Scrambled eggs

A COLLISION on a snowy Monday morning in Wayne resulted in the capsizing of this egg truck on East 7th Street, creating a mess of broken eggs. A car driven by Todd Buchanan of Wayne hit a slippery patch, slid into an intersection at East 7th and Windom Street, striking the egg truck driven by Thomas Minear of Underwood, Iowa. Buchanan hit the rear wheels of the truck, causing the truck to spin around on the street, hit the curb and tip on its side. Buchanan and a passenger in his car, Sonny Jones, suffered leg injuries from the incident. Minear was not hospitalized.

Council approves vacating city alley

By Chuck Hackenmiller

An east-west alley, located between Nebraska and Windom Street and 5th and 6th Street, will be vacated following action Monday evening by the Wayne City Council.
Monday evening's council meeting lasted only 30 minutes.

Prior to when former city planner Marci Pankaskie left Wayne, she had made a study of all the alleys within the city of Wayne, according to City Attorney Kern Swartz.

Among those alleys that were studied were the alleys with no utilities within them, or were grassy areas, or were not traveled upon by vehicles.

The alley approved for vacating on Monday night by the city council had no vehicle traffic through it, according to Swartz.

"In that area, nearly all of the east-west alleys have been vacated," Swartz told the city council members.

Also on Tuesday evening, the city council:

•Tabled a city audit presentation from Peal, Marwick and Mitchell because the company's representative could not attend the meeting because of travel conditions.

•Approved a special designated liquor permit for the Fireman's

ESU 1 receives mill levy study

By LaVon Anderson
Assistant Editor

The board of directors of Educational Service Unit One has received a study of all mill levy services as prepared by the ESU 1 administration.

In presenting the study Tuesday night, ESU 1 Administrator Harry Mills told the board he had spent considerable time preparing the study and he asked board members to take it home, study it, and come back with their opinions next month.

Action on all mill levy services is scheduled to take place at the December meeting.

The study of mill levy services is the result of the board's September meeting when lengthy discussion centered on the ESU 1 nursing services program for the 1987-88 school year.

Board members at that time directed the administration to study all mill levy services, including the nursing program, and to present their report at the November board meeting with recommendations of priorities.

Major mill levy service programs include nursing, the media center, coop purchases and administration.

THE STUDY AS presented by Mills Tuesday night included a breakdown of the nursing services budget during the past four years. During that time, the nursing services budget has risen from $200,375 in 1983-84 to $229,744 in 1986-87. The 1986-87 budget figure includes $24,744 in contracts with schools.

In his report, Mills said that the last nursing services survey conducted by ESU 1 showed a majority of schools requesting that ESU 1 provide the nursing service.

"The service unit's objective is to meet the requests made by the majority of schools where feasible," said Mills in his report.

Mills added that a majority of school administrators (17) have indicated they are willing to share the cost of the present program in the same manner as the 1986-87 year.

REGARDING THE nursing services program, Mills said options available to the board include:

- 1) Budget a set amount annually and have schools pay the balance of the cost.
  - 2) ESU 1 fund the program and provide state mandated services only.
  - 3) Cut other mill levy service programs to support the rising cost of the nursing program.
  - 4) Drop the nursing program.
- "The increased cost of the program will have to be dealt with year after year," said Mills in the report, "and cutting other programs to support the cost of nursing will only prolong the problem, not solve it."

In view of the facts presented within his report, Mills recommended that the board approve option one — budgeting a set amount annually and having schools pay the balance of the cost.

REGARDING ESU 1 administrative costs, Mills said in his report that he feels administrative costs of ESU 1 compare favorably when comparing costs with other service units in Nebraska.

The report as prepared by Mills showed that 9.00 percent of the ESU 1 budget is spent for administration, compared to a high of 18.00 percent in ESU 4.

Mills pointed out, however, that ESU budget figures for other service units in the state were received from a State Department survey and do not show what was included in the administrative costs of each service unit.

The ESU 1 administrative cost figures as prepared by Mills included the total cost of three administrators, clerical, supplies, materials and equipment for the office.

"MY CONCERN WITH making any drastic changes in administration would be the additional assignments that could be dictated to school district and the city of Wayne regarding usage of the city auditorium.

And the winners of the two positions that were up for election on the Wayne Municipal Airport Authority Board were: Richard Manley and Phil Kloster.

It was proposed that the city auditorium would primarily be used by the school district for junior high basketball games in November and December.

In exchange, the school board would allow the city's basketball program to use the district's facilities on Saturdays in January and February.

According to the agreement proposal drawn up by the city attorney's office, the city of Wayne would furnish two aides for supervision purposes on each day the basketball program uses the school district's facilities. Each basketball date would have approximately three sessions, with the school district furnishing a minimum of one certified coach to attend the basketball program.

The city would allow the school district to use the city auditorium during the school year of 1986 and 1987 for a maximum of eight dates. The proposed agreement of the auditorium by the school district must be completed before 7 p.m. and the district shall attempt to schedule the use of the city auditorium on Thursdays.

However, school board members decided to take no action on the proposed agreement, citing that the document wording is questionable at the present time.

Board member Sid Hillier asked why the school district could not rent the facility from the city. Cap Peterson mentioned that it would be more advantageous if an agreement could be arranged to exchange the school district and city facilities in exchange for dollars.

Also Tuesday afternoon, the board of education evaluated the attendance of parent-teacher conferences which took place in Wayne and Carroll on Nov. 6 and 7.

Results were impressive at the Wayne-Carroll Elementary, with kindergarten and third grade having perfect conference attendance. All Mills outlined items that will be reported on to the legislature by the study committee and added that initiating, implementing and following through on any of the items could take up a great deal of the administrations time.

Mills also outlined services that ESU's are presently mandated to provide and five areas in which the Commissioner of Education has stated he wants ESU's to become more involved in.

"There is a great deal of work involved in the numerous reports presented to the board during the year, the budgeting process, negotiations, and the overall supervision of the unit," said Mills in his report.

The other position had to be decided by write-in.

And there were plenty of write-ins, according to the tabulations recorded at the Wayne County Clerk's Office. Sixty names were placed on the write-in space on the city ballot.

Coming out ahead was Kloster with 33 votes, followed by David Ley with six votes and Mitch Nissen with five votes.

The remaining 57 candidates had from one to four votes.

Campaign stories told

A passing grade

The Nebraska Press Association
It was a clever idea. In late October the Boosalis campaign passed out 3,000 Halloween orange buttons with the message "BOO for Gov" to faithful volunteers.

But the limited-edition buttons will likely have little future value as collectors' items. For Helen Boosalis, former Mayor of Lincoln, lost her bid for governor.

The morning after the election, a tired but poised Kay Orr met the press as the victorious governor-elect. Orr, who became the first woman ever elected to a Nebraska statewide office as state treasurer, had another first to her credit. She was the first female Republican governor in U.S. history.

IT WASN'T for lack of energy that Boosalis lost. The 67-year-old veteran politician, who operates well on less than five hours sleep a night, is famous for her tireless pace.

On Monday, the day before the election, Boosalis was scheduled to fly to Scottsbluff, North Platte, Grand Island, So. Sioux City, Omaha and Lincoln. She had some spare time, so she added Bearface to the list.

Orr also is an energetic campaigner who ran a well-organized, well-funded campaign. And it was the merchant's daughter from Iowa whom Nebraskans picked to be their 36th governor.

Every campaign has its fun stories. Orr's is no exception. She once confessed that she had laundered campaign contributions. She had left some checks in a skirt she was wearing as she campaigned. And that weekend she washed them.

ORR ALSO TOLD an off-the-rail campaign story to a Kiwanis group.

Orr and her husband Bill, a vice president of Woodmen Accident and Life Insurance Co., took a few days holiday away from the hectic campaign pace. They drove to Iowa to visit relatives. On the way home they stopped at a little country gas station, the kind with the gravel lot and the house connected to the gas station.

After getting gas, Bill sat in the car for another ten minutes while Kay chatted with the station owner. She finally returned to the car and the two headed on down the road.

A curious Bill asked his wife about the lengthy conversation.

"I dated him," Kay said. "In fact I got serious enough that we talked about marriage."

"Just think," Bill said, after a few minutes. "If you had married him, you would probably be living in that house attached to the gas station."

"Oh, no," Kay told him. "He would be vice president of Woodman Accident and Life."

ORR BEGAN the transition period with the announcement that Hans Brisch, a member of the University of Nebraska central administration staff, will be her chief of staff—second in command. Brisch, 46, is a native of Germany who immigrated to the United States when he was 17, because he believed America was a land of opportunity.

Brisch had only an eighth grade education and knew little English. But he worked to support himself, finished high school and eventually earned a doctorate in political science.

Governor Bob Kerrey, who will be making a transition from elected official to private citizen, said his work during the next few months will include looking for a house and a job.

Despite reports that the governor is "a rich man," Kerrey said, "I need some income."

ACT tests taken by juniors and seniors at high schools are becoming more widely used all the time, according to Wayne-Carroll Guidance Counselor Terry Munson.

The tests figure into predictions of college performance and student placement. The National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) universities are using the tests to determine the guidelines for the awarding of athletic scholarships. Those ACT scores have become a common base for information, Munson says.

And how have the students of Wayne-Carroll been performing when compared to students on a national, state or local basis?

Fifty-three of 69 Wayne-Carroll seniors took the test last year. And the composite ACT scores show the local students bettering the marks of the national and state averages.

They have excelled over the state and national averages in the areas of English, Math, Social Studies and Natural Sciences, it was pointed out by Munson.

Munson supplied the Wayne-Carroll School Board with a five year history of the ACT locally tested students.

The Wayne-Carroll 1985-86 percentile rank was at 93. That means 93 percent of the high schools that tested 40 or more students had average ACT composite scores below the Wayne-Carroll average.

In 1982-83, 98 percent scored less than Wayne-Carroll; 1983-84, 99 percent; 1984-85, 96 percent.

The four ACT tests (English, Mathematics, Social Studies and Natural Sciences) appear to be the best way to predict success in postsecondary educational settings by measuring, as directly as possible, the skills students will need in these settings. These tests are regarded as measures of academic development which rely partly on the students' reasoning abilities and partly on their knowledge of the subject matter fields — but which emphasize their abilities to use both.

Judging from the 1985-86 results tabulated and presented to the Wayne-Carroll Board of Education, the students in Wayne are getting more than a passing grade when it comes to achieving higher levels of academic talent.

And when comparing the scores to the state and national levels, one cannot help but be impressed with the local student scoring.

During these times when much talk centers around illiteracy and improper classroom training, it is sometimes nice to note the positive rather than negative in regard to the education of our local youth.

Farmer Mac bill gets top priority when the 100th Congress convenes

by Doug Bereuter

I want to take this opportunity to express my appreciation to all of the residents of the First District for their support and encouragement as I have worked for the last eight years to represent them.

During the next two years I will continue to search for ways to extend economic recovery to our rural agricultural communities, and to reduce the Federal budget deficit. I intend to work to refine my "Farmer Mac" bill, which will introduce greater competition and lower interest rates for farm borrowers through the establishment of a secondary mortgage market for long-term agricultural real-estate loans; to work with the Administration and the Democrat controlled Congress to develop agricultural

A Salute to Veterans
All across this Nation on Veterans Day Americans gather to pay special honor to a large group of American citizens—more than 28 million men and women who have proudly worn the military uniform of our country in time of war. America is once again saying thank you to them for keeping this country free. November 11th is a day when those who have returned from wars—and those who waited for veterans—have a multitude of memories. It is a day when literally millions of people will vividly recall the terrible costs of war.

Since we declared our independence in 1776, this country has engaged in nine major wars. More than one million Americans died during those conflicts. Their efforts and the efforts of all those brave men and women who served still insure that you and I can speak freely, voice our opposition and support of our Government publicly without fear of retaliation; travel freely in this country and beyond, unchecked by walls, barbed wire, and guard towers; and worship as we please.

We honor these men and women because it was their blood, their resolution, their love of country; that was—and is—the price paid for freedom of the country we love.

To me the central significance of Veterans Day is that it represents a reminder and a challenge. The flame of freedom was passed to us at great cost. Protecting the flame of liberty depends upon all of us, but at this time we pause to say thank you to our country's veterans.

U.S. could lose more than anyone No winners in trade war

Richard L. Leshner, President Chamber of Commerce of the United States

It seems hard to believe, but as recently as 1981 the United States exported more manufactured goods than it imported from the rest of the world.

Today we suffer from annual trade deficits in the $25 billion range, a profound imbalance that has wreaked havoc among certain segments of our economy, eliciting widespread demands for protectionism.

Those demands must be resisted at all costs. We must keep in mind that despite the trade deficit, the United States remains the largest exporter in the world. For us to launch the world into a trade war would be the height of folly. There would be no winners in such a cataclysm only losers, and we stand to lose more than anyone.

WE DO NOT need to guess what the consequences of protectionism would be. We need only thumb a few pages back into our history—to the early 1930s when Congress tried to protect domestic industry with the infamous Smoot-Hawley Tariff. The ill-conceived act was perhaps the major cause of the Great Depression.

There can be no question that some of our trading partners engage in unfair practices that victimize American businesses and workers. But we have laws that apply to such situations and the Reagan administration is enforcing them, winning a steady parade of concessions from nations that discriminate against us.

ADDITIONALLY, the declining dollar is enhancing our trade propects considerably. The trade deficit rose in tandem with the rise of the dollar, and there is reason to believe it will decline the same way. Since the spring of 1985, the dollar has fallen about 40 percent. It takes time for currency ratios to be reflected in trade statistics, but I think we have seen the first glimmer of improvement. Our deficit in August dropped to $13 billion from $18 billion the month before.

Which is not to suggest we should pop the corks on our champagne bottles just yet. But our economy is healthy and growing, producing far more new jobs than have been lost to foreign competition. American business is responding to the challenge, becoming more efficient and productive. We are on the right track and, if the forces of protectionism can be resisted, I am certain the flow of trade will eventually return to an even keel.

HARVEST TIME INDIANS AND THE BEAN MOUSE
A fascinating area of study in the aboriginal life of the Plains Indians is the use made of various native plants for food. An especially interesting plant, both in its unique habit of growth and the manner of its harvesting, was the ground bean.

Dr. Melvin R. Gilmore, archeologist, who a number of years ago was a staff member of the Nebraska State Historical Society, wrote of the ground bean, describing its range as very extensive throughout the Missouri River country. It was originally native and common and was known as far east as

New York. It belonged to the bean family and was a near relative of the present-day bean which has been improved by long cultivation. This native bean had the peculiar characteristic of a two-fold fruit habit, a vine-like growth climbed fences and shrubs and produced a cluster of beans in the air. In addition an underground fruit was produced in the manner of the peanut plant.

THIS UNDERGROUND fruit consisted of a single large bean about the size of a lima and was highly esteemed as food by the various Indian tribes. This useful plant was the habitat of the little animal which played such a leading part in the harvesting and storing of the beans, thus making them available to the Indians. Called variously, meadow mouse, field mouse, ground mouse, and, by the Indians, bean mouse, this tiny creature amassed prodigious quantities of food stores for winter supplies, storing them underground in store houses which they excavated. The main article of food stored by the mice was the ground bean.

These caches were eagerly sought by the Indian tribes of the region, who, not infrequently found as much as a bushel of beans in a single storehouse. In making use of the bean mouse's harvests, the Indians followed an almost universal custom of leaving a part of the store, or replacing a part with some corn, a little suet or other foods that the mice could eat.

Dr. Gilmore's researches on the subject disclosed a strong feeling, especially among the Omaha and the Dakota, that it would have been wicked and ungrateful to leave the mouse people destitute and would surely bring punishment. Their feeling was that they should approach the stores of the bean mouse, not as robbers of the weak and helpless, but as petitioners asking the little animal for portion of its stores for their own need.

In Lincoln, not in the region of the most severe storms, geologists at the University of Nebraska conducted experiments to determine the amount of dust which settled from the sky. In the week from March 21 to March 28, 1935, they discovered that about 3,072,000 pounds or 40 carloads of dust settled per square mile in the Lincoln area.

The storms produced some tall tales. One farmer reported seeing prairie dogs fifty feet in the air over his farm, and that they were digging. The dust did not defeat the Nebraska farmer, and his sense of humor was one of the reasons why.

Which is not to suggest we should pop the corks on our champagne bottles just yet. But our economy is healthy and growing, producing far more new jobs than have been lost to foreign competition. American business is responding to the challenge, becoming more efficient and productive. We are on the right track and, if the forces of protectionism can be resisted, I am certain the flow of trade will eventually return to an even keel.

HARVEST TIME INDIANS AND THE BEAN MOUSE
A fascinating area of study in the aboriginal life of the Plains Indians is the use made of various native plants for food. An especially interesting plant, both in its unique habit of growing and the manner of its harvesting was the ground bean.
Dr. Melvin R. Gilmore, archeologist, who a number of years ago was a staff member of the Nebraska State Historical Society, wrote of the ground bean, describing its range as very extensive throughout the Missouri River country. It was originally native and common and was known as far east as

New York. It belonged to the bean family and was a near relative of the present-day bean which has been improved by long cultivation. This native bean had the peculiar characteristic of a two-fold fruit habit, a vine-like growth climbed fences and shrubs and produced a cluster of beans in the air. In addition an underground fruit was produced in the manner of the peanut plant.
THIS UNDERGROUND fruit consisted of a single large bean about the size of a lima and was highly esteemed as food by the various Indian tribes. This useful plant was the habitat of the little animal which played such a leading part in the harvesting and storing of the beans, thus making them available to the Indians. Called variously, meadow mouse, field mouse, ground mouse, and, by the Indians, bean mouse, this tiny creature amassed prodigious quantities of food stores for winter supplies, storing them underground in store houses which they excavated. The main article of food stored by the mice was the ground bean.

These caches were eagerly sought by the Indian tribes of the region, who, not infrequently found as much as a bushel of beans in a single storehouse. In making use of the bean mouse's harvests, the Indians followed an almost universal custom of leaving a part of the store, or replacing a part with some corn, a little suet or other foods that the mice could eat.

Dr. Gilmore's researches on the subject disclosed a strong feeling, especially among the Omaha and the Dakota, that it would have been wicked and ungrateful to leave the mouse people destitute and would surely bring punishment. Their feeling was that they should approach the stores of the bean mouse, not as robbers of the weak and helpless, but as petitioners asking the little animal for portion of its stores for their own need.
covered their desks.
In Lincoln, not in the region of the most severe storms, geologists at the University of Nebraska, conducted experiments to determine the amount of dust which settled from the sky. In the week from March 21 to March 28, 1935, they discovered that about 3,072,000 pounds or 40 carloads of dust settled per square mile in the Lincoln area.
The storms produced some tall tales. One farmer reported seeing prairie dogs fifty feet in the air over his farm, and that they were digging. The dust did not defeat the Nebraska farmer, and his sense of humor was one of the reasons why.

grandstand gab

by Gregg Dahlheim

Basketball for eight months

Hooraay, the NBA is back on the air.

Fasten your seat belts, for the next eight months NBA games will be carried on CBS and various cable networks.

During the next eight months you will be hard-pressed to find a televised game that doesn't have Boston, Philadelphia or Los Angeles as one or both of the contestants.

This week it's Boston vs. Philadelphia, next week it's Boston vs. Los Angeles, the following week it's Philadelphia vs. Los Angeles. Then we start all over.

I get so sick of seeing Larry Bird, Robert Parrish, Danny Ainge, Magic, Kareem and Dr. J, I could scream.

There are plenty of good teams in the NBA besides the Celtic, Lakers and 76ers. How about Houston, Atlanta, Denver, Dallas and Milwaukee?

Why is it that most NBA regular-season games follow the same script? The two teams will stay close for about the first quarter. Then in the second period one team will jump out to a 25-point lead and hold it until late in the third quarter or early in the fourth period. Then as if they have awakened from the dead the losing team comes storming back to make the game close in the end.

Don't get me wrong, professional basketball is among the most taxing of professional sports, along with hockey. The teams average about five games a week and the players seldom sleep in the same bed two nights in a row. After 32 weeks that could wear on a person.

In football the teams play once a week and spend the rest of the time at home practicing. Baseball teams also do a lot of traveling but they are in each city about three days in a row.

As has been stated many times, the NBA needs to decrease the number of teams selected for the playoffs. Currently, only about six of the 23 teams don't make the playoffs. In reality, I think they are the teams that are actually rewarded.

I start to get interested in pro basketball when the playoffs start. So why play the rest of the season?

College basketball is the game to watch if you put aside all the politics in the sport and just watch the action on the court.

The announcers may have something to do with that. The CBS announcers, Gary Bender, Brent Musberger and Billy Packer are my favorites. Dick Enberg and Al McGuire are also among the best. They keep the audience interested in the action.

Another reason why I favor college hoops is because 18, 19 and 20 year old kids appreciate the game more. They show more excitement than a crusty 10-year veteran.

So at my house on a cold Sunday afternoon in January, if given a choice between Boston vs. Los Angeles or North Carolina vs. Georgia Tech, I think you know what my choice would be.

Thanks to the fourth-quarter punt return by Robb Schmitzer my Nebraska vs. Iowa State prediction was closer than it should have been.

But the victory may be shallow for the Cornhuskers if quarterback Steve Taylor can't recover from a lower rib injury and his bruise in time for the Kansas game this Saturday at Lawrence, Kansas.

It doesn't appear that Nebraska will need Taylor when they take on the Jayhawks. But it would be nice to have Taylor fine tuned for the Nov. 22 showdown with Oklahoma.

The Huskers need a big game to get them up for the match with the Sooners, 77-0 winners over Missouri last Saturday.

Prediction: Nebraska 45 Kansas 6.

WSC ends CSIC year winless

By Gregg Dahlheim
Sports Editor
For the second week in a row an opposing running back has spelled doom for the Wayne State football team.

This week the culprit was Missouri Southern's Greg Dageforde. Dageforde carried the ball 49 times for 299 yards and four touchdowns in the 41-6 rout of the Wildcats. Last week it was David Tryon for Emporia State. Tryon ripped the Wildcat defense for 304 yards.

Wayne State scored on its opening drive to take a 6-0 lead with 12:24 left in the opening period. Wayne started the drive on its 17-yard line. The 83-yard, 10-play drive concluded on a seven-yard touchdown pass from John Lawrence to Glenn Mathews. Tony Wiese's extra-point attempt was wide left.

The Lions returned the ensuing kickoff to the Wayne State 38-yard line. Wildcat Coach Pete Chapman said the long return was a result of Wiese's kick going to the opposite side of the field that the coverage was set up for.

From there it took less than two minutes for the Lions to score. On Dageforde's sixth straight carry he scored from 17-yards out. David Thaman kicked the extra point and the Lions had the lead for good.

Missouri Southern got its second touchdown after Danny Massey picked off a Lawrence aerial at the Wayne 15-yard line. Three carries later Dageforde went over from the 1-yard line. Thaman's PAT attempt was no good and the Lions led 13-6.

Eric Anderson gave the Wildcats good field position after returning the kickoff 31 yards to the Wayne 46-yard line. The WSC offense was stopped and three plays later was forced to punt. Even that went against the Wildcats. Punter Darin Blackburn was unable to get the punt off and was tackled at the Wayne 31-yard line.

Missouri Southern scored its third TD of the opening quarter by Mr. Dageforde. This time he went in from 5-yards out. Quarterback Scott Sanderson kept the ball and scored on the two-point conversion to make it 21-6 with 5:33 left in the first quarter.

Dageforde carried the ball on the first 15 plays from scrimmage for the Lions. On those carries he gained 87 yards.

It appeared that the Wildcats were on their way to their second score of the quarter when sophomore Bill Mlnarik fumbled the ball at the Lions' 24-yard line after a 16-yard pass from Lawrence. From there Missouri Southern took over.

They ended the scoring in the first quarter on a 47-yard field goal by Thaman.

"We got in the hole real quick in the first quarter," Chapman said. "I think the 2-8 season is beginning to take its toll."

The Lions scored on their first possession of the second half on a 1-yard burst by Dageforde. The PAT was good and Missouri Southern extended its lead to 31-6 with 11:27 left in the third quarter.

Pat Wordekemper again gave the Wildcats good field position after he returned the kickoff 29 yards to the Lions' 39-yard line. Lawrence moved the ball to the Missouri Southern 10-yard line on a 11-yard pass to Mlnarik and a 18-yard scamper around the left end. Then on first and goal Massey picked off his second Lawrence pass of the day at the 2-yard line.

After a Missouri Southern drive stalled, Thaman booted his second field goal to start the fourth quarter. This time the sophomore hit from 29 yards to give the Lions a 34-6 lead. Junior quarterback Jeff Mathers spelled Lawrence in the fourth quarter. But he was unable to move the Wildcats completing three of 12 passes for 60 yards, he was intercepted twice.

The Lions scored their last touchdown of the day on a 25-yard run by Larsen. The PAT was good and the final score read 41-6.

The Wildcats were held to 195 total yards. They finished the day with a negative 17-yards rushing. The Lions finished the game with 425 yards of offense, 410-of-those-coming-on-the-ground.

Lawrence finished the day 14-38 for 152 yards. He was intercepted three times. The bright spot for the Wayne State team was their return game.

They finished with 167-return yards compared to 136 for Missouri Southern.

Defensively senior Randy Hupp led the way for the Wildcats. The 240-pound linebacker recorded 17 tackles, five for losses. He also was credited with the defense's only two-quarterback sacks. Sophomore Mark Volf added 12 tackles.

The loss dropped Wayne State to 2-8 while Missouri Southern boosted its record to 2-8.

Wildcats go to Minnesota for finale

The Wayne State Wildcats will close their season when they play the University of Minnesota-Morris Saturday in the Metrodome Classic in Minneapolis, Minnesota.

The Wayne State vs. Minnesota-Morris clash is one of five games scheduled for the day at the Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome. This is the first time the Wildcats have participated in the classic.

Minnesota-Morris is 6-1-2 on the year. They are led by sophomore quarterback Mike Peterson. Peterson is fifth in the nation in total offense and fifth in passing. As a team, Morris is sixth in the nation in total offense averaging 395.7 yards a game.

The Wildcats, 2-8, will be trying to end their seven game losing streak. They have been outscored 234-75. The WSC offense is averaging 178.2 yards a game while the defense is giving up 371.3 yards a contest.

Wayne State Coach Pete Chapman said Morris is more of a passing team.

"They have a finesse passing team rather than a running team like we are used to in our conference," he said.

Wayne State leads the series 3-1. The two teams have not met since 1973 when the Wildcats prevailed 20-17.

Mule deer are favorites of Nebraska hunters

Named for its large mule-like ears, mule deer are the favorite big game animal of western Nebraska deer hunters.

Like white-tailed deer, mules have keen senses of smell and hearing, and their eyesight is said to be even better than the whitetails.

Adult mule deer bucks weigh in around 150-160 pounds, and does generally weigh a little less, in the 140-150 pound range, though individuals of either sex may be considerably larger.

Mule deer feed on a variety of trees and brush, including chokecherry, sagebrush, buckbrush, jack pine, sunflowers, and row crops if they are available.

nebraska game & parks

Mules are usually a brownish-gray color, but in late fall and winter they are more gray than brown. There is a patch of dark hair on the forehead, and lighter-colored hair on the muzzle. There is white hair on the chin and throat. The tail is narrow and mostly white, except for a patch of black hair at its tip. Bucks have a heavy rack with antlers that appear to be small forks on larger forks.

Mules are found mostly in the rolling Sandhills of north-central Nebraska, the rugged canyons of the Panhandle's Pine Ridge country, and in broken country throughout the western part of the state. While whitetails seek heavy cover along riverbottoms and thick woods, mule deer prefer open areas and can be found on open hillsides, in pastures and meadows.

Mule deer are not as nervous as whitetails and are often more curious than wary. When startled they run in a series of stiff-legged bounds and seem to bounce over the countryside with all four feet hitting the ground at the same time.

The mule deer's greatest fault is his tendency to run from a hunter for some distance, then stop and look back to see if he's being pursued before slipping over the ridge or disappearing into the trees. By stopping he often gives the hunter an easy shot at a stationary target.

The 1986 regular firearm deer hunting season is November 8-16. The season dates in special units will be: East and West Republican River Late Seasons, December 13-21; Platte River and North Platte River Late Seasons, January 10-18, 1987. The muzzleloading rifle seasons at DeSoto Bend National Wildlife Refuge will be December 6-7 and December 13-15.

There are many delicious venison recipes listed in the NEBRASKA and Wild Game Cookbook, available at many newsstands, or from any Game and Parks Commission office across the state.

KEEP YOUR DISTANCE

The safest way to avoid problems with broken power lines this winter is to stay away — and be sure that other people and livestock stay away. If you're inside a vehicle that is in contact with a broken line — stay inside until the line is safely moved. And, if you're outside, never attempt to touch the vehicle. If you see a broken power line, contact your local power supplier immediately. Above all, never assume that a power line laying on the ground is "dead" — it could be "deadly."

You'll have a safer winter when you remember what's watt about electricity.

Chamber of Commerce plans training seminar on customer relations

The Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce is hosting a Customer Relations Training Seminar on Monday, Nov. 17 from 7-10 p.m. Assisting with the seminar is the Nebraska Business Development Center.

The seminar will take place in the Benhack Building Lecture Hall on the Wayne State College of Nebraska campus. The cost is $5 for Chamber member businesses and $10 for non-member businesses. Each business may send as many employees as desired for the above amount.

According to the Chamber office, this workshop is not just for employees. It is designed to help educate employees on their important position in the business.

Linda Brown, Chamber executive vice president, stressed the importance of the seminar.

"Your employees are the first contact your customer has with your business — and sometimes the only contact, whether it be on the phone or in person," she said in a news release.

"Good customer relation skills translate into more business! We hope to see all businesses represented at this seminar — service, retail, professional or sales."

The seminar will be conducted by Barbara A. Schoeneberger, M.A., president of Schoeneberger & Associates of Omaha. Schoeneberger has been a management consultant to both large and small organizations in both the United States and Canada. Businesses that want to be dynamic and vital in the marketplace seek her recommendations for success, according to Brown.

Reservations must be turned in immediately. The registration fee will be payable the evening of the seminar. Checks should be made out to the Chamber of Commerce.

"Please call the Chamber office at 375-2240 to let us know how many people from the business will be attending," Brown said.

that we maintain our present administrative staff at its present level."

MILLS ALSO recommended in his report Tuesday night that ESU 1 continue with a budget of around $80,000 for the media center, adding that it would allow ESU 1 to expand in other areas such as slide films, slide tapes, building block materials for elementary schools, etc.

"I feel there will be a need for more media related materials in the future," said Mills. "Also, with the ever increasing use of VCR's there will be a need to further expand our media library in this area."

In addition, Mills' report of mill levy services included a recommendation that the coop purchase service remain as is.

"I feel we are covering our cost as closely as possible and are providing a valuable service. The coop purchase program has probably saved the schools more money than any other service we provide."

FOLLOWING HIS presentation, Mills asked board members to study the report before next month's board meeting and to direct any questions they have to him prior to that time.

Speaking to the board Tuesday night on behalf of retaining the nursing services program was Mary Rohde, who has served as a school nurse for 16 years and is presently coordinator of the ESU 1 nursing services program.

Also speaking were ESU 1 nurses Elaine Rump and Sandy Kuchta.

All three expressed the importance of the nursing services program and the sharing of ideas, information and experiences which takes place among the ESU 1 community of nurses.

TUESDAY NIGHT'S ESU 1 board meeting also included board policy revisions, including placing administrative job descriptions in the board policy and changing the starting time of ESU 1 board meetings to 7:30 p.m. during December through March.

Board members voted unanimously to place the administrative job descriptions in the board policy, however a second consecutive reading is required next month before the new policy can take effect.

Board members also voted unanimously to begin their meetings during December through March at 7:30 p.m., instead of 8 p.m. Another reading of the policy change will take place next month, and, if approved, the meeting time change will go into effect at the January board meeting.

ESU 1 ASSISTANT Administrator Rodney Garwood informed board members Tuesday night of a nursing hearing scheduled to take place in Ponca on Dec. 8.

Garwood said he presented a deposition to NSEA Attorney Mark McGuire and ESU 1 Attorney John Gerrard on Nov. 6.

He added that the matter has been placed on the court docket in Ponca and is scheduled Dec. 8. Garwood added that briefs will be presented at that time to the judge, who will then render a decision.

The nurses hearing stems from petitions filed in district court by ESU 1 nurses Bonnie Storm and Pauline Kirsch of South Sioux City.

Their petitions challenge the ESU 1 board's jurisdiction over their contracts for 1985-86.

The debate stems from action taken in April 1985 when board members approved a motion to offer amended contracts to all ESU 1 nurses for the 1985-86 school year with an approximate 10 percent reduction in services from 1984-85.

Storm and Kirsch charge that the ESU 1 board lacked legal authority of jurisdiction to modify, amend, or reduce the total number of service days by reason of reduction in force or otherwise because they (the nurses) were not given sufficient and proper notice.

wood regarding an insurance survey conducted by a representative of Employers Mutual Co.

Garwood said the survey included three recommendations, including increasing the insurance on ESU 1 buildings in Wakefield from $285,377 to $342,996. The increase will amount to an additional $210 in premiums per year.

The second recommendation involved a physical barrier around the gas meter at ESU 1 headquarters. Garwood said the matter will be taken care of by the gas company.

The representative also recommended that certificates of vehicular liability coverage be obtained from ESU 1 employees who drive their own cars for company work. Also, that a motor vehicle record check be made of all employees who drive the company vehicle as well as their own vehicles for company work.

Following discussion, ESU 1 board members voted unanimously to allow the ESU 1 administration and insurance committee to request clarification from Employers Mutual Co. regarding the certificates of vehicular liability and motor vehicle record checks.

Discussed the State School Board Convention slated Nov. 20-21 in Omaha. The board's voting delegate at the convention will be Ken Lahrs.

Learned from Board Chairman Marvin Borg that he has appointed Claire Hansen, John Post and Leo Kramper to serve on the board's negotiating team. The board voted unanimously to authorize the negotiating committee to proceed with negotiations for 1986-87 upon receiving the list of negotiable items from the ESU 1 Education Association.

Unanimously voted to verify the successful teaching of Pauline Miller, a resource teacher for ESU 1 during 1980-81 and 1981-82.

Learned from Special Education Director Duane Tappe that he had received a letter from a parent who recently attended parent-teacher conferences at Bryan School in South Sioux City. The parent complimented ESU 1 on the "fantastic" job being done by ESU 1 staffers at Bryan School and expressed her desire for residents to take advantage of opportunities provided by ESU 1 to serve children.

NEXT MEETING of the ESU 1 Board of directors will be held Dec. 9 at 8 p.m. in Wakefield.

The body requires continuous water replacement. The fluids we drink replenish water that is lost from the body in perspiration, during respiration, and in the urine.

Physicians frequently recommend the drinking of additional amounts of water in the presence of certain health problems such as urinary tract infections and urinary tract stones. Constipation may be prevented or relieved if additional water is included in the diet.

The use of certain prescription medicines also calls for extra water consumption. The sulfonamide antineoplastic agents, for example, are safer when taken with large amounts of water. Water helps prevent sulfonamide crystals from forming in the urinary tract and damaging the structures within the kidneys.

Water dilutes medicines and helps prevent or reduce irritation to the gastrointestinal tract. Most potassium chloride solutions, for example, taste better and cause less stomach upset when taken with water. And water also helps prevent capsules or hard-to-swallow tablets from becoming lodged in the esophagus — a special problem in small children and older adults.

Wellness discussed at Center

By Doug Porter

This week's article begins on some of the lesser known aspects of wellness. To begin the series I would like to do a brief overview of what makes up wellness in general. I believe wellness is more than just not being sick. It involves a positive state of total health including the mental, emotional and physical components.

Certain health factors you can't completely control, such as heredity, environment, age and your sex. However, there are many variables that you can control to help benefit your wellness.

Three major areas of health that you can control to aid in your wellness have been discussed in earlier articles: I can them the Big 3 of wellness: Diet, Exercise and Stress Management.

IF AS AN individual you maintain a nutritious eating plan, a positive fitness program and emotional balance exercises, then you can go a long way towards limiting the everyday stresses in life and maintaining positive wellness. These topics have been discussed at great length in our articles and if you would like to know more about them please stop in and see us at the center.

I would like to focus the next couple of articles on some of the lesser known areas of wellness. Some of the other factors that are important in wellness include: plenty of rest (relaxation techniques cannot replace a good night's sleep); development of a positive attitude and the breaking of bad health habits (smoking, excess drinking, etc.).

Over the next couple of articles we will discuss ways of controlling these behaviors so that they will not control you.

Besides reducing health risk factors and increasing your wellness lifestyle, it is important to also be able to recognize health risks. Some of the symptoms of poor health and stress will be discussed as well.

It is important to understand that wellness is a way of life. It is a lifestyle that you must pursue in order to maintain that positive state of health. We will discuss that lifestyle and some of its aspects in the upcoming articles.

Some of the many advantages in better wellness are: fewer hospitalizations, lower health care costs, training in self-care, increased quality and quantity of life and a healthier population.

AT THE STRESS Prevention Center we concentrate on what I feel is the most neglected aspect of wellness: stress management.

If you would like to know more about stress or any related topic, please drop in and see us on Thursday nights at 7 p.m. in Room 202 at Wayne-Carroll High School.

We are totally free of charge, thanks to our grant from the Providence Medical Center Foundation, and we are here to help.

If you would like to know more about our center, to present to your group or for your own information, please feel free to call us at 375-2420 or 375-5289. Furthermore, we will begin to have tri-fold pamphlets telling more about our services out in local health spots in the very near future. So, if you are feeling stressed or the least bit down, please give us a try.

How's the roads?

The Department of Roads and the Nebraska State Patrol are again providing recorded messages to advise motorists of the road conditions during bad weather.

These messages will list four degrees of road conditions: 1. Winter driving conditions 2. Partly covered 3. Mostly covered 4. All covered.

Winter driving conditions go from dry roads to 25 percent snow or ice covered. Partly covered means 25 percent to 50 percent covered. Mostly covered means that the road is more than 50 percent snow and ice covered and all covered means just that — 100 percent covered.

These reports are normally updated at 1 a.m., 8:15 a.m., 11:30 a.m., 4 p.m., and 7 p.m. as needed during a bad storm. The recorded messages are available by calling the following numbers: Omaha 402/553-5000; Lincoln 402/471-4533; or Norfolk 402/371-8190.

At Wayne State LEAD Seminar set

Thirty Nebraska farmers and business persons connected with agriculture will attend the LEAD Group V seminar at Wayne State College of Nebraska Nov. 16-18 in preparation for a three-week trip to Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union.

The LEAD seminar is sponsored by the Public Affairs Institute at Wayne State.

LEAD (Leadership, Education, Action, Development) is a national program whose purpose is to train active farmers and ranchers throughout Nebraska in all aspects of leadership—from the study of human relations to the study of foreign policy issues.

"Many of the participants are farmers, but others are in the field of banking and lending," said Dr. Kent Blaser, division head of Social Sciences at Wayne State.

While at Wayne State, the group will be studying comparative economic systems and foreign policy. Wayne State faculty involved in the program are all from the Division of Social Sciences and include: All Emino, Cliff Ginn, Allen O'Donnell, Meena Dalal, Bob Foote and Blaser.

Each instructor will be addressing the LEAD members and informing them about the different characteristics of each country they will visit. Such background will include politics, economics, geography and history.

The LEAD program, which is six years old, grew out of the Nebraska Agricultural Council.

The LEAD seminar begins with a dinner hosted by Wayne State President Thomas A. Coffey.

"I feel the same way I did when I was 89." That was what the incomparable George Burns had to say when he turned 90 earlier this year. In a typical display of Burns optimism, he announced that he'd just signed a contract with the London Palladium to appear there on his 100th birthday.

Where should you reside if you want to live a long life? According to a new study by the National Center for Health Statistics, life is longest in Hawaii—and shortest in the District of Columbia. Life expectancy in the islands is a lengthy 77.02 years, while in our nation's capital it is only 69.2 years. Other places with a high life expectancy are Minnesota, Iowa, Utah, North Dakota, Nebraska, Wisconsin, Kansas, Colorado, Idaho, Washington and Connecticut. States with a lower-than-average life expectancy are Louisiana, South Carolina, Mississippi, Georgia, Alaska, Alabama, Nevada, West Virginia, North Carolina, Kentucky, Delaware and Tennessee.

Delta Chapter at WSC receives national award

For the seventh consecutive year, Pi Gamma Mu, International social science honorary fraternity, has selected Wayne State College of Nebraska's Delta Chapter to appear on its National Roll of Distinction.

The name of Nebraska Delta will be included on the back cover of "Social Science," a Pi Gamma Mu publication, for the following year. Being selected to the National Roll of Distinction is the highest honor a local chapter can receive, according to Tom Carsey, public relations officer for the Wayne State chapter.

The award is based on the chapter's activities during the previous school year. Emphasized criteria include chapter organization and participation, local initiative in developing new activities and programs, effectiveness of the chapter on its campus in promoting scholarship, initiation of members and financial responsibility.

Dean Lueders of Pender served as president last year, and Laura Gray of Papillion served as vice president. Dr. Jean Karlan, associate professor of sociology, and Cliff Ginn, associate professor of political science, were last year's advisors.

Mari Beth Glerman of South Sioux City and Matt Hollenbeck of Omaha are this year's president and vice president, respectively. Karlan, along with Dr. Ali Eminov, associate professor of anthropology, serve as this year's advisors.

GIVE NEW FEEDER CALVES A QUICK START

Put calves on grain and protein supplement shortly after their arrival in new quarters. Research indicates that an early start with a complete meal produces healthier calves with better weight gains. Higher levels of natural protein provided early seems to increase appetite, and calves eat better.

Give calves hay on the first day. Chopped hay works well, but is not totally necessary. On the second day, place 1 1/2 inch of grain on top so the calves have to work through it to get at the hay. On the third day, add an additional half-pound of grain and protein supplement, but mix it in well to give the complete meal. Use corn silage on the same basis as hay, after the first day.

Hay is reduced as the grain supplement is increased at out a half-pound per day. This will add up to about four or five pounds per week, with one pound being protein supplement.

The protein should be a natural supplement like a "36 percent," and started at a low level on the second or third day. Do not use urea in this early starting ration.

Be sure and have plenty of clean water available, and it wouldn't hurt to let the water tank overflow a bit to let the calves know where it is.

Calves which have been hauled a long way should have access to hay before giving them water, however. These calves often are dehydrated and under stress after traveling, and exposure to strange water often results in scours or bloat.

Once on feed, the 450-pound calves consume about 10 pounds of dry matter a day. Feed twice a day, but keep the amount under 10 pounds per day. This will keep the calves aggressive and help sort out the sick ones; and healthy ones will come to the feed bunk while the sick ones hang back.

Be sure there is enough bunk space for all calves to eat. At least 18 inches of space per head per calf is needed to ensure that all can eat at one time.

Following this early complete meal schedule should result in a weight gain of about two pounds per calf per day, once started on feed.

In agriculture

Workshop focuses on technological choices

A panel of nine nationally recognized authorities in agricultural innovation from private research institutions, agribusiness and land-grant universities will lead a workshop on technological options affecting the direction of Nebraska agriculture at Lincoln on Nov. 24.

Gov. Bob Kerrey will chair the workshop, to begin at 9 a.m. at the Nebraska Center for Continuing Education, 33rd and Holdrege streets.

The future of agriculture in Nebraska depends on the willingness of agricultural planners to consider new options, Kerrey said. "We must be innovative in approaching problems," he said. "We must be willing to take bold steps in new directions."

THE GOVERNOR'S Workshop on Paths to Renewal: Technological Choices for the Future of Nebraska Agriculture is sponsored by the Governor's Office, the University of Nebraska Foundation, the UNL Institute of Agriculture and the Natural Resources, the Nebraska Department of Agriculture and the Nebraska Energy Office.

Participants will consider technological alternatives in agriculture, the impact of change on agricultural communities, agricultural management systems and the long-term sustainability of agriculture, according to Chuck Francis, UNL extension agronomist and organizer of the conference.

Francis, who is a sorghum and corn breeder and a specialist in alternative cropping systems, is also a member of the panel. He will be joined by Cornelia Flora, professor of sociology at Kansas State University, as representatives of land-grant universities. Flora specializes in research on the interaction of the agricultural technology, agricultural values and the community.

GARTH YOUNGBERG, formerly political science chair at Southeast Missouri State University, is one of three panelists from private research institutes. Youngberg, a specialist in alternative agricultural policy, is now executive director of the Institute for Alternative Agriculture in Greenbelt, Md.

Wes Jackson, director of The Land Institute in Salina, Kans., specializes in long-term sustainable agriculture, and Steve Gage, president of the Midwest Technology Development Institute, works to combat economic problems through technology. The MTDI, located in St. Paul, Minn., is sponsored by the Midwest Governor's Conference.

Panelists from the agribusiness sector include Jake Halliday, director of Battelle Kettering Laboratory in Yellow Springs, Ohio; Kelly Chamberlain, director of operations for Farm Information Management Services, and William Brown, retired chairman and president emeritus, both of Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Johnston, Iowa.

Robert Rodale, chairman of Rodale Press which publishes Prevention, New Farm and Organic Gardening magazines, rounds out the panel.

THE PANEL discussion will be followed by a working lunch and a round table discussion with producers and agricultural leaders. Participants must preregister before Nov. 20 by contacting Theresa Konecny or Randy Klein at the Nebraska Department of Agriculture (402) 471-2341.

the farmer's wife

by pat mairhenry

Ten years ago, I said to the Big Farmer, "You should get involved in the community. All you ever think about is farming." He ignored me, as usual.

Then a man he knew who was serving on the NRD board in our district moved out of the district. A replacement was to be appointed.

He said "Now there's something I could enjoy getting involved in. I've always been interested in conservation." NRD is not Nerd board, but Natural Resources District Board.

So we typed up a resume, and sent it in. He had to be interviewed by a committee. The chairman told him there was a lot of politics involved, and suggested he send a letter listing any qualifications to each board member.

There were other applicants, but Mike enjoys competition. Finally, he was notified that he would be on the board.

Almost the next day, we began getting phone calls from people in Norfolk, asking him to vote for Willow Creek. Some of these people we knew only by name. Letters followed.

We were both vaguely aware of a

Corn Board to meet

The Nebraska Corn Development, Utilization and Marketing Board will hold its next meeting on Nov. 21, beginning at 8 a.m., in conference room "B" on the lower level of the State Office Building, 301 Centennial Mall South, Lincoln.

Agenda items include reports on activities in which board members have participated, a report from the Market Development Committee, and interviews with the top three candidates for the position of Executive Director.

A copy of the agenda is available by contacting the Nebraska Corn Board at P.O. Box 95107, Lincoln, NE 68509, phone (402) 471-2787.

The nine-member Nebraska Corn Board collects and disburses the funds generated by the 15/100 of a cent per bushel corn check-off. This year the board is administering a budget of $1,025,958 and investing the funds in programs of market development, research, and promotion education.

The recreationalists prevailed, and Willow Creek is now a reality.

THAT SAME year, someone approached Mike about running for the school board. Maybe it becomes a hereditary thing. His father was on the board at Apex school for years and years.

And about that time, he was elected to the church council. Now his hobby had become going to meetings. Sometimes they get late. Sometimes, irate patrons call at home. The NRD rotates its meetings all over the district. Its state meeting is in Lincoln.

School board state meetings are in Omaha, which works out for staying with my sis. The national conventions are always during calving, so that shoots that.

This year finishes his second term. He told me after the first of the year it would be his last.

On the last day that incumbents could file, he called me at work and said, he'd changed his mind. So I campaigned against him.

proposed project south of Pierce that would become a recreation area. Typically, since it wouldn't affect our land, and we did not plan to use it for fishing or boating, we had not paid much attention to it.

IT TURNED out that it was being designated a flood control project, and the money was to be approved by the NRD. We were suddenly very aware of Willow Creek.

Some of the directors felt that the project was mostly recreational, and were opposed to spending conservation money for it. Others felt the area needed the project.

One night two couples whose land would be flooded came over and sat at our kitchen table for a very long time. When they left, I commented that no way could I vote against them.

The proposed dam would even come near a cemetery. There was concern about hordes of people vandalizing it.

When it came to the vote, our Hero went with the conservatives and voted against it. Some people put his picture on the wall and they threw darts at it!

THE SCHOOL COUNSELOR

For the past thirty years it has been a common practice to have counselors in our high schools, junior high schools, and middle schools. Today, an increasing number of elementary schools have counselors assigned to them as well.

Yet, after more than a quarter century of their dedicated service to schools, we often do not understand or appreciate what duties counselors perform. Sometimes, even students aren't fully aware of the roles and responsibilities of counselors in this message, there are five major responsibilities that are important for parents to know about.

First, the school counselor is expected to assist each child and his or her parents in mapping out the most appropriate educational program. Counselors help select courses and programs that will best fit the student's abilities and interests and at the same time provide him or her a learning challenge.

Second, the counselor is available to assist students as they prepare to graduate from high school and continue their education. The counselor can help a student to identify colleges, universities, vocational-technical schools, or other educational opportunities that will best fit the student's needs. The counselor assists students in completing applications for admission to postsecondary schools. If a student needs a scholarship, a student loan, or a grant in order to continue his or her education, the counselor can help with applications for these as well.

Third, the counselor is available to assist students who have personal problems. These personal problems may involve teacher-student or student-student relationships—or the problems often associated with growing into adulthood. Sometimes, the counselor is responsible for helping students deal with and solve their drug or alcohol abuse problems—or those among their families or friends.

Fourth, regardless of whether the counselor is in charge of the school's standardized-testing program, he or she is qualified to interpret and explain test results to students and their parents. A counselor can help a student to determine his or her areas of greatest academic strength and the vocational areas in which the student has the most interest and aptitude.

Fifth, the counselor is able to assist students who may be having difficulty in their studies by showing them the best ways to study and learn material.

Counselors are busy educators. They bring together in one place considerable and valuable information that can help a student be more successful in school—now and later. Much of a counselor's time is spent in conferences with students, teachers, and parents in an effort to help make the school experience of each child a positive one. When assistance is needed, neither a student nor his or her parents should hesitate to make an appointment with a counselor. A counselor can provide suggestions, advice, and assistance that may well mean the difference between success and failure for a student.
