On election issues

GOP candidates speak out

by Chuck Hackenmiller

Three Republican gubernatorial candidates made a personal appearance Tuesday evening during a GOP Candidate Forum at the Wayne State College Student Center.

Two other GOP candidates for governor, Nancy Hoch and Paul Rosberg, had written communications, concerning their candidacy which were read to the audience.

Appearing were Roger Yant, Kermit Brashear and Rev. Everett Sileven.

Others that attended the forum, sponsored jointly by the Wayne State College Republicans, Wayne County Republicans and the Northeast Nebraska Young Republicans, were Randy Moody and William Nichol, candidates for lieutenant governor; and Don Stenberg, candidate for attorney general.

First to speak (each candidate present getting eight minutes for opening remarks followed by a question-answer session, then closing remarks) was Stenberg, who criticized his opponent in the Republican primary. Opposing Stenberg in the primary election will be incumbent Robert Spire.

STENBERG said one of his goals will be to establish a stronger law enforcement in the state of Nebraska.

He has helped draft legislation that would strengthen the capital punishment statute.

Stenberg also said he would like to see the insanity law defense changed.

Reasoning behind this, he said, is that "it seems "the more terrible crime, more people killed — the better chance defense attorneys have of convincing that the person must have been insane to do such horrible things."

This must change, he said.

Another area he would like to see changed is the way the attorney general handles appeals for the state of Nebraska. The attorney general must work to sustain convictions brought on by the county attorneys.

"He [the attorney general] should not quit because the case is too tough. He should work harder to sustain those convictions," Stenberg said.

Both lieutenant governor candidates presented their viewpoints. William Nichol spent the past 12 years serving in the legislature—the past four years as speaker of the legislature.

Nichol said he would like to see more action by the lieutenant governor's office, such as doing special projects for the governor, presiding at meetings and at special celebrations.

He could help the governor with the budgets (if allowed) and would help create a liaison between the governor's office, the legislature and the people of Nebraska.

MOODY, BORN in West Point, told the audience that one obligation he foresees as lieutenant governor is to "help get the [Republican] ticket elected to office."

In the areas of economic development, Moody says the lieutenant governor should be making contact with businesses expressing an interest to operate in Nebraska. "People like to deal with elected officials," Moody said.

If elected, Moody said he would take a look at state government "to see where services can be bettered by private enterprise."

"I will be involved and active in the Republican Party, to get the governor's office back," he said.

In a letter read by a Rosberg campaign representative, Rosberg said if he is elected, his government will be of the people, for the people and by the people. He wrote about the vast amounts some campaigners are spending in advertising when the governor's job has a $40,000 salary.

He also criticized heavily the state's judicial system.

Kermit Brashear, in his opening statements, said Nebraska is a world class state and that he goes by the theory that "can't never did anything."

Brashear spoke about the reasons behind why the University of Nebraska and state colleges have been faced with funding cuts. "Why did we [the state of Nebraska] have to take this money? It's because we couldn't afford not to," he said.

He said Nebraska is one of the highest taxed states in the nation. "And what do we have to show for it?" he asked.

The biggest issue, he said, will be of a "growing Nebraska" through an economic development plan that will provide more jobs in the future.

THERE IS LACK of economic development in Nebraska, he said. See GOP, page 10a

KERMIT BRASHEAR (standing) answers a question from an audience member concerning input on economic development for the state of Nebraska. From left at the table are Roger Yant, Rev. Everett Sileven, a representative for Rosberg and Brashear. A straw poll was taken after the forum, however, results were not able to be obtained by press time.

Benefit hoop game set

By John Praher

January 2, 1986, was a horrifying day for many residents of the Wayne community. But had it not been for the dutiful efforts by members of several volunteer fire departments, especially those of Wayne's Fire Department, that particular Thursday could have been much more devastating.

The State National Bank, along with several other businesses and an apartment located in the 94-year old structure on 2nd & Main St., were destroyed early that morning.

But nobody was injured during the blaze, which fire chief Dale Preston called very fortunate. Surrounding buildings were also fortunate that they received as little damage as they did, considering the demolishing nature of the fire.

Approximately 50 fire fighters battled the blaze for nearly 24 hours and turned an inferno into smoldering smoke. All the fire fighters risked injury during the battle, and some did receive smoke inhalation.

To show their appreciation for the fire fighters' efforts, personnel from the Wayne Herald, which received just minimal damage from the fire, will play employees of the State National Bank in a benefit basketball game this Sunday at 2 p.m. at the Wayne High School gymnasium. All proceeds from the game will be forwarded to the Wayne Fire Department for equipment purchases.

The benefit game is the Wayne Herald's and the State National Bank's way of saying thank you to the fire fighters. Others from the community can also show their appreciation by purchasing a ticket to watch the game.

Courthouse improvements tentative

Tentative plans to construct an off street parking area along Pearl Street east of the Wayne County Courthouse were discussed Tuesday by the county commissioners during the regular meeting.

Gerhold Concrete has agreed to draw up plans for the parking area which will be similar to parking along Lincoln Street west of the courthouse. If the cost of the project is expected to exceed $10,000, the commissioners will advertise for bids.

A proposal to build an annex next to the courthouse and to renovate its existing exterior was also discussed by the commissioners. The exterior renovation of tuck pointing, exterior painting, re-roofing and installing new windows was estimated at a cost of $225,000.

The renovation work would also include an indoor elevator for accessibility to the handicapped.

The estimated cost of constructing a 6,000 square foot annex to house the county assessor, clerk, commissioners and treasurer (next to the present courthouse structure) was $350,000.

Kurt Ote of Ote Construction commented that the entire project would cost around $600,000.

The commissioners will ask Jackson & Jackson Architects from Omaha to draw up plans for the project before any decision is made. Jackson & Jackson had completed previous work on the courthouse.

In other Wayne County news:

By approval of the Board of Commissioners, the Hunter Precinct polling place has been moved to the National Guard Armory. The Wilber Precinct polling place will remain at District 15 Schoolhouse.

*A list of county property was reviewed and revised by the commissioners to update Wayne County's insurance policy with Warnemunde Insurance.

*A resolution was approved and letter signed by the commissioners giving their support of federal revenue sharing for local governmental entities. The letter will be sent to Edward Zorinsky, Virginia Smith and J. James Exon.

*And the Wayne County Board of Equalization convened to review proposals on property valuations.

Vegetable cooperative concept growing in interest

by Chuck Hackenmiller

What one usually sees while traveling on the country roads and highways of northeast Nebraska are abundant acres of corn or soybeans.

These are the cash crops which are the backbone of this area's agriculture environment.

The future of these commodities is not promising when considering the cost effectiveness of the crop. And recent high yields have created surpluses, bringing less of a price for the commodity.

Kurt Schrant of rural Winside has been farming and growing these crops for the past 11 years. Over the past few years, he has found a way to supplement his farm income with a practice that he says has promise, yet is still in the early stages.

Growing vegetables as a cash crop. Last year he had planted a half acre of onions, contracted to an onion processing firm, and another half acre of vegetables.

The bulk of the vegetables were taken by the Schrant family to the Farmers Market in Norfolk. This year they plan on doing the same.

However Schrant and others are launching a new idea that has not been tested in this state, at least to his knowledge — establishing a marketing cooperative for vegetables in northeast Nebraska. The name of the corporation is the Northeast Nebraska Vegetable Growers Cooperative and Schrant is the president of the cooperative board.

ACCORDING TO Schrant, the cooperative is a incorporated entity that is non-stock, non-profit. "The vegetable growers [contracting with the cooperative] put up the equity. No investors can make money off of us," said Schrant. He said profit that is made by the cooperative is divided up between the growers.

At the start, the growers pay a membership fee to the marketing cooperative and also submit an equity fee.

For example, the equity fee for a grower to put in 100 to 1,000 plants of tomatoes is $50, Schrant said. That $50 will help to cover the cost of supplying the tomato plants to the grower and having them graded, he mentioned.

The goal of the cooperative members is to sell to major wholesalers. Before incorporating the cooperative, there was adequate acreage and produce to supply to the farmers markets or local grocery stores.

"But we were not big enough to sell to wholesale suppliers. To get the produce to wholesalers, you want truckloads hauling 20,000 to 40,000 pounds at a crack. They [the wholesalers] don't want to mess around with just pick-up loads," Schrant said.

MEMBERS RULED out a partnership arrangement over a cooperative. Liability for each participating grower is limited with cooperatives, but is greater in partnerships.

"If a grower was negligent with pesticide, he would be in trouble but it would not affect the rest of us [through the cooperative]," Schrant said, adding that the results would be more devastating if the partnership arrangement had been considered.

Approximately 40 growers have become members of the cooperative. "We have about 50 or 60 members as a goal," Schrant said.

The membership stretches to include areas from Norfolk, Howells, O'Neill, Verdigre, areas in Cedar County and Wisner. Schrant said he had signed a cucumber contract himself.

He said six to seven wholesale suppliers have expressed an interest in purchasing produce from the northeast Nebraska cooperative — but only for top grade produce. Cooperative members are currently considering ways "to get rid of the rejects," he said.

THIS GROWING season the cooperative is concentrating its marketing efforts on tomatoes and slicer cucumbers.

"We have 20,000 tomato plants ordered and about 10 pounds of slicer cucumber seed," he commented. "This year we will concentrate on two [types of produce] and branch into others the following years."

In 1987, the cooperative members have plans to expand greater into cherry tomatoes and peppers.

"One of the benefits of the cooperative perspective in vegetable marketing is that membership can encompass many individuals of various occupations — such as a school teacher who grows a large garden, on up to the large truck farmers who, even if they have their regular marketplace to take their produce, can still supply the cooperative with produce as well.

And it could bring in a new look of industry to northeast Nebraska.

Company processors do not want to come into the state because there is no acreage base established in vegetable growing. "Once we get the cooperative going and establish the growers, some day we'll have the financing to draw a processing plant in our area," he said.

"That will mean a lot more growers who will be hiring more people in addition to the people that will be running the processing plant," he added.

Schrant strongly feels that vegetable growing, when compared to corn or soybeans, has been doing well in the markets. "The trend today seems to be health and vegetables," he said. "What increases I see today [in market prices] is in the vegetable market. People are going back to fresh vegetables," he mentioned.

SOME VEGETABLES have more demand than others and should create a greater prospect for better marketing by the cooperative.

Potatoes, onions and Gedney pickles are not produce considered marketable for northeast Nebraska. The potatoes are ample in the western states. Onion contracting for 1986 is likely completed and Gedney pickles are readily marketed.

Sweetcorn is a gamble and there is no established market for it. "Last year it was really bad. You couldn't even give it away," said Schrant.

Cabbage, beans, carrots, peas are produce that sell very well at farmers markets. It is much easier for individuals to grow tomatoes in their home gardens rather than delve into the growing of vegetables that need constant watching.

Schrant brings home the point that

One more chance at Halley

The public is invited Thursday, Friday and Saturday mornings (April 3-5) to view Halley's Comet, said Carl Rump, associate professor of earth science at Wayne State College.

A telescope will be available to view the comet beginning at 4 a.m. at District 57 rural school, on the west side of Highway 15 four miles south of Wayne.

The sessions will last until morning twilight at approximately 4:40 a.m., Rump said.

The viewing sessions will only be held if weather conditions permit.

Rump said viewers should be aware that the comet is positioned only a few degrees above the southern horizon, and that it may be difficult or impossible to see if early morning haze obscures the horizon.

"Comet Halley: Once in a Lifetime," the current planetarium show at Wayne State College's Fred G. Dale Planetarium, will be shown one additional Sunday on April 13, Rump said.

The Halley's comet show was to end April 6, but because of large crowds, Rump said the show will run an extra Sunday. Both remaining shows are at 3:30 p.m. in the planetarium located on the bottom level of the Carhart Math-Science Building at Wayne State.

The shows are free and open to the public.

Rump said a new planetarium show will run four Sundays beginning April 20.

Cast selected for spring production

The "Night of January 16th" will have a community flavor announces director Gil Haase, administrator of the Wayne Care Centre.

The 19 member cast for the spring production of the Wayne Community Theatre will have three college students and 16 community adults from all walks of life and professions, including retirees, and range from 18 years of age to approximately 70.

Karen Andre, the defendant, portrayed by Teri Higbee, is accused of murder, shooting Bjorn Faulkner and throwing his body off the top floor of a penthouse the night of January 16th. Defending her will be Jo Herian as Defense Attorney Stevens.

District Attorney Flint will be played by Clarence Wilson of Seward and hearing the trial will be Elizabeth Anderson as Judge Amanda Heath.

"With the notable history of the county court house," explained Haase, "it is exciting to have received permission from the Wayne County Board of Commissioners for our use of the second floor court room for this excellent court room production." Another exciting aspect of this comedy/drama, according to Haase, is that the jury is selected from the audience at each performance and they must decide the "guilty" or "not guilty" verdict at which time the cast will then perform the appropriate conclusion.

THE PLAY IS scheduled to be performed at 8 p.m. May 1, 2 and 3 and 2 p.m. on Sunday, May 4. Also, "with the court room only being able to seat approximately 110, our audience must necessarily be equally spread out over all four performances."

Other cast members are Connie Meyer as the Court Reporter; Curtis Carstens, Bailiff; Clyde Flowers, Court Clerk; Elaine Anderson, Prison Matron; Janet Schmitz, Dr. Kirkland; Michele Flowers, Mrs. Hutchins; and Jay Kelley, Homer Van Fleet.

Lobbying can become expensive

viewpoint

The price of winning senatorial friends and influencing legislation is steep—a hefty $3 million.

That's what more than 370 businesses and organizations reported last year for lobbyist fees, entertainment and related lobbying expenses, according to a tally from reports filed with the Clerk of the Legislature's Office.

"Lobbying," joked Herb Schimek who keeps an eye on legislation for the state's teachers, "may be the only growth industry in the state."

Some of the money paid for dinners and drinks. Lobbyists reported spending about $240,000 on entertainment in 1985, a year when the legislature met for a long 90-day session and two special sessions.

That's about $5,000 per senator, including Omaha Senator Ernest Chambers who often points out that his lips never touch lobbying-funded food.

But lobbyists and senators contend that averaging the entertainment among the state's 49 senators is not a fair comparison. Lobbyists and organizations also entertain their own members.

IN FACT THE top entertainment spenders say they report everything — what they spend on senators and spouses plus other related guests.

Financial institutions of Nebraska spent about $114,000 on entertainment last year. Lobbyist Jack Moors says he reports everything. When he takes bankers in the small communities of the state to dinner, he reports that as lobbying entertainment.

The more than $9,600 in entertainment expenses for FirstTier, Inc. went primarily for football game luncheons where the other guests often outnumbered the senators, according to Donald Adams, lobbyist.

And Schimek, who lobbies for the Nebraska State Education Association, says some of the reported $8,325 in entertainment expenses reported by NSEA last year went to buy lunches and entertain teachers who came to Lincoln for legislative work.

But most of the lobbying money went to 328 lobbyists for their professional services. And a handful of men made the most.

Walt Radcliffe, who began his legislative career 17 years ago as a page, reported receipts of more than $350,000 for his firm.

THE TWO OTHER top lobbying firms for the 1985 calendar year were Ryan & Williams, P. C. (with James Ryan as principal lobbyist) an estimated $301,000 in reported income; and O'Hara and Associates, Inc. (with Paul O'Hara as principal lobbyist); estimated income of $207,000.

From the corn growers to the engineers, groups across the state pay professional lobbyists to make sure their voice is heard in the Legislature.

But bankers pay the most. About 25 different groups representing financial institutions reported spending almost $500,000 for lobbying last year.

Other major industries with high lobbying costs are listed below:

- Education, about $310,000, including $170,000 for higher education.

- Local governmental units, including the urban cities and counties, public power districts, and natural resource districts, about $213,000.

- Health professionals and their organizations, about $197,000.
- Telephone industry, about $122,000.
- Insurance industry, about $87,000.
- And farm groups, about $60,000.

Calling for deregulation

LB 835 appears to be the bill most heavily lobbied in the Nebraska legislature this session, according to State Senator Elroy Hefner.

What the bill will do for Northwestern Bell, which serves Wayne and surrounding area, is allow this company to compete at the same level against long distance companies that were not regulated by the Nebraska Public Service Commission.

By deregulation of the telephone industry in Nebraska, proponents say this is healthy and necessary for the corporate giants such as Northwestern Bell to remain competitive against the smaller, independent long distance companies. Opponents of the bill fear that ending the rate averaging concept will cause rate charges in local areas to skyrocket.

Presently there are 41 local telephone companies operating in Nebraska. Thirty-six of these 41 have been operating under statutory regulations of the public service commission.

From this writer's viewpoint, deregulation is a concept which should be considered, primarily for this reason: If Northwestern Bell loses out on all the corporate heavy users of long distance services, simply because they are handcuffed to regulations of the public service commission, then local rates will undoubtedly rise [even more] to cover the company expenses normally covered by long distance income.

As more and more of those revenues are lost to competition, there's less available to help offset the cost of local service. Without the freedom to compete, the price of local service will rise sharply.

With LB 835, Northwestern Bell can competitively go after these large long distance users and could, in effect, bring the local rates down.

What safeguards do telephone service consumers have to protect them from companies such as Northwestern Bell to jack up the rates?

Hefner said that under the amended bill, telephone companies will be allowed to set their own rates based upon the cost of providing service to the customers.

Companies also have to provide written notice of new rates and allow for public hearings before the rates can go into effect. In addition, the telephone companies have to justify the proposed rate increase before the public service commission in two instances: first, when rates increased more than 10 percent within a 12-month period; and second, when consumers protest rate hikes through a petition process.

Hefner said in his newsletter that he foresees no great changes in the northeast Nebraska area rate charges because the small companies have been deregulated for several years.

So the telephone companies would continue under the jurisdiction of the public service commission. Companies would gain needed pricing flexibility, but the commission would retain the authority to roll back basic local rate increases if they would price service in excess of cost.

Challenges to rate increases are there for consumers to exercise.

If LB 835 is the way to control the rapid rise in cost to provide local service, and there is that reserved right to challenge rate hikes as before, then perhaps it is the only alternative we have.

We'll monitor the local rates if this bill passes and will be ready to cry foul if it appears to be getting out of hand. What we hope will happen is that the rates will go downward rather than stay at the high level it is now.

Salute to girl scouts in the area

Safari Adventure
And Only 15

As I mentioned in a recent column about the Boy Scouts, the Girl Scouts of America deserve a lot of attention, too. We recently observed Girl Scout Week, a special opportunity to recognize the accomplishments of many outstanding young women.

Girl Scout Laura Grove, 15, from Milford, Nebraska ventured — and adventured — through Kenya, Africa, on an unforgettable safari. Laura, after applying in February, 1985, to Mutual of Omaha, was chosen from among all of the Girl Scouts in the United States to participate in a film entitled, "Girl Scout on Safari." A summer month of chasing elephants away at breakfast time and walking among the baboons definitely helped her confirm her desire to make a career in animal science. She says that she is eager and ready to go again! And, Laura is ready to talk to Girl Scouts of any age at any time about her experiences.

Laura is one of 2114 Girl Scouts in the First Congressional District — Daisies, Brownies, Juniors, Cadettes and Seniors. Their successes and ambitions have made Nebraskans proud of them as they climb the Girl Scout Ladder of Success to the highest award, the Gold Award. I understand that many such awards have been presented, and I am always pleased to send my warmest congratulations to the Girl Scouts who have put forth the extra time and effort to achieve that goal. Definitely on their way to higher awards are Angela Bartek, Kelly Stuchlik, Mary Spicka and Amanda Hutchens, Junior Girl Scouts from Wahoo who recently received their "I Live My Faith" awards.

There are no income tax deductions for the special contributions of time and energy made by over 400 adults in the First Congressional District to the Girl Scouts, but those contributions are certainly worthy of special commendation!

New Consumer's Resource Handbook Ready

The 1986 edition of the popular and practical consumer assistance manual, the Consumer's Resource Handbook, is now available.

The Handbook, a cooperative project of 19 Federal departments and agencies, is designed to help individual consumers handle their own complaints. It pinpoints local sources for assistance wherever possible. Over 2,000 governmental, voluntary and business offices that regularly help individual consumers with marketplace problems are listed, along with available toll-free (800) phone numbers and telecommunication devices for the deaf (TDD).

According to the President's Special Advisor for Consumer Affairs, the purpose of the Handbook is "to help Federal government offices reduce the expense and personnel devoted to misdirected complaints and inquiries, and to provide consumers with better and more efficient service."

Single copies of the Handbook are available without charge by writing: HANDBOOK, Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Conway bills reach signing stage

A legislator moves an idea through the drawn out process of research, bill introduction, public hearings, first and second stage floor debate and (if everything goes right) final reading. One area of satisfaction is found when we work hard and bring a bill all the way through the system. This last week, five of the bills I sponsored or co-sponsored received final approval.

The most important of these was LB 1041. This bill formalized a system of subsidy from the larger horse racing tracks in Nebraska to the smaller tracks. These smaller tracks have a major impact on our agricultural economy as well as providing a base for the Nebraska racing industry. As I have reported before, horse racing in Nebraska is a $350 million industry and the breeding, training, and keeping of these horses consume a great deal of our agricultural product. I am looking forward to the Governor's signing LB 1041 into law in the near future.

The four other proposals of mine are comparatively minor bills. LB 494 provides added protection to towns and their residents when negotiating with natural gas companies for utility service. LB 969 makes fireworks displays safer through changes in the permit system. LB 891 makes technical changes in procedures used while investing money received through the courts, and LB 912 changes necessary administrative procedures for expending state college funds.

THE EARLY SUCCESS of these last four bills can be credited to the fact that they were not very controversial and required a limited amount of debate. Often bills are required to modernize statutes or alter certain procedures that have become inefficient. These rarely tie up the legislative process for very long, but must be dealt with early so that they are not crowded out for lack of time. Once the appropriations bills make it to the floor, most of our time is spent working on the budget, which is now the case.

So far the Appropriations Committee recommendations are holding up quite well under the scrutiny of the full Legislature. Only two amendments, on behalf of the Commission on the Status of Women and the Veteran Affairs Department, have altered the recommendations of the committee. The mainline appropriations bill has been advanced from general file (first stage debate) and will have several proposed changes offered when it is debated on select file (second stage debate).

We're now down to the last three weeks of this legislative session, with adjournment scheduled for April 15th; however there is a great deal yet to accomplish. We will be adding many evening and nighttime deliberations to our schedules in order to accommodate debate on some major issues that have to be dealt with yet this year. Appropriations, tax rates, telephone deregulation, lotteries, interstate banking, Initiative 300, and others continue to be debated.

MIA/POW: Renewed hope

by Senator Dennis DeConcini of Arizona

MIA/POW: Renewed hope

In recent months the United States has finally begun to address the issue of MIA/POWs from the Vietnam War with the priority it should be given. Negotiations with the Vietnamese government have taken the MIA/POW issue off the back burner. We are talking about over 2,400 POWs and over 100 live sightings from the Vietnam War still accounted for.

During talks this year between Vietnamese officials and U.S. delegations, including a Veterans' Affairs Committee delegation led by Sen. Frank Murkowski (R-AK) which I was invited to join, the Vietnamese committed themselves to resolving this issue with two years.

During our meetings in Hanoi with Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach, he indicated that Vietnam would take part in future technical meetings and provide additional information on remains. We also brought up the issue of live sightings of American POWs with the foreign minister. We continued to press Thach on the delegations proposal that Vietnam allow international inspection teams to work directly with Vietnamese officials in investigating live sightings reports.

The question I posed to the Foreign Minister was: what did this country have to lose if there are not American servicemen discovered. He finally said to me that he and I could go out and investigate these reports ourselves but no other government officials would be allowed.

THE MESSAGE OUR delegation delivered to the Vietnamese may have caused them to realize the importance of this issue to the U.S. In February, a second Congressional delegation led by Rep. Gerald Solomon (R-NY) traveled to Vietnam and met with Deputy Foreign Minister Hoang Binh Son. The Deputy Foreign Minister told the delegation that Hanoi is willing to allow U.S. government and military personnel to accompany Vietnamese teams investigating reports that living Americans have remained in his country since the war. It remains to be seen if Foreign Minister Thach will abide by this commitment.

During technical meetings between the United States and Vietnam a few weeks ago, U.S. officials brought home a further glimmer of hope for the families of American servicemen still listed as missing in action. At the Hanoi meetings, Vietnamese officials said they have additional information on 49 remains but that a significant number may not be Americans. The Vietnamese would not provide a timetable on when they would release these remains to our government. Further progress has been made in Laos, where a second joint U.S.-Laotian team finished excavating a known American crash site. The excavation team has sent the remains they recovered to the Joint Casualty Resolution Center in Hawaii for identification. The joint excavation of a crash site in Laos last year led to the identification of 13 U.S. servicemen.

VIETNAM DOES NOT want to be perceived as being anxious to establish normal relations with the United States. But in my opinion, they are desperate to gain recognition or normalization. The fact is the country is in shambles. The severe economic conditions of the country have left Vietnam forty years behind the free world in the technology they possess. This country of 60 million people has a per capita income of approximately $175.00, and a yearly inflation rate of between 80 percent and 100 percent. Although they barely produce enough food to feed their own people, they maintain an army of over one million.

Since the Veterans' Committee delegation returned from Southeast Asia, the Committee has held three hearings dealing with the MIA/POW issue and we plan to hold additional hearings in the near future. We in Congress cannot put this to rest until it is fully resolved. Neither the American government nor the American public will even consider normalization of relations with Vietnam until the MIA/POW question is answered.

Meyer donation totals $19,813

A story which appeared in the March 20 edition of The Wayne Herald told about a donation presented last month to Steve and Cindy Meyer of Wayne to help pay bills accumulated over the past two years since their daughter, Ashley, was diagnosed as having non-ketotic hyperglycemia.

The $19,813 is the total amount presented to the Meyers and includes money raised during several fund raising events, which in turn was matched by the AAL branches.

The fund raising events totaled $10,170.17. That figure was matched by the AAL, bringing the total amount presented to the Meyers at $19,813.24 — not $40,000.

Workshop will focus on family keepsakes

The Wayne County Cooperative Extension Service is sponsoring a workshop, free to representatives of community groups, entitled "Family Keepsakes."

The workshop will be held Monday, April 7 at 7:30 p.m. in the Wayne Methodist Church.

Mary Temme, Wayne County extension agent-home economics, said the session will focus on understanding the value of items, safeguarding against natural disasters and theft, and using appropriate storage, display and cleaning techniques.

"THE NEXT TIME you're looking at objects in your home," says Temme, "ask yourself these questions."

Does it have sentimental value to me? Is it something I wish to pass on to others as a memento or family heirloom? Is it important to my history or the history of my family?

"If you answer 'yes' to any of these questions," adds Temme, "the objects in your home may be family keepsakes, heirlooms or antiques."

Temme explains that an heirloom is a piece of personal property owned by a family for several generations. A collectible is a product of the machine age and may be a "future antique." An antique is generally at least 100 years old with one-of-a-kind characteristics or historical value.

"All can be considered keepsakes," says Temme, "and yet all are different."

Uhing's prayers

Bob Uhing's prayers were answered this week. And so were Lonnie Erhardt's and Al Hansen's.

Tuesday evening, at approximately 7:30 p.m., Mr. and Mrs. Richard Jackson moved to Wayne from Denver and brought along their 17-year-old son Rodney and his 15-year-old brother Rick.

Who, you might ask, are the Jacksons and why were Uhing's, Erhardt's and Hansen's prayers answered? Well, for starters, Rodney was one of Colorado's best high school cagers last season, and rumors have it that Rick possesses even more basketball talent than his big brother.

Last season, Rodney averaged 21.5 points and 14.8 rebounds for Denver Hillside. He was only a junior, but at 6-5½ he also intimidated many an opponent who dared to venture inside.

As for Rick, he led Hillside's freshman team to a 14-0 record by scoring 19 points and grabbing 11 boards an outing. And when I refer to Rodney as being Rick's big brother, it's only because Rodney's older. You see, although only in the ninth grade, the part in Rick's blond hair reaches 6-9 on most height charts.

Uhing and all other Wayne natives that knew about the Jacksons' move to Wayne kept it a secret until they were certain Wayne was going to be the Jacksons' new home. But now, since the Jacksons have purchased a house and Mr. Jackson starts working at Timpte later this week, Uhing is willing to discuss his two future superstars.

"About five weeks ago, several people were told about two new kids that were moving to Wayne, but we wanted to keep it a secret until we knew for sure they were coming.

"They were supposed to get here earlier, but Colorado just got done with its state basketball tournament and Hillside won it all," he said.

And what does Uhing think about Wayne's future basketball team? Just listen.

"I thought we were going to be pretty tough next year even before I heard about Rodney and Rick. And I shouldn't say this because it just puts extra pressure on the team, but I honestly think we'll be unstoppable," he said.

"I went over and visited with them when they arrived in town and then we went over to the gym. Rick can dunk two balls at once and I don't think I've ever seen a better all-around ball player than Rodney. I'm optimistic we're going to win it all next year."

Erhardt and Hansen are also tickled pink about the Jacksons. Rodney and Rick also lettered in football and track at Hillside and Rodney can bench press over 300 pounds and runs the 40-yard dash in 4.7.

But without a doubt, basketball is the Jacksons' specialty. Had Rodney stayed in Colorado one more year, he would've had a great shot at becoming the state's first three-time all-stater in over a decade. And word has it that next year would've been Rick's first of three all-state selections.

But Uhing is sure the two will be honored well in Nebraska, too.

"Well, there isn't a doubt in my mind that they'll both make all-state next year. Heck, that's an understatement, these two thoroughbreds could be high school All-American's next year," he said.

Ah, if only it were true. You see, this column was written Tuesday, April 1 — it's an April fool's story.

John Prather will have an honest column in next week's paper.

Eight make All-area wrestling team

By John Prather
Sports Editor

Two 132-pounders were selected to the 1986 Wayne Herald All-Area Wrestling Team, along with six other area grapplers.

Mark Janke of Wayne and Winside's Chris Olson are the two 132-pounders named to the team. They are also the only two seniors selected on this year's squad.

Rounding out the all-area team are: Mace Kant, 105-pounder from Winside; Doug Paulsen, 112-pounder from Winside; Darrin Schellenberg, 138-pounder from Winside; Jamie Fredrickson, 145-pounder from Wayne; Randy Leapley, 155-pounder from Winside; and heavyweight Steve Cowgill from Wayne.

Wayne head coach John Murtaugh and Winside head coach Paul Sok sent their nominations to the Wayne Herald, and the paper's sports department selected the all-area squad.

Mace Kant, Winside
Kant finished the season with one of the area's best records at 25-5. The 105-pounder was trimmed 2-0 at the State Wrestling Tournament but still finished fourth in Nebraska.

Only a sophomore, Kant has an excellent chance of placing at the State Wrestling Tournament four times as he also placed his freshman year.

Sok on Kant — "Mace really developed his self discipline this year and his poise was his biggest asset. He has the ability to go out and find his opponents' weak points, and then going from there."

Doug Paulsen, Winside
Paulsen turned in a season that most prep wrestlers dream about. In addition to finishing 33-3, the 112-pounder captured the state title.

Paulsen, perhaps the most aggressive wrestler in the area, also placed at state as a freshman and has the chance to become a rare three-time state champ.

Sok on Paulsen — "It's hard to discuss Doug because so much has already been said about him. He's just a great wrestler that's very aggressive. Once in a while that aggressiveness backfires, but over the long run it pays off. Everytime he took the mat he went out for a pin, and his winning the state championship wasn't a fluke."

Mark Janke, Wayne
Although he did not qualify for the State Wrestling Tournament this year, Mark Janke is a two-time state qualifier and finished the year with an impressive 24-8 mark.

Janke was Wayne's team leader and he set a school record in takedowns with 39 the past season. Murtaugh on Janke — "Mark has contributed significantly to the Wayne wrestling program. His leadership and personal attributes will be missed."

Chris Olson, Winside
Olson finished the year with the second most wins in the area as his 30 victories was bettered only by Paulsen.

Olson captured numerous tournament championships over the last two years, but failed to reach the state tournament during that same time span. But his 58-11 record over the last two campaigns makes him one of the area's better grapplers.

Sok on Olson — "Chris was the leader of the team this year, he worked hard to hold things together. He was a cautious wrestler, which worked to his advantage most of the time. His biggest advantage was his strength and conditioning."

Darrin Schellenberg, Winside
Schellenberg finished with a respectable 22-18 mark, but had wrestled at 132-pounds, a weight that would have tailored to him better, he would have had a better winning percentage.

Schellenberg, a junior, had a good chance of qualifying for the State Wrestling Tournament, but he sustained a shoulder injury in districts and was forced to withdraw. Schellenberg has since recovered from his injury.

Sok on Schellenberg — "He turned in a good year despite wrestling at a weight above what he normally should've wrestled at. His main asset was his determination. He stuck with the competition and won a lot of meets in the third period."

Jamie Fredrickson, Wayne
Fredrickson's steady improvement during the season gradually turned him into one of the area's better wrestlers by the end of the year.

Fredrickson, a junior, finished the year with a 14-10 mark and should be one of the Blue Devils' leaders next season.

Murtaugh on Fredrickson — "Jamie improved a great deal over the course of the year because he is always willing to give maximum effort. We are looking forward to having him back next year."

Randy Leapley, Winside
Leapley had the biggest turnaround of any other area wrestler. Early in the season Leapley's record was well below .500, but he finished very strongly and concluded the year with a 28-14 mark.

Leapley, a junior, qualified for the State Wrestling Tournament and has an excellent chance of bettering his mark and making the trek to Lincoln again next season.

Sok on Leapley — "The best word to describe Randy is determination. His determination was the key to his strong finish, and he has the ability to pick-up new moves and correct mistakes."

Steve Cowgill, Wayne
Cowgill had an up-and-down season, but the burly sophomore finished the year with a fine 14-10 mark.

Cowgill was one of the area's more aggressive wrestlers, and he led the Blue Devils in pins with 10.

Murtaugh on Cowgill — "The key to Steve's success was his work in the weight room during the off season."

Wayne State pounds out 29 hits Wildcats sweep Westmar

"We're starting to play good ball. Our bats are coming to life now and we're eliminating a lot of the mistakes we were making at the beginning of the season," Wayne State head coach Lenny Klaver said after his Wildcats destroyed Westmar in a doubleheader at the Wayne State diamond Tuesday.

The Wildcats claimed a 19-9 victory in the opener before capturing a 13-3 triumph in the nightcap. Both games lasted just five innings because of the 10-run rule.

Kurt Brosamle, Mike Hoffart and Gale Bretschneider led Wayne State's offensive attack in the opener.

Brosamle ripped two triples and a double while knocking in four runs. Hoffart totaled three RBI on a double and a two-run homer in the second inning, and Bretschneider doubled, tripled and totaled four RBI.

Bretschneider also scored three runs and added two stolen bases.

Wayne State scored three in the first, five in the second, six in the third, one in the fourth and four more in the fifth to claim the 10-run victory.

Jeff Strain also doubled in the opener for Wayne State and knocked in two runs, and Pat Salerno added a double for the Wildcats.

Kevin Hoffart picked up the win for Wayne State. Mark Priegnitz relieved Hoffart and picked up the save. Hoffart and Priegnitz yielded six hits in the win, while the Wildcats pounded out 19 hits.

Dennis Volmer picked up his first victory in the second game, limiting Westmar to only four hits.

Volmer had plenty of offensive support in the nightcap as Wayne State totaled 10 hits.

Brosamle doubled and drove in three runs in the second game, while Hoffart, Randy Raabe and Craig Koehler also added doubles for Wayne State.

Brosamle finished the day 6-for-6, including two doubles, two triples and seven RBI.

Wayne State's big inning in the second game was the fourth frame when the Wildcats erupted for eight runs. The hosts also scored twice in the first and three times in the third.

The victory improved the Wildcats' record to 5-16 on the year. Westmar dropped to 1-14.

The Wildcats play again Friday when they host Nebraska Wesleyan in a doubleheader. The game is currently scheduled to be played at Hank Overin Park beginning at 6 p.m., but might be moved to the college diamond if Overin Park's infield is not ready by game time.

Wayne State improves to 6-3 Lady Cats split with UNO

OMAHA — Wayne State's softball team split a doubleheader with the University of Nebraska-Omaha (UNO) here Tuesday. The Lady Wildcats dropped a tough 4-3 loss in the opener, but rebounded strongly to claim a 17-2 triumph in the nightcap.

The first game was deadlocked at two after seven innings, and the two teams used international rules to decide the tie-breaker.

Under international rules, each team begins the extra inning with a runner on second base. Wayne State drew first blood in its half of the eighth when Teresa Durba stroked a clutch two-out single to plate Shell Schumann with the go-ahead run.

But UNO rattled in its half of the eighth with two runs to claim the 4-3 victory.

Kathy Didier had a big game at the plate for the Lady Wildcats in the opener as she finished 2-for-3, including two RBI.

Wayne State erupted for 12 runs in the second inning of the nightcap and cruised to the 15-run victory. The second game lasted only five innings. Marilyn Strate, Wayne State's head coach, said several factors led to the Lady Wildcats' uprising.

"We got a number of walks and hits, and UNO made a bunch of errors, too, and we just capitalized," she said. "It just seemed like everything was going right for us, and wrong for them."

Several Lady Wildcats had key hits in the second game, according to Strate, including a double by Rhonda Peck, a single by Durba and a triple by Schumann.

Shelle Tomaszewicz finished 2-for-3 in the second game, and drove in Wayne State's first run in the first frame.

In addition to the first inning run and the 12 markers in the second frame, the Lady Wildcats tallied four more markers in the fifth inning. Mary Lingelbach hurled a three-hitter in the second game for Wayne State. Rhonda Peck pitched a brilliant first game, but was replaced in the eighth inning by Lingelbach,

The victory improved Wayne State's record to 6-3. The Lady Wildcats play again Friday, and Saturday at Cedar Falls, Iowa, in the University of Northern Iowa UNI-Dome Tournament.

Several teams Wayne State faces in the tourney are ranked in the top 20 in the NAIA, including Washburn and St. Xavier, who are rated second and 11th, respectively.

Other teams on the Lady Wildcat schedule that are ranked in the top 20 are: Central States of Oklahoma, No. 3; Pittsburg State, No. 6; Kearney State, No. 14; Missouri Western, No. 18; and College of St. Mary's, No. 19.

Wayne State defeated Central States 5-3 earlier this year and the Lady Wildcats did receive top 20 votes.

development in Nebraska, as seen by Yant, in an ag related or business oriented climate. To compensate would be to go out and promote Nebraska worldwide. "We must say we're from Nebraska and ask 'What can we do for you,'" he said.

Yant also suggested doing away with the state income tax and double the sales tax the cities already have. "Sales tax is the fairest we've got," he mentioned.

Vegetables

one of the nation's leading produce states, California, grows 50 percent of its produce in the summer — the same time the produce would be grown here in Nebraska.

"Sure, we have a disadvantage of climate here. But the real disadvantage for Nebraska is the lack of knowledge," Schrant said.

Everyone knows how to plant vegetables, he said, but many do not know how to control the quality. Education on a state-wide level has been limited to the small garden growers.

IT TAKES WORK to grow top grade produce, according to Schrant.

"I always say that while it takes about 10 hours of labor to put in and manage an acre of corn, it will take up to 300 hours for an acre of vegetables," he said.

For instance, tomatoes require more touchy growing. Too much pink in the breaking stages of tomato picking will result in early rejection. Also, he advises that tomatoes be picked in the coolness of the early morning hours rather than during the heat of the afternoon. This also adds to the quality of the produce production.

and from across the United States.

In addition to four scheduled performances in the company's Indianapolis home, the group is touring extensively throughout the nation this season.

Tickets will be sold in advance at the Fine Arts Office in the Fine Arts Center. Wayne State students, faculty and staff may obtain free tickets by presenting their activity passes beginning Monday, March 24.

The general public may obtain tickets beginning Wednesday, March 26. Tickets are $3.50 for adults, $1.50 for students high school age and younger, and free to those with WSC activity passes.

If this would have been law in 1984-85, the state would have retained $58 million more in state revenue.

Yant said he would also make an effort to cut back on state bureaucracy. He said the state payroll over the past three years has risen from $489 million to $586 million and that state employee numbers have increased over the past three years by approximately 2,700 people.

He said he would also favor a moratorium on farm foreclosures with a few amendments; and create a payment agreement on delinquent loans maintained by area farmers.

The final speaker was Rev. Sielven, who said he was also against paying state income tax and favored going with another type of financing option.

"But the most grueling tax we have now is property tax," he said.

Sielven said he is opposed to the lottery on moral grounds.

Chris Carlson, secretary of the cooperative and an extension agent for Madison County, said that cautious optimism is how he expresses his feelings about northeast Nebraska vegetable growing. "There is light at the end of the tunnel if you keep chipping away at it," Carlson added.

What are the advantages of vegetable growing? Carlson lists the following:

- Freight will be on the cooperative's side.

- Carlson said approximately 80 percent of produce in Nebraska is shipped in. Producing here will reduce freight costs.

- Demand for vegetables is up.
- Labor can be accomplished in individually or through the immediate family.

- Disadvantages he listed were:
 - Approximately 2 percent of land raises all the vegetables needed, meaning that only a small amount of land would be needed to meet the demands for the produce.
 - Growing vegetables will take increased management.
 - The shorter growing season and unpredictable climate.

- Financing a vegetable crop through loan agencies is "hard to get," said Carlson.

- However, he said farmers willing to make a long time commitment to vegetable planting can make good income.

- He suggested that vegetable growers start out with an acre or less of land rather than five to 10 acres.
- Other tips he mentioned included:
 - Plan your market before planting the vegetable of your choice.
 - Once that plan is established, work on starting small and raising the produce to meet the market. Don't go overboard during the first year.
 - Don't be overly optimistic. Vegetable growing is no "cure all" for agriculture, just a viable alternative.
 - And visit with other growers in your marketing area to see how their produce fared financially and in yield.
 - An ultimate goal is to establish a hydrocooler unit somewhere in northeast Nebraska to quick freeze the vegetable foods. Where this location would be is not known.
 - "The opportunities are great if we succeed," Carlson said.

NEW TORCH TWIN-PACK HERBICIDE

Cuts it when others can't.

Year after year your pre-emergent corn and sorghum herbicide promised you broadleaf control, but just delivered problems. Now it's time to change your plan. TORCH™ Twin-Pack Herbicide is specifically designed to give you the broadleaf control others only promise.

CUTS OUT CARRYOVER.

TORCH Twin-Pack Herbicide meets the special needs of rotational corn and sorghum growers. TORCH brand won't damage your crops this season or your rotation crops next season. That's because it's specifically designed to do the job and then break down, leaving your field safe for rotational crop planting next year.

CUTS OUT THE COMPETITION.

TORCH is the post-emergence herbicide specifically designed to cut down over 20 broadleaves in corn and sorghum. It controls the tough weeds like velvetleaf, cocklebur, and pigweed. And its powerful combination of bromoxynil and atrazine works like no single pre- or post-emergent herbicide can.

CUTS CROP DAMAGE.

TORCH Twin-Pack Herbicide is strong, but only on broadleaves. Its bromoxynil controls many species of phenoxy- and triazine-resistant weeds and its low concentration of atrazine controls the partially emerged weeds. TORCH does all this without the crop damage phenoxy and dicamba can cause. And it won't drift to adjoining crops either. TORCH is the herbicide designed for the special needs of corn and sorghum.

CUTS THE COST OF BROADLEAF CONTROL.

TORCH Twin-Pack Herbicide gives you more than effective broadleaf control, it gives you economical weed control, too. That's because it's a part of a complete cost effective weed control plan. And TORCH is easy to use. Treat for grasses first then let TORCH cut down broadleaves when they come up. TORCH brand can save you money because, unlike pre-emergence herbicides, you don't have to treat every acre. Just treat the acres with a broadleaf problem. No matter how you look at it, TORCH can cut it when others can't.

Cash flow problems enter the computer age

by Cheryl Stubbendieck, vice-president/information, Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation

Cash flow is the name of the game in agriculture these days. Most farmers and ranchers know the importance of having a cash flow — for management decisions, as well as to convince the banker to extend credit.

But many people in agriculture are unclear about how to put together a cash-flow plan. It's one of the most common questions put to county extension agents and other extension personnel. And, let's face it, putting together a cash flow plan sounds like about as much fun as a long-neglected trip to the dentist.

But I'm here to tell you, cash flow planning can be painless, even fun, thanks to a new interactive videodisk program developed by the extension service at UNL. The system is being pilot tested now in 18 states and in the Nebraska counties of: Nemaha, Brown, Rock, Keya Paha, Knox, Kimball, Banner, Nuckolls, Sheridan, Howard, Pierce, Red Willow, Platte and Antelope. Here's how it works.

A farmer or rancher — or a couple — visits the extension office and sits down to a computer keyboard and a videodisk connected to a videodisk player. After locating the "black space" and "enter" keys, the user types in his name and birthdate. Surprise! That's the toughest part of the whole thing. The system is definitely user-friendly.

FIRST OFF, USERS watch a short video where they learn about Frank and Florence Johnson and their crop and livestock farm. Frank recalls how he got involved in cash flow planning, and flashes back to a meeting with Carl the County Agent, who got him started.

Then there's a quiz for viewers. Answer correctly and "correct" and a reinforcing message appears on the computer screen. Answer incorrectly, and the pertinent video segment is repeated on the TV screen.

Next the user can see how Frank developed his crop plan, his livestock plan, the family living budget and loan schedule. All along, the user can ask questions — such as "Where'd he come up with that figure?" — repeat segments, go back to the start, skip ahead or quit for the day. The system remembers where you were and welcomes you back when you give it your name and birthdate.

After the user reviews all of Frank's plans and takes short quizzes on them, Frank puts his pertinent data into the actual cash flow plan. The user can go through it line-by-line, reviewing what goes where, why and how.

There's also a chance to do "sensitivity analysis" of Frank's plan — what if the price of soybeans goes down, what if he holds on to more hedges? It's a lot of fun, giving Frank advice.

BUT THE MOST important part is when the user develops his own plan. Color-coded materials accompany the program and there's a set of charts for users to pencil in their own info. They can also put their plan together on the computer and then get a printout they can take home with them.

It's unlikely that any two users will take the same "route" through the program. One user might choose to repeat one segment a number of times, another might feel he understands a certain portion of cash flow planning and will skip that part. In short, interactive videodisk is very individualized. You control your learning and proceed at your own pace.

The project was funded with a grant from the USDA Extension Service and produced and developed in conjunction with the Videodisk Group at the University of Nebraska. Because of the costs involved, it's available in limited areas now, during the testing period. But the technology holds the promise to further extend the efforts of the extension service — in the future we could see videodisk programs on such things as crop scouting, insect identification and other farm management topics.

Monitoring stored grain

The mild winter and warm temperatures experienced recently contribute to the danger of stored grain going out of condition. Late planting of last year's row crop did not allow all of the grain to fully mature and as a result some of it did not dry down as well as usual. The high moisture of last year's corn crop makes it especially vulnerable to deterioration if the moisture of the corn was not reduced to safe storage levels.

Since corn is harvested at higher moisture contents than other grains and because of the large supply of corn on hand, the condition of corn in storage is of most concern. Any grain containing moisture higher than that recommended for safe storage is subject to deterioration; however, all stored grain must be monitored regularly and carefully to minimize losses in quality and value.

Deterioration of stored grain is caused by the various types of damage that can result from improper storage conditions. Germ damage, mold development, insect infestation and heating are the most likely kinds of damage that can lower grades.

Spring aeration used to warm grain

Since dry grain is normally held over the winter at 30 to 40 degrees F. temperatures to slow mold growth, it seems contrary to recommend that this grain be warmed to 60 degrees F. for spring and summer storage. However, maintaining a uniform temperature within the grain mass and keeping grain temperatures close to the average outside temperature can be just as important as maintaining low grain temperatures according to Richard Pierce, IANR Extension Agricultural Engineer.

If grain temperatures are much colder than surrounding air temperatures, moisture can be condensed on the grain surface. Differences in temperature also creates air convection currents which result in moisture movement or migration within the storage bin. These problems can be minimized by gradually warming the grain to 60 degrees F. while keeping grain temperatures within 10 degrees F. of the average outside temperature.

Much of the reluctance by farmers to warm grain in the spring is due to fears that warmer temperatures will result in increased mold activity and heating. These fears are well-founded if moisture contents are not low enough — at least below 14 percent and preferably below 13 percent for corn and other starchy grains. Attempting to hold cold grain over the summer is not a solution to this problem.

In the event of heating, trying to move a hot spot out of cold or frozen grain with warm, moisture-laden air results in large amounts of condensation which only adds to the problem.

Dealing with marketing problems

Meetings for dairy termination set

A series of four informational meetings has been scheduled to help dairy producers deal with marketing problems associated with the 1986 farm program dairy termination provision, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln extension dairy specialist announced.

Don J. Kubik said the increase in numbers of cull cows and heifers going to market in the 18 months that began April 1 will create some difficult marketing problems.

Kubik said several overall questions will be discussed and recommendations given at the four meetings. Questions include:

- What is the market for dairy animals culled out of herds under the dairy buyout program? How can a producer market to realize optimum returns? What can producers expect in the way of market outlets? What rules should producers be concerned about in regard to disposal of dairy termination program animals?
- KUBIK CITED the following marketing problems that have been identified and will affect many producers submitting bids under the dairy termination program:
 - Meat from lightweight heifers is different in color, texture and fat.
 - Slaughtering an animal regardless of weight costs about the same as more normal weight animals marketed and a smaller animal is difficult to process.
 - The hide on lightweight heifers is worth almost nothing compared to $30 to $40 for a single cow hide.

- Dairy heifers on a fattening ration which do not reach finish weight are less desirable than those on a good grower ration.
- Heifers and cows carrying calves produce less usable carcasses than non-pregnant animals and therefore are docked in price; a 5 percent loss is not abnormal.
- Potential drug residue problems in heifers should not be a problem, but could be in some cases.
- Heifers under 300 pounds are not marketed in normal channels; heifers from 300 pounds to 600 pounds will be difficult to market; heifers from 600 pounds to 800 pounds will have a limited market.
- Heifers above 800 pounds and cull cows should be easy to market, but must be marketed evenly during the duration of the program in order to hold prices appropriate for cull cows.
- and the few packers who will accept lightweight heifers will take them only with heavy heifers and cows.

Some approaches to be discussed are feeding or contracting to have heifers fed out, grouping dairy animals and scheduled direct marketing, Kubik said.

The area meeting schedule: April 8 — Platte Ag Park, Columbus, 10 a.m.; and April 9 — Pleasant Valley Store, intersection of Highway 81 and 84, west of Hartington, 1:30 p.m.

the farmer's wife by pat meierhenry

It was with hearts full of gratitude that Grandma Staehr and Sue and I went to sunrise services today. I hadn't planned to be in Lincoln, but I could have been at a hospital bedside. The sun is incredibly bright; the bird songs are beautiful; the lilies are brilliant.

On Wednesday, I had an insective at the hospital. I bought groceries and ran errands, arriving home about 5:30. Mike came in to clean up for a school board meeting, and I hurried to start supper.

The phone rang at a quarter to six. It was a neighbor, saying there had been an accident and an ambulance had been called. The girls were on their way home from track practice after school.

Mike pulled his jeans back on and we jumped in the car. The school car was in the garage for repairs, and the girls had taken the old Plymouth. It didn't handle very well, and the road was washboard. They lost control, hit a tree, and were turned completely around in the ditch.

The first look was bad. One cut can make a lot of blood. Both had been unconscious and were very still and pale. I grabbed Kay's legs and got her head down on the seat. That helped. Someone covered her with a coat. Someone else brought blankets. Soon the Winside rescue unit arrived. I had taken an EMT class with these guys, and it was reassuring to see them. We got both girls into the unit, and headed for Norfolk. Both were responding, both had good strong pulses. We covered the cut. I prayed.

OUR DOCTOR started stitching while we waited for x-rays. As he probed the wound, he found a depressed skull fracture. And Ann's left ear kept bleeding, which also indicated a skull fracture. Before I knew it, there was an ambulance waiting to move us to Lincoln.

When I trained at Lincoln General, the brain surgery was done by Louis Gogola, the most disciplined man I've ever known. My family has had a standing order to get me to him if I ever had a head injury. By 10:45 Wednesday night, we were in Lincoln General's emergency room, and Dr. Gogola was reassuring me in his quiet, calm manner.

We were settled into a double room for the night, with hourly "crania checks," blood pressure, pulse, pupil reaction, hand grasp and foot push.

When Kay was six months old, she had meningitis. Within a few hours after the diagnosis, our "support system" had been activated and people everywhere were praying. This same thing happened Wednesday night and Thursday. It enabled us to stay reasonably tranquil, in spite of a nurse-mother's tendency to remember awful things.

Kay went to surgery Thursday afternoon, had bony fragments removed, and is thinking about a punk haircut to disguise the shaved spot. Both girls have had large headaches, and sleep a lot. But it could have been so much worse.

Our former baby sitter works in intensive care. A nursing classmate is head of recovery room. A Battle Creek friend works in surgery. Even the pink lady in the surgery waiting room was a cousin. Familiar faces mean so much. Tim and Karen, Sue's two school friends who were not home on spring break, helped her while away the hospital hours.

Our pastor, with services on Thursday and Friday and two on Sunday, found time to come. The speech team, in Lincoln for contest, stopped in. Flowers came from so many. Telephone calls expressed concern. Our hearts are filled with gratitude — to all of you.

We've been reminded again of how precious life is, of what our real priorities should be, and how important friends are in times of crisis. Happy Easter, for sure!

NFO Collection Point meeting

There will be a kickoff dinner and meeting at the Wakefield Legion Hall tonight (Thursday) at 6:30 p.m. for the NFO Livestock Collection Point. The event is sponsored by the Northeast Nebraska Pork Producers, the NFO and the Farm Crisis committee. All livestock producers are invited to attend the supper and informational meeting. The main speaker will be Merle Sunken, hog division director for the NFO.

Merle Sunken was born in 1939 and raised on a dairy, hog and grain farm in the state of Ohio.

After finishing school in 1957, he managed a feed business for about three years and went into farming on his own at that time. He joined the National Farmers Organization and after getting more involved in the organization went to work full time in 1966.

He worked in the Eastern states to help organize NFO and in 1968 sold out his farming operation and moved to Corning, Iowa, to work as a negotiator for the Hog Division of the NFO.

After several years of negotiating and contracting with most of the major packers, Sunken was promoted to Director of the Hog Division in 1980.

He and his wife are the parents of three grown sons and are active members of the Lutheran Church in Corning.

Set yield goals now to maximize potential profit

Melting snow and warmer temperatures mean another spring planting season is fast approaching, but at least one veteran agronomist assures Nebraska farmers it's not too late to make some vital decisions that could mean profit or loss come next harvest season.

"Now is the time to develop yield goals and complete other pre-season plans that can help carry a Nebraska farmer's operation to a successful conclusion next fall," according to Dr. Sam Kincheloe, agronomic services manager for International Minerals & Chemical Corporation.

"Choosing a yield goal for each field is one of the most important decisions a farmer makes each year, and it's even more critical this spring because planning sets the stage for everything else in a profit-oriented crop management program," Dr. Kincheloe explains.

"Since fixed costs per acre are the same with low or high yields, profits in relation to those costs increase as yields move higher.

"Variable costs, usually do increase as potential yields increase, so it becomes very important that farmers select realistic goals to achieve maximum economic yields on every field," the IMC agronomist adds.

"Nebraska farmers realize that a yield goal and the eventual output achieved on any field frequently may be two different things due to many variables throughout the crop year, but that doesn't reduce the need to begin with an educated, logical and ambitious objective," he says.

"The fact that a farmer cannot control every aspect of his operation must not become an excuse for not setting yield goals that offer maximum profit potential," Dr. Kincheloe warns.

HE SUGGESTS that a practical range for a yield goal should be somewhere between above-average to near maximum yields achieved by farmers themselves or nearby neighbors on a similar type soil in recent years.

"Once yield goals are determined, a farmer must build his 1986 strategy to realize those production objectives. That includes such management factors as: tillage, rotations, drainage, soil fertility, crop variety, seed quality, row spacing, planting dates and populations, weed, insect and disease controls and, finally, harvesting time and method.

"Some of those factors have little or no influence on costs, but can significantly increase yields," the IMC expert says.

"Other factors, like soil fertility, result in higher variable costs per acre because higher yields require more nutrients than low yields," Dr. Kincheloe explains. "But, although the cost of adequate nutrients to meet those higher production goals can be greater, returns from that investment make fertilizer one of the best buys available to farmers today.

"In fact, fertilizer continues to be one of the key inputs in any crop management strategy to achieve the maximum economic yields so critical to realizing a profit in today's difficult times," the IMC manager advises.

SUMMARIZING the question of choosing a 1986 yield goal, Dr. Kincheloe lists the following points to consider:

- Determine a goal that is practical, and achievable with inputs and financing available this year.
- Don't stay with a goal that has been realized more often than two years out of five. It's too low to hold adequate profit potential.
- If possible, aim for yield goals well above past averages to near or slightly above the past maximum for a particular field.

- Once a goal is set, do the things a crop needs to reach that objective. Don't skimp on the really key inputs such as fertilizer because a crop can't succeed without adequate nutrition as part of the total production program.
- And, don't guess at a field's fertility levels. Soil test to obtain a current picture of nutrient needs to bring each field up to adequate standards that can push crops to desired yield goals.
- One thing for certain in the matter of setting yield goals is to never aim for a poor yield or fertilizer for a poor yield, because you'll be sure to have one in either case. Aim high enough to make maximum profits on each acre. It's the only way to go in 1986," the IMC agronomist concludes.

More farm households eligible

Food stamp regulations revised

"Recent changes in U.S. Department of Agriculture regulations will allow additional households, especially farm households, to be eligible for food stamps," announced Gina C. Dunning, Director of the Nebraska Department of Social Services.
Dunning urged farm households which include individuals who have non-farm employment, which have been denied food stamp benefits prior to February 25, 1986, to contact their nearest Department of Social Services office to find out whether the changes affect their eligibility. The U.S. Department of Agriculture has changed its regulations regarding the counting of earned income for farm households. This change will allow more farm households an opportunity to use the Food Stamp Program and some farm households presently in the Food Stamp Program will qualify for more benefits.

Dunning has recently sent a letter to the Secretary of Agriculture on February 19, Richard Lyng, requesting that the farm related changes be implemented as quickly as possible.

Dunning also announced another change in food stamp regulations which may make additional households in Nebraska eligible to collect food stamps. This is due to the correction of a federal error in food stamp regulations. This error involved persons who quit their jobs. Since October 3, 1984, persons who quit their jobs have been required to wait 90 days from the date they applied for food stamps to receive program benefits.

The food stamp statutes originally set the beginning date of the waiting period at the time when applicants quit their jobs. However, when the waiting period was extended by federal statutes from 60 to 90 days in September, 1984, the federal rule incorrectly changed the start of that period to the date they actually applied for food stamps. Eligible food stamp recipients will be able to recoup benefits they lost as a result of that error.

Designate shelters, know precautions

Tornado season upon us

All experts agree on one thing: your family's survival in a tornado may depend on your taking some basic steps of preparedness now—before the storm warnings are issued.

Safety experts say that tornado shelters save lives, and they suggest that every family should have a shelter selected in advance. If a tornado warning is issued, you won't have time to look for a good shelter area.

All members of a family should know where to take best shelter in the home—away from windows, doors, and outside walls. Go to the basement. If you have no basement, go to a first floor bathroom, closet or an interior hallway at the center of the home. If possible, get under heavy furniture or cover your head with blankets and pillows.

If you live in a mobile home, tornado experts advise that you are in grave danger, since such dwellings do not stand up to the tremendous forces of a tornado. Plan to quickly evacuate your mobile home during a tornado warning, seeking shelter in a nearby building or a ravine, ditch or culvert.

SOME PEOPLE HAVE constructed underground tornado or bomb fallout shelters outside but adjacent to their homes. Such shelters provide the maximum protection.

If you live in a tornado-prone area, which is the case in most of Nebraska, be prepared. Hold a tornado drill in your home periodically, so all members of the family know where to go and what to do during a tornado warning. Your first drill also may point out a need for storing some items in or near your shelter area, such as a battery-powered radio and extra batteries so you can monitor the latest weather reports.

Other items you may select for your shelter might include a first aid kit, bottled water, and food that would not require cooking.

The survival kit for the home should be designed for use during and after any severe weather, such as a tornado or winter storm, where you may find yourself isolated and your home without power. Proper preparations should let you be totally independent and capable of surviving for a few days without outside assistance.

AN AUTOMOBILE is a very dangerous place to be during a tornado, according to advice from the tornado experts.

In fact, research from one recent killer tornado showed that most of the deaths occurred in and around automobiles. Vehicles are so light that the powerful winds of a tornado can toss them around like a child's toy, battering them against buildings and the earth until they are unrecognizable.

Tornado experts advise that if you are in an auto when a tornado is spotted, immediately leave the vehicle and seek shelter in a nearby substantial building. If no buildings are nearby, take cover by lying flat in a ditch or depression. Protect your head with your hands and arms. Do not attempt to drive at right angles to the twister as they often travel in groups. You may escape one only to be confronted by another. Do not attempt to evacuate by jumping in your car to leave the area.

AS IT TOUCHES DOWN, a tornado is not always recognizable, for it may be obscured by rain or darkness.

The distinctive, funnel-shaped cloud associated with a tornado whirres and twists, throwing debris in all directions, actually lifting cars, trucks and mobile homes into the air. Tornadoes are produced by violent thunderstorms, and may be preceded by large hail.

Tornado funnels vary from a few feet to over a mile in width. The average is one-quarter of a mile wide. A tornado can stay on the ground from a few seconds to three hours, covering a few yards, or more than 200 miles.

After a tornado, continue to refrain from driving because of the danger of downed power lines and sharp debris littering the streets. Roads must be left clear for emergency vehicles.

The most practical assistance a citizen can render after a tornado is to stay away from the disaster scene and allow authorities to perform their work without worrying about the curious.
