Workshop assists communities in drawing industry

by Chuck Hackenmiller

A community may provide the tax amenities or infrastructure funding assistance to draw new or expanding industry.

But don't overlook the amenities which a community has to offer. New businesses or industry regard it highly.

Time after time, the topic of amenities and cohesiveness (working together) of a community were mentioned as factors in drawing industry or business, and consequently more jobs, during the Harvesting Hometown Jobs seminar Monday at the Wayne State College Student Center.

Among those on the program agenda were Phil Kloster, Wayne city administrator, and James Remick, president and chief operating officer of Timpfe, Inc. in Wayne. Kloster and Remick presented a summary of "The Timpfe Story" to up to 70 individuals who registered for the seminar (see related story).

The workshop was sponsored jointly by the National Association of Towns and Townships and supported by the U.S. Economic Development Administration, assisted by the Nebraska Public Power District (NPPD), Nebraska Business Development Center and the Nebraska Department of Economic Development, plus the universities and state colleges in Nebraska.

Topics discussed included economic and demographic issues in Nebraska; introduction to economic development; getting organized for economic development; turn around strategies for small towns; capturing existing income; improving the efficiency of existing firms; attracting basic employers; and formation of new businesses.

Also, people from development organizations in the area related their views and experiences in the various sessions.

BOB SHIVELY, manager of marketing at NPPD who is a former resident of northeast Nebraska and attended school in Wayne, said he was very pleased with the attendance.

"It was over 80 people. I don't know exactly how many towns were represented, probably 20 or 30," said Shively.

He said there were people attending from as far as O'Neill, York, South Sioux City and Fremont. "They seem to be very receptive. If I can judge from sitting up there (from speaker platform), looking at the faces, I think people were getting something out of it," he mentioned.

The primary thrust of the workshop, Shively said, was to generate enthusiasm and convince smaller communities that they don't have to die.

"That if they are willing to work and make a commitment of time, money and leadership, they can turn this thing around and rebuild their communities and grow and prosper," he commented.

"There is a vitality yet in Nebraska small towns, in spite of the hard times we're going through right now because of the agricultural economy," he said.

"But I think there is some resilience to that and with some enthusiasm and positive attitude these communities can do something to revive their economies."

Bob Shively

IN HIS WORKSHOP topic concerning attracting basic employers, Shively said some of the states primary employers are involved with agriculture, manufacturing and tourism. "Services [such as medical or educational] are also becoming a primary employer," he said.

Smaller communities, under 2,500 population, can experience more difficulty in recruiting national companies. Shively suggested pursuing options such as obtaining electricians or individuals involved in other specialized services.

The service industry, he said, is the fastest growing segment of the economy. An area to look at, he mentioned, was housing — which would include the selling of homes, housing construction and provision of retirement centers that include recreation facilities and good medical and dental facilities close by.

A study revealed in 1972 showed that 70 percent of the manufacturing plants in Nebraska are located in the same community of the people who had founded the company. "I don't think that picture has changed since then," Shively mentioned.

"Home grown industry is something to be constantly aware of to go out and help them," he added. "There are a number of agencies in the state that can give you help."

OTHER OPTIONS to pursue include food processing and "cottage industry" (where the business is started in the home), or to go out and buy a business or industry and move them to the community.

"There are a number of companies out there that are available for sale and can be moved," said Shively.

Nebraska has historically been a "pass through place" in regards to tourism, he said. "We need to make it a destination place."

He also suggested utilizing farm homes as "farm vacation sites, or youth camps or dude ranches."

Solutions, he said, is not all going to be a manufacturing firm; not always going to be a retirement center. "There needs to be direction on which way the community can best proceed," he said.

George Garnett from the Small Business Division of the Nebraska

Department of Economic Development said "it is critically important that communities have somebody locally who has in his or her job consider starting revolving loan funds.

President of Wayne State College of Nebraska, Dr. Thomas A. Coffey, description, of knowing where the economic resources areas.

"There is a vitality yet in Nebraska small towns, in spite of the hard times we're going through right now because of the agricultural economy."

THE ROLE OF the local government, as described by Nancy Stark (Staff Associate for Economic Development, National Association of Towns and Townships) is first, to be an ambassador and secondly, think about getting into the financing game.

She said local governments should told those present at the workshop that "your community tomorrow will not be as it is today."

"This is a personal plea. You got to work together. Jealousy and divisiveness can tear us apart," Coffey stated.

He also mentioned, in regard to personal experience, the significance of education in recruiting industry and the importance of the amenities within the communities.

Many factors contribute to location decision

When Timpfe, Inc. built its industry and moved its corporate headquarters from Denver, Colorado to Wayne, the deciding factors were much more than site and land availability or power, water and gas supplies.

Jim Remick, president of Timpfe, Inc., said that among the reasons the company decided to build in Wayne was because of its broad community support; because the area had an excellent source of labor; there was the presence of Wayne State College of Nebraska and the Northeast Technical Community College in Norfolk; because of the proximity of the community, close to the center of growth among customers; and the positive experience of another plant operating in Nebraska (David City).

Remick related to the audience at the Harvesting Hometown Jobs economic development seminar about the history of Timpfe, going back to the 1800's when Willis and August Timpfe went into the wagon repair business.

Tony and Clem Timpfe took over the business establishment as the country entered the motorized generation. The company began manufacturing semi-trailers in 1931. In the 1950's and 60's the company continued to grow.

They began the manufacturing of grain trailers and in 1973, they began producing the super seal lightweight refrigerated trailers.

"That became the largest selling product in the history of the company," said Remick. Later, in 1979, the David City facility was built for the construction primarily of grain trailers.

NEARLY ONE year ago, Timpfe broke ground for its new Wayne plant where the Super Seal Century Series refrigerated trailers are being manufactured.

"Timpfe's future is bright. More cargo is transported by truck than any other method of transportation," said Remick.

The decision to build a plant in Wayne came in a period of 24 months — a procedure that involved looking at 40 different communities in five midwestern states.

Defining the survey area involved looking at the markets, transportation and labor costs. Some other factors included competition, financial assistance and weather conditions.

High on importance, however, were amenities such as the type of community government, community support, the news media, recreation, higher education facility availability or other issues not easily forecasted. Remick emphasized the importance of "tight security in the dialogue between the community officials and the company."

"The consequences of a wrong decision are long lasting," he said. Some of the choices considered for relocation of corporate headquarters included Lincoln, Omaha, Kansas City, Chicago and Minneapolis. But the final decision came down to Wayne as the Timpfe, Inc. flagship plant.

REMICK SAID the company management prefers the "hands on" approach and "likes to get out on the factory floor."

When the announcement came to move the corporate headquarters, some had decided not to make the transition from Denver headquarters to Wayne, according to Remick. "We anticipated that happening and started to beef up the openings earlier than the announced decision," he said.

The other personnel were willing to consider relocating to a city that was without a lot of big city problems, without traffic problems and smog.

To reach work at his Denver plant, it took 50 minutes to travel 14 miles. Now it only takes him three minutes to cover the 1.8 miles to the Wayne plant.

Wayne City Administrator Phil Kloster told the workshop participants that they didn't have any secrets about how the city worked with Nebraska Public Power District (NPPD) and others in persuading Timpfe, Inc. to locate here.

"We'd be more than happy to share our entire story with you," he said. Approximately six years ago, Kloster said it became evident that there was one thing Wayne had to do in building its economic development. "That was to move off dead center," he said.

The community survey was revived and the community got involved with the NPPD program and "things started to roll," he said.

Since February of 1984, when city officials learned from NPPD that there was a client interested in locating in northeast Nebraska, to March of 1985 when Timpfe, Inc. made its announcement it would be moving to Wayne, no secrets "were let out of the bag."

"There will always be skeptics who don't fully understand how you market jobs," said Kloster.

EFFORTS ARE continuing to gain additional industrial development and to move along with efforts for business development in the downtown area.

Kloster said that gaining industry is "not a free game. You have got to spend some money."

Remick said business or industry prospects would talk with more than one individual about a community when considering a location, such as individuals with existing industry in the community.

Such as Timpfe, Inc. "They will really want to know what we had gone through and what were our experiences," Remick remarked.

Firemen answer 46 alarms

The yearly report of the Wayne Volunteer Fire Department — from May 1, 1985 to April 30, 1986 — shows that firemen answered 46 alarms that resulted in an estimated $1,527,050 worth of damages.

Of the 46 total alarms, 17 were in the city and 20 were rural. There were four rescue calls and five false alarms.

The estimate of involved property on the city fire calls totaled $2,760,350, with an estimated damage of $1,514,250.

Rural fire calls involved $226,000 in involved property, with an estimate of damage at $12,800.

OTHER STATISTICS

compiled by Fire Chief Dale Preston reveal that 573 hours were spent on calls, with 1,180 total man-hours on calls.

Statistics also show that 137 miles were traveled on fire calls, and seven miles were traveled on rescue calls.

Eighteen was the average number of persons answering fire calls, while 10 was the average number of persons answering rescue calls.

Seventy-seven hours were spent on training; 1,123 man-hours were spent on training; and 53 man-hours were spent on teaching Junior Fire Patrol.

completed basic training during the course of the year.

As of May 1, 1986, there were 35 individuals, serving on the Wayne Volunteer Fire Department.

Rootworms up from last year

Rootworm infestation, one of the gravest insect threats to corn in Nebraska, is predicted to be up from last year. The larvae should begin hatching anytime, said Lloyd Andersen, extension entomologist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Cornfields should be checked periodically for the presence of rootworms so that an emergency cultivation treatment can be applied if necessary, said Fred Baxendale, extension entomologist at UNL.

To check for rootworm, a grower should pick a minimum of 10 plants at random, Baxendale said, and the following steps should be followed to discover and identify the worms:

Dig each plant with a 6-inch cube of soil and put it on a plastic sheet.

Separate the soil from the roots and sift through it checking for larvae. The rootworm larvae are white and slender, with brown heads and a dark spot on the top side of the tail. They range from one-eighth to one-half inch in length.

Peel back the outer layer of tissue on the largest roots and look for larvae and signs of damage.

The effect of rootworm infestation depends on the extent of the damage and the growing conditions during the remainder of the season, Baxendale said. If growing conditions are good and moisture is available, regrowth of the root systems will occur and the plants may produce acceptable yields. If growing conditions are unfavorable, yield reductions and/or harvesting difficulties can be substantial.

Emergency treatment at lay-by time can be made by applying cultivation-time materials to the base of the corn and covering it with 1 to 2 inches of soil, Baxendale said.

If broadcast applications are made by aircraft, use Counter, Furadan or Thimet granules and immediately cultivate into rows, Baxendale said.

Hacken away

Favorite employer

I have some nice memories of growing up on a farm. And one of those reasons is because of this employer who supplied me with a room to rest my head, all the food I could eat and provided an 18-year "experience of a lifetime" which I know will never come my way again.

And there still is a lot that I don't know about him.

At an early age, about the time when he carried a can of cigarette tobacco and paper to roll his own smokes, he had me feeding the chickens.

Eventually he quit smoking and chewed gum — seemingly never reluctant to share his last half of candy with his 10 children.

The guy is not overly talkative by a long shot. His method is more direct and to the point — when he spoke, everyone listened.

He always has lots of right answers. He just waits for someone to ask him the question.

Our working relationship was versatile. There were days when both of us had sweat dripping down our bodies in the barn hayloft as we stacked hay, or smelled horrendous after cleaning out a messy calf pen on a 90 degree day.

But some days we would just take it easy, like taking down an electric fence and gathering in the posts, or on a rainy day just sticking around inside the house and taking a snooze until it was time for milking.

Often we'd take a trip to the feed grain elevator and pick up some ingredients for mixing with the grain when grinding, where he would meet all his good friends.

THERE WERE times when he became very angry at me, like when I let some sorted hogs escape while I was off daydreaming about something.

Or the time I played hooky during an evening milking session and he nearly pounded the door off the upstairs room hinges inside the house as he found me goofing around.

Now don't start generalizing that employment on this farm was "fall work and no play."

There were plenty of hours during a Sunday to do some fishing or play some softball, go for a countryside ride in the vehicle and to visit relatives or participate in other things.

The man can work miracles with his tools. He fixed whatever he could and relied on specialists only as a last resort, whether it be electrical wiring, remodeling a living room or sewing up a torn canvas on the old binder.

He used machinery to the fullest extent of its usefulness. A weld here and a weld there and soon he would pull out the machinery and rejuvenate it into production once again.

Yes sir, as a worker under his person, I had corn, oats, hay or silage, and ground ear corn for the cows.

SIDE BY SIDE, we did a lot, like shingled a roof or two, handled a frightened heifer on its first milking, cut and combined oats, butchered hogs or cattle, shelled corn, assembled front-end cultivators, scooped out the cow gutters and lots of other tasks.

One time I got just a bit too close and accidentally stuck him in the wrist with a pitchfork while cleaning out a calf pen. But you know, the guy never lost an ounce of confidence in me and let me clean out three more calf pens.

This boss was really devoted to creating a decent, pleasant and non-disappointing life for his children.

And you know, with all the ag problems and years of breaking even or less in farming, I start to wonder why he keeps it up.

But all it takes to understand it is to see him staring out the window at the evening star-lit sky, with the crickets chirping away, to realize that his love of the land grows as deep as his love for his children.

He is the greatest boss I've ever worked under and one worthy of a thousand thanks.

Happy Fathers Day, Dad.

Considered highway killers

Decorative mailboxes jeopardized

Capitol News
By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

Big Brother government is waging war on mailboxes.

Decorative mailboxes — boxes on creamer cans, boxes on brick foundations, boxes on wagon wheels and plows — are potential highway killers, according to highway safety experts.

And those carefully crafted, individualized boxes that dot the Nebraska landscape may soon be history.

Both the state and federal governments are making plans to eliminate mailbox hazards.

Nebraska Department of Roads staff are drafting rules that will require residents along state highways to replace current mailboxes with approved models.

The new boxes will be plain label — unadorned but safe.

The metal poles of approved mailboxes are designed to bend on impact and the boxes themselves will be attached by two sets of brackets to keep the box from flying off the pole. The boxes will cost about $20.

It's safety over aesthetics. Hit a mailbox attached to a tractor wheel and you're dead. It's as simple as that, according to Byron Warlick, a Roads Department employee who is drafting the new rules.

"These boxes are virtually standing missiles that await unsuspecting motorists," Warlick said.

LESS THAN A handful of Nebraska accidents each year involve mailboxes according to accident reports, Warlick said. But nationally about 700 people a year die as a result of accidents with mailboxes. Warlick first became aware of the mailbox hazard in 1973 when a Wayne driver hit a mailbox support. The box flew through his window and decapitated him.

A Texas produced film shows what can happen when a car traveling at 60 miles-per-hour hits a traditional mailbox. In most cases the box flies off the post, over the hood, and through the vulnerable front windshield.

The mailbox safety issue, which originated in Texas, gained momentum after a Texas woman in a Camaro hit a long row of mailboxes. Said Ray Hogrefe, State Engineer. The impact took the string of mailboxes through the windshield and out the back window and her head with it.

The Department of Roads expects to have the mailbox rules drafted for public hearings this fall. The rules, which must be approved by the governor, would go into effect early next year and would apply only to state highways.

But the federal government will soon require that approved mailboxes be installed on all new road construction projects which use federal funds.

THE STATE HAS also devised a new way to force speeders to pay those fines. Beginning July 1, drivers who do not show up in court at the appointed day or who do not pay the fines for moving traffic violations will have their license suspended.

The old penalty — time in the county jail — was ineffective. Courts and law enforcement people were hesitant to put drivers in jail simply for failure to pay speeding or a stop sign violation tickets. Some areas of the state had so many slackers that law enforcement officers didn't have time to deliver all the bench warrants.

The new state law is simple. Drivers who have not taken care of a ticket (moving violations only, not parking tickets) will receive a warning letter from the state Department of Motor Vehicles. The driver will then have 20 days to pay the fine or have his license suspended.

In order to regain a license the driver must pay the fine plus a $50 reinstatement fee.

The state expects to send out about 40,000 suspension notices within the next year. But state officials expect these numbers to decrease greatly as motorists become aware of the new law and its penalties.

Figures and stats

The administration from the Wayne-Carroll School district recently conducted a survey to find out exactly what the goals and ambitions were of the Class of 1986 in regard to college attendance or other future plans.

There is something good to report here. Sixteen of the 69 graduates surveyed will be attending Wayne State College of Nebraska. That figure, although representing a small percentage of the total enrollment, far outnumbers those graduates planning on attending the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

School board officials look upon this as a turn-around. Fifty-eight percent of the Class of 1986 will be attending a 4-year college or university. Besides the 16 at WSC of Nebraska, five will be attending UN-L and two graduates will attend Nebraska Wesleyan University.

The remaining 17 students each will be attending 17 different schools throughout Nebraska, Iowa, Minnesota, Oklahoma, Missouri and other states.

Those students attending a 2-year college of trade school, which amounts to 22 percent of the total number of graduates, show six will be attending Northeast Technical Community College; five at Southeast Community College in Lincoln; and two at Southeast Community College in Milford.

Ten percent of the total Wayne-Carroll graduates of 1986 have joined the military — the greater majority of them enlisting in the Air Force.

Six of the students have planned full-time employment while one student remains undecided about what the next step after graduation will be.

The state college system should be pleased with these figures compiled by Wayne-Carroll administration concerning future enrollment in four-year colleges.

The survey, when mixed in company with recently finalized statistics showing that the enrollments at the four state colleges over the years have increased, strengthens the convictions of the state college board of trustees.

Centralization of the state college campuses, its educational standards and the image the school creates is becoming an attractive package to the graduating student.

Another survey was passed out to Wayne-Carroll Board members last Tuesday evening spelling out what salary, insurance and contract lengths were being collected by administrators of Class 2-5 school districts across Nebraska for the 1985-86 year.

In Wayne, the superintendent's position (salary-wise) was $43,749; senior high principal, $34,895; junior high principal, $30,854; and elementary principal, $31,487.

How does that compare to the average of the near 50 schools surveyed?

The average superintendent salary was averaged at $43,529.51; high school principal, $35,816; junior high principal, $33,376; and elementary principal, $31,487.

It appears that the positions at Wayne Carroll are in line with what the averages point to, and in at least two of the instances substantially less than the survey average.

Computerization brings changes to dairy industry

June Dairy Month inevitably causes producers to recall dairy farms of the past and to recognize the rapid changes that have taken place in the past 25 years, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln extension dairy specialist said.

Jeff Keown noted that in 1960 there were more than 325,000 dairy cows in Nebraska, producing 1.8 billion pounds of milk. Today, there are 110,000 dairy cows — 66 percent fewer — who produce 25 percent less milk — 1.4 billion pounds.

"The family farm of 1960 in Nebraska boasted an average herd size of 8.4 cows; today the average farm in dairy production has about 48 milking cows," Keown said. Production per cow has increased dramatically, from 7.5 to 17 quarts a day, for a total of 5,620 pounds of milk per cow during the milking period in 1960 to 12,500 pounds per cow now.

What has changed the dairy economy, Keown asked rhetorically.

HE LISTED A number of factors: Dairy farms shared in the general trend toward fewer, larger and more efficient farms growing out of increased land prices, feed and other inputs in the early to mid 70s.

— Better feeding techniques, balanced rations and feeding geared to an individual cow's production potential.

— Better genetics via artificial insemination (AI) greatly altered the genetic makeup of the dairy cattle population. In short, systematic breeding and selection programs have resulted in cows capable of producing much more milk.

The use of computer technology in herd management decisions also has contributed to efficiency of production in a dairy enterprise, Keown said.

"The computerization of Dairy Herd Improvement Association (DHIA) records in the late 1960s created a data base that has been used extensively to alter forever the dairy industry," Keown said.

DAIRY PRODUCERS now collect samples, record yields and through DHIA, obtain accurate component readings on fat and protein, thereby increasing the accuracy of culling and selection, Keown said.

Dairy producers can now select not only on the sire side of the pedigree through AI, Keown said, but also can gain considerably from selection pressure on the female side.

Even with the advances in technology, Keown said he believes dairy producers of today in some key respects have not changed that much over those 25 years ago.

"As I have traveled about the state and visited with many dairy producers, it appears family values have remained the same... producers are just as family-oriented as 25 years ago," the specialist said. Producers continue to value their independence while at the same time recognizing the interdependence necessitated by the lifestyle dairying promotes," he concluded.

Bicycle riders should follow regulations

With the onset of warm summer weather, more and more cyclists are traveling the roadways. Some for exercise, others for cost-efficient means of transportation, and some simply for pleasure. However, AAA of Nebraska reminds cyclists that they are subject to the same traffic laws as automobile drivers.

A bike is not simply something that is "ridden." Many parents allow their children to drive their bicycles in the street without recognizing the responsibilities of cyclists," commented Rose White, safety director for the Nebraska motor club. In 1985, one fatality and 256 injuries were reported to the Department of Motor Vehicles as a result of bicycle accidents involving those under the age of fifteen. "Parents should remember that a bicycle is not a toy but a vehicle governed by traffic laws, and they should make certain their children know and practice these laws before they are allowed to operate their bike on a city street," Mrs. White commented.

In Lincoln, where cycling has become increasingly popular, local police officers issued 56 citations and 421 warning tickets to cyclists violating traffic regulations.

On the other hand, motorists need to recognize the rights of the cyclists. "Injuries reported in 1985 caused by pedalcycle accidents increased 21 percent over the previous year," White stated. The Standard Survey of Nebraska Motor Vehicle Traffic Accidents reports that injuries for all age groups increased from 400 reported in 1984 to 480 reported injuries in 1985. "To prevent these accidents from occurring, motorists need to be alert to cyclists before backing, making turns, opening car doors, or making lane changes to the curb lane," White advised.

BESIDES OBEYING all traffic rules and regulatory signs, cyclists should practice the following safety rules:

- When driving on a roadway, stay as far to the right side of the road as possible, but watch out for parked cars and cars traveling in the same direction.
- If a driver is sitting in a parked car near the curb, or a joining driveway, be ready for evasive action in case the vehicle pulls into your path.

- A bicycle should not carry more people than it was designed to carry. (Never carry riders on handlebars or fenders.)

- Any bicycle in use at night must be equipped with a headlight visible from a distance of 500 feet.

- Nighttime operators must also have a rear mounted, red reflector that can be seen from a distance of 600 feet.

- Riding at night poses a 20 times greater risk of accident than during daytime hours. When riding at night, always be on guard and assume the motorist does not see you. (Wear reflective or bright clothing.)

- When possible, select streets with bike lanes. Do not travel on streets during posted no-parking hours when traffic is at its peak.

- Ride in single file except when overtaking another bicycle, or when riding on paths or roadways set aside for bicycles.
- And keep bike properly maintained.

Here for grandparents' anniversary Movie actress loves visit to Wayne

By LaVon Anderson

Fans of the television soap "Another World" may remember her as the sweet Anjie Perrini. Movie enthusiasts may remember her as the tough Pvt. Gianelli who beats up Goldie Hawn in the movie "Private Benjamin."

Television zealous may remember her guest appearances on shows such as "Baretta," "Starksy and Hutch," "Police Woman" or "Kojak."

But 33-year-old Wayne residents Paul and Marguerite Mines simply know her as Toni — the wife of their grandson, Doug Lane.

TONI, WHO GOES by the stage name Toni Kalem (her maiden name) was in Wayne this past week with her husband to help celebrate his grandparents' 69th wedding anniversary at Wayne Care Centre.

Also in town for the occasion were Doug's parents and Paul and Marguerite's daughter and son-in-law, Retired Col. and Mrs. Harry Bert (Jean) Lane of Sanibel Island, Fla.

Toni, who resides with her husband in Santa Monica, Calif., and keeps another apartment in New York City for when she travels from coast to coast, said she loves it in Wayne:

"I can see why your care centre is filled and why people here live such a long time," smiled Toni. "It's so relaxing, and when you walk down Main Street you know everyone."

"Where I come from, if someone yells hello from a car, you turn and run the other way. I think Wayne is fantastic. I wish I could stay longer."

TONI, WHO HAS also appeared on off Broadway and off off Broadway, grew up in Springfield, N. J., located just a short distance from New York City.

While still in high school, she took a bus into New York City every Saturday where she studied acting at the Herbert Berghof Studios.

"When I was about 14 I knew I wanted to be an actress," smiles Toni, running her fingers through her dark curly hair.

"There was nothing easy about it, but it was the only thing I ever wanted to do so I really never felt like I had a choice."

FOLLOWING HIGH SCHOOL, Toni opted to attend Sarah Lawrence College in Bronxville, N. Y. — an arts college also attended by such famed personalities as Barbara Walters, Jill Clayburgh and Yoko Ono.

"Sarah Lawrence is located close to New York City which is great if you want to pursue an acting career," says Toni.

While at Sarah Lawrence, Toni appeared in several off Broadway and off off Broadway plays while at the same time earning college credits.

"I not only got the acting experience, but I earned credits toward graduation."

IT WAS ALSO at Sarah Lawrence that Toni met her future husband, Paul Douglas Lane, named after his grandfather Paul Mines of Wayne.

Toni and Doug, who have been married approximately 10 years, reside in Santa Monica, located about a half-hour from Hollywood, Calif.

Doug, a Vietnam veteran, teaches writing at Santa Monica College. In addition, he is working on a couple of screen plays.

Last year, he was employed by Aaron Spelling, producer of such shows as "The Love Boat," and wrote for the television show "Magruder and Loud."

"Doug's a great writer," Toni smiles proudly.

FOLLOWING HER graduation from college, Toni performed in theatre for a couple of years before being cast as Anjie Perrini in the soap opera "Another World."

"Anjie was a very sweet kid and in love with Willis, who was always treating her badly." Toni left "Another World" in about 1977 after about two years of playing Anjie.

"I wanted to do other things. Soaps are great training grounds for actresses to learn their trade, but they're also very limiting."

"I knew I wanted to do movies, and as long as I was on "Another World" it was hard to find time to do anything else."

IT WAS AT THAT time that Toni packed her bags and headed for California. There, she landed parts in such television dramas as "Baretta," "Starksy and Hutch," "Police Woman" and "Kojak."

She remained in California for almost a year before returning to New York City for her first movie role in "The Wanderers."

"The Wanderers," which focuses on teenagers in the Bronx in the 1960's, was directed by Philip Kaufman, who later went on to direct "The Right Stuff."

Since that first movie, Toni has gone on to appear in such box office hits as "Private Benjamin," "Silent Rage" and "Paternity."

IN "SILENT RAGE," Toni plays the girlfriend of Chuck Norris. She also plays a girlfriend, opposite Burt Reynolds, in the movie "Paternity," scheduled to air Sunday night, June 15, at 8 p.m. on KTVI Channel 4, Sioux City.

"I've worked with a lot of good looking men," smiles Toni.

"Chuck Norris is extremely nice, just like you'd expect him to be, and Burt Reynolds is extremely easy to work with and always open to suggestions."

Toni also appeared in the movie "Reckless" and in two made-for-television movies opposite Scott Baio — "The Boy Who Drank Too Much" and "Run, Don't Walk."

In "The Boy Who Drank Too Much," Toni and Baio both play teenage alcoholics. In "Run, Don't Walk," they both are cast as paraplegics.

"That was really physically demanding," says Toni, who in the movie was confined to a wheelchair.

To prepare herself for the role, Toni said she worked with the same man who trained John Voight in the movie "Coming Home." She also spent a day in a wheelchair to experience what the handicapped experience.

"I couldn't believe it," says Toni. "I went to the supermarket in a wheelchair and people treated me not only like I was paralyzed, but like I was retarded too."

"I really got an insight into what the handicapped must put up with, and I just couldn't believe it."

TONI SAYS SHE has a movie coming out this fall — "Billy Galvin" — in which she co-stars with Karl Malden.

In "Billy Galvin," Toni plays Malden's daughter-in-law, a bartender up in Boston.

"The movie is a kind of love-hate relationship between a father and his son," says Toni, "and it's a movie the entire family can see."

"There aren't too many of those any more, are there?"

TONI'S LATEST project, one she's working on now, involves writing a screen script for a movie which she will produce with a friend and star in.

"This is something really different for me. I've optioned a book and written a screen script."

Toni explains that optioning a book is like renting a house — "you rent the rights to the book from which to write the script."

The screen play, based on the book "A Slipping Down Life" by Anne Tyler, is a movie about a girl in a small town who falls in love with a local rock star. "She's very shy and he's just dying to get out of that town," explains Toni.

Although the script is finished, Toni said she and her partner are now working to raise money for filming.

"It looks very promising," smiles Toni proudly, adding that filming could begin as early as this winter.

"Actually, if it weren't for the fact that the story is set in the south, Wayne would be a perfect place to shoot the movie."

TONI'S PROFESSION has taken her to many parts of the United States and to other countries, including France, where much of the movie "Private Benjamin" was filmed.

"I love traveling and I love acting," Toni said she especially loves doing movies because of the intense environment and the planning and research which must be done before shooting of the movie even begins.

She adds that she would much rather appear in movies than in the theatre. "I never was an actress who loved to perform live in front of a large audience."

TONI SAID acting is a very competitive business. "You have to want it more than you want anything else, and you have to be very persistent."

An example of Toni's persistence is when she was cast for the role of Pvt. Gianelli in the movie "Private Benjamin."

"I was in the hospital when I received a call from my agent saying that filming of 'Private Benjamin' had begun and there was still one part to cast."

When her agent asked if she could make the auditions, Toni called her sister who brought clothing and helped smuggle the actress out of the hospital.

"I snuck out of the hospital, shoved my hospital bracelet up my sleeve, and went to the audition." Because filming had begun, Toni said she auditioned in a trailer on the film set before sneaking back into the hospital.

The next day Toni received a call back to audition again. This time she received an hour and a half pass from her doctor.

"I went to Warner Brothers and auditioned again," recalls Toni, "and then I went back to the hospital."

On Sunday night, Toni received a call at the hospital telling her she had gotten the role of Pvt. Gianelli and that she was to be on the set the very next day.

"I got out of the hospital on Sunday night and we started shooting on Monday morning."

Toni said the first day's shooting involved marching in the cold and rain. "Needless to say, the beginning of the shoot was extremely long."

"That first night I went home covered in hives."

ALTHOUGH SHE loves her career, Toni said there are very few good roles for women and that is why she wants to begin writing and producing her own movies.

"It's extremely tough, and yet in some ways it's easier for me to be a producer than an actress."

"As an actress you must sell yourself. As a producer, you must sell a project."

"I see producing as a real way to gain control of my career."

BECAUSE TONI'S visit to Wayne last week was so brief (from Tuesday to Friday), she said she'd love to return soon, possibly later in the summer.

"All we're doing this time back is taking walks," she smiles. "It's so incredibly relaxing here."

"In California we have tiny little vegetable gardens. Here, I just can't get over the huge vegetable gardens and the flower gardens. Even the shade trees seem bigger and prettier."

"You're all so incredibly lucky to live in a place like this."

Dehumidifiers may be needed during humid summer
Summer is coming, and in many homes in Nebraska that means it's time to get out the dehumidifier.

The majority of problems with excess moisture or high humidity occur during the summer in basements, closets and other storage areas. Usually, the problem areas are cooler and this leads to condensation.

A dehumidifier uses a refrigeration cycle, just like a refrigerator, freezer, air conditioner or heat pump. The fan draws air over evaporator coils and as the air cools, moisture condenses out and is drained away. Then the area is circulated across the condenser which warms the room air as it leaves the dehumidifier, and is dryer.

BEFORE PURCHASING a dehumidifier, examine your situation first to see if you can control moisture a different way. Limiting the sources of moisture can help.

Vent clothes dryers to the outside and insulate cold water pipes to prevent "sweating." Also, provide more ventilation and repair any structural or drainage problems that are bringing water into the home.

If high humidity is still a problem, then a dehumidifier should be considered.

FOR A DEHUMIDIFIER to work effectively, locate it in a defined room so it isn't exposed to more area than it can handle. Keep the windows and doors closed. The temperature needs to be 70 degrees Fahrenheit or above.

If it is too cool, frost on the evaporator will limit effectiveness and, if the space is too open, the problem of excess moisture will continue. Because air comes in one side and out the other of a dehumidifier, a corner location should be avoided.

There are some option features available on dehumidifiers which may make the use of a dehumidifier more effective and convenient.

Several of the options are:
—Automatic humidistat to cycle unit on and off as needed.
—Automatic shut-off to shut off dehumidifier when water container is full.

—Threaded connection to connect garden hose so water can drain directly into a sink or floor drain.
—Safety switch prevents unit from operating when water container is removed.

SELECT A UNIT with the lowest wattage for the capacity you want. This will result in an energy efficient operation.

Wayne survives Pierce rally

Hausmann, Lueders lift Wayne, 6-4

PIERCE — Jeff Hausmann's hitting and Ted Lueders' pitching enabled Wayne to survive a seventh inning rally by Pierce and claim a thrilling 6-4 victory in Junior Legion baseball action here Thursday night.

Wayne entered the seventh inning with a comfortable 5-0 advantage and cushioned its lead when Scott Baker clubbed his second double and scored on Robbie Gamble's clutch two-out RBI single.

But Pierce rallied for four runs in its last at bat to turn a laughter into a thriller.

Lueders, who entered the final inning with a one-hit shutout, retired the first two batters he faced in the seventh. However, Pierce used four walks, a Wayne error and a single to pull within one and the hosts still had two men on base.

But Lueders came through when he needed to most by striking out Pierce's clean-up batter to end the game.

Hausmann provided Wayne with a 3-0 lead in the third when he cracked a three run homer. Hausmann's home run was his fourth of the season and he is currently hitting .468 on the year, going 15-for-32.

Dan Gross started things for Wayne in the third when he stroked a one-out single. Shannon Dorcay followed by walking and Hausmann then provided the visitors with the three-run shot.

Wayne added two more markers in the fourth. Lueders and Gross reached base on consecutive fielder's choices and Dorcay loaded the bases when he was hit with a pitch. Don Larsen then plated Lueders and Gross with a clutch two-out single.

Gross, Hausmann and Baker all totaled two hits apiece for Wayne, while Larsen, Scott Nichols and Gamble finished with one hit each.

In addition to only allowing two hits, Lueders struck out eight, including the side in the fifth inning. He did give up six walks, but four of those didn't occur until the seventh inning.

"Lueders really threw well. He ran into a little trouble in the seventh, but we came through when we needed to," Wayne's head coach Hank Overin said.

Wayne doesn't play again until Monday when Ponca travels to town for a Midget/Junior Legion doubleheader, beginning at 6:15 p.m.

Wayne was originally scheduled to play Sioux City Heelan Friday night and host Columbus Sunday afternoon, but both doubleheaders have been cancelled.

Heelan postpones, forever?

Wayne's Junior Legion baseball doubleheader against Sioux City Heelan has been cancelled, and so have next year's games against the Crusaders.

Wayne head coach Hank Overin said Friday morning that Heelan's head coach called his house and informed him that Friday's game would be cancelled, and that he replaced Wayne on the 1987 baseball schedule with another school.

Overin said he was disappointed the games were cancelled, especially this Friday's, because he juggled his pitching during the week so he could save his ace Jeff Hausmann and Brent Pick to throw against the Crusaders.

"After what happened last week, I expected him (Heelan's coach) to throw his two studs against us on Friday, so I saved Hausmann and Pick so they could throw, too," he said. "That's what makes baseball fun — playing tough games."

Last week, Wayne defeated Heelan 6-3 in a heated contest in which Heelan's head coach and shortstop were both ejected. Pick was the winning pitcher in that game.

Wayne's Midgets drop heart-breaking 6-5 loss

PIERCE — Wayne's Midgets dropped a heart-breaking 6-5 decision here Thursday night when Host Pierce rallied for three runs in the bottom of the sixth inning.

Wayne held a 5-3 advantage after 6½ innings, but Pierce used two singles, a double and two "back-breaking" walks for three markers in the bottom of the sixth.

Wayne threatened to tie the game in the top of the seventh. Scott Pokett drew a one-out walk and moved into scoring position when Jarrad Wood followed with a single. But Pierce recorded the final two outs and hung on for the victory.

Pierce opened a 1-0 lead after the sacrifice fly.

Lutt scored Wayne's fifth and final run on a series of passed balls after he reached on a fielder's choice.

Schmitt, Hausmann, Wood, Baier and Frye all totaled one hit apiece for Wayne.

Lutt, only 14-years-old, hurled a six-hitter and struck out six. He also allowed five walks.

"Lutt really pitched a good game. It was a shame he lost," Wayne head coach Hank Overin said. "But he's young and he should be a good one in the future."

Wayne plays again Monday when Ponca travels to town for a 6:15 p.m. game. The game that was scheduled for earlier in the week against Laurel has been cancelled.

WOW!
What a 'cat'ch

EIGHT-YEAR-OLD Robyn Sebade of rural Wayne caught this 9 lb., 27-inch catfish at Izaak Walton Lake Wednesday night.

Robyn hooked the fish, but her father, Ron, was forced to take the pole because, as Robyn puts it, "The fish started pulling me into the water. He (the fish) would've taken me skiing if I would've hung on to the pole much longer." Mr. Sebade said that initially they thought they caught a muskrat and possibly a muskrat. But after a 15 minute struggle, they finally saw the fish surface.

The Sebade's said they landed a few small bluegill before hooking into the catfish. Rhonda Sebade, Robyn's mother, said the fish was caught with a night crawler.

Wakefield town team tops .500 mark with 9-6 win

WAKEFIELD — Wakefield's town team slipped over the .500 mark and moved into a fourth place tie with North Bend by downing Valley 9-6 here Thursday night.

Wakefield improved to 4-3 in the Dodge County Baseball League with Thursday's victory. North Bend is also 4-3 in league play and both teams meet each other this Sunday at North Bend.

Joel Ankeny of Wayne was the winning pitcher Thursday night. He hurled 8½ innings before Mark Starzl came in to record the game's final out on one pitch. Rob Eaton, Scott Miller and Brian Soderberg all collected two hits apiece for Wakefield.

Wakefield's next home game is Thursday when Scribner invades Eaton Field at 8:15 p.m.

Tournament postponed

The 18-and-under softball tournament scheduled for Saturday and Sunday at Overin Park in Wayne has been postponed until next week because of wet grounds.

Several area teams, including Wayne, Wakefield and Allen were scheduled to play in the tournament, but according to Wayne head coach and the tournament's director Marilyn Strate, the tournament's format could change.

"Homer might not play next week, but Dakota City might. We had the brackets for this week figured out, but since it's being moved back a week that could all change because some other teams might drop out and some others might decide to come and play," Strate said.

Today's Ideas Can Become Tomorrow's Opportunities

Raindrops on a pond generate ripples. An idea generates opportunities in much the same way.

As a result of a recent court decision, Nebraskans have $15 million to invest in energy efficiency programs that will benefit the state for years, to come by reducing our dependence on imported energy and keeping our dollars close to home for local investment and job creation.

My question to you is, what can we invest that money in to create the maximum number of opportunities for Nebraskans? I believe a state-wide energy loan program would be an excellent investment. Now I need your ideas.

Please attend one of the public meetings in your area, fill out the coupon below and return it to me, or pick up an Expon Booklet at your local County Extension Office.
