Bereuter looks ahead to upcoming Congress

By Chuck Hackemiller
Managing Editor

U.S. Congressman Doug Bereuter certainly doesn't sell himself short when it comes to listing his accomplishments over the years in Washington.

Bereuter, who was victorious during the November general election over Democrat Steve Burns, will begin his fifth term as Congressman of Nebraska's First District when the 100th Congress rolls around. With this bid election won, Bereuter says he will now have more seniority in Congress than anyone in the First Congressional District — at least for the past 30 years.

"I think I'm the most effective legislator in the Nebraska delegation," said Bereuter in an interview with the Wayne Herald prior to the general elections.

"More of my words have ended up in the statute book than any other member of the Nebraska delegation — either in the Senate or the House," he added.

When speaking about his role of providing assistance to Nebraska and cities, Bereuter doesn't hold back when saying he has brought back more discretionary grant funds in the last few years than any other Congressman who has served the First Congressional District.

HE MAKES IT a point to spend an average of 90 days during a year listening or trying to stay close with his constituents.

He didn't make that average this year. It was a busy 99th Congress. Most of the activity of significance, Bereuter says, happened during the last two or three weeks of the session. "Members of the legislative body try to maximize their clout by holding the bills hostage," he said.

"This 99th Congress ended up as surprisingly productive," he mentioned.

Bereuter said the two most significant bills passed this year was the Tax Reform Act of 1986 and the Immigration Reform Act.

The tax reform act provided the most sweeping change for individual taxpayers since the beginning of individual income tax in this country," he said. "And it makes just as important changes in the corporate tax structure."

"I think this tax reform will be in the best interest of our country and of most Nebraskans."

The Immigration Reform Act had been put off for three Congressional sessions, Bereuter said, and had been overdue.

"Fifty thousand illegal aliens come into the United States each month. So obviously we had to get some control of that situation. And we're doing it by employer sanctions, amnesty for people here before 1982 and by a wide variety of other changes," Bereuter remarked.

THOSE CHANGES include some which were most difficult to work out, such as the migrant labor for the western growers of vegetables and fruits.

In the environmental areas, there were a number of important areas covered such as the Water Project Act, Safe Drinking Water Act, the establishment of the Superfund and the conservation divisions of the 1985

Farm Bill that was passed in December, 1985.

Also included as significant passage during the 99th Congress included the "too expensive" but important Drug Control Act that is "much tougher on drug pushers" and provides military surveillance to assist law enforcement officials on the nation's southern borders, Bereuter said.

ALONG WITH the positive bill passages were the disappointments, according to Bereuter. One of his disappointments was the failure to pass the Surface Transportation Act. "We'll have to complete action on that either in March or April or we will be out of road construction money," Bereuter mentioned.

The Surface Transportation Act contains authorization of expenditures of the Highway Trust Fund, plus most of the mass transit funds of the country. "We're down to about $7 billion of authorization left in the Highway Trust Fund for the nation. We'll manage that," Bereuter said.

Gramm-Rudman-Hollings Act did however, keep down the increases in spending, Bereuter mentioned. "The overall expenditure for this fiscal year was up 1 percent over last year. That was the smallest percentage increase since the 70's or 80's," he said.

Another disappointment Bereuter mentioned was the failure to pass bank legislation important on keeping federal savings and loan companies, insurance corporations and FDIC sound.

ONE OF HIS goals in the 100th Congress will be the "Farmer Mac Program" — to establish a secondary mortgage market for long term agricultural real estate loans.

"It provides an alternative source of financing through local commercial banks for long term ag loans," Bereuter mentioned.

"I realize we don't need to have farmers with greater debts. But what we do need is another major competitive source for long term ag real estate loans," he commented.

The Farmer Mac plan, according to Bereuter, stipulates that the long term loans cannot be made by the commercial banks. But the commercial bank can become the agent in giving such loans from those who purchase them for sale on the national market.

"And this would bring down the interest rates," he said.

During the course of the political campaign this year, Bereuter was accused by his opponent of excessive travels to foreign lands. Bereuter has served as a member of the Foreign Affairs Committee and served as a ranking Republican member of the International Development Organization Subcommittee.

"I have a reason to travel," he said.

"If anything, I didn't travel enough. I have never attempted to hide my travels and I frequently write reports on them. I make no apologies whatsoever for it. I should travel more than I do," he mentioned.

He looks on his seniority as a key to the upcoming 100th Congress accomplishments.

"After all, it helps to be in the same party as the man in the White House."

Truck crashes into tractor, grain wagons

An accident involving the collision of a semi truck and a tractor pulling two wagons filled with corn took place Friday morning on the highway north of Wakefield.

The incident occurred approximately 6:45 a.m., about a half mile north of Wakefield.

Brad Jones of Wayne, age 26, was driving the tractor pulling two grain wagons. The truck-trailer (carrying a load of salvaged truck parts) was being driven by Ralf Ferris of Jackson.

Both were southbound on the highway. Ferris stated that he did not see the tractor and wagons driven by Jones in time to avoid a collision. After the collision, the tractor/wagons and the truck rested on the highway.

Jones and Ferris were transported by the Wakefield Rescue Unit to the Wakefield Hospital, where they were treated for cuts and bruises and later released.

Both the tractor and the truck-trailer received extensive damage. The highway was shut down at the scene of the accident for a period of about four hours while workmen from nearby businesses cleared approximately 500 bushels of corn and 200 gallons of diesel fuel that had spilled upon the highway.

The accident was investigated by the Nebraska State Patrol with assistance from the Wakefield Police Department and the Wakefield Fire Department.

St. Mary's students get the early jump on education of substance abuse

By Chuck Hackemiller
Managing Editor

Just when is it too early for youngsters to learn about stimulants, depressants or drug addiction? What is the right age for teaching young children about the dangers of crack — a purified form of cocaine that is smoked?

The "sooner the better" is the philosophy shared by the Wayne St. Mary's School teachers and staff members.

In a newsletter to parents, St. Mary's teachers write that by the time children reach first grade, they already have quite a good sense that something is going on with drugs. They see drugs and alcohol on television, hear about drugs in conversations and may even have observed abuse of drugs and alcohol.

That is why students there — from kindergarten to sixth grade — are going through an education process to develop a greater awareness of drug and alcohol abuse. Some experts have suggested that early education against drug/alcohol abuse may be the best prevention.

The first of a four-part series on the St. Mary's educational program dealing with drug and alcohol abuse took place on Friday.

LuAnn Ellingson of Wayne, a nurse, presented the first part of the program, covering the topics of nutrition/health aspect of drug abuse.

She listed some stimulants, depressants and how the certain drugs can affect them physically. She told of "crack" — a drug that is very addictive, more so than cocaine. It is absorbed into the blood stream quickly.

SISTER Susan Mauch, who is an aide at St. Mary's School, and several other volunteers from Wayne have helped to implement the drug education program.

"When they get up into the middle school or high school, there may be pressure for these kids to try to use drugs," sister Susan.

It is hoped that the programs presented to the young students will help them "say no to the use of drugs," she said.

The future programs at St. Mary's will include a topic on "Positive Self-Esteem, Peer Pressure (or how to say 'no') that will be presented by the Monroe Health Center in December; a video shown on drug laws as presented by a member of the Wayne Police Department in January; and in February, a presentation from an individual who will tell what it is like living with an alcoholic family member.

Periodically throughout the year, each classroom will be presenting "The Adventures of Daredevil Dog Drug Education Program: a behavioral approach."

The kit is on loan from the WSC Library and involves the use of stories, cassettes and film strips.

Council plans soup supper

The resident council of the Wayne Care Centre is planning what is hoped to be its first annual fundraiser Wednesday, Nov. 19, according to administrator Gil Haase.

Beef vegetable and chicken noodle soup, pie and a drink will be served from 6 to 8 p.m. at $2 per person.

Proceeds from the soup and pie supper are being earmarked for various projects the council hopes to accomplish within the near future.

This project serves a double purpose — supper and the valued social contact between the community and the care centre residents.

"Dollars cannot measure the wealth this social event will mean to our residents," said Haase. "Their needs are just the same as any other individual's needs."

People think the residents of nursing homes have different needs. But they don't. They are wonderful, caring people. They may be older and because of age have sight, hearing or body impairments. But it doesn't change their personality and they need the community involvement. After all, a generation ago, they were the community.

Planned by the resident council, the supper is being managed by Peggy Wheeler, June Baler, Mardelle Hallstrom and Conie Spahr and her dietary staff.

"The trend over the years has been a general fear of Care Centres," said Haase. "Folks don't look forward to that part of their lives when they must leave their homes and enter a nursing home. That's why if it is so necessary for the community to come to them...to let them know they're still a valued and treasured part. And instead of an institution, this has become their home."

Modern medicine and other influences now enable the elderly to not only live with their peers longer, their friends and neighbors, but also to have the freedom to come and go with their family if they are able.

This event is also a forum for us to encourage the signing up of volunteers, Haase said.

"We have a fine, dedicated staff to take care of the elderly," Haase states, "and we already have several talented volunteers for musical events, bible study, communion, ministerial association, etc. but we need additional volunteers to help with reading, games, bingo, crafts. We can use groups, study clubs, extension clubs, elementary students (the adoptive Grandparent Program) and individuals that have just a little spare time to come once a week, once a month, or whatever time available. It all counts toward the melding of the Care Centre life and the community for the residents."

The Wayne Care Centre is an Intermediate Care I facility with a present census of 87 residents and a capacity of 94.

It was the fourth wedding within a year that my family traveled in and out of Iowa, covering over 2,500 miles in total, to attend. My youngest of all sisters and brothers (there were 10 children in my family) was the last in the family to marry. How appropriate that was.

A single wedding in one year makes any parent fret. Exactly how my parents were able to survive with four of their children marrying in one year is beyond my understanding.

During her ceremony, I got to thinking about what it was like when all 10 children (from the littlest to the oldest) were growing up under the same roof. The house seemed so big then — even if it did only have one bathroom.

Now, whenever we return to the farm home, where only my parents still reside, things just don't look or sound the same. The rooms seem smaller. The squeaks on the steps that lead to the upstairs bedrooms seem louder than before. Those silos on the farm do not seem so tall.

Certainly, I realize all this is because we're older and have grown taller. Soon, the grandchildren will look upon this home as their parents did.

After income tax reform passed

Social Security tax review needed

Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation by Cheryl Stubbendieck Vice President/Information

Passage of income tax reform legislation by the 99th Congress was certainly a step in the right direction, however much each of us may mourn the passing of a favored deduction or credit. The new tax law will provide lower tax rates and tax relief for low-income individuals, among its other effects.

But, if the goal of reform legislation is equity, then the new Congress must take a look at America's second-highest tax, Social Security. Social Security taxes are going in the opposite direction from income tax reform, according to American Farm Bureau economist Ron Herr. Tax reform lowers the rates on income and exempts those with the lowest incomes, but at the same time, Social Security taxes are increasing. They apply to the first $42,000 of income and exempt earnings above that amount, so low-income wage earners pay proportionally more than those making $42,000 plus.

But there's another Social Security wrinkle that directly affects farmers, ranchers and other self-employed persons. In the past, self-employed persons paid Social Security taxes equal to two-thirds of the combined amount paid by an employer and employee for that employee's wage level. Now the self-employed tax is being adjusted to equal the full amount paid for a comparable wage earner. The self-employed tax rate will be 15.3 percent on maximum taxable earnings of $25,900 in 1980; it will rise to 15.3 percent of maximum taxable earnings of over $50,000 in 1990.

FORTUNATELY, Herr says, a couple of adjustments are in the works: by 1990, the self-employed will have a Social Security tax exemption equal to 7.65 percent of earnings, and an income tax deduction equal to half of their Social Security taxes.

However, there's another major problem with Social Security and the self-employed. For them, Social Security is levied on their business profits — which include income generated by their business capital assets as well as their labor. More than many other self-employed professionals, farmers and ranchers have quit large capital investments. So when they pay Social Security taxes, they are paying on income attributable to their land, buildings, equipment and other assets, as well as what their labor earns.

The thing is, personal investments such as stocks, bonds and savings accounts are not subject to Social Security tax, and this encourages movement to non-farm personal investments. Social Security significantly reduces the return to business assets.

For younger farmers who don't expect ever to receive much benefit from the Social Security system, there's an incentive to reduce their Social Security taxes — much as there is for any business or individual to reduce income tax liability.

For example, a farmer might shift his land from farm business to non-farm business. At least in theory, he could rent land he owned as a personal asset to another individual, and pay rent to somebody else on a comparable amount of land to farm. Obviously, this could make for some inefficiencies. But as the Social Security tax burden grows, the appeal of such machinations will grow.

The Social Security tax is clearly unfair to self-employed persons, and more so to those with large capital investments. It is moving in the opposite direction of the new tax reform. The 100th Congress can finish the job by taking a hard look at the Social Security tax.

another viewpoint

The early years

From the "What Works: Schools Without Drugs" put out by the U.S. Department of Education

The first temptations to use drugs may come in social situations in the form of pressures to "act grown up" and have a "good time" by smoking cigarettes or using alcohol or marijuana.

A recent survey found that television and movies had the greatest influence on fourth graders in making drugs and alcohol seem attractive; other children had the second greatest influence.

From the fifth grade on, peers played an increasingly important role, while television and movies consistently had the second greatest influence.

For all children, the most important reason for taking marijuana is to "fit in with others."

"To feel older" is another reason for grades four and five and to "have a good time" for those in grade six through twelve.

This finding reinforces the need for prevention programs beginning in the early grades — programs that focus on teaching children to resist peer pressure and on making worthwhile and enjoyable drug-free activities available to them.

Students who turn to more potent drugs usually do so after first using cigarettes and alcohol, and then marijuana. Initial attempts may not produce a "high"; however, students who continue to use drugs learn that drugs can alter their thoughts and feelings.

The greater a student's involvement with marijuana, the more likely it is the student will begin to use other drugs in conjunction with marijuana.

Drug use frequently progresses in stages — from occasional use, to regular use, to multiple drug use, and ultimately to total dependency. With each successive stage, drug use intensifies, becomes more varied and results in increasingly debilitating effects.

Drug use can be stopped at any stage. However, the more involved children are with drugs, the more difficult it is for them to stop.

The best way to fight drug use is to begin prevention efforts before the children start using drugs. Prevention efforts that focus on young children are the most effective means to fight drug use.

submitted as a news release from the American Legion Auxiliary

American Legion Auxiliary No. 43 of Wayne is encouraging everyone to visit their local school and become involved. Today, American remains strong because of its educational values.

Sixty-six years of concern and interest will be observed Nov. 16 to 22 of this year during the annual nationwide observance of American Education Week.

Since 1921, the American Legion Auxiliary, Sons of the American Legion, and other professional groups have promoted with good cause, the idea of visitation to our schools.

This year's theme "School and Community: United for Excellence" should remind each of us that we have a duty and a responsibility to see that our children are prepared to take up the roles of citizens and leaders in the years to come.

American Education Week is not just for active parents and educators, it's for everyone. Without the aid of statistics, it is quite apparent that many citizens have not visited their local school since their own graduation from high school.

Exercise your right and responsibility in 1986 and visit the school of your choice.

"School and Community: United for Excellence" should remind each of us that we have a duty and a responsibility to see that our children are prepared to take up the roles of citizens and leaders in the years to come.

out of old nebraska

The Telephone was invented in 1876 by Alexander Graham Bell and the use of the crude instruments began at once in New England. It did not take long for the use of the wonderful instrument to spread to Nebraska.

The Omaha Electrical Company was formed in May, 1879, to organize and operate a telephone exchange. The company established a telephone exchange the following month, and poles were put up along the principal streets of the city and wires were strung.

At first there were about 70 subscribers but by the summer of 1882 they had increased to 400. At that time there were 260 miles of wire in the city and 13 persons were employed. Meanwhile the organization had become the Omaha Telephone Company which was first listed in the city directory in 1881.

In Fremont a few telephones were installed as early as the spring of 1880. Each line had a phone at each end or between a store and the proprietor's home. There was no exchange at that time. In 1880 there were also private telegraph lines between business houses and the owner's homes.

In December, 1880, the Mutual Benefit Telegraph Company was organized in Fremont but was soon superseded by the telephone.

My March, 1881, telephone exchanges had been opened in Fremont and in several other towns. These early exchanges were at first local companies organized merely to serve the local community. The exchange at Hastings was a good example. It was incorporated in January, 1881, and began business on May 1 with 25 subscribers. By the summer of 1882 this number had increased to 66. The rate charged for a phone was $3.50 a month and $2.50 for a residence phone. By the summer of 1882, the Beatrice Telephone and Stock Company had been organized with 37 instruments in use.

Late in 1880, telephone service was extended from Omaha to Blair and Fremont and in July, 1883, the American District Telephone Company was organized. Toll lines were built from Omaha to Plattsmouth and Nebraska City and to Lincoln and Beatrice.

A toll line was built west through the Platte Valley reaching North Bend, Schuyler and Columbus by November, 1885.

Sheep Industry An interesting phase of Nebraska's history is the development of sheep raising in the state. The industry has had its ups and downs, but a surprising number of Nebraskans have engaged in the feeding of sheep at one time or another over the years.

On Jan. 1, 1886 Nebraska ranked 17th in the nation with its 3,400 sheep operations. The actual number of sheep was 160,000.

"America's Sheep Trails" by Col. Edward N. Wentworth contains a brief account of the early days of the sheep industry in Nebraska.

According to Col. Wentworth, sheep began to appear in the Nebraska country in considerable numbers as early as the late 1940's. Like many of the people who saw the area at that time, however, they merely were traveling through — being driven along the great roadway that was the Platte Valley to ranges in the far west.

It was not until about that time of the Civil War that flocks began to be permanently located in Nebraska Territory. Sheep was exhibited at the first territorial fair held at Nebraska City in 1859, but the competition does not appear to have been particularly keen — a single exhibitor, Peleg Redfield by name, won all of the premiums given.

By 1860 there were only 2,355 head of sheep in the Territory. The building of the Union Pacific resulted in the establishment of a few flocks along the Platte, but as late as 1870 there were only about 22,000 head in Nebraska. The 80's and 90's were periods of great growth for the early sheep feeding industry just as they were for the state as a whole. By 1890 there were more than half a million found in Nebraska's feedlots.

The first large-scale feeding in Nebraska was the offshoot of a wave of sheep driven up from New Mexico, and centered around Ogallala, Sidney and the Scottsbluff region. Later the principal feedlots were concentrated around Grand Island, from Central City to Lexington and Kearney. A notable exception were the lots of Peter Jansen at Jansen.

A number of important Nebraska pioneers were identified with sheep raising. Peter Jansen has been mentioned. Another was Franklin Hershey who operated large feedlots at Gibbon. Hershey's sheep were trailed east from Oregon following shearing.

Another big operator at Gibbon was C.C. Hudson, who trailed sheep by the thousands from New Mexico in the early 90's. At Central City, T.B. Hord, originally a leading cattleman, fattened thousands of sheep each year, in addition to large numbers of cattle and hogs.

news and notes

A turkey update
 Turkey is good year-round, but it is a traditional food for the holidays. Now that more than 40 percent of American homes have microwave ovens, turkey is much quicker and easier to defrost.

Begin by checking your microwave cookbook or owners manual for instructions and size of turkey that will fit in your oven.

Normal size ovens usually can hold a turkey under 16 pounds. Check to see what power setting should be used. Most ovens have a low or defrost setting. Low power levels should be used because a turkey is large and dense, defrosting slowly at about 9 to 11 minutes per pound.

A low setting will help insure that outer sections do not begin cooking before inner sections thaw.

FOLLOW YOUR guidebook closely on the defrosting method. You may need to turn the bird upside down in the pan, rotate it in the oven and shield outer areas with foil.

Generally defrosting should take about 1 to 2 hours for an 8 to 11 pound bird, and 2 to 3 hours for a 12 to 16 pound bird.

If your Thanksgiving crowd is bigger, use two medium sized turkeys and defrost them separately in your microwave.

When you remove the turkey from the microwave the inner cavity should still be cold and a little icy. If the gibel and neck pack is still frozen, try running a little cold water through the cavity to loosen it.

TO PREVENT "dry bird syndrome" be sure to roast the turkey in a slow oven at 325 degrees F. You can also cover the bird with foil or a roasting pan lid to keep the meat moist.

A cooking bag will help give you a moister product if you are microwaving the turkey. Be sure to follow the instructions with the bag you use.

Insure a picture perfect bird by allowing it to stand for 20 minutes before carving. This gives the meat time to reabsorb its natural juices. The result is a firmer textured meat and perfect slices.

Microwave cooked birds must have that standing time to finish cooking. The extra time allows heat to spread evenly through the meat and the temperature of the bird rises to the finish point.

For other turkey questions, call the USDA's toll free hotline, 800-535-4555, between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. on weekdays.

Wildcats look to improve on last year's 13-20 mark

By Gregg Dahlheim
Sports Editor

Wayne State Wildcat basketball fans should expect a lot of quickness when Coach Steve Aggers' squad hits the hardwoods for the 1986-87 basketball campaign.

The Wildcats season got underway Saturday with a game against Briar Cliff College, ranked 20th in the NAIA Pre-Season Poll.

Aggers said things have gone very well in preparing for his second year as Wildcat head coach.

"The kids are very enthusiastic and excited about opening the season," he said.

Aggers said the program is in its second year of rebuilding. He said the Wildcats should improve on their 13-20 record of last year.

Aggers and assistants Fred Schnell and Doug Porter welcomed 12 newcomers to the Wildcat camp, six of whom are freshmen.

Another change in the basketball program is the resurgence of the junior varsity team. Aggers said the JV squad, coached by Porter, will play a 12 to 14-game schedule.

Aggers said the Wildcats will look to Vincent White and Russ Rosenquist for leadership.

White is the only senior on Aggers' squad. White, 5-9, will lead the Cats from the point-guard spot. He is coming off a junior season where he was selected to play in the District 11 All-Star game and was named to the all-district team. He was second on the team in scoring averaging 10 points a game and first in assists dishing out 3.7 a game.

Last year Rosenquist led the Wildcats in scoring, tossing in 12.8 points a contest. He returns for his junior season a year older and a year wiser. "Aggers said 'Rosey' is a legitimate threat from the new three-point line. He also was an all-district selection and played in the District 11 All-Star game.

Along with team speed, the Wildcats should also be stronger up front.

Back for his sophomore season is the Cats' leading rebounder Markus Wilson. Wilson's work in the weight room over the summer has added bulk to his 6-6, 200-pound frame.

Kelth Berg, Mark Gracy and Mike McNamara will also help beef up Aggers' front line. Each has starting experience from last year.

The Wildcats' aggressive defense and rebounding is listed as one of the team's strong areas. Aggers said with good depth at each position his team should be an overall better shooting team than last year's squad.

Aggers said he doesn't put much stock in the CSIC pre-season ratings which list Wayne State last in the eight-team conference.

"That doesn't really effect us," he said. "All they base it on is how many returners you have coming back and how you did last year."

Washburn is picked on top of the CSIC for the upcoming season. The Ichabods return four starters from a team that finished 24-8 last year.

Fort Hays State is picked to finish second followed by Emporia State, Kearney State, Missouri Western, Missouri Southern, Pittsburg State and Wayne State.

The Wildcats will host Dana College in their home opener on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at Rice Auditorium.

Aggers said he and his team are looking for a lot of support at the opener. The coach said he would encourage everyone to come out and see the 1986-87 edition of Wildcat basketball.

All-conference picks

Blue Devil basketball

WAYNE HIGH SCHOOL basketball players have been practicing fundamentals this past week as they prepare for the upcoming season. Blue devil Coach Bob Uhing will have his squad ready for the Dec. 5 season opener at Blair.

Lady Cats return four starters

By Gregg Dahlheim
Sports Editor

The sky is the limit for the 1986-87 Lady Wildcats basketball team.

The Lady Cats will try to put last year's 3-24 disaster out of their minds forever.

Lenny Klaver enters his third year as mentor of the Lady Wildcats with a 14-43 mark. Paul Thomas will again serve as Klaver's assistant.

This year's team will be youthful but experienced. Although the squad doesn't have a senior on its roster, they do return nine letter-winners with the majority having starting experience.

The Lady Cats will have four returning starters back from last year. Michelle Blomberg returns for her third year at point guard and will team with sophomore Linda Schnitzler, last year's leading scorer at 14.9 points per game, in the back court.

Sophomore Mary Beth Ehrhorn will return to man the small forward spot with help from Kris Smith at the other forward spot.

A solid girl in the middle is what Klaver was looking for and that's what he got in junior-college transfer Dawnn Berni. Berni, a 6-0 junior from Stromsberg, transferred to Wayne from Northeast Tech in Norfolk.

Last year Berni was selected to the Junior College All-American team by averaging 22 points and 13 rebounds a game.

Also expected to contribute in the middle are Jackie Heesacker of Columbus and Jodene Finck of Wausa. Sophomore Heesacker, 6-0, is expected to improve from a fine freshman year. Finck, a 6-2 sophomore, is coming off a redshirt season due to a foot injury.

Depth and skill at the perimeter positions, strong outside shooting and team speed will be the Lady Cats' strong points.

Klaver's crew is expected to finish in the cellar of the CSIC, according to the pre-season poll.

Kearney State is expected to win the conference followed by Missouri Southern, Emporia State, Missouri Western, Washburn, Fort Hays State, Pittsburg State and Wayne State.

The Lady Cats opened their season Friday in the District 11 Classic at Hastings against Doane College. Saturday they faced Dana College.

The Lady Wildcats will open their home portion of the season tonight (Monday) when they entertain Briar Cliff College. The contest will begin at 7:30 p.m. at Rice Auditorium.

nebraska game & parks Hungarian Partridge makes way to northeast Nebraska

Of all Nebraska's game birds, the species least likely to be encountered by hunters is the Hungarian Partridge.

Sometimes called the "gray partridge," the Hun is not native to the United States. Many were released in selected locations throughout the nation between the years of 1899 and 1912. The idea was to provide another upland gamebird for hunters, but the birds have become established only in certain areas of the northern United States and southern Canada.

Today Hungarian Partridge will be found around abandoned farmhouses, in shelterbelts, in areas where there is an abundance of small grains that provide food and cover, or in rolling foothills that have plenty of grass and sagebrush.

The major portion of the Hun's diet is grass seeds, corn, oats, wheat, barley and various forms of vegetation. They form coveys of six to 15 birds and roost together in patches of short grass, in alfalfa fields, grain stubble, or even in open plowed fields. When there is snow on the ground they may roost in a depression in the snow, or even burrow under the snow to roost.

The Hungarian partridge is a brownish-gray color and has short brown tail feathers. The legs and feet are unfeathered and bare. Cocks have a solid brown horseshoe marking on the lower breast, and, though hens and juvenile birds also have the markings, it is broken and less distinct. Adults of both sexes weigh about 14 ounces. The underneath portion of the upper neck and the bird's face are an orangish-brown cinnamon color and there are chestnut bars on its flanks.

In Nebraska Huns are considered to be a "bonus bird," usually taken by hunters who accidentally scare them up while hunting pheasants. Game and Parks Wildlife Division Chief Ken Johnson says Huns are found primarily in the northeastern part of the state. "They seem to be a species that can adapt to poorer habitat than pheasants need, and can survive in areas where pheasants have declined."

Johnson said efforts to introduce Huns in Nebraska during the 1930's fell short for one reason or another, though there has been a small population in the Atkinson area for a long time. Efforts have also been made to release birds in the panhandle and southwest, but so far they have not gotten much of a foothold in those areas.

"Now it appears they are extending their range from northwest Iowa and southeast South Dakota into Nebraska. We are happy to see that happening because they provide an additional game bird to occupy available habitat and do not compete with bobwhite quail and pheasant," Johnson said.

This year's Hungarian Partridge hunting season coincides with pheasant season, Nov. 1 to Jan. 18. The daily bag limit is three, the possession limit is nine.

CONTEST RULES

One football game has been placed in each of the ads on this page. Indicate the winner by writing in the name of the winning team on the proper line on the entry blank. No scores. Just pick the winners, or ties. In case of tie, write "tie." Use the entry blank below or a copy of equal size.

Write in your guess of the total number of yards gained by both teams in the game of the week. This will only be used in case of a tie. The person that comes closest to the total number of yards without going over will be the winner.

One entry only to each contestant, but members of a family may each submit an entry. Entries should be brought or mailed to The Wayne Herald office not later than 3 p.m. Friday, or if mailed, should not be postmarked later than 3 p.m. Friday. You need not be a subscriber of the Herald to be eligible for prizes.

The Winners will be announced weekly on the Thursday sports page of The Wayne Herald. Employees of the Herald and their immediate families are ineligible. Judges' decisions will be final in every case.

BUSINESS & PROFESSIONAL DIRECTORY

Inside schools

by Cindy Berg
FORWARD TO CLINIC
 A concentrated effort for excellence in vocal music has been worked on in recent weeks. The following students and their director, Mrs. Coleen Jeffries will travel to Osmond on Nov. 17 for the Conference Vocal Clinic:
 Dawn Book, Carmen Reeg, Mace Kant, Christina Bloomfield, Darren Wacker, Kim Damme, Tracy Topp, Chris Nau, Darin Gruenke, Randy Leapley, Kevin Jaeger, Cindy Berg, Pam Greene, Janet Tompka, Connie Smith, Tamil Jenkins, Char Olson, and Kathy Leighton.
 The final concert will be at 7:30 that evening. The concert will feature the mass choir and small groups (such as Swing Choir) from each school in the Conference. A traveling trophy will be awarded to the school with the most people in attendance at the concert. Why not come and support your local vocalists?

ONE-ACT "NIGHTMARE"
 A group of thespians at Winside High School will be performing "The Actor's Nightmare" by Christopher Durang for several upcoming One-Act Contests. The first contest is Conference in Wynot the 24th of November. The District Contest takes place Dec. 1-5 and the State Competition is Dec. 12-13.
 The cast includes: an accountant who dreams he is an actor, George Spelvin (Darren Wacker), Meg - a stage manager in the dream (Tracy Topp), Sarah Siddons - a high society slightly conceited woman (Christi Theis), Ellen Terry - a "bag-lady" in one point of the dream (Cindy Berg), and the Executioner (Chris Nau). The hard-working crew includes Kim Damme, and Wendy Boldt. The play is directed by Mrs. Penny Baier.

OUTSTANDING SOPHOMORE
 Wendy Boldt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Boldt has been selected to represent Winside High as the 1987 Sophomore to attend the High O'Brian Youth (HOBY) Nebraska Leadership Seminar during the weekend of June 4 - 8. She will join nearly 360 other outstanding sophomores from around Nebraska. The Foundation focuses on providing opportunities for the sophomores to identify and develop their own leadership abilities while exploring and advocating the American economic incentive system and democratic process.
 Miss Boldt was selected on the basis of three essay questions which she answered about herself and the leadership qualities that she possesses.

STUDENT COUNCIL UPDATE
 One of the most recent projects the Winside Student Council undertook was the selling of Spook Insurance for Halloween. The members sold the insurance for $1 per house, or car. If the owner of the insurance had a claim (an egged, pumpkined, or soaped car or home) they could call one of the Sponsor's and the Council was notified by 9 the next morning to go and clean it up. The proceeds from this "fun-raiser" went to the Winside Historical Society.
