Girl Scouting is much more than just going from door to door selling cookies. And Boy Scouting is more than learning how to pitch a tent. Scouting affords boys and girls an opportunity to expand their knowledge in a spirit what inspires adventure and culture.

Recently two Wayne Girl Scouts, Ann Perry and Jill Jordan, were given an opportunity of international flavor by attending an "Our Cabana" residential program center — one of four world centers in the World Association of Girl Guides and Girl Scouts.

The Prairie Hills Girls Scout Council helped, sponsor the trip for Ann Perry and Jill Jordan, paying a proportioned share of the registration and airtare expenses. They were selected two years ago to attend the residential center, along with several other girl scouts from Prainview, Randolph, Dwight, Primrose, Fremont, Blair and West Point. The selection was based on their girl scout accomplishments and a personal interview by a committee.

Sheryl Jordan and Jill Perry of Wayne joined two others as adult chaperones for the trip to Our Cabana.

THE STAY AT Cabana was eight days. Another six days was spent touring Mexico City and Acapulco. The two girl scouts from Wayne had financed their portion of the trip through fundraiser such as selling of food at auction sales or serving breakfasts at the Wayne Country Club.

All 480 colleges belonging to the National Association of Intercollegiate by the end of this year, the NAL4 announced earlier this week.

Although the program's primary purpose is to halt the use of drugs by dangers of drugs, alcohol and tobacco.

"Each college has to adopt some form of drug testing program and provide some form of introductory course for the athletes about the hazards of drugs, alcohol and tobacco, both smoking and non-smoking,"

Ron Jones, athletic director at Wayne State, said he favors a testing program and added that the Wayne State athletic department has been in the process of developing its own procedure for drug testing. "Without a doubt, I favor, a drug testing program. As a matter of fact, we've been working on a drug testing program at Wayne State for about three-and-ahalf months now because we expected that sooner or later a testing program like the NAIA is requiring would come down the hatch." the said.

he said.

Jones added that determining a testing program is a difficult decision to make because of the legal aspects involved.

"We've been in contact with other schools that have tested athletes before and the first thing they told us to do is get in contact with our legal Brutton added that the NAIA has been considering a drug education and testing program for some time, but the recent deaths of Maryland basketball start Len Blas and NFL standout Don Rogers accelerated the current proposal.

"Certain afficials within the NAIA have been considering a drug program, but the events over the recent months brought along the current program at a quicker pace." she said.

Jones said that although he has a philosophical problem with the drug testing program, he added that the thinks it is a step in the right direction because it, will improve the aihletes' safety.

"Philosophically. I have a problem with a drug test because it in this country, you're supposed to be innocent until proven guilty, but when you're tested for drugs it's like making someone prove their innocence." he said. "But it's shill a good move by the NAIA because it's improving the athletes' safety."

And fast-pitch is a game too fast and furious, where the pitchers, speeding runners and a stable defense are several of the crucial properties in the game. Those years are behind me. Now I am playing the sport. Now I am playing the sport Soborn Loathes — slow-pitch softball. Yep, I have a beer belief (although it hasn't reached the two-fon proportion yet, although some find that disagreeable) and my bat size is about a 36. We play on fields that have corn crib fencing, chain-link fencing or no tencing — just outfields of infinity.

AND WE PLAY IN mud that sticks to the bottom of the shoes or in rain, as long as lightning stays away.

And I pitch; not with the agility to get the barters whiffing at pitches consistantly but to try to make them hit it where the fielders are positioned.

Saying there are no skills involved in slow-pitch softball is not accurate. A diving catch is a diving catch and a great-catch, no matter what the name. Hilling a homer off a pitch that comes in slower than molasses is no fluke.

I like baseball. And good baseball players should stick to playing good baseball if they can — or if they want to — as long as they have fun doing it. There is no reason why baseball, fast-plich softball and slow-pirch softball can't exist "peacefully in this world. It's hard to imagine slow-plich as a sissy sport. Defining economic development

Governor Bob Kerrey has announced a process being started by the Nebraska Department of Economic Development to determine the direction that economic development in Nebraska will take in the future. To that, end, the Department has scheduled six public meetings in order to solicit the views of Nebraskans about issues concerning the state's economic development.

Nebraskans about issues concerning the state's economic development. "Given the severe cutbacks in federal resources, the continued slow growth, state Tax revenues, and the changes going on in the economic structure of Nebraska, this is an Important period in our state's economy," said Kerrey, "an open discussion of the issues is critical to the development of an effective economic development policy."

In its 1986 session, the Nebraska Legislature passed a bill requiring the Department of Economic Development to establish a long-term strategy for developing the Nebraska economy: The Department has contracted with the Midwest Research Institute (MRI) of Kanisas City, Missouri for assistance in defining future economic: development goals and strategies for the state.

"With ever-rightening budgets, reductions in funding to community and state programs and the status of the farm economy, we have a strong need to target our development activities," said Rod Bates, director of the Department of Economic—Development. "We will be defining a direction and purpose for economic development efforts in the state, and assessing factors and threads that will affect the Department over the next several years."

Staff members of the Department of Economic Development will meet with citizens in Lincoin, Ornaha, Norfolk, Kearney, McCook and Scottsbluff on Aug. 5 and 6 to discuss

In Nebraska Locomotive power

Today we hear the roar of the let. Yesterday it was the whistle of the train. Long ago the crack of the bull whip and the creak of the wagon well. could be heard in Nebraska.

The changes did not come about overnight, nor did they come about without some failures in all those intervening wears. Nebraska, had a ine changes did not come about vithout some fallures in all those in tervening years. Nebraska had a part in one unsuccessful experiment in transportation. In mid-July, 1862, a noteworthy event occurred at Nebraska City. The steamer West-Wind landed at the levee with unusual cargo. It carried "the first- locomotive engine which ever pressed the soil of Nebraska."

Called the prairie motor or the steam wagon, the machine was designed for transporting passengers and goods over ordinary roads. If was thought that this machine would revolutionize prairie transportation. Owned by Gen. J. R. Brown of Minnesota, It welghed 14 tons and had been built in New York. It was propelled by 4 engines of 10 H.P. each. The rear driving wheels were to in dameter and were about 16" wide. It soller was an upright tubular. It carried wood and water sufficient to run the engine four hours, and an engineer, a fireman, and a pilot were required in its operaton. In test runs the steam wagon had been "proved capable of hauling eight tons of freight at the rate of four miles perhour."

hour."

Upon arrival at Nebräska City, steam was raised and the wagon propelled itself from the deck of the West Wind to the —levee. The engine, however, was full of muddy-Alissouri water and its cylinders worked with difficulty.

The next day, the engines having been cleaned, the steam wagon took off on a trial run.

THE NEBRASKA City News eported the event in detail: "Going p Kearney Hill it was necessary to run across a recently plowed garden. A drizzling rain had been failing all the morning and the ground was saturated, that considerable difficulty was experienced in getting through the garden. The driving wheels sank in the soft earth about six inches. Once through, however, the wagon was run upon the unbroken sod, and passed smoothly up a grade of about 400 feet per mile, a distance of nearly half a mile.

Leaving the road, the machiner at a distance of nearly 150 rods through hazel bushes and sumac. After travelling up hill and down dale, If finally halted for the night.

Chronicled subsequent events:

"In the last week of July, 1862, it started west from Nebraska City. The machine seemed to work better than on any former run, and the engineers, handling it prophesied that, within a year, steam wagons, would draw one hundred passengers, mail. and express at 12 miles an hour.

"The initial trip, however, soon ended. About 12 miles out, one of the cranks on the drive-shaft broke; the steam wagon stopped. Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, was the nearest place one might go for repairs. When the repairs arrived, the steam wagon was fired up and taken to Nebraska. City, where it was left in the yard at Arbor Lodge.

"The steam wagon having been dismantled, the engines were subsequently purchased and used by various manufacturing plants in and near Nebraska City. In 1929, a piece of the front axie was found in a garage at Elmwood, Nebraska, where a well digger had used it for years as a weight chisel to break rocks. So ended the dream of promoters who, three-quarters of a century ago, visloned swift travel across the prairies."— Betty Loudon, Nebraska State Historical Society.

Grain storage a major concern

Agnet program
During my two week visit to Nebraska over the July 4th Congresstonal recess, the shortage and availability of grain storage this fall, was a major concern on the minds of many farmers and elevator

In working with Dr. James Kendrick, Professor of Agricultural Economics at the University of Nebraskå and the AGNET agriculture computer network we have come up with a plan to help solve some of the grain storage problems Grain Belt producers are factine.

blems Grain Belt producers are facing.

At my request AGNET has developed a computer program called STORAGELIST. Similar to other listing services on the computer network, the program allows those with available storage to list this Information in the "sellers" list. Those in need of storage can then search the list by state and county, type and storage (ex. metal bin, flat storage or upright silo), and aeration method.
The lister also may include comments, such as amount of storage available, rent, time of day to call, etc.

The result of a search gives a list of names, addresses and phone numbers for the entries matching the searcher's specifications. Those in need of storage can list the requirements in the "buyers" list, which can be searched by those who have storage space to rent.

As commercial elevators are becoming filled to capacity many listings will be for on-farm storage. That's where a program like STORAGELIST can be particularly useful. It provides a mechanism to bring together those that have storage space with those who need it. "As with other listing programs on the network, Nebraskans who are not AGNET clients should contact their county' agent for assistance with entering a listing or searching the STORAGELIST database. There is also the option of having the Central AGNET office enter a listing for a $5

Banking subcommittee Completes Work on Bills
The House Banking Committee's subcommittee on Financial Institutions, on which I serve, completed its work on two important bills last week. I am a cosponsor of one of them, a money laundering bill which makes a number of constructive and effective changes in current law.
Money laundering goes far beyond the failure to meet reporting requirements. Money laundering, wrong in itself, masks other crimes.

In testimony earlier this year, committee members learned that the drug trade generates an estimated $80.90 billion a year. This $90 billion figure representing the amount of money moving through our economy, attributed directly to drug trafficking is stagygering. Money laundering is easy. Stopping it is fard. But we have to use all reasonable means at our disposal.

have to use all reasonable means at our disposal.

This bill makes it a crime for a person to cause a financial institution to fail to file a required report. It authorizes the seizure and forfeiture of the cash or property of that person. It authorizes a civil penalty against a person who designs a financial transaction as to evade reporting requirements. And, it directs the Federal banking agencies to prescribe regulations requiring insured financial institutions to establish and maintain Bank Secrey. establish and maintain Bank Secrecy Act reporting compliance pro-

cestablish and maintain Bank Secrecy Act reporting compliance procedures.

Drug traffickers will go to great lengths to conceal the source of their profits. Tough meney laundering laws are essential to prevent these powerful criminals from concealing the source of their ill-gotten gains.

The Subcommittee also passed a bill intended to reinforce the troublet Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation. The bill calls for creation of a financing corporation that would use a three-step process to raise the additional $16 to $22 billion needed over the next five or six years to take care of insolvent savings and loans. The financing coporation would receive cash from the 12 Federal Home Loans Banks. It would use that cash to buy zero-coupon Treasury bonds and then use those bonds as collateral to Issue $15 billion in bonds on the open market.

Passage of this recapitalization proposal is a first step toward assuring that the FSLIC, which has assets of about $4 billion, can deal with some 200 savings and loans that the Federal-Home Loan Bank Board estimates are in danger of failing.

Q. We have a very large hospital bill which we are frying to get paid off. I understand that as long as I pay something on it every month, the hospital cannot turn it over to a collection agency. Is this correct?

A. The answer to your question depends upon the agreement you hove with the hospital. If you have worked out a long-term payment plan in which you pay a certain amount each month, and if you are meeting your obligations faithfully, the hospital is not likely to turn your bill over to a third party for collection.

faithfully, the hospital is not likely to local your bull.

In the absence of such an agreemnt, however, just "paying something every month" does not prevent a creditor from taking legal action to have a past-due account collected, whether it is through the use of a collection agency or by filing a lawsuit against you. Many creditors would prefer to work out a payment plan with the debtor, even if it means being paid over a long period of time, because it is less costly than using a collection agency. Talk to the hospital's patient accounts office about your bill; don't just assume that the amount you choose to pay each month will be satisfactory to the hospital.

Q. If you receive a giff of money ($10,000) from your parents, and later are divorced, how is the $10,000 counted — as an inheritance, or a gift, or income? Would it be divided in the divorce?

A. When a court grants a divorce, it may also order division of the marital property between the parties. The Nebraska Supreme Court has said that there is no mathematical formula to assist courts in the division of marital property; rather the facts of each particular case are determinative. Generally, however, property, including cash, acquired by one spouse through; horitance or gift during the marriage is set off to the individual whor occived it and is not considered part of the marital property. Therefore, it would not be divided in a divorce.

Vacation fips for parents

Summer is the time for traveling. Some families with small children often avoid vacations because of the hassels traveling with children can create. A little pre-planning can help make fraveling more fun. Try some of the following tips the next time your family travels.

When there's time on their hands young children often think of their stomachs. Soon after leaving home you may be bombarded with cries of "I'm thirsty" or "I'm hungry."

To soothe dry throats take a thermos of ice cold water. If spilled, it isn't sticky and it won't stain the uphoistery or clothes. Since It's less appealing than sweetened drinks, it will probably be requested less often. That means fewer restroom shows to TRY TAMING GROWLING stomachs with some of the following snacks. Apples or pears can be cored to save on waste and mess. You can serve a few wedges at a time. Try making fruit teather to take along.

Finger gelatin is very popular and can be unrefrigerated for up to four hours. These treats may make fingers a little sticky so be sure to have disposable towelettes or a damp washcloth handy.

Some snacks may be a tittle messler; but if you don't mind a few crumbs you can pack small boxes of dry cereal. Package popcorn in small individual bags to nibble. A box of crackers and a tube or bottle of squirt cheese could be a special treat.

YOU WON'T WANT the children eating or d-inking during the whole trip so back some fun things to do. Fill a metal cake pan that has a sliding cover with sencils, paper, crayons, puzzles and dot to dot games. The cake pan with cover place can double as a lap desk.

Card games and small toys can help pass the time. Bring out one item at a lime to help keep your child's atiention.

Pack a ball and jump rope for rest stops. Get out and play for a few minutes with your children. Everyone will benefit from stretching cramped muscles and a little fresh air. Children will be less restless if they get a chance to run and have during long car trips.

FOR THE PARENTS, a travelers survival kit should be packed. Plastic ags for garbage disposal, motion sickness, dirty laundry, wet items or storing gos, for garbage disposal, motion sickness, dirty laundry, wet items or stori inacks are very handy.

Sugar free gum or a small package of hard candles can soothe a child's tur yache, and quiet a child when food service at a restaurant is slow.

Try some of these travel tips and enjoy your vacation this summer.

Wayne ends frustration

Wayne's 'B' Juniors rally past Norfolk

It seemed only appropriate that Casey Nichols and Jason Jorgensen played a major role in Wayne's Junior Legion B' team's thrilling 11-10 victory over Norfolk's Midgets at Overin Field Wednesday night. "I'm sick of getting beat by these guys." Jorgensen said to Nichols during the sixth inning when Norfolk held a seemingly comfortable 9-7 advantage. "I want to beat them so bad can taste it." Jorgensen then added. Norfolk had 10-runned Wayne on two previous occasions during the season, and Jorgensen's hopes of a Wednesday night victory were in Serious jeapordy when Norfolk added another run in the top of the seventh for a 10-7 lead.

Ted McCright followed by reaching on an error and Russ Longe then drew a walk to load the bases.

Gamble then scored the inning's first run on a passed ball before Jorgensen walked to reload the bases.

Jorgensen walked to reload the bases.

That brought up Nichols. As Nichols entered the batter's box, fellow teammate Bill Melena expressed his pleasure in having Nichols at bat because, as Melena said, "he's probably the hottest hitter on the team right now."
Nichols lived up to Melena's billing and delivered a clutch two-run single to center field to plate McCright and Longe to the the game at 10.
Jorgensen advanced to third on the single and with Nichols on first, Norfolk's coach told-his catcher not to make a play on Nichols should he try to steal second base.

BANCROFT — Wayne's 18-and-under softball team ended its regular season on a negative note dropping a 5-3 decision to Bancroft here Wednes-

Three Bancroft runs in the bottom of the sixth imning proved to be the difference in the game. Bancroft held a 2-1 advantage heading into the bottom of the sixth, but used two walks, a single and a clutch two out triple to increase its lead to 5-1.

Wayne battled back, however, and staged a mild rally in the top of the seventh.

As Jorgensen crossed the plate, it ignited a celebration in front of the Wayne dugout and ended the squad's frustration of losing two lopsided affairs to Norfolk earlier in the year.

Wayne opened a 1-0 lead in the first when McCright was hit by a pitch, moved to second when Longe walked and scored on Nichols' RB1 single.

Wayne then scored its last two runs of the inning when Steve Luttl walked and Melena stroked his first of two singles on the night.

Time to start thinking about hunting again

LINCOLN— It's always a little difficult to start thinking about hunting during the hot summer months when you're automatically thinking about thinking, but August 1 officially kicks off this year's hunting with the opening of squirrel season.

Early season squirrel hunting squirrels when there is still a maximum amount of vegetation to contend with represents one of the biggest challenges confronting a rifleman. Being successful on squirrels in early August takes a certain determination— you have to be a darned determined squirrel hunter to ignore sweltering temperatures, pesky bitting insects and all those leaves on the chance you might bag a bushytall or two.

or two.

But if you like to hunt and are anxious to get back into the woods, there are going to be plenty of squirrels around this year to help you enjoy Nebraska's best early season squirrel hunting is found along the hardwood covered bluffs overlooking the Missouri River and the woods of Gage. Johnson and Pawnee Counties. But hunters across the state can find exciting hunting wherever walnut or other nut trees grow. When September rolls around, cornitelds and associated cottonwood stands become the more popular hunting spots.

For an exciting early season outling and some tasty eating, try your hand at squirrel hunting this fall. Nebraska's season opens August 1 and will continue through Jan. 31, 1987.
