seed production and distribution activities, marketing support campaigns and improvement of general communication skills.

Warne joined the company in 1964.

Farmers: keep faith in agriculture giving is sometimes labeled ruly American holiday, but dependence Day must share surely Independence Day must share that honor. It seems to me, though, that these two days of celebration are not that different.

On both occasions, we remind ourselves of the blessings we enjoy in the United States. Independence Day emphasizes the political and economical freedoms we have, and Thanksgiving the bounty that flows from those freedoms.

As we give thanks this month, many farm families will probably feel they have something in common with the Pilgrims who celebrated the first Thanksgiving in 1621. The rst Thanksgiving in 1621. The ligrims knew how lucky they were have survived. The Maytlower hached America lafe in-1620 and inter arrived almost immediately.

THIS YEAR'S corn crop, too, is a good one and the barvest is bountiful. There is something in a farmer that appreciates a good-looking field of orn and the proof that the land has yielded its increase — thanks in great part to his knowledge and skill. Although farmers could wish for higher prices, one farmer throw well puts it succincity: "I'd much rather have a big crop and low prices: Looking back with thanks inevitably leads to looking to the future with hope. As they relect, farmers can choose from a couple of paths. They can hope for record production and record high prices and be disap-THIS YEAR'S corn crop, too, is a

THIS CHOICE is another reason for thanks. Where else in the world do farmers, or anyone else, have so much opportunity to be in control of their future? Where else do political and economic freedom exist to such a Without a doubt, agriculture is ex-periencing some rough times right now, a modern-day version of the Pilgrims' first American winter. But signs for the future are hopeful.

Throughout our history, agriculture has had its ups and downs. If the 1970's had not been such will continue.

It wouldn't take much searching to find arguments portending doom and gloom for agriculture. But as always, we have his choice to be offinistic, to hope and plan and expect good things to happen and to work to fulfill that prophecy. Or we can expect the worst and let it happen.

Farming has always seemed to me an act of faith. So much can happen between planting and harvest, and between harvesting and marketing Faith in the future is needed now, as much as during the growing season.

"To be eligible for substitution, farmers must be willing to accept loan proceeds when our office approves the request and is in a position to disburse the loan, the ASCS official said. The substituted commodity must be the same class as the eligible commodity. Acquired grain placed under regular loan cannot be substituted again, except for entry of the grain into the reserve. Grain in the reserve may be replaced with acquired grain no more than once in a 12-month period.

It's a tough decision. Each year after It's a thught uterranning and the harvest, the same questions come up. Which one will make the most money this year? Should you sell your grain today or store it for a better price tomorrow? If you store it, should it be on-farm or stored commercially? The questions make your head spin and finding the answers seem like finding the needle in the haystack ... until now!

An informed decision. Now you can find answers to all these questions right in your own home, with Farm TABS from Terra International, Inc. The Farm TABS Corn/Soy-International, Inc. The Farm TABS Corn/Soybean Management program helps you make informed management decisions that will increase your profitability. It calculates drying and storage costs, net crop value, and break even prices over a period of months. It allows you to look ahead and speculate taking into account: fluctuating interest rates, market prices, storage costs and storage periods. You can instantly determine what effect changing cost and price levels might have on your storage costs and overall grain marketing plan but, Grain Storage Decisions is just one of the many options of this Farm TABS program.

HITTH.

The right decision. The Farm TABS Corn/Soybean Management program also has: a Harvest Loss Calculator that allows you to check your combines efficiency,a Crop Yield Calculator that calculates yield figures based on round or that calculate yield in gardes according formation from a given test strip, a Field Population Calculator that compares different hybrids and management practices and a Planter Calibration Calculator that determines the most efficient rate at which to plant.

You decide. The Farm TABS Corn/Soybean Management program gives you the answers that can help you better manage your crop for better profits. This program alone is an incredible assistance in managing your farm operation, yet it is just a small part of the complete Farm TABS program. You
