Sessions begin Oct. 6 in Wayne

'I Can Cope' cancer education program scheduled

"I Can Cope," a seven-week cancer education program, is scheduled to get underway on Monday, Oct. 6 in Wayne. Sponsored by the Wayne County unit of the American Cancer Society, the program is designed to clarify facts and myths about cancer.

Sessions will be held each Monday evening, Oct. 6 through Nov. 17, in the meeting room of the Columbus Federal building in Wayne.

Each program will run from 7 to 9 p.m., and no pre-registration is required.

Glasses will cover such topics as "Living With Cancer"; "Learning More About Cancer"; "Dealing With Daily Hazards"; "Understanding Your Emotions"; "Enhancing Self-Esteem and Sexuality"; "Keeping Active in Mind and Body"; and "Identifying Support Systems and Resources."

"Persons attending the class don't necessarily have to have cancer, have a family member with cancer, or a friend with cancer," said Hall.

"The program is also for those who just want to gain knowledge, but definitely we encourage cancer patients and their families to attend."

Hall added that many times cancer patients don't realize that they are not the only ones struggling. "Their family, friends and co-workers are also struggling."

FOLLOWING IS the schedule of classes, along with a brief description of the class and persons presenting the programs.

Oct. 6 — "Living With Cancer," presented by Dr. B. J. Martin of Wayne. Participants will get to know each other and talk about their expectations for the program. They are taught about the human body and its function, and how cancer affects it. They also will learn what cancer is, how it grows, and what might cause it. Current research is discussed as well as its impact on our ability to prevent, diagnose and treat cancer.

Oct. 13 — "Learning More About Cancer," presented by Dr. William Vaughn, an oncologist from the University of Nebraska Medical Center at Omaha. This session gives the group a thorough medical understanding of cancer, including the terms used by doctors and other health professionals. It explores different methods of treatment — what they are, what they do and how they work. Common myths about cancer and the issue of unproven methods of treatment also are discussed.

Oct. 20 — "Dealing With Daily Health," presented by Danette Worman, dietitian at Providence Medical Center. Covered will be day-to-day personal health issues that confront patients going through treatment. The session explores possible side effects of the disease and treatments, and what can be done to control them. It also emphasizes the importance of good nutrition to keep as healthy and strong as possible while undergoing treatment.

Oct. 27 — "Understanding Your Emotions," presented by Joan Sudman-Shapiro of Wayne, a social worker with Monroe Mental Health Center in Norfolk. The program will focus on the feelings that are part of experiencing cancer and the importance of recognizing and expressing them. It also looks at ways patients can improve their communication with doctors and other medical personnel and with their family and friends.

Nov. 3 — "Enhancing Self-Esteem and Sexuality," presented by Jan Stalling of Wayne. The program continues to focus on the emotions and explores the changes that cancer patients face in their bodies and in their roles in life. The session addresses concerns about sexuality and relationships. It also outlines potential problems with self-esteem and helps participants work toward regaining a positive self-image.

Nov. 10 — "Keeping Active in Mind and Body," presented by David Gates, a masseuse with Body Language in Norfolk. This session focuses on living a quality life within the limits that cancer may impose. Ways of conserving energy and maintaining physical fitness also are discussed, and the group examines stress and ways of reducing it, including practicing various relaxation exercises.

Nov. 17 — "Identifying Support Systems and Resources," presented by Ken Oids, a Wayne attorney; Ann Witkowski, supervisor of the Home Health Care program; the Rev. Jim Thompson of Wayne; Thelma Moller of the Wayne County Social Services office; Verlyn Anderson, R.N., at Providence Medical Center; and Julie James, area representative for the American Cancer Society. Participants in the class are introduced to a variety of community resources. They also learn how to benefit from the services of different local agencies.

HALL SAID THAT during each of the classes, participants will be encouraged to raise questions and talk about their feelings with the health professionals involved in the course.

"Through their interaction with others in the course," said Hall, "participants will come to realize they are not alone in their struggles and will support each other with encouragement and practical advice."

Hall added that the knowledge and understanding gained in the sessions will aid participants in making informed decisions and will allow them to regain a sense of control over their lives.

COORDINATING THE program are Kris Giese and Cheryl Hall, members of the board of directors of the Wayne County unit of the American Cancer Society.

Hall emphasized that the program is free and open to everyone.

Taught by Marie George

Interest sought in class on parenting

Interest is being sought in a proposed parenting class taught by Dixon resident Marie George.

Mrs. George, the mother of six children, said the class is designed for parents who are sometimes overwhelmed with the responsibilities of being a good parent.

She added that the class will be offered if enough interest is expressed, and will be arranged to fit the schedules of the participants.

"THE CLASS IS an opportunity for participants to examine the best ways to deal with problems as they arise," said George, "and to develop self-confidence in parenting skills."

In addition to being the mother of six children, the youngest three in college, George has a master of social work from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, and has worked in child welfare, family service, and satellite clinic settings.

In order to update her professional training, she attended both sessions of school at Wayne State College this summer, participating in classes on parenting and counseling.

PERSONS INTERESTED in more information about the proposed parenting class are asked to contact Mrs. George at Rt. 1, Box 50, Dixon, Neb., 68732, or telephone 584-2625.

Interested persons are asked to contact George as soon as possible so a time can be arranged for an introductory meeting.

Dream not many realize

In my line of work, it isn't uncommon to hear athletes discuss how they're going to attend a certain college or university to play ball. As a matter of fact, several high school and junior high school athletes from the Wayne Herald coverage area have discussed this with me, or I've heard them discuss it with an acquaintance.

So this is for all you junior high and high school jocks out there that think you're good enough to play major college sports or even professional athletics.

In Sports Illustrated's 1986 College and Pro Football Spectacular, there's an excellent first person account by former Pitt lineman Robert Schilken which reveals how his dreams of becoming a college football star weren't realized.

Schilken attended Mt. Lebanon High, and after achieving "All-Everything" during his prep career—which included making the Parade All-American team—he decided to attend Pitt.

But Schilken's dreams of becoming an All-American at Pitt didn't materialize. As a matter of fact, he rarely even started for the Panthers.

During the article, Schilken discusses the drastic change from high school to college football, how he got demotivated without an explanation from the coaching staff and the difficulties he encountered trying to find time to study while playing ball.

Schilken's dreams of reaching the big time weren't met. But fortunately, he was intelligent enough to select a school that did meet his aspirations academically, which will enable him to someday achieve another dream of his—becoming a doctor.

If there is one message in Schilken's article that all high school students should read, it's this—"If I could give out one piece of advice to a football player coming out of high school, it would be this: Pick a school for itself, not just football. Football should be just the icing on the cake. Take my own experience. For a variety of reasons football didn't turn out the way I wanted, yet I graduated in eight semesters, I never failed a course, never withdrew from one. I wasn't just another jock who didn't make it."

Those that are playing for major universities and in the pros are indeed excellent athletes. But they're also lucky.

This isn't a column trying to discourage high school athletes from striving for a scholarship or a walk-on invitation from a university they've always dreamed of playing for.

It's simply a reminder to weigh all options when determining which school to attend, and to remember to be realistic—the odds of becoming a star are against you.

Spectators attending Wayne junior high, freshman and junior varsity football games will no longer have to sit in their cars to be comfortable.

The Wayne Booster Club raised approximately $3,000 to supply the practice field with bleachers.

The Booster Club paid for the bleachers by sponsoring fish fries, selling concessions, at ball games and having other fund-raising affairs.

The bleachers are positioned on the north side of the field, and stretch from approximately each 45 yard line.

There isn't a bad seat in the house.

Allen wins Newcastle Tourney

Allen's varsity volleyball team broke a three game losing spell by capturing the championship honors Tuesday evening in the two-day Newcastle Volleyball Tournament.

The Eagles took two of three sets from both Walthill and Wynot, and then swept Ponca in the championship game to come away with the tournament's first place finish.

"This is what we need — to get ourselves established and get the momentum on our side," said Allen Head Coach Gary Troth, who saw his team's record jump to 6-4 on the season.

After what Troth claimed was "a bad game" against Beemer last week, he had re-arranged the Eagle offense. During the Newcastle Tournament, Troth said his players were more relaxed, content and gave more of a team effort.

He stressed the words "team effort." In the first game of the tournament against Walthill, he used 15 players. The bench people established a depth which was effective in winning the tournament.

Against Walthill, Allen narrowly won the first set by a 15-13 score. "Walthill played very well in that set, but they missed some critical serves," Troth said.

In the second set, Walthill got off to a commanding 13-2 lead before Allen came roaring back to narrow the gap to 10-13. Allen finally ended up losing the set by a score of 11-15.

In the final set, Allen scored 15 points to Walthill's 9 points to take the match.

Leading server in the Walthill game was Nikki Olesen with a 20-20 performance with six aces. Top spiker for the Eagles was Kristi Chase, 11 for 11 with seven aces and two blocks for aces. Leading in the setter category was Olesen with a perfect 42 of 42.

Against Wynot, the Eagles handily won the first set by a 15-9 margin, but then lost the second set by a score of 10-15.

The third and final game of the match was close and exciting, according to Troth, who said it was "anybody's game."

The lead went back and forth the whole time during the final set. Wynot got the lead 14-15 with the serve. However, the Wynot server missed on her attempt.

Allen came back and scored three straight points, which included an ace by Kristin Hansen, to win the set 17-15 and win the match.

Deb Uehling led the Eagle serving department, making good on 13 of 14 attempts with two aces. Olesen was 10 of 12 in serving with three aces.

Leading spiker was Tiffany Harder, who was 15 of 15 with seven aces and one ace block. Chase was 8 of 9 in spikes with three aces and Kristin Hansen was 7 of 8 with three aces.

Olesen was 39 of 41 in the setting department, leading in that department.

The Allen Eagle momentum swung over into the championship III, as they won the tourney title with sweeping set wins of 15-12 and 15-7 over Ponca.

Top server for the Eagles was Candace Jones, who was 9 of 9 with two aces; Kristin Hansen, 11 of 11 with two aces and Olesen who was 8 of 9 with three aces.

Leading spikers were Chase who was 15 of 16 with six aces; Barb Hansen, 5 of 6 for four aces and Missy Martinson, who was 6 of 6 with one ace.

The leading setter for the Eagles was again Olesen, who was 30 of 31 in that area.

This Thursday, Oct. 2, the Allen Eagles are at home against Walthill and they will have another home game against Bancroft on Oct. 7.

Lund lives, plays with strong ethics

athlete of the month

By John Prather Sports Editor

Considering Brad Lund's work ethic, it isn't surprising he's been one of Northeast Nebraska's most potent offensive threats for the past three seasons.

"According to Wakefield head coach Dennis Wilbur, Lund is a true-blue 'workaholic.'"

"During the entire summer, he lifted weights at 6 a.m. before he went to work, seven days a week. He farms, too. And we all know how tough that kind of work can be," the Trojan skipper said.

Lund has used his hard-working characteristics to his advantage by rushing for 922 yards last year and 857 yards as a sophomore. But this year after four games, he's running at a pace that should see him gain close to 1,000 yards.

After four games this season, Lund has gained 427 yards on 68 carries. That's an average of over six yards a crack and at that pace, he will finish with just under 1,000 yards.

"We're hoping to get the 1,000 yards," Wilbur said. "That's kind of a team goal."

And despite Lund's fine speed (5.0 in the 40) and his surprising strength (a bench press of 200 pounds, even though he's only 5-7 and weighs 155 pounds), he'll only go as far as his offensive line permits him.

But linemen Bruce Bartels, Colby Meyer, Raymond Ferguson, John Wriedt, Kevin Greve and Doug Roberts have done a fine job this season of opening holes, according to Wilbur.

"We're a team, and we play together as a team," Wilbur said. "And those guys have done their part—they've done a pretty good job of opening holes for our backs."

In addition to his threatening running, Lund has also caught two passes for 43 yards, totaled 36 tackles, including 13 unassisted, recovered two fumbles, intercepted a pass, scored 10 touchdowns and five two-point PATs for 70 points.

But in addition to leading by obvious example, Wilbur said Lund's biggest asset might be his inner drive to succeed, which rubs off on the other players.

"He's really a good kid. He's very coachable, very dedicated and if you ask him to do something, he'll at least try it," Wilbur said. "But the thing that's great about him is he has incredible drive. He wants to succeed, and the other kids see that and work harder, too."

Wakefield, which sports a 2-2 record with its losses coming against Class D-2's No. 1 ranked Coleridge and Class D-1's No. 1 ranked Bancroft-Rosalie, is full of senior leadership, according to Wilbur.

"Brad's a leader. He prevents little problems on the team from turning into big ones. But Randy Kinney, Kevin Greve and Bruce Bartels joined Brad by lifting weights and playing basketball all summer. Craig Anderson and Jody Navrkal did a lot of work in the summer, too," Wilbur said. "All these kids are leaders. They came into the season with a positive attitude, and hopefully, it will pay off."

After graduation, Lund will have several options. He likes farming and raising horses, and he's a member of the national honor society. But whatever he pursues, Wilbur is sure he'll be successful.

"He's smart, has a sense of humor, is hard-working and is one of those guys that just never gives up. He's a good one."

WILDCAT-DEFENDERS converge on the Kearney offense.

Lopers 17 point eruption spells defeat for Wildcats

"In the three years I've been here, the special teams have played an important part in each Kearney State game, so we'll have to play well in that phase, too."

Those were the words of Wayne State head coach Pete Chapman prior to Saturday's clash with the Antelopes. But unfortunately for the Wildcats, it was breakdown in their kickoff coverage that fueled the Lopers to a 27-3 victory.

Kearney broke open a rough defensive battle by packing 10 points in the first half's final 2:08.

But despite Kearney's late eruption, Chapman said he was confident the Wildcats could turn things around in the second half.

"I thought we'd come out strong in the second half and play well," he said. "We made adjustments during halftime and covered some areas that needed to be covered."

But Kearney's Ted Murray received the second half kickoff at his own six, broke up the middle before gliding to the side lines and streaked 94 yards for the Lopers' 16th point in the last 2:23.

Travis Parker added the PAT to supply Kearney with a 17 point lead at the 14:45 mark of the third stanza.

"The kickoff return broke our back," Chapman said. "We fell behind by 17 points, and that forced us to change our game plan and allowed them to adjust."

Both teams slugged it out during an even first half, but Kearney pieced together a brilliant 98-yard scoring drive in 1:10 late in the first half. The Lopers executed 10 quick plays that climaxed with a Kevin Troser seven yard run to pay dirt at the 2:08 mark.

Parker added the PAT boot, and he was called in again just moments later after Murray returned a Darin Blackburn punt 29 yards to the Wayne 32.

The Lopers used three more plays to set Parker up for a 31-yard field goal with one second before intermission.

"That field goal hurt us," Chapman said. "But we were certainly still in the game at that point. But we couldn't bounce back after the kickoff return."

After Murray's touchdown, the Lopers built a 27 point lead in the fourth quarter when Mark Voss scampered 30 yards to the end zone and Parker added a 42-yard field goal with 3:19 remaining in the contest.

Wayne State had trouble engineering a successful offensive drive in the second half, and entered Antelope territory just once during the final two quarters.

But the Wildcats avoided a shutout when Jeff Mathers replaced starting quarterback John Lawrence and guided Wayne to the Kearney 17, where Tony Wiese booted a field goal with two ticks remaining on the game clock.

Mathers turned in a fine performance. The 6-4 southpaw steered Wayne 71 yards to set up the Wildcats' only score, completed 6-of-10 passes for 74 yards and completed two other aerials that were called back because of penalties.

Although Mathers made an impression on Chapman, the Wildcat skipper said Lawrence is still his quarterback for the time being.

"I really haven't thought about the possibility of Mathers playing a lot in the (Missouri) Western game this week," Chapman said. "Jeff did a good job while he was in there, but you have to remember that it was both teams' second teams. John's still our quarterback, but obviously, if he has trouble moving the team in the future, something will have to be done."

Lawrence completed 19-of-37 passes for 119 yards. But Chapman said falling behind by 17 points early in the second half affected the Wildcat offense.

"When the score was even, I thought we moved the ball. But we had to change our style when we fell behind and Kearney was able to adjust," he said. "I don't think John's the problem with our offense as much as he is just a part of it."

Wayne lined up in a shot gun formation more often than usual against Kearney, and although Chapman said the shot gun limits the offense, it could be used again in the future.

"We had to go to the shot gun when we fell behind, and that cuts down on other things — it reduces our running game," he said. "But we could use

NACI schedules Wayne forum

Six legislative forums, offering participants an opportunity to share ideas on business issues and meet with state senators and candidates for the Nebraska Legislature, have been scheduled by the Nebraska Association of Commerce and Industry (NACI) in eastern Nebraska in October.

The forums, open to NACI members and local area chamber members, are being sponsored by local chambers of commerce in each community and will be conducted by NACI staff members. Reservations in each community can be made through the local chamber offices.

The area forum will be a noon luncheon at the Black Knight in Wayne on Oct. 7.

In announcing a total schedule of 25 forums in 24 Nebraska communities this fall, NACI President Jack Swartz said that, "These forums are being held statewide to get input from the business community about the most important issues to be considered by the 1987 Nebraska Legislature. For NACI to effectively represent Nebraska's business community, it is very important that the staff keep in direct, personal touch with the grassroots."

"The major focus of the forums this year will be allowing the NACI membership an opportunity to meet and get to know current state senators and legislative candidates. In communities where there are contested state senate races, we have invited both candidates to discuss issues of interest to the business community," Swartz added.

Alternatives available for PIK certificate use

Generic PIK certificates, now popularly dubbed certs, offer the best game in town for farmers to deal with the dilemma of low feed grain prices and a storage glut. And, similar to playing bridge, farmers have numerous possibilities—determined by "the cards in their hand" (individual situation)—to try to win a complicated "game" this fall with high points equal to dollars per bushel for their grain.

Strategies for the use of certs continue to evolve, according to Lynn Lutgen, University of Nebraska-Lincoln extension grain marketing specialist. Because of a dismal outlook for an increase in the cash market price for corn, producers must do their homework and pencil-pushing on various PIK alternatives, he said.

"Normally, after fall harvest, grain prices would gravitate back toward the loan price, (nationally set at $1.92 per bushel), but other factors seem likely to keep the cash price depressed in the range of $1.20 to $1.40," Lutgen said.

"The corn market is likely to have a long tail," with low prices extending into next year through the accumulation of a large number of PIK certificates by grain dealers," he explained. Each time the U.S. Department of Agriculture releases another 10 percent in deficiency payments in the form of certs, this translates into 500 million bushels of free stocks nationwide, Lutgen said.

Grain buyers and users will not need to "go to the market" to get grain, but can take it out of their own facilities, or Commodity Credit Corporation stocks in bases and other storage facilities which are easily accessible.

This adds up to critical decisions for grain producers in buying, selling or holding on to PIK certificates to enhance income from 1986 and prior years' grain, possibly spread income from one calendar year to another for tax purposes and deal with an increasingly urgent concern—suitable grain storage—not only for 1986, but looking ahead to 1987, Lutgen said.

"We're going to be living with PIK's for the next few months and into years," Lutgen said, "and we'd better get accustomed to dealing with them."

FOR PRODUCERS with crowded on-farm storage that needs to be opened up, a possible best bet is to obtain a loan on the grain this fall, redeem the grain under loan with PIK certificates and immediately sell the freed-up grain on the cash market. This would relieve the producer of holding onto the grain through the winter with the accompanying problems of keeping it in condition.

Another alternative is available for consideration by a producer who has 5,000 bushels of corn to deal with and an elevator with no acceptable storage which will not issue a warehouse receipt, Lutgen said.

Two unproven alternatives have existed up to now, Lutgen said: selling on the cash market when the elevator has not previously agreed to take the grain, at around $1.20 a bushel, or piling it on the ground.

A change in previously announced procedures by ASCS relating to a 5-cent-per-bushel risk payment to farmers for storing grain on the ground has made it impossible for a farmer to obtain the nickel except when the grain ultimately is forfeited to the Commodity Credit Corporation, Lutgen said.

"This calls for the grain to be picked up off the ground within 120 days and put in approved storage and forfeiture of the grain at the end of the 9-month loan period," Lutgen said. During the total loan period, the burden is on the farmer to preserve the quality of the grain or sustain heavy discounts when it is surrendered.

Now, however, producers can buy PIK certificates from cooperating elevators and realize income from grain in excess to their own storage capacity without taking the risk involved in grain dumping—the trade term for ground storage.

"This involves a trusting relationship between the elevator operator and the farmer," Lutgen said. The farmer agrees to follow the procedure which will allow the elevator to move the corn on the cash market in a planned fashion.

THE ELEVATOR WILL issue a warehouse receipt on the grain, which the farmer takes to the ASCS office to obtain the loan at approximately $1.84 per bushel. The producer pockets the check, then turns around and redeems the grain under loan with certs, some or all of which were purchased from the elevator. The grain, now free stocks, is sold to the elevator for around $1.40 a bushel on the prevailing market, Lutgen said. The transaction can net the farmer about 44 cents more a bushel without risk by going the loan route rather than selling the corn outright for $1.40 a bushel if it "has a home," or only $1.20 if sold without condition to the elevator, Lutgen said.

The difference between what the elevator originally paid one producer for a certificate and the price received from a second farmer is a cost to the latter, Lutgen said. This "margin" can run from only a couple of percentage points added on by local elevators and co-ops interviewed to a larger spread exacted by large grain firms, Lutgen said.

PIK certificates in central Nebraska are selling for about 114 percent of face value, he added. "These examples are only 'the tip of the iceberg' of the host of possibilities that are crystallizing for commerce in PIK certificates," Lutgen said. Astute producers will need to scramble to keep on top of new deals which are complex and have far-reaching implications for grain marketing management—not just this fall, but well into the next marketing year, he concluded.

Pesticides appear on the endangered list

by Cheryl Stubbendieck
Vice President/Information

Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation

We've all heard a lot about endangered species. We will be hearing more about endangered pesticides.

It's a fairly lengthy, cumbersome process for a species of plant or animal to be declared endangered and afforded special protection. It is somewhat less difficult for an agricultural chemical to make the endangered pesticide list—and be marked by environmental extremists for elimination.

Chemicals have their place in production agriculture. It is true that pesticide residues have been reported in eatables from watermelons to applesauce, but scientists are badly split on just what effect, if any, one part per billion of a particular compound has on health.

The general public, though, is convinced that pesticides will cause cancer, sterility, birth defects or other bad things, and it's understandable that people are worried. But these same people forget that they are the ones who refuse to buy blemished oranges or lettuce with holes in it.

It is against this background that Congress has been debating the reauthorization of the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act. At this writing, Farm Bureau has been successful in amending the House version of the act to protect farmers from liability if they have applied ag chemicals according to label directions.

"According to label directions" is the key phrase. If all chemicals were always applied according to the authorized methods, amounts and uses, there would be far fewer incidences of residues in food or groundwater.

PROPERLY MIXING and applying ag chemicals isn't a simple matter. Spray equipment must be calibrated, chemical and water must be properly mixed, used chemical containers must be disposed of as provided by law. In many cases, gloves, eye coverings or other protective clothing must be worn.

So that farmers could properly and safely apply these products, states and the Environmental Protection Agency have provided training sessions and required certification before an individual could purchase restricted use pesticides.

The EPA is currently reviewing all of the farm chemical products registered before 1972, to determine if they should be made restricted use or remain as general, over-the-counter products. As a result, many products that were available to anyone are now restricted to certified users.

Granular rootworm and corn-borer insecticides are now largely restricted, the stored grain fumigants are all restricted, and some herbicides will eventually join that list, according to Emery Nelson, extension pesticide training coordinator for the University of Nebraska. Already, Bladex herbicide was made restricted use on Sept. 1, Nelson said, adding "I think everyone who is raising corn will need to get certified." Other well-known pesticides now on the restricted list include Thimet, Counter, Mocap, Dyfonate 20G, DiSyston and Furadan.

FARMERS CAN become certified by attending a three-hour training session offered during the winter months, or by completing a home-study course or taking a written exam administered by the EPA. Clearly, taking the course is the route of choice.

As a result of promotional efforts to stress the need for certification, more than 13,000 Nebraska farmers were certified last year, bringing to more than 35,000 the total who can buy and apply restricted products. Nelson expects another 2,000 to "get with the program" this coming winter.

The certification program is a reasonable, realistic way to minimize the occasional pesticide problems which frighten so many people. By making the more potent compounds harder to get and by increasing the chances of safe use, the problem is reduced.

Without agricultural chemicals, farmers could not produce the quantity or quality of crop they do today. Unfortunately, the insects, weeds, plant pathogens and rodents which attack agricultural crops are themselves in no danger of becoming endangered species.

We have "Raider fans" who are glued to the TV set tonight. (Sun.) Raider fans are not those who follow the fortunes of the L.A. football team. Raider fans watch "Raiders of the Lost Ark" over and over and over again. There are five in our family. I am not one. So I can putter around in the kitchen without interruption except during commercials.

We finally are seeing some sun. And we could stand a lot more of it. The Big Farmer has been turning hay this weekend. Others are hauling beans and cutting silage.

I've had several fun experiences the past two weeks, in case you thought getting my driver's license was the high spot.

For one, I took part of a woman's retreat with the theme of "Life is Like a Patchwork Quilt." And you know, that's quite an analogy.

The events of our lives can be compared to the pieces of cloth that are put together to form an eye-catching, pleasing creation.

We don't see the beauty of the pieces until it is put together, completed.

ONE MAN told me last week that he had achieved growth only after emotional pain. Wherever we go we can find people experiencing pain, people who are hurting.

I've also been involved in a new support group formed to help those hurting from a chronic health problem or disability. It's been heart-warming to see the attendance grow, to hear participants share their experiences, and to observe their appreciation.

We had the opportunity to watch one set of college volleyball and were amazed at how different it is from high school games. Hoskins proudly claims Wayne State's coach, and we all enjoy their successes. Problem was, the team they beat was Nebraska Wesleyan. I couldn't decide who to cheer for.

We also did a fun thing in Omaha last week by eating at the House of Genji. The tables in this restaurant are grills. The vegetables and meat are cooked at your table, by a Japanese chef, with much flourish and fanfare.

And I attended a conference sponsored by the State Health Department on Wellness Promotion for Older Nebraskans.

We already knew that people past

65 are the fastest-growing segment of our society. But I had not stopped to consider that the "Baby Boomers" will all be past 65 by 2020. That thought is sobering.

ONE OF the slogans we liked was "One does not stop exercising because one grows old, but grows old because one stops exercising."

An energetic, enthusiastic YMCA person taught us some "low-impact" exercises, with catchy music for background.

It certainly doesn't help to live a long life unless it can be a healthy one. Our senior citizens are leading the way in adapting to healthy lifestyles.

I'm going to promote my health right now by falling into bed. All these experiences are tiring!

FALL PRUNING

Pruning can be both beneficial and harmful to plant material, depending on what is being pruned and when it is pruned.

Basically, there are four reasons for pruning plant material:

- To improve the structure of scaffolding branches of larger shade trees, thus improving their strength.
- To improve their appearance.
- To remove any diseased or damaged wood, or anything which may be a threat to human life or property. For this one there are no seasonal restrictions.
- To increase the production of flowers, fruit or foliage.

Concerns seem to center around the pruning of the following plant materials: apples, maples and peonies.

With apple trees, if they have just been planted, you are better off to let them alone. Any pruning now would reduce carbohydrate production that is needed for vigorous growth next spring. On established trees just coming into bearing, the best time to prune is later winter or early spring. The resulting vigorous growth will produce an abundance of fruits.

DO NOT push the dormant pruning of apple trees to early in the winter. Some folks have asked if they could do it in November; the answer is no. Evidence has shown that extremely cold temperatures following pruning are likely to result in freeze injury to the trees.

With maples, if it is necessary to prune, late fall or early winter is acceptable. However, the chance for winter damage from low temperatures still exists.

Pruning maples at the same time as the apple trees will result in excessive sap flow known as "bleeding." While this has not been proven to be harmful to the plant, it is at least objectionable to have excessive sap flowing on the tree trunk and dropping on the sidewalks, drives or cars. The maples, burches, walnuts, elms and dogwoods all come under the "bleeder" category. Pruning these trees in spring after they are in full leaf will minimize excess sap flow.

Now the peonies. Admittedly their foliage is looking poorly right now and many of you are anxious to remove them from the landscape. Be patient a little longer. Once a good frost has touched the other peony foliage, it is safe to cut them back. Doing so prematurely will cut into their vigor next spring.

Once they have been nipped by a good frost, cut the peony foliage back to the ground. Be sure to remove all clipped foliage from the area for good sanitation.

UP WITH AGRICULTURE
By David Garst

If Thomas Jefferson, one of our country's founding fathers and a strong supporter of agriculture, were to look at rural America today, he'd be surprised.

Jefferson was a vocal supporter of country life, and a firm believer that the country was the most wholesome life a person could live, and that these people made the best citizens.

A lot of changes have taken place in American agriculture since the revolutionary times. Many changes have occurred in the last 50 years. For example, many small farming communities that once dotted the countryside are fast becoming a novelty. And technological developments in agriculture are changing modern crop and livestock production.

In several ways, rural America is becoming more urbanized. In fact, according to a recent study by the Center for Population Research at Georgetown University, there may be more similarities between rural and urban America today than differences. "The time when rural people could be distinguished from their city cousins has largely disappeared," the study says.

Added to this is the fact that more people — most of them originally from the city — are moving to the country, according to 1980 census figures. Today about 60 million people live in rural America, an increase of about 11 percent since the migration to the country began in the early 1970s. It seems people either got tired of the fast-paced city life, or they got wise to the benefits of rural America that we farmers knew all along.

Some of these developments in rural America would please Jefferson. He'd be pleased to see such things as rural free delivery and quality rural roads. A farmer himself, he'd also be impressed with all the new technology involved with agricultural production. Jefferson thrived on new ideas, and encouraged innovation.

To be sure, rural America today is experiencing a rebirth, a transformation that's taking shape right before our eyes. But as much as we progress as a society, we must not forget our original rural heritage.

Our roots in rural America will always be something special, something unique. It's a part of our heritage we must preserve. Even with all the developments that are sweeping through rural America today, we shouldn't take the "country" out of our country.

The auxiliary is now making plans for this year's fall festival scheduled for the end of October. Blue lights will also be available to honor a special person, deceased or living.

ETV airs GED class

Seventy-two million Americans are high school dropouts. While dropping out of school may have seemed like a good idea at the time, many dropouts find in later years that a diploma is the key to better-paying jobs, promotions, higher salaries, and personal satisfaction.

Nebraska adults who want to earn a high school equivalency diploma by taking the GED exam will find help on GED ON TV, an upcoming 43-part telecourse airing on all stations of the Nebraska ETV Network. Designed as a GED prep course, the series will be broadcast on Saturdays and Sundays at 9:30 a.m. beginning Nov. 1 and 2.

GED ON TV is divided into three segments—reading, writing and math—plus an episode on test-taking tips. Students can follow the entire series, or just the segments they need to prepare for the exam.

Animation, theatrical sketches, and drama are used in the series, not just to make the learning fun, but to illustrate the information as graphically and effectively as possible. Some of the lessons were taped in outdoor setting, while others feature studio performances by actors and actresses, and appearances by personalities such as Wally "Famous" Amos, and astronaut Sally Ride and Kathryn Sullivan.

Three companion study books, one for each segment (reading, writing and math) are available through Nebraska ETV. Each book costs $7, or $21 for the set. A teacher's guide with additional information on the programs and suggestions on how to use the series most effectively is available at $4 each. Study books or the teacher's guide may be ordered by calling the Nebraska ETV, P.O. Box 83111, Lincoln, NE 68501-3111.

For information on taking the GED exam, Nebraska residents may contact their local Adult Basic Education program coordinator or the Adult Education section of the Department of Education. The phone number for that state office is (402) 472-2016; the address is P.O. Box 94987, Lincoln, NE 68509-4987.

GED ON TV is produced by the Kentucky Educational Television (KET) Network, in conjunction with the Mississippi Authority for Educational Television (MAET).

Use Eye Drops Correctly

Prescription eye drops are valuable in helping control many eye problems such as glaucoma, infection, and inflammation. Eye drop solutions are manufactured with extreme care because they must be sterile (free of contamination by microorganisms) and, usually, isotonic (compatible with the salt content of eye fluids). In order for drops to remain sterile, they must be stored and handled with care. Correct use prevents undue side effects and can make medicines work better. Unless directed otherwise, follow this procedure.

- (1) Tilt your head backward and outward so that the drops do not enter the tear ducts (at the sides of the eyes nearest the nose).
- (2) Gently separate the upper and lower eyelids with your fingers and look to the ceiling or sky. Holding the dropper or container about one inch from the eye, place the appropriate number of drops into the lower eyelid. Do not place drops directly onto the eyeball.
- (3) Gently close your eyes for one or two minutes to allow for absorption of the medicine and to prevent solution escape.

115 participate in CROP Walk

APPROXIMATELY 115 PERSONS took part in last Sunday's CROP (Christian Rural Overseas Program) Walk in Wayne, sponsored by local churches. Among those participating in the annual event for world hunger was young Kate Samuelson, at left, who takes a moment to rest against her mother's legs before the 10-mile trek begins. Kate is the daughter of Lyle and

Use imagination to relieve stress

by Jeff Berger

During the past few weeks, we have been running two separate series of articles dealing with different stress-related topics. The first series dealt with the three aspects of your life that are essential to proper stress management, those being proper diet, good exercise and emotional well-being.

We have received favorable comments on the articles and we appreciate the response that we have gotten from those of you that follow us every week.

With that thought in mind, we are bringing you another series of articles dealing with some simple techniques that you can use to reduce the stress in your everyday life. Some of these techniques are similar to those used by us in our weekly sessions. If you are interested in a more in-depth explanation or, better yet, a demonstration of these and other techniques, feel free to visit with us any Thursday night at 7 p.m. at Wayne-Carroll High School in Room 202. We would be happy to help you in any way we can.

Many of us have often spent an enjoyable hour or two remembering a pleasant place of time in our lives. Somehow, this place is rather magical, almost unreal. It almost seems that while you are in this place, you can't be harmed and that all those pressures and troubles in your life simply disappear.

Creative visualization has a variety of other names. Some are mental imagery, useful daydreaming, power napping, and creative daydreaming. But the process is usually the same in all of these techniques, despite the variety of names.

WHAT IS DONE when trying to create a daydream, or image, is to as vividly as possible, coax yourself to think about a very relaxing, pleasant scene in your mind. This could be from a past experience or it could be something you've seen in pictures, but the idea is to image this scene as completely as possible.

The reason this works is simply because it is easy to fool your mind. If you have ever had a bad dream, you know that an image can seem real if it is complete and vivid enough.

To try this, find a quiet place where you can be for a while without being disturbed. Get in the most comfortable position possible and start by slowing your breathing down. This is done by breathing through your nose only and consciously taking deeper, slower breaths.

Now let your eyes slowly close and go to that special, relaxing place. Go slowly and take in as much detail as possible. If negative images enter your image, force them out by consciously focusing on the pleasant image. Try to include something from each of your senses. Include odors, sounds, textures, views, and even tastes, if possible. The more senses you include in your image, the better it will be. Stay there until you feel refreshed.

By practicing this every day, you will get benefits from this. I must "stress", however, that learning to relax well is just like learning anything else, it takes practice and time. You cannot expect to relax on cue if you don't know what relaxation feels like. Give it a chance and it could make a great difference in your attitude and life.

The Wayne Stress Prevention Center is sponsored by the Providence Medical Center Foundation.

cards of thanks

HELEN STEINER RICE has written: "We give our loved ones back to God. And just as He first gave them to us and did not lose them in the giving, so we have not lost them in returning them to Him...for life is eternal, love is immortal." I am deeply touched by the love and concern you have shown us in our loss. We loved Jeff so much and it is such a comfort to know how much others loved him too. Words cannot express my heartfelt thanks for the cards, memorials, letters, food and most of all your prayers. Jeff and I depended on prayer and I know it will give me strength in the days ahead. Thankyou to the Rescue Squad, Dr. Lee, and the Wakefield Hospital. You did your very best and never think any less of yourselves. Thankyou also to the people who came to Allen to give blood and those who kept the day running smoothly and for furnishing cookies and juice. How fortunate we were to have known Jeff, his kind and gentle witness and his firm belief in God. We have given our loved one back to God, but rest assured, we shall see him again. "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believes in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live." John 11:25. God bless you all, Mary Ann, Rebecca and Daniel. O2
