Former State Bank site to become park, parking lot

By Chuck Hackenmiller
Managing Editor

A park and a parking lot will be constructed at the place where the State National Bank and Trust Company of Wayne was previously located — directly north of The Wayne Herald building.

The State National Bank moved to its present location on First Street earlier this year following a Jan. 1, 1986 fire that destroyed the bank and several other nearby businesses.

After the ruins were scrapped from the previous bank location, the hole in the lot was filled and leveled during the summer months. At the start of this week, workmen began pouring cement for the new parking area on the west two-thirds of the lot.

State National Bank President David Ley said the decision on the parking lot and park plans was made with improvement of the Wayne downtown appearance in mind. Also taken into consideration was the bank's future.

"In the future, we hope to be relocating where we've been for the first 100 years [north of the Wayne Herald building]. This will be the first phase of construction," said Ley.

The parking lot could be used for bank parking in the future, he said. "The grassy area will allow us to have a basement underneath our proposed bank building," he added.

Results from a recent Wayne Chamber of Commerce survey were inconclusive as to what was needed for downtown appearance, according to Ley. The parking lot and park area "was a sound starting point to improve the area at the present time," he said.

The park area, which will be landscaped on approximately a third of the lot property, will be addressed next spring or possibly sooner if the weather conditions are favorable, Ley said. Tentative plans are to include placing benches on the grassy area, along with placement of some flowers or shrubs.

The new parking lot will have nearly 14 stalls. Open parking on the lot will be available for downtown shoppers.

"We are trying to improve the area as economically as possible for the benefit of the community," Ley commented.

"It will be structured in such a way that it will blend in with the future site of State National Bank," he said.

WAYNE STATE COLLEGE STUDENTS Sue Scott of Wayne and Paul DiBlasi of Council Bluffs, Iowa portray one of the male-female relationships in Wayne State's production of Arthur Schnitzler's "La Ronde."

WSC rehearsing for 'La Ronde'

The Wayne State College theatre department is in its final week of rehearsals for its next drama presentation, "La Ronde," written by Arthur Schnitzler.

The play, which includes a cast of 11 actors, deals with male-female relationships.

It will be staged at 8 p.m. on Friday and Saturday, Nov. 14-15, and again at 2 p.m. on Sunday, Nov. 16 in Ramsey Theatre located in the Val Peterson Fine Arts Center on the college campus.

Dr. Andre Sedriks, associate professor of theatre and director of the play, said "La Ronde" shows compassion and nostalgia for a particular way of life.

"LA RONDE" ALSO will be performed on Nov. 21 at the University of Nebraska-Omaha as part of the six-performance Nebraska State Theatre Festival on Nov. 20-23.

The Nov. 21 "La Ronde" performance is scheduled at 11 a.m. in UNO's University Theatre.

The Nebraska State Theatre Festival is sponsored by the American College Theatre Festival (ACTF), which is presented and produced by the John F. Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C. Entries in the ACTF attempt to advance from state to regional to national levels.

"IT IS A competition," said Sedriks, "but it is more in the spirit of education — good solid theatre."

He added that results of adjudication by a regional ACTF representative will not be known until December.

Sedriks said a separate, public critique is conducted after each performance so that students will get an educational feedback.

The other schools at the Nebraska Theatre Festival are Nebraska, Lincoln, Hastings College, Peru State, Nebraska Wesleyan, and UNO.

Last year, more than 380 productions and 13,000 students participated in the nationwide ACTF.

Closing to observe Vet's Day

Several business places in Wayne have indicated that they will be closed in observance of Veteran's Day on Tuesday, Nov. 11.

Among those planning to be closed all day are the State National and First National banks, city offices and the Wayne Post Office.

The Wayne County Courthouse also will be closed for the day.

Late Thursday night

Wayne residence raided by area law officers

Area law enforcement officers obtained a search warrant and raided a gathering being held Thursday night in a house on North Logan St. in Wayne.

Wayne County Sheriff LeRoy Janssen said the raid occurred at approximately 11:30 p.m. and involved officers of the Nebraska State Patrol, the Wayne City Police Department and the Wayne County Sheriff's Department.

Janssen added that the agencies were conducting a selective enforcement program targeted at reducing liquor violations.

THE NORTH LOGAN residence was placed under surveillance until a search warrant could be obtained because of the large number of minors seen at that location and where liquor was also known to be.

Janssen said approximately 21 names of individuals will be submitted to the Wayne County Attorney's office for the possibility of filing alcohol related violations.

On-campus enrollment shows 5.4 percent increase at WSC

Enrollment at Wayne State College is approaching the 3,000 student mark for only the second time in school history, buoyed by a 5.4 percent increase of on-campus students.

On-campus enrollment is 2,455, an increase of 128 students (5.4 percent) over last fall's on-campus total of 2,327.

The total enrollment last fall, including off-campus students, was 2,821.

The on-campus enrollment has risen 32.4 percent since 1974 when 1,851 students were on campus.

THE TOTAL number of students taking Wayne State classes is expected to crest at about 3,000 when all off-campus students have enrolled.

Off-campus classes, held at many sites throughout eastern Nebraska, begin at different times during the semester.

Exact enrollment figures are not tabulated until December.

"OUR ENROLLMENT gains show a dramatic acceptance of Wayne State," said Dr. Thomas A. Coffey, president. "In a state with declining population, Wayne State continues to grow."

"The healthy 5.4 percent increase is above the national average."

The only other time Wayne State has had over 3,000 students was in 1968 and 1969. In 1968, the all-time enrollment of 3,068 was reached, and in 1969, 3,006 students were enrolled.

Look out Wayne area! A wildly contagious case of "inventor's fever" has been reported in the Wayne Middle School.

Students have been asked to invent some type of gimmick or game that can be useful and fun to the public. This is the first time the school has tried this sort of thing, thanks in part to a new science series the school district has purchased.

We can't risk anybody stealing away the patent rights from the students, can we?

But I can give a brief description of what is on display.

"Some people who live in earth homes and have no viewing access to the outside will now be able to peek out of a 'below ground level' window and see a pickup coming up their lane or can observe other outside activity, just as long as they use Mike Fluent's invention. Using mirrors, images are reflected down to the window frame, where another mirror picks up the image.

"The house dog wants to go outside and run around, but it has just rained and you fear mud being tracked all over the house. Someone at the Middle School has come up with boots for pets — made out of quilted table covers — to answer that sort of problem.

"Has it ever happened that you are at a family reunion and someone has an address for you — but you can't find a pencil to write with. Someone at the Middle School has invented a 'pencil belt' for people who are always losing their pencils. Also, someone invented a 'pencil bag' that is attached to a pencil which will carry erasers, paper clips and other small items. Inside the invention room is a pencil holder with a built-in calculator. Pretty nifty, I'd say.

"Some student at the Middle School thought it would be a good idea to put magnets on wrenches so that they stay together and are there when you need them.

"There are times you have to experience something before you get the idea to invent it. Evidently, one lad stubbed his toe on a football kicking tee once too often. He invented a kicking tee out of sponge-like material to save wear and tear on his foot.

"Apparently, one of the younger students has a little brother who has trouble zipping up his pants by himself. The student invented a 'velcro zipper for little boys to zip their pants up.'

"Now we know how wet and sticky it becomes when scooping ice cream at the bottom of a 1 1/2 gallon container. Wouldn't it be less messy if each container contained a coiled spring at the bottom that would push up the ice cream in the container once a scoop or two is removed. Good idea, but it's already been invented by someone at the Middle School.

"How about installing a bell around the vicinity of where a baby is playing so that the parents also can 'hear where their child is playing.'

Here are some of the other inventions: two fly swatters joined together that will enable people to catch bugs in mid-air; a lunch box, burglar alarm; a high powered rubber band gun; a "diater dower" to prevent "the painful sores people get from dialing their telephone"; a metal detector for candy; cereal boxes that have prizes at the top of the box; cereal box inside packaging zip lock for easy opening; a stick with a hook on one end and magnet on the other end to help the elderly pick up items, and a stick with a light attachment at the bottom to help those with walking canes to sight the cracks or bumps on the walkways (called a Walk A Night); and a dripless ice cream cone.

And for students who know all the answers, an automated "hand raiser" when the student knows the right answer to the question.

I wonder — were Edison or Franklin this imaginative when they were very young?

Nation pauses to remember

The following editorial is adapted from the suggested address for Veterans Day, provided by the Public Relations Division, American Legion National Headquarters, Indianapolis.

On Veterans Day, November 11, this nation pauses to recognize the services performed by a very special group of men and women.

Recent events have reemphasized just what it means to be a veteran...and to have served out nation and our flag with pride and honor.

The veterans of today are living examples of the type of service which brought our nation into being and preserved it to this day. For more than 200 years, whenever the forces of tyranny and subjugation threatened, gallant citizens have answered our nation's call. In prosperous times and in desperate days, there always have been those in the United States to risk all they had for what we all hold dear.

They answered the call. They served with honor. They kept faith with us. On this day set aside for their recognition, we have the chance to reaffirm our dedication to the principles they have helped to preserve.

Their service has been in keeping with the best traditions established in this nation more than 200 years ago, when the first generation of this country's veterans set down the tradition of the citizen soldier's defending unto death the principles of justice, freedom, and democracy.

America's veterans have fought for that still-elusive objective—the end of all wars. They fought against the recklessness of the few who would try to subject their brand of tyranny to the multitudes. Their sacrifices have not been merely to defend our nation's shores, but to champion the cause of freedom and individual dignity wherever it was threatened.

Today, there are men and women serving in the uniform of our country, stationed in outposts around the world, working to help assure that their sons and daughters may enjoy a world of peace. They will give, as today's veterans have given, until their job is complete.

Veterans — today's and tomorrow's — are the mortar that holds the foundation of our country together.

Let's look back for a moment to consider that cold, tired, hungry soldier of our nation's infancy. What would he say if he could talk to us today?

Could it be that he would begin by saying this is not time to consider reducing our commitment to maintain peace through strength? For — even in 1776 — there were voices of doubt, crying for the citizen soldier to give up his musket for a plow. But he didn't heed those cries, not as long as his liberty was in jeopardy.

History has confirmed the wisdom of his resolute action. And the spirit of that first veteran must guide us today, no matter what the well-intentioned but misinformed may protest.

We need only to consider the news of the world today, delivered to us by free men and women by a press which is not restricted by government fiat, that we must be prepared to protect ourselves.

There are those which will call it "saber rattling," but the real enemies of peace and freedom will see it as a deterrent to waging war against us.

Today's veterans also know that their service goes beyond support of this country's efforts to maintain a position of strength in the family of nations. Today, they make up the "home team" within the community where they continue to serve the many needs of mankind.

On this very special day we pause to salute the veterans — men and women — of our nation — and our community — for their continued dedication of service in the finest tradition of America.

World War II heroes

Nebraska's young men respond

There is a letter in the Archives at the Nebraska State Historical Society written by Hiltrude Parle, Nebraska's State Mother in 1944. In the letter dated April 13, 1949 Mrs. Parle wrote, "I have always felt that I was named Nebraska Mother mostly as another tribute to our son, Ensign John J. Parle..."

Ensign Parle of Omaha was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor posthumously. His deed of extreme heroism came in the invasion of Sicily. A fire started in a small unmanned boat loaded with explosives. If the boat had exploded it would have meant not only the loss of a nearby L.S.T. loaded with troops but also a premature disclosure of the landing. Ensign Parle jumped in to the boat and extinguished the fire, but in doing so he suffered fatal injuries. Later the Navy named a Destroyer-Escort craft the USS Parle.

The Nebraska State Historical Society's magazine, like most other publications during World War II, devoted many of its pages to the war. It related the war exploits of many Nebraskans who served the nation during the conflict.

Among those mentioned was Major Mark T. Martin, Jr. of near Elkhorn. He received a British Military Cross for gallantry in action in a commando raid at Bizerte. He had organized a rear guard unit which beat off heavy German counter-attacks, allowing the main body of the commando to escape. He was the last man to leave the danger zone. King George VI of England decorated Major Martin.

Pvt. Martin F. Sanford of Hastings won a Silver Star with heroism which cost him his life. He died in North Africa protecting the withdrawal of his comrades.

STILL ANOTHER Hastings hero was Lt. Harry M. Tully of the Marine Corps who gave his life in the invasion of the Solomon Islands. He was awarded a Silver Star for his action against the Japanese there. Sgt. Ben Kuroki of Hershey was a fall gunner on a Liberator bomber. He won the Distinguished Flying Cross in the famous low-level raid on the Rumanian oil refinery at Ploesti. Of Japanese descent, he had encountered suspicion and hostility in his first months in the service. His brave conduct and that of his fellow Japanese-Americans disproved allegations that they were not reliable. His book, "Boy From Nebraska", was widely read after the war.

Lt. Ralph Egle of Palslade lost his life in the same Ploesti raid and was posthumously awarded a Distinguished Flying Cross. Also in the raid and recipient of the same award was Sgt. Harry Krause of Scottsbluff.

The list of Nebraska heroes living and dead could be expanded many fold. The state's young men have responded to their country's call in a manner for which Nebraskans forever can be proud.

ask a lawyer

a public service of the nebraska state bar association

Q. Is a person who has been injured on the job entitled to receive workers' compensation and social security disability payments at the same time? (This is after the six month SSD waiting period has passed.)

A. It is possible that an injured worker will be eligible to receive both workers' compensation and social security payments simultaneously. The workers' compensation payments are determined by the Workers' Compensation Court according to state law. These payments must be made if the court determines that the individual was injured in an accident arising out of or in the course of his or her employment.

Social security payments, on the other hand, are made to further the public policy of protecting employees who are unable to engage in gainful activity. The Social Security Act features a section which provides that if an employee qualifies to receive benefits under both the social security and workers' compensation laws, a social security "offset" provision is applicable.

That is, if the employee is disabled in the sense of being unable to engage in gainful activity, and the employee receives a workers' compensation payment, then the total amount of benefits due under the Social Security Act is offset by the workers' compensation receipts. This has the effect of reducing the social security payment by the amount of the workers' compensation payment. If the individual is entitled to social security benefits in an amount greater than the workers' compensation payment, he or she would be entitled to receive the difference.

Q. My husband inherited a farm from his father. It is in his name only, but the real estate agent told us that if he decides to sell it, I have to sign a release form. Why should I have to sign anything when I don't own anything?

A. The general rule is that when a wife joins with her husband in a "conveyance" of property, she gives away any interest that she has in the property, such as her right and interest to inherit the property if her husband dies without leaving a will. A "conveyance" generally means the transfer of property by deed to another person or persons. In your case, it refers to the sale of the farm.

A joint conveyance by husband and wife gives any kind of legal interest they have in the land to the new owner. Having both spouses' signatures on any deeds of conveyance serves as a protective measure for the new owner of the land and to those (such as the real estate agent and your lawyers) who are involved in the transaction.

The answer to this question applies equally to husbands and wives. It does not apply to all types of property. Generally, any personal property inherited or purchased by one spouse can be sold without the consent or signature of the other. Transfers of real estate, on the other hand, usually require both signatures because of the special legal rights involved in ownership of property.

For all of the above reasons, the lawyer for a prospective buyer will require your signature on a deed to the land.

Q. Can a non-custodial parent request school records, health records, etc., on his children? My ex-wife and I are on very bad terms. I want to know how my kids are doing in school, any discipline problems, etc. and also if they are having any health problems. Can I be prevented from getting this information just because I do not have custody of the children?

A. By law, a parent has access upon request to a school's files or records concerning his or her children. A non-custodial parent cannot be prevented from getting information about his child's progress in school. Your non-custodial status simply means you do not have custody of the children on a daily basis; it does not change the fact that you are the children's father, and if you wish to gain information about your children's school performance, you have the right to do so.

Q. Is it legal for a bank to foreclose on a tenant farmer without telling the landowner, therefore taking everything (cattle, hay and machinery) so that the tenant is unable to pay his lease to the owners of the farm?

A. In answering your question, we assume that the bank took a security interest in the tenant's personal property (cattle, hay and machinery) to secure a loan to the tenant. If the tenant defaults on that loan, the bank may either pick up the property and sell it to satisfy the debt, or if there is a dispute, the bank can have the property "replevined" under a court order and then have the property sold. (Replevin is a legal action to recover property or goods.) In either event, this property cannot serve as security for rent that the tenant owes the landlord because it has already been committed to the bank.

If the tenant does not pay the rent, the landlord's remedy would be to bring a court action against him and obtain a judgment in the amount of the past-due rent. The tenant's hay, cattle and machinery could be used to satisfy this judgment only if their value exceeded the amount of the tenant's bank loan. Currently there are very few situations where there is an excess of value over what is owed to the bank. In all likelihood, the landlord should look to the tenant for payment on some basis other than out of the cattle, hay and machinery.

To demonstrate her theme, she described a visit to the Smithsonian Museum and its display of dresses worn by first ladies of the United States. Mrs. William Howard Taft started the collection in the early 1900's and it has continued since then. To complete the fashion show and so that it could represent earlier eras, descendants of former presidential families donated items from their own collections for the Smithsonian display.

Impact of crisis on children

What happens to children when the family experiences a crisis? Usually, the adults are so involved in the problem and its possible solutions that they have limited time for the children.

Family living routines are temporarily altered. Children may abruptly be sent to live with relatives or friends, or relatives or friends may move in to help until the crisis is over.

At these times it is important that the parenting persons answer the children's questions honestly. It is important that children have a clear picture of what the crisis is about. Children don't need all the details, but they do need some explanations and coherent information given in small doses and in words they can understand.

When children feel abandoned or ignored, they may temporarily resort to regressive behaviors such as bedwetting, temper tantrums, or thumb sucking. Children should not be spanked or "yelled at" when these behaviors appear due to "internal stress" caused by unusual happenings.

Honesty, patience and kindness should be the tools for caring adults who deal with and provide for children during a family crisis.

Early teaching may not be wise. Sometimes parents worry that their child isn't learning or developing quickly enough, or at least as quickly as other children.

Before you start showing flash cards to your baby and expecting a genius, consider how a baby develops and how "forced learning" may affect that development.

In "You and Your Child: Is Early Teaching Too Early?" in the Winter 1985 Therapy Newsletter, Adrienne Ailer, Ph.D., wrote: "If you're still playing peek-a-boo and 'This Little Piggy' with your baby, you're way ahead of mothers who are dutifully exposing their infants to letters and numbers while losing the opportunity to develop playful and loving relationships with them."

Earlier is often not better, she said, adding that babies need time to grow physically and emotionally. "The healthy and happy infant becomes the toddler who is excited at the prospect of discovering and exploring the world, and later becomes the youngster who is eager for intellectual stimulation and education," she said.

In addition, children taught behaviors just to impress families and friends may begin to rely on such activities as a way of gaining attention and affection. Such learning can continue on past childhood.

Ailer wrote, "The child who gains approval and love through impressive performance often grows to feel she is only special because of that performance."

Parents should also examine their motives in trying to teach a child early. Are they trying to excel through their children or demonstrate they are good parents?

Top-ranked Schuyler ends gridgers season

Schuyler — Wayne's stay in the Class B football playoffs was short but the Blue Devils went out fighting as Schuyler downed the locals 27-6.

Wayne Coach Lonnie Ehrhardt said although his team lost by three touchdowns he felt they played the best game of the year against the top-rated team in Class B. Schuyler defeated Wayne Sept. 12 38-14.

"We probably played the best game of the year," he said. "Some of our players played with a lot of pain in the second half but they still played hard."

The Blue Devils outplayed Schuyler, 10-0, in the first half but went into the locker room trailing 7-6. Wayne gained 113 yards in the first half while holding the Warriors to 98 yards.

Schuyler took the lead in the first quarter after they intercepted a Ted Lueders' pass and returned it to the Wayne 29-yard line.

Two plays later, Schuyler's "Mr. Everything," Tim Johnk scored on an option from Paul Cech from 27-yards out. Marty Kracl added the PAT and the Warriors led 7-0.

Johnk finished the contest with 211 yards on 24 carries. The 208-pound senior ran around and through several Wayne tacklers throughout the evening.

On the ensuing kickoff Schuyler recovered an inside kick after Steve Luft had the ball bounce off of him. The Warriors took over at Wayne's 48-yard line but the Blue Devil defense forced them to punt.

The locals got on the scoreboard after Jon Stoltenberg picked a fumble out of mid-air and returned it to the Warrior 36-yard line.

From there it didn't take long for the Blue Devils to score. Russell Longe ripped off an 18-yard run down to the 5-yard line. On first and goal from the five, Lueders went wide and dove into the end zone for the score.

Pat Coffey's extra-point attempt was blocked and with 32 seconds left in the opening period Wayne trailed 7-6.

Although no team could put any points on the board in the second period, Wayne lost a chance to take the lead as time was running out in the first half.

The Blue Devils got into scoring position on a 23-yard completion from Lueders to Bill Liska on a fourth down and seven situation with 1:25 left in the half.

Wayne drove the ball to the 20-yard line before using its last timeout. On third down and short situation with about 30 seconds remaining, Ehrhardt elected to try to pick up the first down, which would automatically stop the clock, before attempting the field goal.

The attempt failed and the field-goal team had to be rushed onto the field with the time ticking off the clock. The snap was high. Coffey picked the ball and was stopped for a loss and Schuyler had held the Blue Devil threat.

The Warriors ran the rest of the time off the clock and went to the locker room ahead by one point.

The third quarter doomed the Blue Devils hopes for an upset. Schuyler put the game out of reach by scoring 13-points to take a 20-6 lead into the final quarter.

The Warriors touchdowns came on a 7-yard run by Johnk and a 37-yard aerial from Cech to senior Paul Baumert on a fourth down and seven at the Wayne 37-yard line.

"Schuyler is a very strong and physical football team," Ehrhardt said. "In the second half they just wore us down. They have really worked hard over the last three years to turn their team around. Three years ago they were 0-9."

Johnk closed out the Warriors' scoring in the fourth quarter on a 3-yard blast up the middle. Kracl converted the PAT to make it 27-6. There was no further scoring in the final 10 minutes of the contest.

The Schuyler defense did its job in the second half limiting Wayne to 41 yards in the half and 162 total yards. On the other hand the Warriors pounded out 354 total yards, 256 of those coming in the second half.

BLUE DEVILS are pictured gang tackling Schuyler tailback Tim Johnk. Johnk rushed for 24 yards in the Warriors 27-6 win in the first round of the class B playoffs.

Schuyler was also penalized 12 times for 114 yards.

Ehrhardt said several players turned in fine defensive performances. Bill Liska and Jamie Fredrickson top the list with 10 unassisted and 8 assisted tackles apiece. Scott Pokelt and Jason Liska added eight tackles each and Ted McCright, Troy Wood and Jay Luft were credited with six stops.

Ehrhardt said he didn't want this loss to take anything away from what his team accomplished this year.

"Nobody really expected a lot out of this team," the coach said. "To have a 6-4 record is a commendable feat with our schedule."

Twenty seniors played their last game for the Blue Devils in the defeat.

Schuyler advanced to the quarterfinals where they will host York 9-1, tonight (Monday).

Tough-luck senior keeps her positive attitude

WAKEFIELD'S Susie McQuistan

Photography: Gregg Dahlheim

By Gregg Dahlheim

Sports Editor

It has been a tough couple of years for Wakefield senior Susie McQuistan.

Since her junior year she has missed each of the last two volleyball seasons and will probably be sidelined for the 1987 track season.

Last year a bout with mononucleosis kept her sidelined. Also during the course of the year she had a tonsillotomy.

The latest stroke of bad luck occurred on Aug. 26 during a routine volleyball practice. McQuistan said she remembers the incident like it was yesterday.

"I went up for a block and I came down on the side of my right foot," she recalls. "I heard it pop (her right knee) and I knew something happened."

She sat out the rest of the practice only because Wakefield volleyball Coach Paul Eaton wouldn't allow her to return.

Susie went to her doctor and had the knee examined. The doctor thought she sprained her knee so he drained it and sent her on her way.

Eaton wanted Susie to have her knee checked again by a specialist.

So she went to have Dr. Tom Heiser, the University of Nebraska Cornhuskers football team physician, look at it. Heiser told McQuistan that she had sustained ligament damage to her knee. He said if she rested it (knee) she could probably still participate in track in the spring.

She thought no more about it until more than a month later. By this time she was able to jog without pain. One day while out jogging, the knee went out again. After another examination by Heiser she decided to have the damage repaired by surgery.

Heiser told Susie that she received the same type injury as Husker football player Doug DuBose, damage to the anterior cruciate ligament as well as some cartilage damage.

On Oct. 10 Heiser performed the surgery at St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Lincoln. The four and a half hour surgery left her with a nine-inch scar on the right side of her knee and a two-inch scar on the inside of her knee. She said the recovery time for such an injury is about nine months to one year.

The injury also put McQuistan behind in another school activity—academics.

Susie missed two weeks of school after the surgery. On Oct. 27 she started to go to school half days for a week and started attending full-time on Nov. 3.

The National Honor Society members said she still gets worn out after a day of school. She must also find time to attend therapy sessions twice a week at the Providence Medical Center in Wayne.

Eaton said although he has been her coach for a couple of years, he hasn't had the chance to work with her because of her misfortunes. But he credited Susie for her positive attitude.

"She's been so good," he said. "She supports the team at practices and at games. She's a real optimistic person."

Track Coach Dennis Wilbur also had good things to say about Susie.

"She's a super worker who wants to excel at everything she does," he said.

As a junior, McQuistan qualified for the state track meet in the 100, 200 and 800-meter runs and as a member of the mile-relay team. She received second-place medals in the 200 and the relay and qualified for the finals in the 100-meter dash and placed seventh.

Wilbur said if Susie can't participate in track, the team could lose anywhere from 25 to 32 points a meet.

"It is not often that you find a person with Susie's ability and attitude," Eaton said. "That's what makes her injury so sad."

Wakefield concludes year with a two-set loss

Wisner — As Wakefield Coach Paul Eaton sat in the almost empty Wisner-Pilger gym reflecting back on the loss to Norfolk Catholic High School, he could think of nothing negative to say about his team.

"The only thing I feel bad about is the loss for these girls," he said.

"They are a tremendous group of kids to work with. They had their hearts set on going to state."

Instead, the underdog Knightlets downed the Lady Trojans in two sets 15-11, 15-12 to advance to the state tournament in Lincoln beginning Nov. 14.

Both teams started the championship match of the Class C1-5 tournament with a case of the jitters. The first set took almost 30 minutes to complete.

Norfolk Catholic jumped on top early 3-1 and 6-3 behind the strong blocking of Amy Determan and Jeanne Pfeifer.

Later in the set four unforced errors in a row by Pfeifer allowed Wakefield to take its first lead at 7-6.

From there each team exchanged the lead until Catholic went on top 12-11. From there the Knightlets ran off the next four points with the winning point coming from the serve of Determan.

The first set loss appeared to open the eyes of the Lady Trojans as they came out hitting in the second set.

Wakefield forged on top 6-1 on the strong serving of Karen Hallstrom, much to the delight of the pro-Wakefield crowd. The Lady Trojans increased their lead to 12-4 before Catholic staged its come-from-behind heroics.

"I think we may have overplayed in the middle of the second set," Eaton said. "Instead of trying for easy sets we tried to make hard sets. But I would rather have a team overplay than underplay."

Eaton called two timeouts late in the contest to try to slow down the Knightlets' momentum. The match ended on a tough break for the Lady Trojans.

Junior Kodi Nelson went up for a spike and hit the ball over the net but her momentum carried her over the center line and into the net ending the match. The call brought the Norfolk Catholic crowd onto the floor in jubilation.

The Lady Trojans' following also swarmed onto the floor to console their team. Wakefield was trying to make a repeat appearance to the state tournament.

A statistic that hurt the Lady Trojans was their serving efficiency. Wakefield hit 38-of-48 from the serving stripes.

Wakefield ended its season with an 18-2 mark. In the match seven seniors saw their last action for Wakefield.

"Everybody thought we were going to win the match," Eaton said.

"Volleyball is a game of upsets."

csic notes

Two players shared top billing as the CSIC offensive players of the week.

Pittsburg State quarterback Gene Stegeman and running back David Tryon of Emporia State were selected for their performances in their teams' victories last Saturday.

Stegeman, a 5-11, 175-pound junior from Overland Park, Kansas rushed for 136 yards on 30 carries and threw for 38 yards in the Gorillas' 27-23 win over Kearney State. The signal caller scored on runs of four and three yards.

Pittsburg State is currently ranked No. 1 in the NAIA Division I poll. Tryon, 6-0, 190-pound senior from Overbrook, Kansas rushed 24 times for 304 yards. He scored three touchdowns on runs of 64, 78 and 40 yards.

Tryon broke the 1,000-yards mark in the 43-22 win over Wayne State. This season he has rushed for 1,021 yards.

The 304 yard-performance set a new ESU record eclipsing the old mark of 213 yards set by Bill Litchfield in 1948.

Roman Wiehebrink of Pittsburg State was chosen as the CSIC defensive player of the week.

Wiehebrink, a 6-0, 218-pound senior defensive tackle from Dodge City, Kansas was credited with five unassisted tackles and five assisted stops. He also recorded three quarterback sacks and recovered one fumble.

VETERANS DAY 1986

Saluting the home team

They made up our nation's "home team" to defend the cause of freedom and individual dignity during the four wars of the Twentieth Century. They are the 27 million men and women who have served honorably in the uniform of our country. They came back to make up the "home team" of thousands of American communities where they continue to serve the many needs of mankind. On this Veterans Day, 1986, we join with The American Legion in saluting the veterans of our nation and our community for their continued dedication to service for God and Country.

Fiber artist at Wayne State College

FIBER ARTIST JANE DADEY of Marquette presented a program last Monday evening at Wayne State College. Dadey, at left, produced the quilt "Myth Quilt I" for the "Birth Project," an artistic show comprised of the work of some 150 needleworkers from across the country. She showed slides which documented her personal and artistic growth during the two years she worked with Judy Chicago's "Birth Project" — a project conceived when it was discovered that the birthing experience of women was scarcely recorded in Western art. Images on the quilt fabric symbolically depict birth and the childbearing process. Following Dadey's presentation, the Wayne chapter of the American Association of University Women hosted a reception in her honor, where several of her quilts were on display.

NEWS FROM THE SENIOR CENTER

Alden Johnson spoke last week at the Wakefield Senior Citizens Center and shared his research into the history of the Belle School District in Wayne County.

Johnson's research included school records and teachers' names and salary scales over the years. He also told of an argument among district patrons which resulted one night in moving the building a half mile to a "better location."

On Thursday, students of the Petals and Plines Pre-School, along with teacher Marcia Lundin, visited the center in their Halloween costumes and entertained the group.

A costume-birthday party was held on Friday at the Wakefield Senior Citizens Center.

Taking part in the program, which included a dramatization of "Little Orphan Annie and Ten Little Jack-O'-Lanterns," were Ada Bartels, Pearl Carlson, Edith Erickson, Genevieve Fredrickson, Polly Hank, Margaret Lundahl, Martha Mortenson, Winnie Olson, Ethyl Packer and Gladys Park.

October birthday honorees were Arnold Brudigam, Clara Doescher, Ruth Fell, Lona Jensen, Jewell Killion, Ruth Lempeke, Clara Lundahl, Mary Lundin, Gertrude Ohlquist and Lili Tarnow.

Eight pool players from the Laurel Senior Citizens Center came to challenge the Wakefield pool players on Monday.
