Carroll schedules Centennial events

Carroll's three-day centennial celebration in mid-July will feature a wide variety of memorable events for the youth and adults.

The celebration is slated to begin on Friday, July 18, beginning at 1 p.m. with a 4-H Steer and Hefler Show in the Saddle Club Arena.

Opening centennial celebration ceremonies will begin that night at 5:30 in the Village Park, with opening ceremonies, crowning of centennial royalty and the announcement of the beard contest winners.

Also in the Village Park, from 6 to 8 p.m. on Friday, a bar-b-que will take place. Charges for the dinner are $3 for adults, $1.50 for those 10 years of age and under. Those that are age four and under receive their dinner free.

That same day at 6 p.m., men's and women's waterfights will take place in the streets by the city park, with area volunteer fire departments competing.

The Centennial Pageant "A Tribute to Our Town" will be performed by community talent, also at the city park. Softball games will follow the pageant, to be played around 9 p.m. at Memorial Park.

SATURDAY IS loaded with events, beginning at 8 a.m. with the Centennial Fun Run starting in the Village Park. From 8 to 10 that morning, there will be an omelet feed in the auditorium, with prices equal to what was charged for the previous evening's bar-b-que dinner.

Craft tables will be on display in the Village Garage.

Included in the Saturday morning and afternoon schedule of events is the opening of the Ed Leicy Leather Shop and Antiques Open House from 9 to 11 a.m. and 2 to 5 p.m. The Methodist Church will also conduct an open house during the same hours.

The major event on Saturday morning deals with two parades — the Kiddies Parade (with line-up to be at the school and the route down Carroll's Main Street), starting at 10 a.m., and the Grand Parade at 11 a.m., with the lining up to be at the Dennis Rohde farm with the route again down Main Street.

Kids games and concessions will take place following the parade, featuring a kiddie tractor pull, toddler tournament and pony rides.

Entertainment following the Grand Parade will be by the fire hall in the Village Park, feature Roger Welsch, humorist, with the program of "Laughter on the Pioneer Plains"; the Plainview Clown Band; Lester Bethune with his accordian and clarinet music; Ralph Olson & Ray Peterson, accordian and violin music; and Old Time Fiddlers with Square Dance demonstration.

THE CARROLL Alumni Social Hour at the auditorium will take place at 4:30 p.m. Saturday, followed by the Carroll Alumni Banquet at 5:30 p.m.; and the Alumni and Guests Dance at the auditorium with music by All Knights beginning at 9 p.m.

From 9 p.m. to 1 a.m., there will be a street dance on the north end of Main Street, with admission at $2 per person. The music will be provided by Red Eye.

On Sunday, July 20, worship service will take place at St. Paul's Lutheran Church, starting at 8:30 a.m. From 9 to 10 a.m., the community church service will take place in the Village Park.

After the church service will be a pancake feed in the auditorium from 10 a.m. to noon, with a charge similar to the omelet feed and bar-b-que dinner.

The final event closing out the centennial celebration will be the Pro-Stock Tractor Pull, beginning at 2 p.m., at the Dennis Rohde Farm.

Centennial store items available during the three-day event will be books, bumper stickers, mugs/steins and centennial items, and quilt raffle tickets.

Any questions as to time and place of events may be answered by calling 585-4433 prior to the Centennial or stopping by the Centennial Store.

Real vault used to bury memorabilia

The Carrolliners 4-H Club is sponsoring the planting of an underground "Time Capsule" in commemoration of the Carroll centennial, and they are using a real vault in the process.

Steve Schumacher is donating the 20-inch by 57-inch self-sealing vault and the club members are inviting anyone in Carroll and surrounding area to submit articles for the box. Plans are that it will be dug up in 50 years.

Ideas for articles that may be put in the vault are paper clippings of something that happened this year, wedding announcements, birth of babies, a list of organizations with member's names, business establishments and churches are also welcome to contribute.

Contributors may contact club leader Mrs. Dean Junck or take items to the Carroll bank by July 11.

The capsule will be buried during opening ceremonies for the Carroll centennial that is planned for Friday evening, July 18.

Wood tractors a Gunnarson hobby: constructs antique, modern models

by Chuck Hackenmiller

Brad Gunnarson, as a young farm lad, can never get enough of tractors. During this past week he has spent many hours on the tractor seat, cultivating in the fields on his father's farm located eight miles north and a mile west of Wayne. Working with tractors comes naturally for him.

And making tractors is becoming even more of a "natural" to Brad, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Gunnarson.

Brad, a 16-year-old junior at Laurel-Concord High School, began making wooden scaled-down tractors two years ago. At that time, it was just for fun.

It's still fun for him. But it also has become a hobby, which was inspired by model tractor makers in surrounding communities, that has given him some rewards financially.

So far, he's made 18 tractor models. And so far he's sold five of them.

Most of the models are from patterns that individuals cannot go to a store today and buy. Manuals and books, dating back to the early tractors, capture Brad's eyes as he visualizes creating the replica of the machines that appeared new on the agriculture horizon long ago.

HE USES his own formula to scale down the tractors to a size he feels comfortable with, and the end result is a replica that is as true to likeness as possible to the original.

And then for about two weeks he occupies the garage and goes to work, using primarily the band saw, wood lathe and "lots of sandpaper" to create his masterpiece.

The wood in his product is usually maple, gained from a saw mill in Ponca.

His products, one time shown at a toy show in Randolph, are mostly for grown-ups to also display. The model tractors' unique design and workmanship qualifies the end product as more than just a toy or a play thing for young children.

It is more of a piece of art.

When he is not making tractors, he is repairing metal toy tractors — sandblasting them when the need arises and order parts for the broken toy. He has a wide assortment of tractors which he has collected, lined up on shelves in one of the rooms at his home.

In the future, Brad said he would like to build models of old cars and trucks.

But for now, he continues pursuing his first hobby — that of making, collecting and repairing farm tractors.

Minor problem areas delay court opening

by Chuck Hackenmiller

The six new tennis courts on the east section of the Wayne State College of Nebraska campus will not be open to the public for at least another week or so, according to Wayne State College President Thomas Coffey.

A committee composed of members of the board of trustees and board office of the Nebraska State Colleges, WSC administration, and architect and engineer consultants reviewed the conditions of the tennis courts on Friday.

Purpose of the inspection was to decide whether to approve substantial completion of the tennis court project.

The substantial completion was approved, according to Coffey. However, the position of the administration at the college, he said, is that "we are being overly cautious and protective."

Coffey said there are minor areas that need to be addressed and placed on a "punch list" — a list of minor problem areas which authorities agree should be addressed.

"We will not open those courts until the punch list is addressed," Coffey mentioned.

"With the exception of the punch list, these tennis courts are superbly constructed and we are proud of the job done on them," he added.

Coffey said he was particularly pleased with the vigil and thoroughness of John Struve, WSC budget and finance director, who was instrumental in the development of the tennis courts, and to division heads at the college (Ron Jones and Frank Teach and others) who assisted in "making such a fine product."

"The point we are stressing is that we are being overly cautious," he said.

Coffey said he feels the punch list could be addressed sometime next week, and the determination of when the tennis courts could be open will likely be made then.

It was determined, after consulting with some experts on tennis court construction, that the minor cracks, mostly on the two center courts, would not become a major problem.

Some other areas of concern which were addressed by the inspection committee were the rebound boards presently constructed on the courts, some of the areas which need caulking replaced or added and keeping the wind screens in place.

Once the listed six tennis courts open to the public, efforts will be maintained to keep the courts in top condition. The nets on each of the courts have already been installed.

A COMMITTEE inspection of the tennis courts took place on Friday. Opening of the courts has been delayed.

The annual workshop, attended by approximately 250 county officials, is part of a continuing leadership development series sponsored by the Nebraska Association of County Officials. Its purpose is to increase the awareness of county officeholders as to their responsibilities as elected public officials.

Workshop participants met with representatives of 11 state offices to review changes in laws which resulted from the 1986 session of the Nebraska Legislature. Participants also met for a series of group discussions which allowed officeholders from various regions of the state to visit about methods they have found to more effectively perform their respective duties.

THE CITIES of Madison, Randolph, South Sioux City and Wakefield lost their suit against Western Area Power Authority (WAPA) that would have meant low-cost hydroelectric power for the four.

DOUG Hefner shot a hole in one at the Rolling Hills Golf Course at Wausa on June 17. Hefner's feat occurred in league play on the 150 yard number four hole. He was using a number eight iron.

PLAINVIEW residents last week were putting polishing touches on plans for a gigantic eight-day centennial celebration which started June 28 and continues through July 5.

THE BOARD of Education District Two at Pierce has offered secondary Principal Phil Fahlk a contract for the position of Superintendent of Schools. Fahlk has been serving as acting superintendent since the departure of former superintendent Ken Jensen on June 17.

MIDWAY carnival thrills promise to highlight the Wisner Junior Livestock Show for the first time in nine years as the show gets underway on Friday, July 11.

Chicken Show help needed

Residents of the Wayne area are invited to help the Chicken Show Committee with various kinds of support.

The July 12 Wayne Chicken Show has many repeat and new events in store. In addition to the free omelet feed, this year's chicken show will feature a chicken feed starting at 3 p.m.

This year, the chicken feed will be served by local businesses, Popo's II and the El Toro.

Tickets are on sale now at those locations ($3.75 for adults and $3.25 for children). They will be priced slightly higher during the day of the Chicken Show.

Much of the Chicken Show funding is expected to come from the chicken feed, along with the sale of chicken shirts, and the public is encouraged to support the Chicken Show with early purchases.

In addition, extra chicken show flyers — the paper kind — can be picked up at Office Connection by anyone who is going out of town and is willing to help pass on Chicken Show information.

Local organizations, including the Wayne Kiwanis, the Toastmasters and the Eagles and Eagles Auxiliary are already committed to helping "putte" off, and more organizations are welcome to volunteer to help with any other aspects of the show.

Call Gail Korn at 375-3615 if volunteers are available.

The Chicken Show Committee is anticipating a large show of fancy and bantam chickens this year, in response to their giving baby chicks to children in Wayne County.

An additional event in this year's Chicken Show will be the "Olympics," a series of semi-athletic events for factories, organizations, businesses and other groups of people.

For more information about the Chicken Show, address inquiries to the Chicken Show at P.O. Box 162 in Wayne.

'hacken' away

by Chuck Hackenmiller

It was my three-year-old son's first experience camping in the great outdoors.

His mother said: "All fathers should have a camp-out with their son."

Son said: "Right dad."

I grumbled and said: "It's too hot to go out camping."

But my young son threatened to bury his head in the pillow and never come out again... I obliged him, grudgingly.

So prior to it getting dark last Saturday night, my son and I nailed down the bug tent — a small pup tent that sleeps; at the most three people without the sides bulging out.

Son was never so excited. He talked about the big camp-out during our evening meal. "The sun go down yet?" he asked, constantly quizzing us with that question every 15 minutes. He wanted to go to sleep at 6:30 p.m. in that tent.

That's surprising, since in an air conditioned house, he becomes riled if he has to go to bed by 10:30.

By 9:30 p.m., my son and I ventured into the tent as darkness started coming over the backyard lawn. We tied the flaps, zipped the bug screen and, on pillows and blankets (a mild way to rough it out) rested our heads.

WHAT HE WANTED to do first was look for the stars. He saw one and was satisfied. Then he asked me to tell him a story because "that's what people do on camp-outs is tell stories."

Three stories later, he rolled over on his side. Peace and tranquility entered the campgrounds. But it was short-lived.

"What's that noise, dad?"

It sounded like crickets, and that's what I told him.

"Not that noise, dad. This is a growling noise. Goos grrrrrrr." A car had raced through the alley near the house, which was what my son probably heard. After all, the only animals in our yard were wild rabbits, but they never roar.

Every once in a while we get these cats making romantic noises (similar to a screaming baby), but that's another story.

"It's nothing son, go to sleep."

At that moment, a noise came from above the tent. We were camped right underneath a tree.

"What's that, dad?"

"Some bird watching us so that the tent won't blow away," I answered. "Now go to sleep."

"Daddy, I want to get into the house and sleep in my own bed."

Somewhat, I had to convince my son there was nothing to be afraid of in the great outdoors.

"Just close your eyes and the noise will go away," I told him.

He finally did fall sound asleep. Then, I thought I heard snoring. But it was only his snoring in my right ear as he huddled close to his daddy.

By 10:30 p.m., I dozed off into dreamland.

I don't really know what woke me. Maybe it was the fact the tent was starting to rise off the ground or that tree branches were hitting the tent.

WINDS, BLOWING at a pace of over 70 miles per hour or more, roared above the tent. My first fear was that we were about to be sucked up by a tornado. We had to evacuate into the house basement fast.

Son was sleeping yet. I nudged him several times. He wouldn't wake-up. When he did awaken, he said he didn't want to go back into the house.

Of all the times to be bold. Then, panic...

The zipper on the bug screen was stuck on the little pup tent and I couldn't budge it. After working back and forth on the zipper, it moved and from there it unzipped.

My son went back to sleep on me.

I grabbed his waist and headed for the basement of the house. Upon arriving there, my son went back upstairs to his bed and, with shaking knees I go back outside to bring in the flashlight, pillows and blankets.

The next day, I see the damage that wind caused and I say to myself: "Golly, we were camping out in this storm!"

But my son says: "Dad, let's go camping again. It's fun."

Ella Wilkinson Peattie, American author and literary critic Ella Wilkinson Peattie (1862-1935) was also a well-known Omaha newspaperwoman during the late 1880s and early 1900s. Her journalist husband, Robert Burns Peattie, was managing editor of the Omaha Herald and later of the World-Herald after purchase of the Herald by publisher Gilbert M. Hitchcock. Mrs. Peattie recalled in 1923 that "during the eight years she worked on the World-Herald, she filled every kind of assignment that a designing city editor would think of, and...traveled Nebraska from end to end on all kinds of news adventures" (Omaha World-Herald, February 17, 1923, on file at the Nebraska State Historical Society). The Peatties left Omaha in 1896 and moved to Chicago, where both worked for the Chicago Tribune.

Ella Wilkinson Peattie was born January 15, 1862, in Kalamazoo, Michigan. She seems to have had an uneventful childhood, recalling in 1923, "I grew up in a sad little Michigan town without even a pond or a hill. My father built a small frame house and we lived there. Later he erected a great brick mansion. It was never finished..."

Something like this happened again and again... At 13 I left school to help my mother and we drugged in the kitchen of the many fine, badly heated, half-finished houses in which we lived" (Sunday World-Herald, February 11, 1923). She eventually moved to Chicago and in 1883 married newspaperman Robert Burns Peattie. Peattie had joined the staff of the Chicago Times in 1880 and then moved to the Chicago Herald. His wife began work for the Chicago Tribune in 1884. Four years later the couple moved to Omaha, where Robert became managing editor of the Daily Herald, merged with the Daily World in 1889 to form the Omaha Daily World-Herald. Both Robert and Ella were later employed by the World-Herald.

Mrs. Peattie later recalled their early years in Illinois: "In Chicago...we were poor and warm and well-fed and happy...The babies began to come and we had endless fun with them... (The couple had four children: Edward, Barbara, Roderick, and Donald)... In Chicago I got my first glimpse of the world, for I was sent here and there all over the country after I began my newspaper work" (Sunday World-Herald, February 11, 1923).

Mrs. Peattie during her Omaha years was active in civic organizations and social life and helped organize Nebraska's first circulating library. Mrs. Peattie later recalled, "When I went to Omaha I was intensely interested. There was something about the place that appealed to me. There was a chance to do many formative things... I tried... to do some of that work" (Sunday World-Herald, February 11, 1923).

In 1896 the Peatties left Omaha. Robert went to the Denver Sun and the Council Bluffs Nonpareil before returning to newspaper work in Chicago. Both he and his wife worked for the Chicago Tribune, Ella serving as a Tribune literary critic from 1901-1917. In 1917 the Peatties moved to New York, where Robert served as Chicago Tribune correspondent until his retirement in 1920. He died in 1930.

Mrs. Peattie gained national recognition not only for her newspaper work but for her short stories, novels, poetry, and plays. When she returned to Omaha in February of 1923 as guest speaker for an Omaha women's club, she was the center of a round of social activity featuring readings of her literary works. By that time she and her husband were living at "Dunwadrin," a Tryon, North Carolina home which Mrs. Peattie described to her Omaha friends as "a little house and a big garden." She continued her writing until her death in July of 1935.—Pat Gaster, Nebraska State Historical Society.

Boy's State

AN ARTICLE on the Editorial Page of the June 9 Wayne Herald brought back a flood of memories for Wayne resident Roy Coryell. The "Out of Old Nebraska" article told about the first Cornhusker Boys' State held in Nebraska in June 1938. It was the first session of which was to become an annual event, and Coryell was among the 254 boys attending that first year. Coryell also had the honor of serving as campaign manager for the very first governor of Boys' State, William Dafeo of Tecumseh. "Bill was in the top bunk and I was in the lower," recalls Roy. "I told him that if he was crazy enough to run for governor, I would be his campaign manager." After successfully defeating his opponent, Robert Schwartz of Broken Bow, Dafeo appointed Coryell to serve as State Sheriff. In the photo, Coryell is shown being greeted as State Sheriff by then Nebraska Governor Robert Cochran. "The whole thing was a super interesting experience," recalls Roy, "and I was just charmed as the devil that I was chosen to go."

Tax reform a historic time

by Senator Bill Bradley of New Jersey

Not since 1919, when the Congress passed our first income tax of the 20th Century, has there been a bill of such sweep and significance as the legislation before the Senate.

Taxes influence some of our most important personal choices: where to live; whether to buy a house; how much to save; how hard to work; what firm to take our pay.

Taxes influence the companies that Americans work for; the mix of goods and services companies produce; where the new jobs are created; what kinds of investments get made; which firms flourish, and which industries falter.

Taxes also shape the way Americans feel about their society; whether they believe its laws are just; whether government is sensitive to their needs and aspirations; whether the men and women who represent them care about the general interest, or whether they serve the narrow, special interests that too often seem to have wrested control of our political life.

Tax reform is not just about money. It's about personal dignity and individual security. It's about being in control of our lives while having a government that is responsive to us. Most important, tax reform is about hope: hope for poor people striving to give their families the chance of a better life; hope for the elderly, struggling to get by on fixed incomes; hope for young couples priced out of the American dream of home ownership; hope for the worker who's lost his job and whose future depends on a buoyant economy.

Paying taxes shouldn't be something people do on an optional basis. Said the great Supreme Court Justice, Oliver Wendell Holmes: "Taxes are the price we pay for a civilized society." And everyone should pay his or her fair share. That's the premise of this tax reform. Fairness. No more opting out of our responsibility as a citizen of America just because you've got a high-priced lawyer to milk the loopholes.

Closing those loopholes, as this legislation does, allows tax rate cuts for everybody. Under the Committee bill, 4 out of 5 Americans pay no more than 15 percent in taxes. No one's rate will exceed 27 percent. Everyone will be better off because they'll get to keep more of what they earn — keep it to save or to spend as they please on what they want — not what the tax code dictates.

THE SPECIAL interests don't like or want lower rates. The special interests flourish in a world where tax rates are 70 or 80 or 90 percent, with full deductibility of their thing — whether it's oil wells, office buildings, race horses or avocado groves. With their army of tax advisors, the special interests exploit the loopholes to shelter their big incomes and end up paying zero taxes. But Mr. and Mrs. Middle-Income American are stuck with the high rates.

It's time for us to look at the special interests and say get on board; be part of the community, be a part of America, pay some tax. It is time to remove the web of suspension and inequity that covers our tax system.

Who are the people who pay for our "civilized society"?

First, nearly 85 percent of all American taxpayers make $40,000 or less a year. The median income in America is $23,450. These are the real middle class, the backbone of America. And what is especially worrisome is that their numbers are shrinking. In 1978, 52 percent of Americans were part of the middle class. In 1986, only 44 percent of them are. Two-thirds of those leaving the middle class saw their income status decline; only one-third saw it rise.

Second, we should know that over the last 10 years, the taxes Americans pay have increased faster than the wages they earn. This means that in 1986, the real after-tax income is lower than what it was in 1975.

Third, we should know that the number of people living in poverty has risen from 9 percent in the 1970s to 14 percent today, and many of the poor pay more in tax than some millionaires.

We have an obligation to reverse this trend. America has always been the land of opportunity. Our commitment to equality of opportunity is the bedrock of our democracy. The optimistic faith of the American is that if you work hard, you will get ahead. Opportunity, optimism, democracy.

That's what tax reform is all about. That's what the bill embodies.

THE BILL TAKES 6 million low-income people off the tax rolls. For these taxpayers, reform means work instead of welfare, dignity instead of despair.

This bill lowers middle-income families' tax rates and it also protects those deductions such as mortgage and property taxes that most of them utilize. The result is that it also cuts their taxes. And it says to these families: you keep more of the money you earn. And if you get a better job, make more money, you'll still only pay 15% in taxes. Not only that, you'll decide how to spend that money.

This bill is the best thing middle-income Americans have seen in a generation. It's infinitely better than current law. And the reason we fought to give the backbone of America, the middle class, a break is simply because they deserve it.

Tax reform is about opportunity and optimism. It is about economic growth as well as fairness. Opportunity and optimism thrive on growth, on recognizing that embracing change is the key to America's future. This means a tax system that facilitates change and rewards innovation, not one that enshrines the status quo, subsidizes the politically powerful and shortchanges America's potential for growth.

The underlying issues of tax reform have been with us since the beginning of America. Some people say that our founding fathers saw the general interest as a composite of special interests shaped by the institutions of our democracy to limit excess and to assure stability. In fact, though, from the very beginning, our founding fathers reserved their highest praise for those who acted in the general interest. They believed that public virtue meant service to the community, going beyond the narrow interest of faction to the general interest of the community. Tax reform is the call to return to the values of our first leaders, and that is why it can't be dismissed without simultaneously diminishing our heritage.

It is the right policy bridge between a past we're proud of and a future we're unsure about. It is a choice about ourselves.

Grand band

It is surprising what some good news will do for someone. Gary Davis, director of bands at Wayne State College of Nebraska, certainly knows the benefits that come along with good news.

The WSC band will be performing at halftime of the Nov. 15 Wayne State vs University of Minnesota-Morris football game in the Metrodome. The next day, the marching band hits the artificial turf again to be the halftime entertainment of the Minnesota Vikings-New York Giants NFL football game.

The weekend trip evolved from WSC's football team being invited to play in the all-day Metrodome Classic, a five-football-game event made up of college teams from Minnesota and nearby states.

When the band decided to take its annual trip to the Metrodome Classic, it was discovered the Vikings were at home the next day. The band applied to perform at the nationally-televised game and was accepted in May.

So they perform twice at the Metrodome. That's good news.

Since then, Davis said he has seen increased awareness of his band. That is even greater news.

Davis hopes to take a group of 120 to Minneapolis, counting the bandsmen, flag corps personnel, drum majors and chaperones. That's a jump from last year when the band numbered around 92 members.

It appears that the trip evidently encouraged more people to join the band.

"In the community, people have come up to me and said, 'I'm really proud of what the band is doing.' To Davis, that is special.

Davis, who recruits students for his band everyday, said he has had a few people register for the band that he's never met before — he's not even sure what instruments they play. He'll be recruiting with practices similar to how athletic coaches recruit — with letters and phone calling — until the first week of school.

The NFL game will be a first for the Wayne State band, which has marched in parades and at football games for many years.

"There are lots of Division I (big university) bands that never get to perform at pro games. And we're hoping to go to more pro games," Davis mentioned.

The "much to talk about" trip to Minneapolis is a fine indication of how good a band tradition is at Wayne State, according to Davis, who also cited the work Ray Kelton did as band director from 1950 to 1984.

Not only will the band be representing Wayne State College of Nebraska. But for the entire state of Nebraska as well. And that's a lot to be proud of.

Basic needs of families

One purpose of the family is to supply the needs of each individual. This means to create and maintain a good setting for the family members in which to promote their physical, mental, emotional and social development.

We all have four basic needs that must be met. These are known as the building blocks or steps in development.

The first one is affection. Affection is a product of family living. Marital and family happiness depends on the love that family members have for each other. Parents and children grow best in a climate of mutual affection that assures optimal development.

A sense of affection builds security for the family members. All family members must be allowed to grow and develop each in his or her own way and own pace, secure in the knowledge that the family loves them. Affection gives security.

THE SECOND STEP is respect. If individual family members feel they are accepted and respected, they will have a feeling of self-respect. We must help each person have self-respect, so he or she learns to respect others.

Respect others by listening carefully. Have you stopped lately and talked to a child and really listened to his or her story, without looking at your watch, or thinking of the meal on the stove, or the unmade beds, or the club meetings you are late to? Respect others by thinking of them.

It may take constant concentration and a lot of effort to be courteous at all times in the home, but nothing teaches as well as example. If you show respect — your children learn to respect themselves and others. Respect encourages self-respect.

HELP IS THE third building block. The family furnishes the assistance that makes it possible for all of us to develop our abilities and skills. Sometimes the help given may be just a word of encouragement. Sometimes it's the extra hand you give to get a job done. Sometimes it's the extra money you furnish for the extra course, lesson, trip or learning opportunity.

Lend a helping hand — this builds satisfaction and a sense of worth in each individual. Everyone needs help at sometime in life. Help stimulates abilities. Approval. Family association continues throughout life in most cases and family approval is important to people.

Lifelong patterns of behavior, values, goals and attitudes are learned in the family as children develop. A sense of what is right is built when approval is given to family members.

We all seek approval — in the home, at work and in the community. Approval encourages values.

4-H home economics contest is planned

Wayne County 4-H'ers are encouraged to participate in the 4-H Home Economics Contest July 2.

The top finishers in the senior division will also qualify for state competition during the Nebraska State Fair.

THE HOME Economics Contest is based on a series of questions about youth oriented situations.

Opposing pitchers having difficult time getting Wayne's Jeff Hausmann out this season

By John Prather
Sports Editor

"Yea," Wayne head baseball coach Hank Overin says as he returns to the dugout after Jeff Hausmann slugged a three-run homer to supply his team with a 3-0 lead, "I hope they never figure out how to pitch to 'Howey'."

The "they" Overin is referring to are opposing pitchers, and so far this year, "they" haven't found a way to get the burly power-hitter out.

Hausmann has three hits in his last 12 official at bats, and although a .250 batting average is acceptable for most players, it's considered a mild slump for someone who was hitting .467 with 15 hits in his first 32 tries.

Hausmann is currently hitting .409 (18-44) with four home runs and three doubles. But statistics don't seem to play an important part in Howey's game.

"Ah, I don't pay any attention to that stuff," he said when asked if he thought .409 sounded accurate. "Those kind of things don't mean that much."

Hausmann sounds reserved, he is, even when he's playing.

On June 6 against Sioux City Heelan, Hausmann was nicked in the helmet by a pitch. Most players would've tried to convince the umpire that they should be awarded first base. But instead, Hausmann simply dug back into the batter's box and a few pitches later, calmly drove a T.J. Sitzman (who is considered one of the better pitchers in Northwest Iowa this summer) fastball some 400 feet to dead-center field for a three-run homer.

"The pitch ticked me in the back of the helmet," Hausmann later said. "But I didn't say anything because it barely hit me."

athlete of the month

Despite his baseball prowess, Hausmann is anything but a one-sport athlete. This past fall, he was named Wayne High School's offensive lineman of the year and because of his 19 solo and 63 assisted tackles, he was selected to the Wayne Herald's All-Area Football team as a defensive lineman.

Lionie Ehrhard, Wayne's head football coach, was amazed at Hausmann's consistency, both defensively and offensively, and said, "that was the first time in my coaching career I had a defensive lineman lead the team in tackles. That's a significant contribution, and Jeff has the ability to play football beyond high school."

Hausmann also stood out on the basketball court, and it wasn't only because of his 6-3, 210-pound frame.

Hausmann started most of the season for the 15-6 state qualifying Blue Devils, averaging just under 10 points and seven rebounds a game.

He was selected to the Wayne Herald's Special Mention All-Area Basketball Team, but was noted most for his defensive skills and made the first annual Wayne Herald's All-Area defensive squad.

Bob Uhing, Wayne's head basketball coach, who demands excellent defense from his players, said, "Jeff always guarded the opposing team's best player. He had good anticipation and did a good job on the defensive boards. He also did a good job of forcing an offensive player into playing with his weaknesses."

Hausmann's football and basketball abilities didn't go unnoticed as several smaller colleges attempted to recruit him to their schools. But Hausmann turned down all the scholarship offers to attend the University of Nebraska at Lincoln.

John Sanders, Nebraska's head baseball coach, has talked with Hausmann and wants him to walk on next year.

Sanders appears to be primarily interested in Hausmann as a pitcher, and although Howey doesn't take much stock in statistics, his pitching numbers speak for themselves.

In 27 1/2 innings pitched this year, Hausmann has fanned 58 batters and allowed only 11 (earned or unearned) runs. He is currently 3-2, and last year finished 10-2 with 98 strike outs.

Hausmann has the ability to totally dominate games while on the mound, and a perfect example of that was during the 15th annual Chuck Ellis Memorial Baseball Tournament in late May.

Hausmann one-hit Coleridge in the opening round and followed with another one-hitter in the championship game against Fremont. In 13 innings during the tournament, Hausmann struck out 34 batters and allowed only one run, which was unearned. To top it off, he was named the tourney's MVP for the second straight year.

So while opposing pitchers have trouble getting Howey out, he has little difficulty doing the same to opponents. And he probably won't experience too much trouble doing the same in a Cornhusker uniform, either.

WAYNE'S JEFF HAUSMANN is greeted by teammates after slugging a three-run homer earlier in the year.

West Point's Skwarek resigns

WEST POINT — West Point High School boys varsity basketball coach Ron Skwarek is leaving the school to become head coach at Lexington. During a nine year stint at West Point, Skwarek accumulated 90-33 record, including three conference championships, two conference tournament championships and three B-4 District runner-ups in six years.

West Point defeated Wayne during the regular season last year, 60-58. But the Blue Devils downed the Cadets 41-39 in the B-4 District Tournament championship game. Wayne also beat West Point in the district tie game in 1985.

Corbit makes all-star team

FREMONT — Kecia Corbit, Wayne High School's career scoring and rebounding leader, was one of six girls named to the Midland College Basketball Camp all star team last week.

Corbit canned 30-of-52 field goals for 57.7 percent during eight scrimmage games played at the camp. The 5-11 center also grabbed 32 rebounds, blocked seven shots and scored a camp-high 63 points.

Corbit will be a senior next year at Wayne.

Wayne gals reach .500 mark

Wayne's 18-and-under softball team Ted Walthill 3-0 Thursday night before rain halted play in the bottom of the third inning. Officially, the game is recorded as a 7-0 victory by Wayne.

Wayne's Amy Schluns got things started for the hosts in the first inning when she singled. Laura Keating and Shelly Pick followed with consecutive singles and Kathy Mohfeld supplied Wayne with a 2-0 lead when she doubled Schluns and Keating home.

Wayne scored again in the third when Mohfeld walked, moved to second on Kerri Leighton's single and crossed the plate on Marlene Bruggeman's double. Heavy rains then ended the game.

Keating finished with four strike outs and did not walk a single batter through three frames.

The victory improved Wayne to 8-8 on the year. Wayne's 18-and-under team plays again Sunday when Emerson invades Overin Field for a 6:30 p.m. game.

Marilyn Strate, Wayne's head coach, said she is also trying to schedule a 15-and-under game for this weekend.

"The 15-and-unders haven't played in almost two weeks because Wakefield and Walthill didn't have teams. So I'm trying to get a game scheduled for this weekend," she said.

Wayne, Wakefield split

WAKEFIELD — Wakefield's and Wayne's Midgets and Junior Legion baseball teams split a doubleheader here Friday night. Wayne's Midgets claimed an 11-7 victory, while Wakefield's Juniors captured an 8-4 triumph over Wayne's 'B' team.

In the opener, Wakefield held a 2-0 lead in the first inning but Corey Frye spanked a three-run single in the second frame that triggered a seven run uprising by Wayne.

Wayne then made it 10-2 in the third with three more runs, but Wakefield made things interesting by pushing across five markers in the fourth to make the score 10-7.

Tony Halverson and Troy Lee both singled in the Wakefield fifth and Mark Johnson clubbed a double. But Wayne eventually got out of the inning and added an insurance run in the sixth to close out the game's scoring.

In addition to the three RBIs, Frye finished 2-for-2 at the plate. Wakefield's Halverson also collected two hits in as many tries.

Wakefield's Juniors opened a 3-0 lead in the third and added four runs in the fourth and one more in the sixth to claim an 8-4 victory.

Mike Nelson was the winning pitcher. Nelson fired a five hitter, finishing with 11 strike outs.

Bill Landanger collected two hits for Wayne, while Brent Pick, Casey Nichols and Steve Luff all finished with one hit.

Todd Kralke, who hurled a one-hitter in a 7-1 Wakefield Midget victory over Norfolk Wednesday night, went 2-for-2 at the plate. Chris Loope, a 14-year-old who plays for Wakefield's Pony's, Midgets and Juniors, also collected two hits for Wakefield and teammate John Halverson totaled one hit.

Fireworks allowed

LINCOLN — The Game and Parks Commission will again allow the use of fireworks in designated spots at eight state recreation areas on July 4, according to assistant commission director Dale Bree.

He said fireworks will be allowed in designated spots at Branched Oak, Pawnee, Memphis, Fremont, Bridgeport, Two Rivers, Fort Kearney, and Wagon Train State Recreation areas.

Bree said signs will be posted at recreation areas to point the way to the fireworks sites and their boundaries will be clearly marked. Fireworks will be allowed in these special areas from 8 a.m. to midnight July 4 only. The use of fireworks elsewhere on state areas or at other times is prohibited.
