Krivoshia gives advice to Wayne graduates

"Today is indeed the turning point in your life."

Those words came from Honorable Chief Justice of the Nebraska Supreme Court Norman Krivoshia Sunday during the Wayne-Carroll High School commencement ceremony.

Diplomas were handed out to 70 seniors in the ceremony conducted at the Willow Bowl on the Wayne State College campus.

Krivoshia characterized the first 12 years of education as "sort of a warm-up". The graduates will "now undergo serious training for the rest of their life."

He compared high school education to that of an athlete who for the past four or five years had just sat around until it was time for the real game — not being prepared for it.

Individuals need to warm up for those days when they will face responsibility. "You need to train so that you will be ready when life's problems come up to you," Krivoshia mentioned in his graduate address.

Training includes learning how to work with people, he said.

In looking ahead, Krivoshia said "it doesn't matter to be a long ball hitter if you forget to touch first base."

"You can't go back and touch first base, you just miss your chance to do it. It may be precluded, no matter how much you are able and willing to do," he said.

"Education," he said, "teaches us how to make a living." Secondly, it teaches us to live and survive in this world."

KRIVOSHIA SAID the graduates will learn that, once they are in a college and graduate or are in an employment setting, "their education is not over."

He stressed that the students should continue to be involved. "Understand what you are doing and why you are doing it," he added.

Sometimes, students may wonder why studying Shakespeare or Algebra are important in high school education.

It is important, Krivoshia said, to copy the masters and how they learned to write. The ability to communicate is significant, he said.

Algebra, he said, can be considered a mental exercise in computer technology.

Krivoshia commented that graduates will "receive more rights, but also will receive more obligations."

"Be involved in the community," he said, adding that it is easy to be on the sidelines and be critical of others.

"Understand what you are doing, be committed to what you are doing and you will make it through these times," Krivoshia said.

"You can't just have faith, you have to move it yourself."

In conclusion, Krivoshia told the graduating seniors that the question

Lottery petition circulating

by Chuck Hackenmiller

State Senator Bernice Labedz of Omaha is taking her chances that a good share of individuals throughout Nebraska will support her in bringing a state lottery.

Enough support, that is, to gain a place in the November election balloting which will leave the decision up to the voters in Nebraska.

Labedz, as chairperson of the Nebraska Taxpayers Lottery Committee, was in Wayne Monday morning to discuss the progress of the recent petition drive in placing the lottery issue on the November ballot.

She was to meet with Wayne City Administrator Phil Kloster, who is one of the 15 members on the lottery committee.

The objective of the petition is to allow voters to amend the Nebraska state constitution.

The major change would suggest that "the legislature shall, in 1987, establish a lottery program to conduct what it determines to be the most efficient type of lottery to raise revenue and to ensure that all state and local lottery activity is adequately policed and regulated."

In addition, the petition states that a county, city or village may establish and conduct any lottery including an electronic video lottery, if the voters of the local government, at any election, approves the establishment of such lottery.

Two percent of the gross proceeds of any state or local lottery conducted in Nebraska would be paid to the state treasurer for deposit in the General Fund of the state.

"We have to certify 38 counties and then have the signature of 10 percent of the overall people that voted in the last gubernatorial election," said Labedz.

SHE SAID THAT the lottery committee has the 38 counties already certified. To be a certified county means that 5 percent of the residents within the designated county that voted in the last gubernatorial election had signed the petition.

"In some of those counties we only needed less than 100 signatures," said Labedz.

Now the committee is aiming toward achieving the overall state total of signatures in support of the petition. That total figure amounts to 54,790 signatures, according to Labedz.

About 10,000 of those signatures must come from Douglas, Sarpy and Lancaster Counties, according to Labedz.

Some of the names on the petition must be thrown out if they are not registered to vote. "We do ask them if they are registered to vote and we do explain the petition to them — then we have them sign it," said Labedz.

The petition signatures must be submitted to the state before July 5.

One reason Labedz is stopping in Wayne is to convince some individuals to circulate the petition for signatures throughout the county. Wayne County is one of the counties not yet certified.

ACCORDING TO figures from the city clerk's office, when the city of Wayne operated a lottery in fiscal 1982-83 the income was $9,116.95 and expenses, $8,810.04. In 1983-84, income reached $37,186.82 while expenses totaled $15,730.42. In fiscal 1984-85, at least until the lottery was banned, income was at $23,421.74 while the expense was at $569.63.

This led to an accumulative net income during those three years at $44,615.43, of which the city is holding for allocation for some specific project yet to be designated.

DURING THE recent legislative session, there were two bills brought forward in an effort to create a statewide lottery. One of them was sponsored by Labedz — to establish a lottery commission similar to a liquor commission.

"That commission would have, in turn, licensed the people at the local government (or others) and it would also regulate the state lottery and determine what type of lottery," said Labedz.

"It was all spelled out in the bill what they could do and what they could not do," she mentioned.

But her bill got only 23 or 24 votes and it needed 25 to pass, so it did not advance. Another bill by Senator John DeCamp which would mandate the legislature to establish a resolution for a lottery also fell short on votes.

So Labedz and others "decided to get a petition drive started because the legislature failed to act on what we were trying to do."

She said the local option for cities and counties to establish lotteries has always been, in her opinion "the best route to go."

"We found that the legislature was

Economic workshops set

Nebraska Public Power District (NPPD) has invited the public and all members of the legislature to attend a series of four workshops on how to bolster the economy of Nebraska's small towns.

Don E. Schaufelberger, president and chief executive officer of NPPD, said one of the workshops, entitled "Harvesting Hometown Jobs" will be held at Wayne on June 9 at Wayne State College Student Center from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Other workshops will take place in Aurora, Gothenburg and Chadron. They are sponsored jointly by the National Association of Towns and Townships and supported by the U.S. Economic Development Administration.

Schaufelberger said NPPD has been engaged in a successful program to attract a new industry to Nebraska. "Additionally, we now need to concentrate on helping the small towns of the State which are the roots of the economic well-being of the State," Schaufelberger said.

Topics to be discussed include economic and demographic issues in Nebraska; introduction to economic development; getting organized for economic development; turn around strategies for small towns; capturing existing income; improving the efficiency of existing firms; attracting basic employers; and formation of new businesses.

SOME OF the program speakers include Nancy Stark, National Association of Towns and Townships; Dr. Louis Pohl and Dr. David Ambrose, University of Nebraska at Omaha; Robert Blair and Gary Targoff, Nebraska Department of Economic Development; Dr. Duane Olsen, Cooperative Extension Service, University of Nebraska-Lincoln; Robert Bernier, Nebraska Business Development Center; and Robert Shively of the Nebraska Public Power District.

In addition, people from development organizations in northeast Nebraska will be relating their views and experiences in the various sessions.

Walk-A-Thon scheduled at WSC

On May 31, from 1-4 p.m. at the Wayne State College track, participants of all ages are expected to walk the day away to raise money for research for cystic fibrosis, according to event chairperson Debbie Kinnison of Wayne.

"Wayne's Walk-A-Thon is one of the many held nationwide. Combined, these events raise millions of dollars to fight cystic fibrosis," Kinnison said. "I hope the residents of Wayne will give their all to support this national effort."

According to Kinnison, the money raised from the event will help fund research to determine the genetic causes and treatments for cystic fibrosis; the nation's number one genetic killer of young people. Cystic fibrosis is an incurable disease which primarily affects the lungs and digestive system. Thanks to money raised in previous events, this past year saw tremendous strides in cystic fibrosis research.

The Cystic Fibrosis Walk-A-Thon are being held nationwide in honor of Alex Deford, who died of cystic fibrosis in 1980 at the age of eight.

According to Kinnison, the Wayne fundraising event from 1-4 p.m. on May 31 on the college track includes walkers or runners who will compete for various prizes based on the amount of pledges they collect.

"The event includes more than walkers. It also involves sponsors and even spectators. The day will be a lot of fun for everyone involved," Kinnison said.

Some of the prizes include three gift certificates from Hardee's, worth $5 each; a $10 gift certificate from the Wayne Shoe Store; a fishing pole from Coast-to-Coast; a $10 gift certificate from the Wayne IGA grocery store; a dozen donuts from Daylight Donuts; a box of candy from Griess Rexall.

The grand prize is a Dasher 10-speed bicycle donated by Pamida.

Every participant collecting $30 worth of pledges will receive a "I did it!" T-shirt from the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation.

To become involved in Wayne's Walk-A-Thon, contact Kinnison at 375-5370 or pick up sponsor sheets at the Wayne Herald or KTCH Radio.

PAMIDA MANAGER Dave Loose and Debbie Kinnison with fundraiser grand prize — a 10-speed bicycle.

Defending faster interstate speeds

by U.S. Senator Jim Exon

Interstates are among the safest roads in America. They were built for safe travel at speeds higher than 55 mph. There is a myth that the public obeys the 55 mph law and that it is being enforced. In reality the statistics tell a story of wholesale violations.

Giving states the option to increase the interstate speed limit to 70 mph, or even 65 mph if that is acceptable, without losing federal highway funds, as I propose, makes sense when you look at the statistics. The 55 mph law would be RETAINED on all other roads, which is where the most traffic fatalities occur.

Interstate travelers know traffic goes faster than the ignored 55 mph limit. The U.S. Department of Transportation statistics show that the speed at which most traffic moves on rural interstates is 64 mph in Nebraska and is 66 mph nationally. It is obvious from the figures that on Nebraska's rural interstates the legislation would in reality only raise the speed limit five miles per hour above what motorists are actually driving. If we compromise on 65 mph for rural interstates, we would be exactly at the speed most people travel and they could do it legally.

In 1985, only 3,198 tickets were issued to motorists traveling between 56 mph and 65 mph on Nebraska's interstate, while 27,364 tickets were issued to motorists exceeding 65 mph. According to the Department of Transportation, an astounding 86 percent of the traffic on Nebraska's rural interstate exceeds the 55 mph law. Much of this leniency can be attributed to Nebraska's minimal $10 fine and no loss of driving points if caught speeding less than 65 mph on the interstate.

CRITICS of giving the states the option to raise the interstate speed have cited misleading fatality figures. They refer to the number of fatalities on all Nebraska roads, while the bill deals only with interstates.

Safety officials attribute too many deaths to speed. In 1983 less than five percent of Nebraska traffic fatalities occurred on interstates, and speed was not listed as a factor in ANY of them. More than 90 percent of fatalities nationwide occur on roads which retain the 55 mph law.

Skeptics incorrectly assume that if the interstate speed were raised to as much as 70 mph motorists would drive 75 mph or more. This is wrong since the minimal penalty would no longer exist as an incentive to break the law. Strict enforcement of the 70 mph limit on interstates and 55 mph law on other roads accompanied by expensive fines, would discourage speeding on all roads. People drive at the enforced speed limits, not just those posted.

Finally the 55 mph law was enacted in response to an energy crisis. No one has forgotten the oil shortages, but today we have an entirely different situation. If we encounter another energy crisis, we may have to reduce limits again. Now, autos are more fuel efficient and fuel prices are stable. Also we must recognize that the interstate system is less than seven percent of all highways. With these facts in mind, increasing the interstate limit would not significantly affect consumption or safety.

Don McGinley, who has been one heart beat away from the governor's seat for more than three years, still baffles for name recognition.

Unlike Gov. Bob Kerrey, McGinley's name is not a household word.

And like Rodney Dangerfield, McGinley gets no respect.

Two years ago McGinley was stranded on Interstate 80 near Emerald when the fan belt broke on his car.

The lieutenant governor tried to flag down a passing motorist.

"As usual, I felt again this great sense of rejection as car after car did not recognize who I was," he once told Democratic party leaders.

"No Nebraskans stopped to help, but finally a good sport from Iowa came by," McGinley said.

The motorist asked McGinley what he did for a living and McGinley answered that he was an attorney, farmer "and right now I'm lieutenant governor."

The motorist then asked, "Of what state?"

THINGS HAVEN'T improved much in two years.

McGinley won the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor once again last week. He spent part of the election evening helping Helen Boosalis, the Democratic gubernatorial nominee, celebrate her victory at the Holiday Inn Northeast in Lincoln.

An excited receptionist at the Lincoln motel complex told a telephone caller that everyone was really celebrating at the Helen Boosalis party. "They're shouting and singing," she said, but promised to try to page the lieutenant governor. A few minutes later, the receptionist came back on the line and asked, "Was that Ron or John McGinley, you wanted?"

The election eve parties in the Capitol city ran the gamut from roudy celebrations of victory to quiet wakes for the defeated.

The crowd at each party varied, dictated by party affiliation and individual appeal.

Republicans Nancy Hoch and Kay Orr held court high above the Lincoln skyline at parties where bankers suits of gray and blue were standard uniform for the men. Hoch's group sipped wine and mixed drinks atop FirstTier Bank, with a view of Lincoln's western skyline and Capitol Beach Lake.

Orr took over the top of NBC, with a view of the eastern lights of Lincoln, and an hors d'oeuvre table replete with fresh vegetables and fruits.

The Lincoln Democrats were closer to the ground. Chris Beutler loyalists mourned defeat on the third floor of the Lincoln Cornhusker Hotel. Unlike the Lincoln Republican party, there were few dark suits and few gray hairs in the Beutler crowd. The main beverage was beer, though guests had their choice of down-home peanuts or a Cornhusker hors d'oeuvre tray of cheeses and vegetables.

THE BOOSALIS party was first floor, swimming pool level, pure American motel. And the crowd was a cross section of Lincoln's—mellowing and middle-aged activists—the early leaders of the neighborhood group movements and environmentalists. Some of the brass group. Kerrey crowd also made an appearance round the pool, while Rod Armstrong, the Governor's Policy Research Office director, entertained on the piano.

Secretary of State Allen Beermann spent Tuesday evening making the party rounds, both Republican and Democrat. A Republican by party affiliation, the Beermanns played no favorites. Eight parties later, Beermann, the state's official purveyor of protocol, announced that the best food was at Orr's bash. "If you like carrots and strawberries..."

Unlike men who are usually uniformly suited, the female candidates can use colors and clothes to their advantage. Both gubernatorial victors wore All American primary night. Helen wore a white suit and a red blouse with a big bow and two long strands of pearls. Orr was dressed in a royal blue shirt dress and a white jacket with one long strand of pearls.

Treatment of shuttle engineers an injustice

Treatment of Shuttle Engineers an Injustice
Apparent efforts to punish the two space shuttle engineers who cooperated with the presidential Commission investigating the shuttle accident and who had the courage to question the safety of the Challenger before it was launched call for strong condemnation and immediate action.

Even with the eyes of the nation focused on what can or will be done to make the shuttle program safe to fly again, the supplier of the suspect rocket boosters is stripping its most conscientious engineers of their staff and responsibilities. This injustice goes beyond the internal management of a company to threaten the safety of the entire space shuttle program.

I am one of the sponsors of a House resolution that would require NASA to debar Morton Thiokol Inc. from participating in NASA contracts unless and until the General Accounting Office finds that these employees have been fully restored to their former job responsibilities, or that their transfers are unrelated to their cooperation with the shuttle investigation.

Washington Tours
If you are planning a trip to our nation's Capitol, my Washington office can help to make your visit a memorable one. We will provide you with passes to see the House and Senate in session. We can also arrange for special guided tours of the Capitol, the FBI and the White House.

We are allotted only 10 tickets per week for the Congressional tour of the White House, however, so you should write or call at least six weeks before your visit. Because of the limited number of tickets, we must reserve them on a first-come basis.

Nebraska Congressional Breakfast
The Nebraska Congressional

Breakfast, unique in the United States and now in its 43rd year, is the oldest gathering of its kind in the Nation's Capitol. Almost every Tuesday morning that Congress is in session, visiting constituents can meet with the entire Nebraska Congressional Delegation.

The breakfast began in 1943. It was the idea of Senator Hugh Butler, who wanted to meet informally each week with the other members of the delegation to discuss legislation. Gradually, members began inviting guests. Today all visiting Nebraskans are welcome at this breakfast.

The breakfast is held either in the Capitol's Senate Family Dining Room or in Dirksen Senate Office Building every Tuesday morning that both the House of Representatives and the Senate are in session. It begins at 8:00 a.m. and costs $4.50. Money is collected at the door. Visitors to Washington should make reservations by calling the office of any member of the Nebraska delegation.

It is helpful to have reservations during the week before the breakfast, as the location we choose depends upon the number of people who will attend, but reservations will be accepted up to the afternoon before the breakfast. It's a good idea to call on Monday afternoon to confirm the location of that week's breakfast. Join us if you visit Washington.

Truck purchase

Some individuals may balk at the city of Wayne purchasing a new fire truck — particularly when the cost of the unit is approximately $102,000.

However, Wayne Fire Chief Dale Preston says the new unit is what the department needs — for several reasons.

First, the new 1,000 gallon a minute pumper (the chassis from Ellington Motors and the pump unit from Smeal Fire Equipment in Snyder) replaces a 25 year old truck that pumped approximately 750 gallons a minute.

Secondly, the new unit is innovative in that the new valving arrangement on top of the truck instead of on the side allows the operator easier control with a view of 360 degrees.

Thirdly, the unit can be at the location of the fire instead of near the nearest fire hydrant.

Previously, the pumper dropped off its collection of hoses at the fire scene and then the unit was stationed with an operator at the fire hydrant.

With the new unit, a fireman can immediately be dropped off at the hydrant to attach the hoses. A portable main allows the truck to be taken to the scene of the fire where it will be more accessible.

Another highlight of the new unit is that it comes with a canopy cab. Inside the cab are two self-contained breathing apparatuses. Two firefighters can assemble these apparatuses and be ready to enter the burning building as the vehicle approaches the fire.

With the recent amount of chemical or plastic that burn in fires, Preston said time is more of an essence than before. With the new unit, efforts will be made to try and shorten the response time to the fire.

Concerning the cost of the unit ($102,000), Preston pointed out that those numbers include the prices of the hoses, air packs, axes and poles used in combatting fires.

He said that for the past five years, approximately a fifth of the budget submitted by the fire department has been set aside for this purchase — so it was not a last minute decision to purchase the new unit.

"We've saved up for it for the last five years," Preston said.

One can understand reasoning that perhaps this was not the best time to purchase this new pumper unit. Particularly when the city has made a statement to the effect that they would like to hold the line or cut the tax dollars because of the current economic crunch.

But then in the firefighting business you never will know for sure if, for instance, that particular equipment was a reason why your home or garage was not destroyed.

How can you estimate being over-protective?

Or is it the other way around: "How can one overestimate being protective?"

ask a lawyer
a public service of the nebraska state bar association

Q. What would I pay a lawyer to probate a $200,000 estate, if all money is in the bank with two names on all accounts?

A. To estimate legal charges in a $200,000 estate, a lawyer would have to know a great deal more about the estate than what is contained in your letter. For example, what assets make up the $200,000? Are there other assets besides the money in the bank? Do other parties have a survivorship interest in the bank accounts? (This makes a difference because if all property is owned with a spouse, there are different tax consequences than with a child, business partner, etc.) Is there a will?

Generally speaking, probate fees are based either on a percentage of the gross estate, or on an hourly rate. Since the amount of work involved is usually proportionate to the size of the estate, there probably is not much net difference between the two methods of charging. In some law offices, the client is given a choice as to which method should be used.

Your best course of action would be to confer with your family lawyer, or with the attorney who drew up the will, or with another attorney of your own choosing, and ask for an estimate of the charges which may be involved. You may wish to check with several attorneys prior to determining whose services you will utilize. Fees should always be discussed at the first visit with your attorney, and at any time thereafter when you have a question.

When Dr. Tom talks, people listen

When Coach Osborne talks, people listen. And after receiving a standing ovation Tuesday at the Wayne High School Athletic Banquet, Wayne athletes, parents and coaches listened to Dr. Tom's jokes, ideals and most importantly, to several of his philosophies.

Osborne is often regarded as an "all-business" type of guy. But when he took the microphone Tuesday night, he immediately began roasting Wayne principal Don Zeiss.

Osborne said that he asked Dr. Zeiss before the banquet what his biggest problem with students was, and added that Zeiss told him his biggest headache is tardy students.

Osborne then went into great detail about a mother who had difficulty getting her boy to school on time because her child always over-slept.

Osborne then said that one day the lazy offspring told his mother that he wasn't going to school any more because the teachers don't like him and the students don't either. However, Osborne said the mother responded with "you are going to school because you're 45-years-old and the principal."

Osborne kept the crowd loose by offering a couple more jokes, but then began discussing several pros and cons of today's athletics and relating to the Wayne athletes three key philosophies of sports.

Osborne said that although attendance, income, exposure and the improved quality of athletes are assets to today's sports world, there are also many poor qualities.

Academics, recruiting violations and drugs are hurting athletics today, according to Osborne. He added that alcohol is the biggest drug problem saying that 10 percent of college and high school students can be regarded as alcoholics.

Dr. Tom added that although recruiting has become a problem, the public's view of illegal recruiting is distorted. Osborne said that even though half the teams in the Pac 10 and Southwest Conference are currently on probation for recruiting violations, that a small percentage of the nation's colleges cheat.

Osborne added that all these problem-areas must be corrected because the public's general opinion of athletics is becoming less and less favorable. "And if things don't change, there will be drastic changes in sports because public support is needed."

A positive self-image, the ability of athletes to find out the importance of perseverance and learning a team concept are three criteria Osborne said he hopes Cornhusker football players and Wayne athletes learn through athletics.

Osborne said that by creating challenges a person finds out who he really is. He added that being able to confront adversity allows a person to improve his self-image "and when people have problems with alcohol, drugs and sex, I think the root of the problem is a poor self-image."

Osborne said that perseverance is another key to a successful athlete and a successful person. He commented on the fact that a number of "blue-chip" freshman often quit at the Cornhuskers while many walk-ons last longer and added that "at Nebraska if you stay, you'll play. But many people don't learn the importance of perseverance because they quit."

Another example Osborne used to relay the importance of perseverance is Abraham Lincoln's political career. "Abraham Lincoln lost something like his first eight public office elections — he was 9-8. But he never quit."

Osborne said that he often sees examples of his final philosophy (learning to contribute to the welfare of the team) in players he has coached in the past.

"It seems that so often the players that signed the big contracts and always looked out for themselves or had the attitude of 'what's in it for me' are the ones that aren't very happy later on in life, while the players that never received much glory but always contributed to the benefit of the team always seem happier later on."

Osborne concluded his speech by saying that his No. 1 goal in life is to please and honor God and added that this should also be the No. 1 goal of athletes.

"Sometimes I don't like myself and really disappoint myself because I let God down. But if you're No. 1 goal is to please God, your life will have a new purpose, meaning and significance."

When coach Osborne talks, people listen. Those in attendance Tuesday night listened, and hopefully we all grasped his messages.

TOM OSBORNE was the guest speaker at the Wayne Athletic Banquet Tuesday night.

Winside graduate heads to nationals

Meierhenry clears 6-11 at districts

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is part of a story that was printed in the May 11 Lincoln Journal-Star about Nebraska Wesleyan high jumper John Meierhenry. Meierhenry attended high school at Winside.

By Curt McKeever
Nebraska Wesleyan high jumper John Meierhenry used a head-first approach of sorts, but what enabled him to high jump 6 feet, 11 inches in Saturday's NAIA District II track and field meet at Wayne State's Memorial Stadium was his legs.

Meierhenry, a junior, sported a new buzz haircut in recording the best high jump for NCAA Division III athletes this year.

"I didn't jump as good I wanted to at conference last week so I can tell everybody that the haircut did it," Meierhenry said. "It was a lot longer than it is now."

Meierhenry's effort helped the Plainsmen finish fifth in the men's division. Hastings and Doane tied for the title when Doane coach Fred Boile rechecked original figures that had Hastings winning by three points. Meet officials had left off results from the 200 in the final team standings.

Melody Robinson won three events to help Midland win the women's team championship.

Meierhenry, a junior from nearby Winside, has only recently joined the top-high jumpers in Division III.

"I played basketball the first two years and it kind of took away from my practice time. I would maybe jump once a week if I was lucky," he said. "The highest I'd gone before that this year was 6-5 and I sat out basketball this year. I can't figure out what else it would be because I haven't changed much."

"Maybe I'm using different muscles, I don't know. The only other thing is that I've moved my approach back about 10 to 15 yards."

Meierhenry attempted seven feet and nearly made it on his second jump.

"I jumped a little too far out and hit the bar with my trail leg. I thought I was over," he said.

Meierhenry was happy with his effort, but admitted to having an advantage over the rest of the field.

"Every meet I had in high school was at this track, so this is kind of like coming home," he said. "I felt just like it was my senior year. I stayed here last night and didn't get up until nine or so this morning."

Meierhenry first noticed his improvement at the first meet of the outdoor season, when he went 6-10, but said getting that high wasn't his main concern.

"Early in the season I was still going 6-4 and then I went 6-6 at the UNL meet," he said. "Once I got over that barrier I couldn't go anywhere else but up."

What about seven feet?

"That's a big inch," he said. "I've talked to some guys that have jumped at La Crosse (where the NCAA championships will be held) and I think it's going to take seven feet. I think I can get it."

In addition to Meierhenry, Wayne State's Randy Ditter, Linda Schnitzler, Ann Eisenmenger, Missy Stollenberg, Cindy Heesacker, Fran Gross, Jodi Allen and Diana Asay will also compete at the National Track Meet.

Two Lady Cats receive honors

Durbala, Tomasziewicz All-Americans

Teresa Durbala and Shelle Tomasziewicz of Wayne State have been named to the first team All-American in the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA) in softball.

Durbala, a senior from Norwalk, Iowa, was named to the first team for the second straight year. Tomasziewicz, a junior from Omaha, moves up to first team after being selected to the second team last season.

Tomasziewicz finished the year hitting an even .400, 14th in the nation among NAIA hitters. Her .838 slugging percentage led the nation. The leftfielder had a team-high nine homers with 35 runs batted in and 11 triples. Tomasziewicz had the game-winning hit in 17 of the Lady Wildcats' games in 1986. She also was a first team All-CSIC and All-District II selection.

American in softball two consecutive years at Wayne State. She is only the third athlete in the history of Wayne State to be named All-American two or more years.

Wayne State finished the year 32-14, setting a school record for most victories in one season. The Lady Wildcats were runners-up in the CSIC Tournament and in the District II Tournament.

Strate praises All-Americans

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following are brief comments Wayne State head coach Marilyn Strate presented the NAIA on the All-American over sheets for Teresa Durbala and Shelle Tomasziewicz.

TERESA DURBALA — "Defensively, she runs the team. Great leadership! Both an offensive and defensive threat. Has hit over .300 all four years as the starting catcher and clean-up hitter at WSC. Has picked off 16 runners who led off base too far (11 at first, 4 at second, 1 at third). Caught 19 runners stealing. Her arm alone is responsible for 25 outs!! Unanimous choice All-Conference CSIC and All-District II for second straight year."

SHELLE TOMASZKIEWICZ — "Super concentration at the plate!! Season batting average of .400. Set three school records at WSC: 11 triples, 9 home runs, and 35 RBIs. Hit .500 with 3 over-the-fence homers in CSIC Conference Tournament, leading the team to second place finish. Unanimously chosen All-Conference CSIC and All-District II by coaches."

Wayne duo wins state

GRAND ISLAND — Although the state golf tournament and track meet are still a few days away, Wayne can already boast two state champs — Sandra Gathje and June Baier.

Gathje and Baier captured the Class A Doubles championship at the 49th annual Nebraska Women's Bowling Association Tournament here over the weekend.

Gathje and Baier finished with 1,328 points, which was one better than Julie Anderson and Karen Cockerill of Kearney. Three teams tied for third with 1,325 markers.

The tourney, which was the second largest ever, began 12 weeks ago and Gathje and Baier have been on top since March 8.

Over 4,800 sets of doubles teams bowled in the tourney, making the Wayne duo's achievement even more impressive.

Gathje and Baier almost placed in the team event as well as Wayne's Greenview Farms placed fourth at state, just five pins short of third place.

SANDRA GATHJE and June Baier won the state bowling title.

Wayne shoots to defend golf crown

Twelve teams and 13 individuals will compete in the State Golf Tournament at the Wayne Golf and Country Club Thursday.

The top three teams from four district tournaments and the top eight individuals that did not play for a district qualifying team qualify for state.

Coming into the meet, Grand Island Northwest had a slightly better score than host Wayne in district playoffs. Northwest finished with a 313, while Wayne fired a 314.

Representing Wayne during state will be Tom Perry, Jed Reeg, Robb Reeg, Dave Ellis and Eric Runestad.

The top individual qualifying score belongs to Corey Johnson of Ord and Waverly's Keith Lawson who both shot a 77. However, there were a number of better individual scores turned in from players that will play for a state qualifying team. For example, Perry shot a 75 at districts.

The State Tournament begins at 9 a.m. Wayne's first golfer is expected to tee off at approximately 9:10 a.m.

Terry Munson, Wayne's coach, said playing at home does have its advantages, but shouldn't make too much of a difference.

"Playing at your own golf course has its obvious advantages. The (Wayne) guys will know the greens better and will have a better idea as far as club choice is concerned," he said. "But you still have to go out and play. Just knowing what to do or which club to use isn't enough."

Larsen will go to Wesleyan

The suspense is over — Don Larsen has decided to attend Nebraska Wesleyan on a basketball scholarship.

Larsen, a starter on the Wayne basketball team since his freshman year, had narrowed his final decision to three schools — Wayne State, Iowa State and Nebraska Wesleyan. But earlier this week he decided to attend Nebraska Wesleyan.

Larsen also possesses one of the liveliest right arms in the area, but Tuesday night after the Wayne High School Athletic Banquet he said that he still didn't know whether he would pursue baseball in college.

"I'm going to play basketball, but I haven't decided whether to play baseball or not. I'll see how things go during this (Junior Legion) season," he said.

Winside also won the distance medley relay with a 4:54.3 clocking and the 1600 meter relay with a 4:43.2 effort.

Christi Thies and Brent Nau will represent Winside at state. Thies will compete in the high jump, while Nau will compete in the 110 meter hurdles.

Jim Winch, Winside's head track coach, was pleased with his squad's effort and credited the victory to relaxation.

"The kids did a good job and I think a lot of that had to do with them being more relaxed because they went against so many kids their same age."

The meet is open to all underclassmen who did not qualify for the State Track Meet, which will be held Friday and Saturday at Omaha Burke High School.

Kathy Leighton was a double winner for Winside. Leighton set a school record in the 1600 with a 6:00.1 and claimed the 800 meter run title with a 2:40.8 effort.

Brosamle leads Wildcats in hitting

The Wayne State Wildcats finished second in the NAIA District 11 Baseball Tournament, losing 10-7 to Kearney State in the championship game.

The loss ends the Wildcats' season with a 24-25 record. After dropping their opening game of the District 11 Tournament to Peru State 5-4, the Wildcats won three straight, including a 3-0 victory over Bellevue College, an 11-0 win over Peru State and a 9-5 victory over Kearney State.

In the championship game, the Wildcats fell behind 9-0, but pulled to within three, 9-6, in the third inning. Kearney State led 10-6 after the fifth, but the inability to get the key hit hurt the Wildcats. Wayne State left 17 men on base and twice left the bases loaded without scoring.

On the year, senior outfielder Kurt Brosamle led the team in hitting with a .389 average. Junior first baseman Mike Hoffart hit .345 as did centerfielder Gale Bretschneider. Dale Clayton hit .331, while Pat Salerno hit .306 and was the fifth Wildcat to hit over .300.

Bretschneider and Clayton waged a battle for the school's stolen base record. Clayton set the record last season with 30. Bretschneider then broke that record in the district tournament, only to have Clayton tie him. But Bretschneider pulled ahead, finishing the year 35-for-38, while Clayton finished 33-for-37.

The pitching corps was led by Randy Raabe of Pierce who finished the year 4-2 with a 3.44 earned run average (ERA). Dennis Vollmer finished 5-5 in 58 innings of work and led the team in strikeouts with 63. Jose Ruiz finished 3-0, Jeff Rothrock went 5-5 and Kevin Hoffart 4-6 for the Wildcats. Senior Mark Priegnitz led the team in saves with six and finished 2-2.

After a 1-11 start during the southern spring trip, the Wildcats were 23-14 the rest of the season, including a stretch where they won 15 of 20 games.

Individual post-season honors for the Wildcats included: Kurt Brosamle, All-CSIC, All-District 11; Mike Hoffart, All-District 11, honorable mention All-CSIC; Dennis Vollmer, honorable mention All-District 11, honorable mention All-CSIC; Monty Shultz, Jeff Strain, Dale Clayton, Randy Raabe, Gale Bretschneider and Kevin Hoffart all made honorable mention District 11.

Wayne State loses only four seniors from this year's team — Brosamle, Strain, Rothrock and Priegnitz.

Stoltenberg can't compete at state

Injuries and sports go hand-in-hand. But the freak injury Jon Stoltenberg sustained this week came at a most inopportune time.

Stoltenberg qualified for the State Track Meet in the 110 meter high hurdles, but he won't be able to attend the meet because of a leg injury he suffered during a collision on his motorcycle following Wayne's graduation ceremonies Sunday afternoon.

Stoltenberg crashed into a car that was in front of him and damaged his left leg. Tuesday afternoon Stoltenberg was hobbling around in a full-length portable cast.

Stoltenberg said that doctors are not certain what exactly was injured. "The doctors still aren't sure what the injury is. They think they're going to have to scope (perform orthoscopic surgery) it," he said.

All Hansen, Wayne's head track coach, said Stoltenberg's 15.1 was the seventh or eighth best time in the 110 highs in Class B.

Lottery

cutting down in the state aid to local governments. One way to replace the funds is have the local options for a lottery," she said.

A recent poll in the Omaha World-Herald revealed that approximately 68 percent of people in Nebraska would support a statewide lottery, she said.

Surrounding states with the statewide lottery include Iowa, Colorado and Missouri.

LABEDZ RESIDES in South Omaha, very close to Council Bluffs, Iowa. She has witnessed the number of dollars that go for the Iowa lottery — just in her own neighborhood.

"We're not only losing that [lottery] revenue, but also losing revenue from people going over there to do their shopping such as for groceries," said Labedz.

"People go over to service stations in Iowa to fill up their tanks and buy the lottery tickets there."

"Iowa is third in the nation from the revenue it makes on state lotteries. So I think it is time Nebraska had one."

Labedz said she voted against the increase in income tax, voted against the sales tax increase and sustained all Governor Kerrey's vetoes "because I think we have other ways of raising revenue and lottery is one of them."

Why are some legislators leery of the lottery?

Labedz said some of the legislators feel that gambling is not the way to go in raising funds for the state government.

"Yet they are not reluctant to take Ak-Sar-Ben or Grand Island race horse money or pickle money," she commented.

Senator Gerald Conway of Wayne, when asked about his feelings on the lottery, told The Wayne Herald that he believes "the petition drive is appropriate."

"It gives the people themselves the benefit of a choice of what they want," Conway said.

DEPRESSION prevention center

This Saturday in Room 202 at Wayne High School, two new workshops will be presented. At 10 a.m. a seminar on depression will be offered and at noon, a seminar on relaxation training will be given. It is highly probable that each and every one of you reading this has at one time felt depressed. Sometimes the usual disappointments of life seem to pile up until you feel kind of tired and slow moving. While these feelings most likely pass, occasionally they remain and grow larger. When this happens, it can be frightening for the person who is suffering, and it can be scary and confusing for that person's loved ones.

Some of the common symptoms of depression are: low energy or chronic tiredness; feelings of inadequacy, loss of self-esteem; decreased productivity at work, home or school; decreased attention, concentration, or inability to think clearly; social withdrawal; loss of interest in pleasurable activities; irritability; excessive anger; inability to respond with apparent pleasure to praise or rewards; less active or talkative than usual; pessimistic attitude toward the future; brooding about past events, or feeling sorry for self, fearfulness or crying; and recurrent thoughts of death or suicide.

Finally, there is a bit of an irony in a couple other symptoms. A person may either sleep more or less than usual, or eat more or less than usual. It is clear from a quick glance at the above list of symptoms that depression is not something to ignore. It is serious and can cause some very large problems.

IT IS important that a person who is feeling these things be able to talk with adequately trained professionals. Gently and persistently try to have that person speak to a pastor, a counselor, a social worker, a psychologist or a psychiatrist.

There are ways to handle this difficulty and it is important that early treatment be received. Come this Saturday and learn more. There are many different forms of relaxation. However, to reach true muscular relaxation there have been various techniques designed. Each has its advantages and disadvantages. There are a few key points to touch on when deciding on what techniques to use.

The first prerequisite to starting a program is that you must believe the relaxation technique will work in lowering your stress and anxiety level. This act of blind belief, much like religion, is due to the fact that it is difficult to show scientifically that it works.

However, it does work if you believe it will and this fact has been documented several times.

THE NEXT ESSENTIAL item is that it becomes part of your life, once again like religion. Muscular relaxation is not some mystical-magical act which solves all of life's problems. On the contrary, if you practice the art it will be a tremendous aid in your everyday stresses. Relaxation is a learned art like any other physical skill.

Therefore it must be practiced daily if it is to be perfected. Thus, it must be worked into your regular schedule if you are to benefit from it.

Finally, the relaxation technique that you use must be a personal choice, much like religion. It is important to choose the style which works best for you after testing various forms. Each one is unique, and depending on your personality and types of stresses, one form should work best for you.

The important point to remember is that you control the process from within, no matter what form of relaxation you choose.

This Saturday at noon we will teach you a few techniques that you can easily use every day.

Drought: Certain as death and taxes

by Mary Ethel Emanuel UNL Dept. of Ag.

Mark Twain once said that nothing is certain except death and taxes. He might have added weather to that list. And just as you cannot precisely predict death or (concretely) control taxes, in the long run you cannot predict or control the weather.

Weather can enhance or hinder humans' efforts to prosper. A gentle rain is beneficial, but a hurricane can destroy in minutes what took years to build. A drought does not quickly destroy an environment, but the damage can be more pervasive and permanent.

Drought and human's reactions to it can sometimes lead to desertification.

Desertification is an affliction that reduces or destroys a region's biological ability to support life. It is most generally caused by man-made stresses such as overgrazing, over-cultivation, destruction of woody species, and unsound land and water management practices, in conjunction with a drought.

Donald Wilhite, associate professor of Agricultural Meteorology and Climatology at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, has helped to organize an international conference to be held Sept. 29-Oct. 3 in Lincoln. The conference will provide a forum for discussion of the physical and societal implications of drought and to determine what is needed to improve national and international capacities to cope with drought.

"Humans play a role in lessening the biological productivity of a region. However, just because there is a drought doesn't necessarily mean a desert will result, or that productivity will be reduced in the long term."

"But a drought can lead to a situation where normal cultural or agricultural practices demand too much of the land's ability to support crops, livestock and people, such as has recently occurred in Ethiopia."

TODAY OVER 43 percent of the earth's surface is either desert or threatened with desertification. Deserts are the result of specific characteristics of atmospheric and oceanic circulation patterns, at times in association with mountain ranges.

The distribution of deserts today is different than it has been in the past. Certain areas in India which are now desert were jungle 2,000 years ago. Desert regions in Iran and Afghanistan were, until the 15th century, called the granary of the East. More recently, the Sahara desert advanced over 60 miles in just 17 years.

Desertification in the United States has attracted less attention because its impact on human life has been much less severe than in other places. But desertification can, and does, occur here.

Symptoms of desertification, which are common in many places in the United States, include declining groundwater tables; salinization of topsoil and water; the reduction of surface water, unnaturally high soil erosion and the desolation of native vegetation.

Nebraska is not immune from desertification, Wilhite said. Central and western portions of the state have already experienced slight desertification. And it could increase if larger portions of the Sandhills go under the plow.

"There is concern now over large-scale irrigation development in the Sandhills," he said. "The fine and sandy soils there are held in place by native grasses. If the grass is destroyed the soil could become highly eroded by winds. The soil is most vulnerable to wind erosion during the early spring 'blow' season because there is no crop cover to protect the soil."

LARGE-SCALE CENTER pivot irrigation development, such as has occurred in the eastern Sandhills, poses a threat to the sustained productivity of the region through increased wind erosion and the pollution of ground-water and agricultural chemicals. It comes down to a question of management, Wilhite said.

"There must be an understanding of soil and water resources. They are not inexhaustible. Drought cannot be predicted, but long-range planning and the proper response to drought conditions can minimize the impacts of drought and the risks of desertification," he continued.

Using the technology appropriate to the land and to the situation is very important in minimizing drought impacts. "We have to understand our land and water resources, and manage them in such a way as to ensure its sustained productivity for future generations," Wilhite said.

Many have predicted that the impending water crisis will soon make the energy crisis seem insignificant, Wilhite said. "The problems surrounding water and its management are many. And surprisingly, water is not just an issue in dry lands. Misuse of our soil and water resources can lead to desertification in humid regions as well. Over-irrigation can lead to leaching and salinization, when the soil becomes impregnated with salt. Inappropriate use of chemicals lead to the pollution of groundwater."

Drought, as Mark Twain might have said, is an inevitable feature of our climate. But drought, as Donald Wilhite says, need not inevitably lead to severe impacts, as has recently occurred in Africa, Brazil, Australia and the United States. Improved planning and management can reduce, and sometimes, avoid these impacts.

Tomatoes in the garden

You may not need as many tomatoes as you might think. This popular and productive vegetable can be supplied continuously from mid-July to frost. Properly tended, each plant will yield 15 to 23 pounds of fruit.

Some varieties adapted to Nebraska are: Jet Star, Show Me, Early Cascade, Early Girl, President, Champion and Better Boy. There are other good varieties too.

Select healthy transplants 6 to 10 inches tall and use a starter solution when setting the plants. Protect the plants for a few days with a temporary shade of cardboard or shingle.

When the plants are golf ball size, place extra-fertilizer (1 to 2 tablespoons) around each plant and gently work it into the soil. Water and rainfall will carry the fertilizer into the root zone.

Tomatoes can be grown in cages — the most popular method — or on stakes. Staked tomatoes usually need pruning. Mulch tomatoes left on the ground with straw or leaves, but some type of mulching is recommended for all tomato plants. Harvest regularly to keep replacement tomatoes setting on.

ANOTHER CONSIDERATION: gardeners shopping for tomato plants sometimes ask for "low acid" tomato varieties. This is not a valid term to use in describing a particular variety.

A USDA test in 1975 of 55 tomato varieties revealed that none of these varieties differed significantly in acidity. Another conclusion of the test was the relatively high acidity of all tomato types usually considered by the public to be low in acidity. These include the cherry, patio and light-colored (yellow) tomatoes.

Are our taste buds fooling us? Some tomatoes do taste different! Taste reflects a balance between sugar and acids. Higher sugar can mask acidity and make a fruit taste "sweet" or "low-acid." Sugars present in tomato fruit are more a result of growing conditions than of which variety is grown.

For the best-tasting tomatoes, grow in full sun, do not over-fertilize or over-water and harvest when fruit is fully-ripened.

Care of chrysanthemums

Chrysanthemums come in a variety of colors and sizes. There are low-growing types called cushions and taller, long-stemmed varieties.

To encourage these plants to develop a uniform shape and more flowers, pinch out the tops as the plants begin to grow. This makes the plant more bushy. As it grows further, pinch out the tops again. This can be continued until mid-July but no later. Further pinching back of the plant will delay blooming.

Use shallow cultivation on mums. Mulch the plants to keep the soil cool and holding moisture. Then, as the days get shorter in the late summer and fall, the plants will set blossoms and produce a beautiful display until frost.

Concerns raised on storage of grain

Grain producers have only a short time to correct possible improper storage conditions to assure grain stays in good condition over the summer, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln extension agricultural engineer said.

Richard Pierce said a particular concern is that grain which is in poor condition now will be difficult to hold in condition this summer. And he said checks of storage facilities around the state have turned up some instances of mold-damaged corn.

Problems noted at this time in grain storage are "particularly disturbing," Pierce said, because about half of the grain he checked was 1985 corn.

"Storage problems really should not start showing up until we get into the warmer, summer months," he said. "Thus, the worst is yet to come and we can expect to see some serious grain storage problems this summer."

Pierce said farmers with grain in storage should take three steps:

- Check moisture content of grain.
- Check grain temperature.
- A final check to assess current grain condition.

ON MOISTURE content, corn, milo and wheat should be dried to 14 percent moisture or below; soybeans should be at 11 percent.

"If your bin is not equipped with a full perforated floor and drying bin, this means you need to unload the bin and dry the grain with a high temperature dryer," Pierce advised.

On grain temperature: Ideally, grain temperatures should be maintained between 50 degrees and 60 degrees F.

"If you intend to warm the grain to these levels, do so as soon as possible because there are fewer and fewer periods with this desired temperature range as we move into June."

"Usually, we are limited to night-time fan operation," Pierce said. "If you have elected to hold grain at colder temperatures over the summer, seal the bin and cover fans to prevent air convection currents which, gradually will warm the grain. Storing frozen grain over the summer is not recommended because of potential moisture-condensation problems."

Current grain condition: "Do not assume your grain is in good condition," Pierce said. A check of 16 storage facilities in one central Nebraska county recently disclosed mold-damaged corn in 10 storages, or 62 percent of the total. Mold damage was extensive in 3 facilities. The rest showed lesser amounts of damage at the grain surface, due to moisture migration or bin roof leaks.

"Moisture migrations (through the grain mass) had occurred in all storages not equipped with areafan fans," Pierce reported. Approximately 4 percent of the 333,600 bushels of corn checked in the survey was judged to be totally damaged and not marketable unless blended with better quality corn, he said.

MOISTURE CONTENTS exceeded 14 percent in six of the storages, 37 percent of those checked, indicating possible additional mold problems. Moisture contents in these bins ranged from 14.8 percent to 18 percent.

"In most cases, this grain can be dried without being moved because the bins either are equipped with drying fans or the high moisture areas are small and can be dried using areafan fans," Pierce said.

Grain temperatures varied from 40 degrees to 60 degrees, about what is expected for this time of year, Pierce said.

"Despite these relatively cool temperatures, insects were found in 19 percent of the bins," he said. In all three cases, insect activity occurred in areas with active mold growth. Rodents also were present in one flat storage facility, Pierce said.

While these findings originated in only one county, they raise strong questions about similar conditions being found in a number of on-farm storages elsewhere around the state, Pierce concluded.

the farmer's wife

by pat melerhenry

When you have two or three beautiful days in a row in Nebraska, you almost get nervous! Especially when the rest of the country is reeling from floods, fires, and tornadoes.

"It's really nice to have all the windows and curtains clean. We are still eating sandwiches and salad."

The class sponsor said it was the weepiest class she'd seen. My tears began to chug already when both the Wayne and Winside grads from our congregation were honored.

"She continued when the senior girls sang 'I'll Leave You With a Smile,' and got worse when the Big Farmer gave Kay a hug along with her diploma.

She had to be at school at 1 p.m. and Ann by 1:30, so they each took a car. The rest of us, plus Uncle Don and Grandma, went in two more cars. So we took special care to see that everyone got home again. On the day that Sue graduated, we left her in town.

Dan Hansen's pickup was the last one on the yard, so he was elected to plow through the mud and get her.

THE TRACK meet at WSC was a great success. Jon jumped 6'11", I'd been nagging him about the long hair on the neck for months. He didn't jump well at the conference meet, so he went to Dick's barber shop and got buzzed. I almost fainted when I saw him. But he claims it got him over the bar.

In case you were feeling sympathy for my having to feed the team, I want to confess that I had Joyce Niemann make the potato salad, slaw, and baked beans.

Plus, Ray Jacobson barbecued some beef, and we served it on buns with his famous barbecue sauce. It was a big hit.

All I did was make a bunch of brownies and a huge salad and buy some paper plates. Plus, we locked the dog in the garage, so we could use the picnic tables.

Joyce had the distinction of feeding the Doane men and women, too, since Jill Mosley is on that school's team. I can report that the NWU group prefers her food to SAGA's any day.

SAGA stands for the food service on campus. The students claim those initials stand for "Soviet Attempts to Gag America."

WITH TWO women winning the gubernatorial nominations, I think I'll give up political prognosticating. Shawn Boldt tells me we will no longer be the Beef State, but the Quiche State!

I heard a speaker, female, give an interesting insight into the role of women as leaders. She pointed out that in recent years, women have taken over in times of trouble: Indira Gandhi in India, Margaret Thatcher in England, and Corizon Aquino in the Philippines. I certainly do feel that Nebraska is troubled. All we have to do now is decide which woman we need.

We'll be attending the National Track Meet at LaCrosse this weekend. Say a prayer for some good jumps on Saturday.

We'll try to be back for the first ever Hoskins High School reunion. It's the same night as Waco's, and it's thirty years for my class. I won't be the only one missing it.

A tree fell on a friend and classmate named Yvonne Stuh on April 26 and broke her back. She'd now at Immanuel Rehab Center in Omaha, and we don't know if she will walk again. I'd really appreciate your prayers in her behalf.

Diesel fuel lowers crop production

The lower price of diesel fuel, particularly in relation to irrigation pumping plant costs, could save a crop producer several cents per bushel in production costs, if fuel costs stay at a relatively low level throughout the growing season.

This word comes from Leslie F. Sheffield, University of Nebraska-Lincoln extension farm management specialist, who said that lower petroleum prices will impact on fertilizer prices, grain drying costs and costs of farm field operations in varying proportions of the total energy cost of a crop enterprise. Lower diesel prices will impact the greatest on irrigation farmers with the capability to use this type of fuel, compared to other petroleum-based crop production inputs, he added.

Energy costs make up from 2 percent to 5 percent of production costs on irrigated farms in Nebraska overall, Sheffield said, with irrigation pumping the largest expense category.

Using a hypothetical central Nebraska irrigated farm as an example, Sheffield said per bushel costs of raising corn could drop from $2.69 to around $2.50, largely attributable to lower diesel fuel prices.

Farmers will realize modest savings on nitrogen fertilizers, particularly those manufactured from natural gas such as anhydrous ammonia; little savings will accrue in herbicide and insecticide costs containing petroleum derivatives because the materials were manufactured under last year's higher prices, he said.

SHEFFIELD OFFERED examples, based on diesel fuel at 50 cents a gallon, which, when worked through, could result in per bushel cost savings ranging from 5 cents a bushel to 17 cents a bushel, depending on a number of factors.

His example, of 120 acres irrigated by gated pipe involved calculations of estimated energy costs for the season when an irrigation pump was operated 750 hours, 1,100 hours and 1,400 hours, typical situations for eastern central and western Nebraska, respectively.

For the 750-hour situation, the total estimated cost for the season would be $1,327.50, or $11.06 per acre for an anticipated yield of 125 bushels of corn per acre. The per bushel savings related to cheaper fuel would be 6.5 cents, or 9 cents with a center pivot system.

Comparable figures when a pumping plant operated 1,100 hours a season would be $1,947 in energy costs for the season; $16.23 per acre for the season; and projected savings of 9.6 cents a bushel under gated pipe delivery and 13 cents a bushel under center pivot.

For the longer pumping season of 1,400 hours, total energy costs would be $2,478; per acre season cost, $20.65; and projected savings per acre season cost, $20.65; and projected savings per bushel 12.2 cents and 17 cents a bushel for gated pipe and center pivot, respectively.

ADDING THE FACTOR of energy costs for field operations, Sheffield said under the assumed cost of 50 cents a gallon for diesel, 7 cents a bushel would be saved under a conventional tillage system and 5 cents a bushel under a minimum or conservation tillage system.

While gasoline and diesel fuel prices are 40 percent to 50 percent below a year ago, propane, also used to power may irrigation pumps, is about 20 percent to 25 percent below 1985.

It is not feasible to stockpile a full season's supply of diesel fuel, Sheffield said, so an edging up of fuel prices later in the season could lower the per-bushel savings projected as replacement fuel is purchased at a higher price.

UP WITH AGRICULTURE
By David Garst

Soon, thousands of young people will graduate from our nation's high schools and universities, and take their first step into the workforce. Shouldn't these young people consider a career in agriculture?

The famous philosopher Cicero wrote in 60 B.C.: "Of all occupations from which gain is secured, there is none better than agriculture, nothing more productive, nothing sweeter, nothing more worthy of a free man."

We all want to make a contribution to life. A career in agriculture offers more than a living - it's an opportunity to pursue your dreams. A career in agriculture offers a sense of fulfillment in knowing that your work helps improve the quality of life for millions of people.

To be sure, agriculture is undergoing a dramatic change. And charting a course when the waters are rough takes someone who has the self-confidence to pursue a dream. These are the kind of people we need in agriculture today.

There are lots of opportunities to be gained in agriculture today. For instance, never before has this industry witnessed so many technological advancements.

These advancements will make a better agriculture, and mean new career opportunities for our nation's young people. The United States Department of Agriculture projects a need next year for over 50,000 ag graduates. But careers in agriculture today aren't limited to farming. They include agricultural banking, finance, law and insurance, to name just a few.

Biotechnology, a science that enables researchers to manipulate the genetic makeup of plants, is a new, exciting field. Using biotechnology, plants can be engineered to resist insects and disease, and to produce higher yields. With biotechnology, many scientists believe we may one day be able to develop a near perfect plant, whether it be corn, soybeans, wheat, or whatever.

I believe all of us want to do well while doing good. Don't just make a living. Make a life. There's no better way to make a contribution to society than by choosing a career in agriculture.

TREE PLANTING FINISHED . . . BUT THE WORK IS JUST BEGINNING

LENRD tree planters have finished their work for 1986. If you are one of the proud owners of a new windbreak or wildlife planting, your work is just beginning. Getting the tree seedlings in the ground properly is very important, but so is the care they receive afterward.

New tree seedlings are no different than a garden or a corn field; eliminating weed competition and providing water when needed can mean the difference between survival or replanting next year.

Weeds or deep sod forming grasses such as bromus not only outcompete new trees for moisture and nutrients, but may also stunt their growth by shading them. The best atmosphere for new seedlings is to keep the rows clean filled to a width of about four feet. Warm season grasses planted between rows will provide excellent wildlife habitat, and does not compete with the trees for moisture and nutrients.

The Clarke-McIntyre tree seedlings sold by the LENRD are species which are well adapted to Nebraska. However, the small root systems may need help in prolonged dry periods. During those times, a thorough watering once a week is better than frequent small waterings.

For more information in tree care, contact your local Soil Conservation Service or Extension Office.

CONSERVATION TILLAGE DEMONSTRATION PLOTS

LENRD, Soil Conservation Service and Extension Service are again cooperating with landowners to establish Conservation Tillage Demonstration Plots. It has been demonstrated by research and many farmers that a very effective way to reduce runoff from heavy rains, and hence reduce erosion, is to leave cover on the surface of the soil. Cropping systems have been developed that leave all or most of the previous years crop residue on the surface and achieve the desired results.

These "cropping" systems, known collectively as "conservation tillage" have several other benefits for the farmers who use them:

1. Preserves soil moisture, which is often critically short under drought conditions. On irrigated land it may save one or more applications.
2. Saves fuel because of fewer tillage operations and possibly fewer irrigations.
3. Saves time and labor costs which may be better spent in other activities.

WHAT IS THE SODBUSTER PROVISION

The Federal Food Security Act of 1985 (Farm Bill) includes restrictions on the production of commodity crops on highly erodible land. These restrictions became effective on December 23, 1985. One of the provisions (known as sodbuster) is that farmers would not be eligible to participate in USDA programs if they bring into production any highly erodible land that had not grown an annual cultivated crop since 1981. Alfalfa is not considered to be an annual cultivated crop. This would also apply to such areas as old farmsteads, feed lots, and wooded areas.

As of this date, the definition for highly erodible land has not been published. Therefore, farmers who bring highly erodible land into production before publication of the final regulations will remain eligible for USDA programs. However, if the land brought into production is later determined to be highly erodible when the definition is published, the farmer will need to obtain a conservation plan and apply the required conservation practices before he can become eligible to participate in next years and future USDA programs.

There has been no change in Sodbuster provisions, only a delay in enforcement. For more information, contact your local Soil Conservation Service Office.

36 diplomas awarded at Wakefield graduation

By LaVon Anderson

As the Trojan Band struck up with "Pomp and Circumstance," Wakefield's Class of 1986 made final adjustments to their maroon caps and gowns before marching in to receive their high school diplomas Sunday afternoon.

Parents, grandparents, other relatives and friends filled the Wakefield gymnasium to witness the awarding of diplomas, scholarships and other special awards to the 36 graduating seniors.

Giving the invocation and benediction was the Rev. Joe Marek of Salem Lutheran Church.

Pastor Marek also presented the graduation address.

COMMENTING ON the theme for his address, "Now What?," Pastor Marek told the students that the question could be interpreted two ways — in a positive way or in a negative way.

"I'm wondering how each of you would choose your particular preference," said Marek. "Is it the positive or the negative?"

Rather than lecturing to the graduates, the Wakefield pastor chose to take them on a journey.

"I want you to get very comfortable in your chairs. Take a deep breath and close your eyes."

THE PASTOR TOLD the students to imagine they are on a beach, with warm sand and waves catching the sunlight.

"You are in a crowd of people and you have been told to stay on the beach until a special person comes to tell you what to do.

"The special person arrives and takes you through grassy dunes toward a forest. You begin to walk through the forest in single file, noticing the tall, beautiful trees.

"You come to the edge of the forest and there is a beautiful mansion. You are told that inside this house is a room with your name on it. You are asked to find your room and stay there until someone special once again comes to get you."

ONCE INSIDE THE room, Pastor Marek told the students they are amazed to find that everything inside the room belongs to them.

There are picture albums — one of sad times and one of wonderful times.

There are also many shelves with drawing bags — one labeled sorrows, the other joys, yet another "disappointments, another accomplishments, and the other happiness.

"There is a box on the floor full of things you had when you were young," adds Marek. "Things you had misplaced in your memory.

"You realize there are many things in your life that were lost. But now you can relive them again. You are reluctant to leave.

"Then the special person comes for you. You return through the forest to the beach. And you stay there for a while."

IN CLOSING, Pastor Marek read to the graduates from the book of John, chapter 14.

"Let not your hearts be troubled; believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many rooms, if it were not so, would I have told you that I go to prepare a place for you? And when I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and will take you to myself, that where I am you may be also."

"Now What?," questioned Pastor Marek. "We don't know.

"But if I have one thought to offer the class of 1986, it is this — You are loved by a God who created you, who created all of us and placed us on this earth. He has not forgotten us, and he will come again to take us to that very special house. And when we get there it will be a very wonderful place.

"Until then, we have the beach. No one knows what will happen in this life, but know that at the completion of it you have a safe home waiting for you."

Comments sought on ag programs

The U.S. Department of Agriculture is seeking public comments on common program provisions of the 1987 wheat, feed grains, upland cotton and rice programs.

USDA will consider the comments received before making final decisions on these program provisions.

The USDA wants comments on the following:

- Whether the same program enrollment period should apply to all program crops or whether individual program enrollment periods should be established with varying start-up dates based on geographical location.

- Whether the production of approved nonprogram crops should be allowed on unplanted program crop permitted acreage. This provision is known as "50/92". Also whether haying and grazing should be permitted on conservation use acreage designated under the 50/92 act.

- Whether to permit the production of alternative crops on reduced acreage (known as ACR for Acreage Conservation Reserve).

- Whether to require offsetting and cross compliance. USDA proposes that limited cross compliance requirements be in effect for the 1987 commodity programs.

- Whether advance payments should be offered.

- Whether an advance recourse commodity loan program should be implemented.

- Whether a multiyear set-aside program should be implemented.

- Whether producers should be permitted to increase a crop acreage base if made. It is proposed that this adjustment option not be authorized for the 1987 crops.

- And whether the actual yield per harvested acre for the 1987 crops should be considered in establishing farm program payment yields for subsequent years.

Comments are also requested on how to credit prevented planting and failed acreage in establishing the base acreage in future years.

Further details on the proposal are scheduled to appear in the May 13 Federal Register. Comments must be received by May 27 to Director, Commodity Analysis Division, USDA/ASCS, Room 3741-S, P.O. Box 2415, Washington, D.C. 20013.

In addition, a regulatory impact statement on the 1987 wheat program options is available and may be obtained by writing to the same address.
