Area families to get awards for century farms

Three Wayne County farm families will receive the Nebraska Pioneer Farm Award during the Wayne County Fair Aug. 7-10.

Engraved plaques will be presented to Clifford Baker of Wakefield; Winifred Thompson Craft of Wayne; and M. Gene and Mary G. Ulrich of Hoskins.

All are descendants of families that started a century of farm ownership when Wayne County was first being settled.

This unique award, co-sponsored by Ak-Sar-Ben and the Nebraska Association of Fair Managers, is made annually to owners of farms which have remained in the same family for 100 years or more.

The Baker farm was originally owned by Cliff Baker's grandfather John and Elizabeth Baker, who purchased it from William H. Eaton and wife on June 14, 1886 for $1,000.

Cliff's father, Will Baker, and wife Clara, purchased the farm from John Baker and his wife on March 1, 1919. Clifford Baker and wife, Leona, purchased the farm from the Will Baker estate Aug. 2, 1973 and are presently living on the farm, which is operated by Cliff and his son, Kim Baker.

History on the Ulrich farm shows that it was purchased on contract from Aden Arnel, who had the original receipt of homestead (11-28-1883) from the United States. On Aug. 15, 1907, Otto Ulrich purchased the farm from his father (Peter Ulrich, Sr.). At his death (July 12, 1971), the farm was in his wife's name, which was Lena A. Ulrich.

On Jan. 12, 1974, Merwyn Gene Ulrich and Mary Grace Ulrich purchased the farm from Lena Ulrich and they own the farm at this time (in co-partnership as of 1986).

ACCORDING TO the history of the Winifred Thompson Craft farm, Christian Thompson and his family came in a covered wagon from Pentwater, Michigan to visit a brother southeast of Wayne. He liked the area so well that he returned to Michigan and sold his farm there, then returned to Wayne and bought the farm.

They came to Wayne in August — Mr. and Mrs. Thompson with daughter Winnie. A son, Jens, was born the following November, 1876 and the remainder of the family was born at the farm, according to a history written by Winnie.

In 1918, Jens and his wife bought the farm — their family consisting of two sons and three daughters (Vibie, Lula, LeRoy, Melba and Leland).

Jens farmed until 1943. When Jens and his wife Emma retired and moved into Wayne, Leland married Winifred Phillips and they moved to the farm.

Jens passed away in 1964 and Emma in 1968.

Leland bought the farm in 1969. He passed away in 1976 at the Thompson farm.

Leland and Winifred had three children. One of the sons, Larry, farms the Thompson land where Winifred still resides.

Liska brothers promote Angus cattle

by Chuck Hackenmiller

Drs. Ken and Jay Liska, two Wayne veterinarians, have been extensively featured in this nation's foremost Angus livestock publication.

The article, written in the June 23 edition of the American Angus Journal by Editor Jim Coffin, primarily reflects on the Liskas' enjoyment of owning Angus cattle.

"We were flattered that the Angus magazine people wanted to come out and see what we were doing," said Jay.

The angle: two veterinarians who were brothers that had a registered Angus herd and both were in the Angus (and veterinary) business together.

"They have 175 Angus cows between them — with 125 of the cattle on lease," they say.

Brothers Ken and Jay grew up on a ranch in Niobrara, Nebraska. Jay graduated from Veterinary College at Iowa State University in 1961 and practiced in Arlington, Nebraska before moving to Wayne. Ken graduated from the same college in 1969 and joined Jay in Wayne.

They credit their father and grandfather with providing the basic knowledge of raising Angus cattle. In 1937 their father purchased 10 head of Angus (for $50 a head). He raised the Angus as registered for several years, then stopped but continued raising a herd of black cows.

JAY AND KEN purchased their first bred registered Angus stock in 1973.

"It's a family project and I'm glad my family has a part of the Angus cattle business," mentioned Jay.

"We're not biased against any other breeds of cattle. It's just that we grew up with these Angus and they have a lot of strong points," said Ken.

"You can't drive a Ford and a Chevy both. Black cows have a lot of merit," he added.

The Angus, they said, fit in good with cross breeding programs.

Getting calves off to a good start and maintaining an intense interest in herd performance are just two of the instrumental keys in having a successful Angus herd operation.

"Things can get away from you if you don't watch the records and oversee the herd," said Jay.

Several years back, the total cattle population in the nation registered at about 130 million. Statistics show that number slipping in current times to about 100 million.

Jay said that with all this area's available roughage and grain, cattle will continue to play an important part in agriculture for those in northeast Nebraska. "With the immense amount of feed that we have [in this area], something must be done with this feed," he remarked.

"Hopefully, the next few years will improve and all will have a bigger piece of the pie," he added.

According to the article, the Liska Angus herd consists of Eileenmere strains, along with Bardollere, Viking, Crackerjack and Emulous breeding.

They concentrate highly on total herd weaning weights — striving for weaning poundage that is half the total cow weight of the herd. If the

Governor Kerrey tells students to 'become yourself, don't become what others want'

by Melvin Paul Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

As he heads into the last six months of his governorship, Governor Bob Kerrey has been focusing on personal freedom in many of his speeches.

In a speech to several hundred high school students from across the state this summer, Kerrey urged them to "become yourself. Learn who you are. Don't become what everyone else wants you to be."

Have you ever had the experience where you walked away from a conversation and said, "I wish I would have said what I really believe," Kerrey asked them.

Sometimes resisting power and letting people know how you really feel can be freeing, he said.

And then the governor told the students a story from his Navy training days. Kerrey spent 18 weeks in an underwater demolition team training in 1967.

"The objective of the instructors was to try to get as many people as possible to quit through mental harassment and physical harassment."

"Most of us were involved, not because we wanted to blow things up, but because we did not want to serve on ships," Kerrey said. "I foured a ship, on dry dock. I got seasick and the ship was tied up."

"One of the individuals was a man by the name of Thompson. He'd been on ship and he came into the training because he didn't want shipboard duty."

"Thompson was a very fat young man. He had difficulty doing the push ups, climbing the rope. He had trouble with the obstacle course. And because of all these things, he took an unusual amount of physical abuse."

"But once you put fins on him he was the strongest swimmer we had. He was exceptional in the water. But he had a tough time getting through the class; he had more difficulty than anyone else," Kerrey said.

AFTER THE TRAINING period Thompson and Kerrey were among a dozen men drafted to the SEALS. That program had a different objective than underwater demolition.

"It was not as fun and a lot of us would have preferred to have been someplace else," Kerrey said.

"On Monday morning after we were drafted, they paraded all of us into the center of the room (12 or 13 of us). In came all the SEAL team, all around us in the room. The commanding officer, Capt. Anderson, got up in front and welcomed us. 'You're all volunteers. You all volunteered. You all agreed to be a part of this. We haven't drafted any of you.'"

Capt. Anderson told the draftees; "if you don't want to volunteer all you have to do is say so and we'll send you right back out to a ship."

There was tremendous pressure to say yes to volunteering, Kerrey said. "A tremendous amount of pressure to affirm what they had already decided for you."

"Thompson stood up in a split second and said, 'No I don't want to.'"

"They hustled him out of the room and I haven't seen him since," Kerrey said.

"He had an enormous impact on everyone in that room, in a positive way."

"Whether you agree or disagree with what he did, it demonstrated what one person could do. He showed that it's possible to resist. And by resisting become free, by resisting become exactly what you are."

"At that moment he was Thompson. At that moment he was not what everybody wanted him to be. He was Thompson, expressing what he wanted to be. At least for that moment," Kerrey said, then he added,

"Once you taste it, you never get it out of your mouth."

Saving the soil

Here's a figure to toss out. Wind damaged almost 8.4 million acres of land in a 10-state Great Plains area during the 7-month period ending May 31, just a bit less than was reported for the same period last year.

Damage to cropland accounted for more than 94 percent of the total damage this season.

Look at this and then comprehend losing about 15 tons of soil per acre a year, and that is usually at least three times the rate of soil replacement by natural processes.

There were 21 counties reporting on wind erosion in Nebraska, affecting close to 310,000 acres.

Extension engineers say Nebraska loses more than 100 million tons of topsoil yearly. During an intense storm, rainfall can loosen and detach up to 100 tons of soil per acre, he said.

Tests in Nebraska have proven that leaving 20 to 30 percent of the soil surface covered with residue after planting can reduce soil erosion by more than 50 percent. Leaving additional residue can reduce erosion even more.

These figures indicate the importance of utilizing erosion control techniques in preserving our fertile topsoil. And landowners should be aware of it and want to do something about it.

What can be done?

We don't have the answers here. But within the next week or two, there will be conservation tillage tours in northeast Nebraska that may provide farmers some insight as to how to control their topsoil loss.

There will be a conservation tillage tour near Pender July 30, as indicated by the story which appears in this edition's ag section. That tour is being sponsored by the Nebraska Cooperative Extension Service, Agricultural Energy Conservation Project, Logan Creek Conservation Project and the Wayne County Soil Conservation Service Office.

This Thursday night (July 24) there will be a twilight Conservation Tillage Tour in Wayne County, as specialists from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Cooperative Extension Service will speak on several aspects of conservation tillage and will be available to answer questions. There will also be an entomologist there to answer questions on pest control.

That tour begins at 6:30 p.m. at the Harvey Brader farm 4 1/2 miles north and three miles west of Wayne.

Over the past few years, the local extension services have been promoting the neck out of no-till planting. Maybe it's time for landowners to take a serious look at the amount of soil lost to wind and water and take some measures to shore up the loss, as some have done on an experimental (or permanent) basis already.

Contact your extension agent and he'll be happy to steer you in the right direction concerning conservation tillage.

And there is still plenty of time to catch those conservation tours.

Grand anniversary

The Wayne County Historical Society would like to thank everyone who attended our recent ice cream social to commemorate our 10th anniversary in the Ley House. It was a perfect summer evening for a lawn party. Nearly 400 people partook of the home-made ice cream, pie, and cake.

We would like to say a special "thank you" to all those who donated money, to those who furnished pie, cake or ice cream, and to those who helped that evening. All proceeds, book sales, memberships, and donations contributed over $1,700 to our fund raising campaign. We also gained 13 new members, five of them as $100 life memberships. Your response was truly overwhelming.

We are grateful to the Lutheran Brotherhood Branch #212 for all their help with the ice cream social. Their efforts, ideas, and matching fund contribution of $1,500 are greatly appreciated. The money will be used to continue the museum restoration this winter.

The museum will "not" be receiving $2,500 from the county commissioners this year after all, contrary to the newspaper report several weeks ago. Our request was initially approved but the motion was later rescinded due to the county's tight budget this coming year. Our budget will also be tighter because of it. There are always a lot of upkeep and maintenance costs with an old house.

We are therefore still accepting new membership and donations even though the matching fund goal has been reached.

We are truly grateful to know so many people care about their museum and have decided to invest in its future. What better way to show our gratitude to all those who came before us than to preserve the past through museums. And you are helping to preserve ours.

Loreta Tompkins, President
Wayne County
Historical Society

A Tribute

We would like to thank the citizens of Wayne County for the wonderful support we've received for our many activities throughout the past year. Wayne County boasts one of the highest number of volunteers per capita (this year 300 people helped!) of any county in the state and even in this depressed economy, financial support does not seem to wane. This is a tribute to the sense of priority and spirit of the people in this area.

Our latest event, "The Longest Day of Golf," was extremely successful. Many thanks to Tom Perry, Lesa McDermott, Jed Reeg and Missy Jones who were somehow able to golf 109 holes on Saturday. Their effort along with generous financial support made it possible to surpass our $500 goal. We also want to extend our appreciation to Hardee's, Dairy Queen, PoPo's, and The Lumber Company for the food and refreshments they donated; to KTCH and The Wayne Herald for the great publicity; and a special thanks to Ann Barclay, Jill Perry and Larry Berres for their help in organizing the event.

Our goal is to fight cancer through education and research. Thanks to all for helping us to achieve that goal!

ask a lawyer

a public service of the nebraska state bar association

Q. My daughter passed away several months ago. Her husband says there is no will, but my daughter told me she had made a will, and with it she had left letters to me and to her sister. Is there anything we can do if the husband insists there is no will?

A. Ordinarily, it is the duty of the person who is named to the will as personal representative to produce the will and offer it for probate, provided he has knowledge of the testator's death. In many cases the personal representative will be someone who knew the deceased and there is no problem with disclosure of the existence of the will.

Courts in some cases have the authority to compel production of the will, if there are pending probate proceedings or if state statutes grant them authority to do so. Nebraska has such a statute; after the death of a testator and upon the request of an interested person (such as a beneficiary), any person having custody of the will is required to deliver it with reasonable promptness to a person able to secure its probate or to an appropriate court. Any person who willfully fails to deliver a will is liable to any person aggrieved for damages which arise from his failure to produce the will. If the person fails to deliver it after being ordered to do so by a court, he is subject to penalties for contempt of court.

Many times we hear that a will was made but was not found with the effects of the deceased. A good way to check on whether a will was made is to inquire of her lawyer or if you do not know if she had a lawyer, check with her friends to see who she may have consulted about such a matter. Without real evidence of existence of a will, it is difficult to require its production.

If you have evidence that your daughter did leave a will, make a request to your daughter's husband to produce it. If he fails to do so, talk to your lawyer about getting a court order to compel him to do so.

If you have a legal question, write "Ask a Lawyer," P.O. Box 2529, Lincoln 68502. This column is intended to provide general legal information, not specific legal advice. "Ask a Lawyer" is a public service of the Nebraska State Bar Association.

Robb Reeg to represent Nebraska

While Wayne's Junior Legion baseball team is playing in the Class B State Baseball Tournament at Overlin Field in early August, another Wayne athlete will be competing in a different state tournament of sorts.

Robb Reeg is one of eight Nebraska golfers to qualify for a tournament against eight Kansas linksters at the Alvarado Country Club in Lawrence, Kan., August 10-13.

Reeg, who is the son of Bill and Betty Reeg, earned the right to compete in the prestigious tourney by placing seventh at the State Junior Golf Tournament at the Elks Country Club in Columbus July 9-11. Reeg fired a 79-80-76 at Columbus for a 235.

In order to compete at Columbus, Reeg had to shoot an 80 or better at a tournament at the Norfolk Country Club in early June. And although Reeg didn't have much room to spare (he finished with an 80), he qualified and will now represent Nebraska against Kansas.

Reeg, who is 16-years-old, will compete in the A Division of the tournament. The A Division is golfers 16 and 17-years-old, while the B Division consists of golfers 15-years and younger.

Qualifying for the tournament in Kansas was no easy task. In addition to having to equal at least an 80 at Norfolk, Reeg then had to place at least eighth at the state tourney against Nebraska's best.

There were approximately 70-80 golfers at the state tournament in Columbus, about 40 in each class," he said.

Another Wayne golfer, Dave Ellis, just missed joining Reeg on the Lawrence trip. Ellis placed 11th at Columbus and is the third alternate.

Reeg, who will be a sophomore this year, said the Nebraska representatives used to play against a Canadian team.

"Nebraska used to play Canada, but I think that changed because of the money factor," he said.

Although his work schedule has gotten in the way of a lot of possible practice time, Reeg said he plans to start concentrating more on the tourney over the next few weeks.

"I've been working more than I've been practicing lately, although I have gotten in some practice time," he said. "But I plan to start practicing more often now."

"You never know!" That's a common phrase Wayne's Junior Legion baseball coach Hank Overlin uses after one of his players begins logging because of popping up on the infield.

And although the ball is usually caught, it's still an excellent reminder by Hank because many times the ball is dropped.

This weekend, Wayne's 18-and-over softball team will compete in the Class B State Softball Tournament in North Platte.

The 18-and-unders have experienced a frustrating year. Wayne just hasn't jelled together as a team and Tuesday night, lost to Jackson, a team that didn't even qualify for the Class C State Tournament.

But Wayne qualified for the Class B State tourney outright because there aren't any other Class B teams in their district.

The North Platte tourney could be a rough one for Wayne as the absolute best teams in Class B will be gunning for the state crown, which means lots and lots of pressure.

There shouldn't be any pressure on the Wayne girls however. Why should there be? No one is expecting them to do well anyway.

So good luck girls, hope you all play your hearts out and supply the tourney with a few surprises.

And just keep one thing in mind during tournament play - you never know!

Wayne's Juniors struggle against Columbus, drop doubleheader

COLUMBUS — Columbus capitalized on 13 walks and two Wayne errors to claim a 6-0 victory in Junior Legion action played here Sunday. Columbus made it a sweep as it also downed Wayne's Legion 'B' team 10-4 in the opener.

The score was deadlocked at zero heading into the bottom of the third inning in the nightcap. But Columbus used a single, three walks and a Wayne error to open a 2-0 advantage.

The hosts then built a 5-0 lead by pushing across three runs in the fourth. Columbus' first three batters walked, doubled and walked, respectively, to begin the fourth and added a squeeze bunt and another base on balls to build its five run lead.

Columbus added an insurance run in the fifth inning when Wayne allowed four walks.

Wayne had a tough time at the plate. The farthest any Wayne base runner advanced was second base.

Dan Gross and Jeff Hausmann both clubbed doubles for Wayne, but both players were stranded. Ted Luaders collected Wayne's only other hit, a one-out single in the fifth.

Wayne's best scoring opportunity came in the fifth when Luaders stroked his single after Bill Landanger reached base on a Columbus error. However, Wayne's next two batters went down in order to end the threat.

Columbus 10, Wayne 4
Wayne's 'B' team trailed 7-0 after five innings in the opener but made things interesting with three runs in the top of the sixth. However, Columbus came right back with three runs in the bottom of the inning and held off a mild Wayne rally in the seventh to claim the six run victory.

Columbus opened a 1-0 lead in the second and built its seven run lead with two in the third, three in the fourth and one more in the fifth. But Wayne's bats finally came to life in the sixth to turn a near blow-out into a fairly close game.

Robbie Gamble started the sixth with a single and Ted McCright followed by drawing a walk. Russ Longe then singled. Gamble home and Jason Jorgensen loaded the bases by drawing a walk.

McCright scored on a force play, and after moving to third base, Longe scored on Mark Creighton's sacrifice fly.

Columbus came right back with three runs of its own to maintain its seven run advantage, before Wayne threatened again in the seventh.

Scott Nichols ushered in the seventh with a single and one out later Gamble reached on an error.

Nichols then scored with two outs when Longe's grounder was booted and Jorgensen followed with a walk to load the bases. However, Columbus recored the final out to end the threat.

Gamble, McCright, Longe, Jorgensen and Nichols all collected one hit apiece for Wayne. Jorgensen and Nichols both added three walks to finish 1-for-1.

Jorgensen and Gamble, Wayne's two pitchers, combined to allow 10 hits and five walks against two strike outs.

Wayne's Legion 'B' team plays again Wednesday when Norfolk's Midgets travel to town for a 6 p.m. game at Overlin Field. Wayne's Juniors will follow at 8 p.m.

Wayne's Midgets and Juniors play Friday in a doubleheader against Norfolk beginning at 6 p.m. at Overlin Field.

Wayne's Juniors then travel to Elkhorn for a doubleheader Saturday beginning at 2 p.m.

Wakefield town team slips to fourth in Dodge County League standings

WAKEFIELD — Last week, things looked pretty good for Wakefield's town team. Wakefield was in second place by itself and with the season winding down, appeared to have a playoff spot wrapped-up.

But things have changed since then. Wakefield has lost its last two games and are currently in fourth place in the Dodge County League.

The top four teams are the only squads that receive playoff berths, and Wakefield head coach Joe Coble expressed concern about his squad's current position in the standings.

Standings
1. West Point	14-1
2. Arlington	10-2
3. Snyder	9-5
4. Wakefield	9-6
5. Blair	8-7
6. Columbus	8-7
7. North Bend	7-8
8. Wisner	6-9
9. Dodge	5-9
10. Valley	3-11
11. Scribner	3-12

"The top four teams make the playoffs, so our backs are kind of against the wall," he said. "We're just hoping that we make the playoffs, and we're shooting for a second place finish in the standings because then we'd be able to host a first round game."

Wakefield dropped a 9-3 decision to Arlington Thursday night, and was then trimmed 7-6 at Columbus Sunday afternoon.

Arlington played long ball against Wakefield, hitting a solo, two-run and three-run homers to account for two-thirds of its offensive production.

Arlington opened a 8-0 lead before Wakefield finally got on the scoreboard in the sixth inning when Scott Miller stroked a solo homer.

Arlington maintained its eight run advantage with another run in the seventh before Wakefield rounded out the game's scoring with two runs in the ninth.

Bob Utemark accounted for one run in the ninth with a solo blast. Jeff Coble scored the game's final run after his singled and later crossed the plate when Paul Calvert's grounder was misplayed.

Coble finished 3-for-4 at the plate, while Calvert went 2-for-5. Joe Coble said his club hit the ball consistently well, but couldn't find the gaps.

"We hit the heck out of the ball. We had their outfielder's backs against the fence all night but we hit it right at them," he said.

Wakefield fell to 9-6 with a heart-breaking 7-6 loss to Columbus Sunday afternoon.

The visitors opened a quick 4-0 lead when Mark Kubik drilled a grand slam homer in the top of the second. Utemark, Mike Meyer and Mike Clay each preceded Kubik's blast by drawing walks.

Columbus quickly took the lead, however, by pushing across three runs in the third and two more in the fourth.

Wakefield retook the lead with two runs in the seventh. Cory Greve and Coble started the seventh with singles and both scored on force plays.

Columbus then tied the game at six in the eighth with a pair of doubles, and then used three singles and an error to tally the game-winner in the ninth.

Joe Coble said that although his squad lost, he was still pleased with their performance.

"We had four starters gone and Rob Eaton got hurt, but some of the younger guys like Clay and Greve did such an outstanding job of filling in that I was happy with our play even though we lost," he said.

Columbus is one of the hottest teams in the league. After starting the season with a 1-7 mark, Columbus has won seven consecutive games and is now 8-7 overall and tied for fifth place. The last team to beat Columbus was Wakefield on June 8.

Wakefield plays again Thursday at Valley and Sunday when North Bend travels to town for a 7 p.m. contest.

Greenview wins

OMAHA — Greenview Far of Wayne can consider itself one of the best Co-ed softball teams in the world as it placed first in the Co-ed Division of the Roy C. Feltman Memorial Softball Tournament here July 11-13.

The tournament, which is the largest USSSA Softball Tournament in the world, had 144 total teams compete in various divisions. There were 18 teams in the Co-ed Division.

Female members of the team were: Donna Kelly, Jolene Bennett, Joan Miller, Lynn Surber, Kathy Didiker and Mary Schroeder.

Male members were: Jeff Dion, Steve Sorenson, Scott Hallstrom, Al Walton, Jeff Scharrn and Tom Preston.

Wakefield Midgets win league title

WISNER — Wakefield took what it could get. And in the seventh inning, it got a lot.

Wakefield's Midgets capitalized on two errors and two walks to overcome a 6-4 deficit and trim Wisner 9-8 to earn a share of the Ralph Bishop League title with Wisner.

Wisner appeared to have sole possession of the league championship in its hip pocket, but a wild seventh inning cost them the outright title. However, the hosts did come back in the bottom of the seventh with two runs.

After its lead off hitter of the seventh flew out to center field, Wisner used three consecutive walks and a bloop single to pull within one, 9-8.

But Andy McQuistan, Wakefield's relief pitcher, made a nice back handed stop on a grounder up the middle to record the second out and then struck out the next hitter to end the game.

McQuistan's back handed play may have saved the game. If the ball would have gotten past the Wakefield hurler, Wisner would have tied the score. But McQuistan made the play, checked the runner back to third and threw to first for the second out. He then ended the threat and the game by striking out the next batter.

Wakefield opened a 2-0 lead in the first before holding a 3-0 advantage in the third. But Wisner tallied three runs to tie the game in the fourth and one in the fifth.

Wakefield did score once in the fifth, but still trailed 6-4 before erupting for the five runs in the seventh.

Wakefield totaled just four hits in the game, and all of its nine runs were unearned. Wisner collected nine hits in the game.

Sean Lund turned in a sparkling offensive game for the victors. The Wakefield shortstop finished 3-for-4 at the plate with four RBI and one run scored. He clubbed two doubles and a single.

Wakefield and Wisner finished league play with 11-3 records. Wakefield is 17-11 overall.

Wakefield rises to occasion, again

WAKEFIELD — Wakefield's Midgets have been making a habit of rising to the occasion to win big games.

Last week, Wakefield used five runs in the seventh inning to trim Wisner 9-8 and claim a share of the Ralph Bishop League title.

Wakefield then tallied two runs in the bottom of the sixth inning to nip Norfolk 4-3 and capture the Wakefield Midget Summer Tournament championship here Sunday night.

Wakefield opened a 2-0 lead in the third inning when Doug Roberts drove in Todd Kratek with a one-out double and later scored on Troy Lee's grounder. Scott Lund added an important single in the third to move Roberts to third base.

Norfolk bounced back, however, with three runs in the fifth. The visitors used a walk, an error and two singles to open a one run lead.

Wakefield sent four batters to the plate in the bottom of the fifth, but failed to tie the game. However, the sixth inning was different.

Laurel's Midgets place fourth at Wakefield tourney

WAKEFIELD — The Headid Park Stars of Sioux City used big first and sixth innings to claim an 8-4 victory over Laurel and a third place finish in the Wakefield Midget Summer Tournament here Sunday.

Headid tallied four runs in the first inning and duplicated that with four more in the sixth to claim the four run victory. Laurel chipped away at the Sioux City lead throughout the first four innings. After scoring once in the second frame, Laurel added two more runs in the fourth to pull within one, 4-3. But Headid stacked on four runs to its lead in the sixth and Laurel managed just one more marker in the seventh. Randy Sherry scored Laurel's first run after he opened the second with a walk, moved to second on a wild pitch, advanced to third on a force play and scored on Scott Marquardt's sacrifice bunt.

Doug Manz drove in two runs in the fourth with a single. Darin Marlinson and Troy Twohig both scored in the inning after singling and reaching base on an error, respectively.

Laurel's last run came in the seventh when Kyle Nixon singled and later scored when Steve Hansen's grounder was misplayed.

Laurel totaled just four hits in the game. Marlinson, Manz, Marquardt and Nixon all finished with one hit apiece.

Wakefield

single and one out later, Mike Mogus drilled a double to plate Lee with the tying run. Mogus then scored the winning run on a Norfolk error.

Steve Looft, Wakefield's starting pitcher, sandwiched two force outs and a strike out around a single in the top of the seventh to preserve the Wakefield victory.

Looft finished with eight strike outs, including two in each of the second, third and fifth innings. He also allowed only four hits and four walks. Norfolk's Scott Pfiel also pitched well, finishing with a five hitter while walking three and striking out one.

Kratke, Roberts, Lund, Lee and Mogus all finished with one hit apiece for Wakefield.

Wakefield downed the Headid Park Stars of Sioux City 6-3 in the opening round, while Norfolk trimmed Laurel 8-6 in other opening round action. Sioux City then downed Laurel 8-4 in the consolation game.

Awarded scholarships

TWO JUNE graduates of Wayne-Carroll High School have been awarded $1,000 college scholarships by the Cargill Foundation. The two from the Wayne area are Valerie L. Rahn, who will enter Midland Lutheran College in Fremont this fall to study business, and Lori L. Sorensen, who will enter Concordia Teachers College in Seward this fall to study elementary education. The $100,000 Cargill Scholarship Program for Rural America is designed to recognize and encourage academic achievement, accomplishments and talents of young people from farm families, according to Wayne Nissen, manager of the Cargill's Nutrena Feeds in Wayne. Above right, he presents the scholarship to Rahn, and below, to Sorensen.

Wayne Stress Prevention Center

Communication by Jeff Berger

This week's session of the Wayne Stress Prevention Center is on communication skills and relaxation techniques. The Center meets Saturdays in Room 202 at Wayne High School at 10 a.m.

We have all experienced frustration in our relationships with others. How many times have you said to yourself, "I wish I could have really said what I meant" or "I wish that he/she would understand what I was saying."

If you are like many people, you've had this happen to you. There is nothing more frustrating in the world than having your meaning misunderstood or worse, not being able to say clearly what you mean.

Many times, learning simple techniques or skills that you can use when talking or listening to others can make a large difference in how you feel about that other person.

This week in the first session of the Wayne Stress Prevention Center, we will be showing you how you can improve on the way you talk and listen to others. If you have ever been in a situation where things just weren't clicking, you know that this can be a cause of great stress.

Techniques will be presented that will be easy to use in your everyday life. Such things as active listening, reflecting and clarifying are easily learned and can make a great difference in how you respond to and are perceived by others.

If you are in a relationship now that you feel has a lack of understanding in it, stop by.

We might be able to show you some simple techniques in an hour that might make a lifetime of difference.

Relaxation by Doug Porter

I am constantly amazed at the number of opinions people have in the area of well-being. Therefore, it must be a difficult term to get a handle on.

However, I feel well-being is a three-part process that everyone must observe in order to manage stress properly. If I could put my concept into an equation, it would look like this: Well-being equals fitness plan plus nutritious eating plan plus emotional balance. All of these ingredients must be made a way of life if a person seeks true wellness.

The fitness plan entails choosing a form of exercise which you can be comfortable doing regularly and the charting of some type of program, with time set aside daily.

The second component, a nutritious eating plan, has to be a type of program which you can realistically follow. That is why I don't subscribe to any of the so-called "fad" diets. It is much better to get on a positive eating plan in which you get plenty of the four basic food groups in proper proportions, plus ingest the proper amounts of carbohydrates (65 percent), fats (30 percent) and proteins (15 percent). This, coupled with the exercise, will keep your body fit and healthy.

The last variable of the formula is the most neglected part of the equation. Emotional balance is crucial if we are to reach a positive state of well-being. When I speak of emotional balance, there are several ways of attaining it.

Once again, you need to research the method which works best for you and then practice it. Practice is the key because learning to relax and gaining emotional balance is a learned trait much like any other physically learned skill.

If you would like to have more exposure to various types of relaxation techniques (i.e. progressive relaxation, breathing, imagination and meditation) and gain more control of your emotional stress, please attend this week's offerings at the Wayne Stress Prevention Center, Saturday, July 26 at noon in Room 202 at Wayne-Carroll High School.

Liskas

cows weigh 1,000 pounds, then they hope to achieve a goal of weaning an average calf of 500 pounds for the entire herd.

"And that is not an easy goal to achieve," Jay said.

WHAT IS NEEDED to be successful in achieving this goal is to have good milking cows and the people who are dedicated to make this process work.

It also benefits the beef producer to be cost-conscious and efficient. "People should not lose sight of the real hard cold facts of economics," Ken mentioned.

Artificial insemination is a route some cattlemen take in their operations. Such is not the case with the Liskas, although they firmly believe in the procedure.

"If it is a labor-intensive procedure,"

Ken said. As being veterinarians first, it would be difficult to find time to complete the artificial insemination process for their own Angus herd, he said.

"Our Angus herd has to stand on its own economic merits and make a profit," Ken said.

"We've been able to improve our herd with bulls," he mentioned.

Both men agree that the Angus breed has changed dramatically over the years. Thirty years ago, they said, all the breeds were short and chunky with short legs. Now, the breed has been stretched out and made taller.

"It has become critical to market what the packer and the consumer want," Jay said.

HAVING A veterinary occupation limits Jay and Ken as to how much time they can contribute to the continual operation of their herd. But in the same sense, being a veterinarian and also owning an Angus herd has its advantages which benefit both areas.

"It puts us in a position to evaluate the realities and the practicalities [of Angus raising]," Jay commented.

"It allows us to pass on better advice and have a deeper understanding of our client's day to day problems," he added.

Because they are veterinarians, they also have the awareness of what diseases or parasites can do to herds, so they put immunization and parasite control to good practice.

They take fertility tests of bulls and preg testing of the cows as important working tools. Fly control is extremely important when talking about weight gain, Ken said. They have had recent success on fly control and can give advice to customers on what really works, he said.

There have also been recent breakthroughs in control of pink-eye, he added.

One area that they do not experiment in is nutrition. In the Liska herd, the rations are mostly basic. Alfalfa and grain is given to the calves while the cows receive low quality roughage, supplemented occasionally with high quality roughage.

Jay said that you can supply the herd with poor quality roughage and still maintain top quality beef or milk products.

The Liskas lease a major portion of the Angus herd to young aggressive managers. In turn, the lessee provides the feed and labor in raising and maintaining the herd. An incentive is worked into the agreement which calls for raising as many calves as the lessee possibly can.

The Liskas oversee the herd, taking on the complete preventive health management program for the herd; taking care of the recordkeeping, breeding records and registration records.

The leasing venture has attracted a tremendous amount of interest. The idea works well for the right people, according to the Liskas.

And it could afford the lessee to use the money gained from the venture to purchase other things for the farm — like purchase a new tractor or a pickup.

One market area which the Liskas are pursuing is the Certified Angus Beef program, where this particular breed is marketed as a special product and is designated as such in various consumer markets.

For instance, grocery stores and restaurants are selling Certified Angus Beef products.

Certified Angus Beef, Jay said, is in good demand and the producer can get a good premium for marketing their cattle in this way.

AS THE FINAL paragraphs in the Liskas feature article written by Coffman state:

"...The younger Liskas have learned from being on the farm and working around livestock. They can start a tractor on a below zero day, saddle a horse and they can work with their hands. They've planted trees, potatoes — "some pretty basic things, but to me they're important," Dr. Ken Liska points out.

"With a veterinary practice, there's a temptation to not spend enough time with the family. So we try to make some of those times in the evenings working around the place. My son and I might have a chance to talk about things we wouldn't otherwise.

"Angus cattle have been a part of that."

The Liskas don't know all the answers that go with raising Angus cows, but their endeavors are certainly endorsed through their special sense of commitment to the cattle industry.

Tillage tour set Wednesday

Farmers can see exactly how other farmers used their conventional planters for no-till planting during a conservation tillage program to be held July 30 near Pender.

The program will begin with a caravan tour leaving from St. Peter's Lutheran Church 4½ miles west of Pender at 1:30 p.m. Participants will be able to view no-till soybeans planted into corn residue and no-till corn planted into soybean residue while visiting fields of Leon Bruns, and Leon Svoboda. Other sites will be announced later.

The tour will culminate with planters and rainfall simulator demonstrations at the Svoboda farm about 3 p.m. During the planter demonstration, producers will be able to watch four kinds of farmer-owned planters no-till into corn stalks. The demonstration site will be beside a field where a John Deere Max Emerge planter without coulters or furrow openers was used to no-till plant soybeans into corn stalks.

Both Bruns and Svoboda no-till planted a few acres this year to see how well it worked into their system and both said they were very happy with their stands and very likely will increase their number of no-till acres next year.

DURING THE RAINFALL simulator demonstration, producers will be able to see the effect of residue in reducing erosion. The rotating boom simulator creates a rainstorm dropping about 2½ inches of rain in an hour on soil with 5, 25, 50, and 90 percent residue covers.

The program also will include a presentation by Larry Wettenberg, SCS district conservationist, and a tour of grassed ridge terraces currently under construction on the Svoboda farm.

Sandwiches and refreshments will be provided free. The program is being sponsored by the Nebraska Cooperative Extension Service, Agricultural Energy Conservation Project, Logan Creek Conservation Project and Wayne County Soil Conservation Service office.

Two other conservation tillage tours will be held in the area July 24 and 25. A twilight tour in Wayne County July 24 will start at the Harvey Brader farm 4½ miles north and three miles west of Wayne about 6:30 p.m. It will include a tour of several area fields of no-till soybeans, and corn under dryland and irrigated conditions as well as a site with steep terraces.

A July 25 conservation tillage program near Pender will feature farmer and commercial planter demonstrations, a four of new terraces, and a rainfall simulator demonstration. The program will start at 9:30 a.m. at the Anne Greve farm 3½ miles north and 1 mile east of the intersection of highways 51 and 9. Following the program, a free lunch will be served at the Pender Fire Hall. Lunch tickets will be distributed at the demonstration site.

The event with the most entries in the Cornhusker Games was the Volkswalk, the "people's march." Originating in Germany, this is a non-competitive 10 K (6.2 miles) walk for young and old athletes and non.

It said in the information booklet that each person who finished the walk would receive a medal. That excited me. Everyone at our house has track medals except me.

So, on Saturday morning, Dennis and Linda Miller and I left Norfolk at 7 a.m. After coffee and rolls at Grandma's, we checked in at Lincoln East High School about 10:30.

You had to begin any time between 7 a.m. and 2 p.m. We were numbers 852, 853 and 854, so I'm guessing there were close to 1,000 participants. The walk was on bike routes, sidewalks, streets and through parks.

One fellow, in front of his house, asked what the walk was for. When we said, "Cornhusker State Games," he asked, "what are those?" It was amazing to us that he lived in Lincoln and did not realize that the games were going on.

There were three check-points, where they gave us water and marked our entry cards, and the trail was marked. So we couldn't pull a "Rosie Ruiz" because we didn't know the route.

There were some very little people walking, and some ended up on Dad's shoulders by the end. We saw one baby stroller, and Mom and Dad took turns pushing.

Some cute little girls on one street had a "Free Ice Water" stand, and I saw several dollar bills in their basket.

BY NOON, it was very warm. I usually walk in the evenings, and haven't been in the sun much this year; so I sunburned the back of my neck and the calves of my legs.

I did take a break at the third check point, a Shopko store, and bought Baby Ruth candy bars for our low blood sugar attacks. The last three-quarter mile was the longest, but we all felt so good when we finished. I even wore the medal around my neck until a kid at Arby's told me he had run 10 K that morning.

Besides, on Sunday, my friend Alex finished the triathlon; he biked 25 miles, swam one mile and finished with a six mile run. I wonder if he had a low blood sugar attack?

The high jumpers didn't fare too well; last year's winner, two kids from UML, and Jon all went out after 6'8". The winner, a 29 year old father of two who hadn't jumped for years, cleared 6'8".

The official at this event, Curt Nielsen, is Wesleyan's record holder at 7'2 3/4", and that was "cowboy style." The kids were asking him yesterday to demonstrate his stride.

THE GAMES WERE fun and well organized — Lincoln is a good host, and hundreds of volunteers were involved.

There was just one draw back: we missed Carroll's centennial celebration. Maybe some of the floats will be at the Old Settler's parade on Saturday.

The bands should adopt as their slogan the one we saw on a bumper sticker while we were walking. It said, "We can make beautiful music together." Lincoln Symphony Orchestra.

See you in Winside on the 26th. I'll be in the church stand, serving pie.

Anderson, Stewart top judging event

Mike Anderson, Wakefield, a member of the Country Style 4-H Club, was Top Senior Judge, for the second year, in the Dixon County 4-H Livestock Judging Contest held at Concord on July 10. Mike is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Anderson.

Fair, donated by The Wakefield National Bank and were awarded purple ribbons.

Other ribbon placings were: SENIOR DIVISION PURPLE: Matt Anderson, Wakefield; BLUE: Ella Cooper, Wakefield; DOUG OLSEN, Concord; RED: Renee Plueger, Concord; Patty Cooper, Wakefield; Bob Kumm, Allen.

Debbie Plueger, Concord; Megan Kumm, Allen.

According to Stan Starling, Extension Agent in Dixon County, a total of 37.4-H youth participated in the area contest involving five counties. Scores for each county are tabulated and reported separately.

Office Judge for the contest was Dr. Keith E. Gilster, Extension Livestock Evaluation Specialist, from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Biotechnology cannot be ignored

by Cheryl Stubbendieck, vice president/information Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation

Three events this spring and summer have increased public awareness of the still new field of agricultural biotechnology. First, bovine growth hormone promises — or threatens — to increase milk production by as much as 40 percent. And second and third, USDA's licensing of a vaccine to prevent pseudorabies in swine and EPA's plans for field testing of a bacteria to inhibit frost formation on plants have drawn criticism from foes of genetic engineering.

Biotechnology comprises three kinds of procedures: genetic engineering, in which fragments of genetic material are joined together to form a new unit; fused-cell techniques, which involve fusing two cells from two different species; and tissue culture, through which an entire new plant is developed from a single cell.

These procedures are no longer the stuff of science fiction; rather they are the mundane, day-to-day work of laboratories here and abroad. In the not-distant future, biotech could be ing us crops that are resistant to frost and to specific diseases and pests, and that require little water or fertilizer.

Already, biotechnology has produced the swine pseudorabies vaccine which is safer to use than today's common live virus vaccines. The new form also contains live virus, but the part of the genetic code that actually causes the disease has been removed.

BIOTECHNOLOGY is not without its detractors. Some critics oppose it as a moral issue, others say we don't need more productive cows or larger crops that are cheaper to grow.

Certainly there is a need for regulation of biotechnology. Opponents paint pictures of genetically altered bacteria escaping from test plots, and infecting the entire world's wheat crop, but the fear is far-fetched and appeals more to emotion than intellect.

Not surprisingly, biotechnology has spawned a new federal agency, the Office of Agriculture Biotechnology. The new agency, within USDA, is charged with coordinating federal policies with those of other federal and state agencies through the also new National Biological Impact Assessment Program. USDA is to oversee animal biologics, while the Food and Drug Administration will handle drugs, hormones and additives. The Environmental Protection Agency will have jurisdiction over "engineered" pesticides. The need for coordination is clearly apparent.

THE U.S. SEEMS to be the leader in biotechnology, but it is by no means the only country with scientists developing new ways to use this new tool. Germany, Brazil, Canada and many other nations we often think of as world trade competitors are just as involved with the new technology. If the U.S. chose not to get involved in biotechnology, those countries would no doubt be as willing to take the lead as they have been eager to take our foreign markets.

Biotechnology needs to be approached with proper caution, but it can't be ignored. If holds the promise of more economical crop production, with less impact on the environment, two goals even its critics must acknowledge as worthy.

Management woes hit farmers

Nebraska farmers are facing tough economic decisions. Because of abundant rain, weeds are becoming a problem. And greenbugs are infesting many milo fields. However, predicted low crop prices find farmers reluctant to apply expensive chemical treatments.

A number of factors are complicating farmers' decision on whether to treat their crops, noted members of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Agricultural Climate Situation Committee July 13. Treatments on current corn insect problems may also destroy beneficial insects that prey on spider mites. These spider mites may then develop into a serious problem. Yet if farmers take a wait-and-see attitude, the insect damage could ruin crop yields, said Steve Knight of the Nebraska Department of Agriculture.

And unchecked weeds could seriously hinder harvest, said John Furrer, extension weeds specialist. Even if steps are taken to protect crops, there is limited storage space available. Bill Dobbs of the Nebraska

Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said there already is 1.9 billion bushels in carryover storage. There is only room for another .1 billion bushels for storage. Currently, only wheat yields are appearing below normal. Prospects for other crops look good.

"Farmers will need to balance these factors when making these tough decisions," Knight said. "We can't make any recommendations. They need to consider their specific circumstances."

Some tomato problems
Tomato problems are not always a result of diseases and insects. Many problems are physiological disorders that can't be corrected by pesticide application.

Blossom-end rot is one of the most common physiological disorders found in the tomato plant. Symptoms of diseases include a leathery scar or rot at the blossom end of the fruit. This may occur at any stage of the fruits development.

Several factors may trigger blossom-end rot. A sudden change in soil moisture is usually the main cause. The disorder may be the result of an extremely dry soil condition previous to irrigation.

Calcium deficiency is another factor associated with blossom-end rot. Calcium is supplied to the plant by adding lime to the soil. Lime should not be added until a soil sample has been taken, and the lime quantity and type has been determined. Over fertilization, especially with nitrogen, can also increase incidence of the disease.

Tomatoes differ in their susceptibility to blossom-end rot. Staked tomatoes and heavily pruned tomatoes seem to be more severely affected than unpruned plants.

By maintaining adequate, uniform soil moisture, blossom-end rot can be reduced. This can be achieved by mulching the tomato plants with black plastic or organic matter such as dry grass clippings or straw to hold moisture.

Leaf roll or curl is another physiological disorder that occurs with the tomato plant. Pruned plants with a heavy fruit load seem most susceptible to leaf curl. Also, extreme wet or dry soils are associated with leaf roll. Some varieties are more susceptible to leaf curl than others. The main disadvantage of leaf curl is that the fruit is more exposed to the sun and is more prone to sun-scald.

Bearded iris

Even though the bearded iris is the most popular iris planted in Nebraska, there has been some question about how to properly care for it.

Bearded iris are easily propagated by division of the underground stems known as rhizomes. The rhizomes should be planted between midsummer and early fall.

Before doing so, inspect the rhizomes carefully for any evidence of borer or rot damage. Cut away decayed parts and broken roots with a sharp knife and dust all cut surfaces with sulfur.

For the best results, plant three to seven rhizomes of the same variety in a clump, placing them no deeper than one inch and facing all leaf fans in the same direction. Press the soil around them firmly.

Immediately after planting, water the soil thoroughly, using a fine mist spray. Water weekly for up to three weeks afterwards, especially if the weather is dry.

In the early spring and again about one month after the blooms fade, apply a 5-10-10 fertilizer. Use about one-eighth of a cup for each large clump in the spring and half this amount the second feeding. Scatter the fertilizer around the iris, but not on it, then water.

Imagine 60 people in your kitchen to prepare the evening meal. That's more people than the staff of some of the world's finest restaurants. But that's about how many people it takes to bring food to the average U.S. consumer's table.

Fact is, when most people think of agriculture they only think of the farmer. But Nick Flaek of Whiteland, Indiana, an entrant in our annual UP WITH AGRICULTURE Writing Contest, reminds us that the farmer is just one link in a complex food chain.

He's correct. Before it reaches the consumer, our food has been assembled, inspected, graded, stored, processed, packaged, wholesaled and retailed. Take away any one of these links, and the entire food chain will break down.

Consider our food distribution system, for example. Last year, our food traveled across some 173,800 miles of highways, 3.4 million miles of waterways, and 26,000 miles of waterways. This extensive distribution system allows American consumers to eat fresh foods from any part of the country. Without such an efficient system, American consumers would not only be forced to pay more for their food, they wouldn't be able to eat fresh fruits and vegetables all year long.

In addition, we have rigid inspection standards to ensure confidence in the quality of the foods we eat. The USDA food grading system, for example, gives both buyers and sellers an impartial appraisal of quality.

The food chain also includes a strong marketing link. Marketing costs for farm-produced products last year tallied $54.6 billion, a 10 percent increase over 1983. Grain and soybean products accounted for $20.6 billion of this bill. Dairy products spent $18.7 billion on marketing, while fruit and vegetable products marketing costs reached the $5.1 billion mark.

In the last decade, marketing costs for farm products have risen about 147 percent, while retail food prices have increased a modest 87 percent. This means consumers today are getting more food for their money.

With such an extensive production, distribution and marketing chain, it's no wonder agriculture is this nation's largest employer. About 21 million people in this country are employed in some phase of agriculture — from the farmer that produces the food and fiber, to the checkout clerk at the supermarket. The USDA reports that farming itself employs some 2.7 million workers — as many as the combined workforces of transportation, the steel industry and the automobile industry.

American consumers can enjoy a broad menu of foods at reasonable prices because our food chain works. And people in agriculture are working together to improve this system even more. That's important, because a chain is only as strong as its weakest link.

Appetite Suppressants

A recent survey by Better Homes and Gardens indicates that 9 out of 10 Americans think they weigh too much, and over one-third want to lose at least 15 pounds. For most individuals, weight control comes down to either eating less of the types of foods that are high in calories and/or increasing calorie-burning activities. One approach to consuming fewer calories is through the use of appetite suppressants.

The process of eating is controlled by a complex feedback system involving two centers located in the brain. Inhibition of one of these centers, called the "appetite center," decreases the desire for food intake. It has been suggested, from the results of animal studies that phenylpropranolamine, a drug chemically similar to amphetamine, might be an inhibitor of the "appetite center." Authorities do not agree on its effectiveness as an appetite suppressant. Millions of dollars are spent on non-prescription products containing this medicine each year.

Some of the newer non-prescription appetite suppressants contain various dietary fibers which, according to the companies that make these products, "give the person a feeling of being full and causes them to eat smaller quantities of food at meal time."
