Following Siouxland concert

Senior students have rare meeting with Alice Cooper

By Chuck Hackenmiller
Managing Editor

Alice Cooper, on stage, appears as a wild, rambunctious character who has among his touring possessions a lengthy boa constrictor that he will bring into his act before an idolizing audience.

When performing, he paints his face as if it's Halloween all over again.

But there are some young people from Wayne who may have a different picture of Alice Cooper.

Cooper performed Wednesday night at Sioux City Auditorium. Among the cheering audience were Wayne-Carroll high school seniors Jay Luff and Chris Stratight.

After the concert, Luff and Stratight experienced a rare treat — to meet Cooper and talk with him for "a good 10 minutes" on his private bus.

Prior to the Alice Cooper concert, Rock 98 (which sponsored the performance) conducted an essay contest, with the theme, "Your worst nightmare."

The winner would receive a backstage pass to meet Cooper after his Wednesday performance.

Luff submitted an essay entry. His entry won and was read over the air on Rock 98 Tuesday afternoon by Cooper.

He was given two backstage passes. Following the Wednesday evening performance, Luff and Stratight were escorted to Cooper's bus, which was preparing to leave for a concert later in Omaha.

"We talked to him about the show. He asked if we enjoyed it. We said we liked it. He talked about playing in Omaha and how he likes to play [concerts] on Friday, the 13th," said Luff.

Luff, who says he and Cooper are not Barry Manilow fans (a reason why he feels he won the contest), did not say Cooper is his outright favorite. "I like to listen to them all," he said.

Cooper also gave the two Wayne high school seniors his autograph on record-demo covers.

"Off the stage, he is a really different person. On stage he is wild and rambunctious. Off the stage he is really quite a nice guy. He was a nice man to talk to," said Luff.

Luff said he talked with Cooper's personal manager after the show. "The personal manager said he [Cooper] is a normal man, just like the neighbor next door."

Sack art

THE FIRST DAY of spring, March 20, marks National Ag Day. The Nebraska Department of Agriculture (NDA), recognizing the need to promote a positive image of agriculture, will direct various activities to the youth of Nebraska, to increase their awareness of agriculture and National Ag Day. The Nebraska Agricultural Youth Council (sponsored by the NDA), with the assistance of the Wayne Elementary Schools, helped promote agriculture and increase consumer awareness through a grocery sack art activity. Bill's GW and Wayne IGA have contributed sacks to the Wayne Elementary Schools. Assisting in this activity is NAYC member Anne Sorensen of Rural Wayne. The students drew pictures on the sacks depicting the theme "What Agriculture Means To Me". On National Ag Day, March 20th, the sacks will be used by Bill's GW and Wayne IGA to promote Nebraska's agriculture. Above, Cory Miller and Beth Meyer finish up their grocery sack project.

KATIE HANCOCK (left) and Genevieve Fredrickson were the lucky winners in the Wayne Herald's 4,000 Reasons To Shop Wayne contest.

Hancock wins vacation trip

Katie Hancock of Allen was the grand prize winner of the "4,000 Reasons To Shop Wayne" vacation trip for two.

Her name was drawn from a list of 16 finalist who were on hand at The Wayne Herald on Thursday evening to witness the final drawing for the vacation trip and the second place prize of $1,000 in vacation bucks.

She has not decided where she will go on her vacation trip. The grand prize winner will receive a trip for two to a location of her choice. Among the choices were Hawaii, Florida, Phoenix, Las Vegas, Aspen (Colorado), Bermuda or a boat cruise to the Virgin Islands.

Hancock said she was not optimistic about her chances of winning the trip. "I had thought about not even coming to the drawing tonight," she said.

As WSC enrollment rises

Faculty shortage a growing problem

By Chuck Hackenmiller
Managing Editor

Dr. Thomas Coffey has looked hard at the preliminary proposal of the Nebraska Legislative Appropriations Committee regarding general state support funding to Wayne State College for the 1987-88 and 1988-89 fiscal years.

He doesn't like what he sees. The preliminary proposal of the appropriations committee calls for the reduction of the college's general fund expenditures for fiscal 1987-88 by nearly $258,000; and about a $246,000 reduction for fiscal year 1988-89.

On top of that, for the next two years no new or additional general fund support will be received by the college during the next two years.

"It was also suggested that we reduce our faculty and staff when the proposed reductions were announced," Coffey said.

All of this is hard to accept for Coffey, who currently has before the legislative board, for next fiscal year's budget, a request for an 18.6 percent increase in state support. He is asking for four new unassigned faculty positions and an increase in faculty salaries.

The college, he said, is "not able to reduce" because there currently is not enough faculty and staff in the first place.

City Hall office hours to change

There will be a change in office hours at City Hall in Wayne, effective Monday, March 16.

Because of the backlog of work encountered during the changeover to the new computer system, City Hall's business hours will change to the following: Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Visitors and callers will be accommodated between these hours until further notice.

Enrollment since the fall of 1982 has increased nearly 24.1 percent, which is one reason Coffey cited as a need for more faculty members. "Each year during the past 10 years, our requests to the legislature have never been honored," he said. "The appropriations have always been lower than what we requested."

Coffey said that from 1984-87, the amount of state support to Wayne State College had increased 7.4 percent. The tuition rate for students has risen by nearly 24 percent since 1976.

"This proposed reduction, without any new monies, can be so harmful to the college as a whole," Coffey mentioned.

SEVEN principles were developed to govern recent deliberations on how the college could cope with the expected reductions.

Those seven principles involved protection in these areas — full-time employees; role and mission; integrity; enrollment; ability to recover and expand from the budget reductions; possible residence hall occupancy; and the quality of student life. "There were rumors about firing people. That's not true. However, we may have to reassign people to other duties," Coffey said.

"If the legislature does not give us additional faculty, even with our increase of enrollment, we should look at the faculty positions now open and reallocate those positions where there is greater need," he said.

COFFEY, WITH the advice and council of his cabinet, put together a list of constructs (complex ideas) to cope with the assumed reductions from the state, which covered various options, ideas and possible scenarios. They used the seven principles in coming up with the list of constructs.

"We can reduce only in the area of general state support funds," Coffey said.

Wayne State College does have cash funds available from tuition revenue. However, Coffey said those funds cannot be transferred into the

Apply early for summer work

Job applications are now being taken by local Department of Labor offices from youths eligible for summer employment under the Summer Youth Employment and Training Program (SYETP) operated by Greater Nebraska Job Training.

State Labor Commissioner Virginia Yuell warned that in previous years, young people eligible for jobs in SYETP have missed out on summer employment because of late applications. "We are predicting that persons applying for SYETP jobs after April 15 this year will be too late to get in on the program," she added.

Eligible youths hired under SYETP will begin work when schools close for summer vacations and the jobs will continue until late August. Each SYETP job holder will be paid $3.35 an hour. Work weeks are a maximum of 40 hours. The jobs are with local public agencies and nonprofit organizations.

Persons aged 16-21 and meeting Department of Labor income guidelines are urged to contact their school counselors or the nearest Department of Labor or Job Service office now to apply for summer jobs. "Early applicants have the best chance of being hired," Yuell said.

Grant awarded to WSC

Wayne State College has been awarded an underwriting grant of up to $250 from the Nebraska Arts Council, according to Robin Tryloff, Executive Director.

The grant will help sponsor Foreign Language and Culture Day at the college on March 27, 1987. The highlight of the event will be a program by Ronald Radford, a master of the flamenco guitar, whose lectures convey original insight into the rich historical and cultural background of this important musical tradition.

Not a 'hit list'

Wayne State College President Dr. Thomas Coffey and his administration have an unenviable task to confront. He and his cabinet staff must look at ways to cut some corners, in light of coping with a possible $258,000 of proposed cuts in state support funding for the 1987-88 school year.

In an interview last Thursday afternoon, Dr. Coffey talked mostly about the recommendations he had presented several weeks ago to the WSC faculty and the students concerning the options available if the state support reduction plans are not changed.

He said the consequences which the college will face, if reduction is made, are certainly not manufactured, but appear very realistic.

Taking into consideration the advice of his cabinet, Coffey arrived at a list of constructs (defined as a complex image or idea formed from a number of simpler images or ideas) which were presented to the students and faculty, and later presented to the media.

A committee has been appointed to study the options detailing the reductions that were presented by Coffey. In addition, the committee will receive opinions, proposals, additional constructs or modifications of the proposed constructs from individuals, groups and organizations within the Wayne State College community. Those recommendations will be presented to Coffey on or before April 10.

The options for reductions in funds, as presented by Coffey, affect areas where the programs are supported through state funding.

Among the options (such as reductions for intercollegiate athletics, intramural activity, theatre, international travel and the college newspaper) are principles which Coffey emphasizes over and over again.

One principle he particularly stresses — and that is to protect all of the permanent full-time employees.

Wayne State is currently understaffed as it is. Laying off more employees would do nothing more than increase the understaffed problem. Rumors are that he is out to fire people, he said.

That's not true, he said, but some people may have to be reassigned to other duties.

His options, he said, are "not a hit list."

The college must take some sort of action on the assumption that its general fund expenditures for 1987-88 will be reduced. The following year, the reductions are expected to be $246,000. The college is under the assumption that it will receive no new or additional general fund support for the next two fiscal years.

At the time the reductions in state support funding was proposed, it was suggested that the state college system also reduce its faculty and staff. Dr. Coffey has gone on record strongly opposing that suggestion, simply because since the fall of 1982, WSC has continued to have enrollment increases.

Assuming reductions in state support are made, Wayne State College's administration will have their work cut out for them.

And with this type of endeavor, they need all the "positive support" that they can get from the faculty, students and the Wayne community in holding on to the excellent educational opportunities and services that Wayne State College provides.

Minimum wage hike would lower employment opportunities

By Mark A. de Bernardo
It is unclear if there ever is a right time for a minimum wage — or a minimum-wage increase.

What is clear is that now is the wrong time for an increase in the minimum wage. An unemployment rate of 6.7 percent, a youth unemployment rate of 17 percent and black youth unemployment rate of 40 percent are three excellent reasons for holding the line on the $3.35 per hour federal minimum wage.

The minimum wage, is first and foremost, a jobs issue. At a time of still too-high unemployment, it would be exceedingly unwise for Congress to enact legislation which would cost jobs.

There is no doubt that increases in the minimum wage cost jobs. Economists may disagree on the extent of job loss, but they cannot disagree on the fact that jobs are lost.

In 1977, Congress enacted a moratorium on any increase in the minimum wage over a four-year period—an increase of proportions and impact, particularly on small business, which was unprecedented.

What was the result? The increase cost 644,000 jobs through jobs lost and jobs that would have been created but were not because of higher wage costs.

We do not need economic analyses to recognize the loss in jobs paying the minimum wage. Each of us as a consumer has experienced this loss of jobs. Ten years ago — before the massive increase in the minimum wage — it was much more common to have ushers in theaters to show moviegoers to their seats, to have workers at car washes clean the inside of cars as well as the outside, to have two or three floor persons in each department of a store instead of just cashiers, to have full service restaurants instead of counter service and salad bars, and to have full-service instead of self-service gas stations.

WHERE HAVE these jobs gone? As the minimum wage rose, employers were forced to respond. One response was to close, another was to automate and a third was to decrease the services provided. Ironically, in an economy which increasingly is shifting from manufacturing to the service sector, Americans are getting less service for their dollar.

More important is the erosion of job opportunities.

We are talking about entry-level jobs which pay below the poverty level for the head of a household and sole supporter of a family of four. But it is a mistake to assume that workers earning the minimum wage are the heads of households providing for families. The vast majority are students working part-time, youths just entering the work force and supplemental family income earners such as a housewife working at a department store during the Christmas rush.

A minimum wage job pays nearly 22 percent above the poverty level for a single person. More important, it provides job experience and an opportunity for overtime pay, wage increases and promotions. You cannot "climb the ladder" unless you are on the ladder.

There is no question that these workers would like to be paid more — we all would. But, given the experience of past minimum wage increases, the choice may not be between a job at $3.35 per hour or a job at $4.60 per hour, the level many proponents of an increase favor.

The choice may be between a $3.35 per hour job or no job at all.

Employers' problems with increased labor costs are not just the direct consequences of minimum-wage increases. When a minimum-wage earner's wages are increased one dollar an hour, employees who make one dollar an hour more also must have their wages increased. The cycle repeats itself on up the wage scale. The result is wage inflation which results in price inflation.

NEAR THE END of the Carter Administration, which marked the last step of the more than 46 percent increase in the minimum wage, the inflation rate reached a staggering 13 percent. These increases had a direct inflationary impact of as much as 6.5 percent during the four-year period.

Today, the 2 percent inflation rate, after six years of maintaining the minimum-wage rate, reflects the stabilization of both wages and prices. What value does a wage increase have if it is negated by a corresponding increase in inflation, and no net gain in buying power?

Certainly, there are many other factors affecting the inflation rate but the correlation between minimum wage increases and higher inflation cannot be ignored.

A better approach for entry-level jobs is to let the market determine wages — as it does at all other job levels. In some job markets, the $3.35 per hour rate already is obsolete. The system that is best for all employers, employees and consumers is one in which the market sets the appropriate wage rates.

The answer for the poverty problem in America is more varied and complex than simply and artificially forcing up the cost of entry-level jobs. The answer includes training programs, educational reforms and meaningful investment by a humane society in the skills necessary to earn higher wages — not the higher wages which will force the unskilled out of the job market.

Our fair share

Although recent letters to the editor have addressed the proposed city sales tax and how it would or wouldn't provide relief on property tax, no one has said much about the 1/2 that is to be used for economic development.

Wayne has established itself as a leader among Nebraska communities in attracting industry. Much of this effort was accomplished by dedicated individuals who assemble the most attractive package of incentives possible with the limited resources available.

It is estimated that 40 to 50 percent of the employees of Wayne's industries live outside the Wayne city tax base. Many of these people rely on their jobs for additional family income because of the depressed rural economy. It seems obvious that a key to economic recovery for our community is diversification of our economic base.

It also seems unreasonable to expect that the responsibility for economic development in the area should fall upon the shoulders of a relatively small group of private individuals and businesses.

The challenge to bring economic health back to this region, by any concept of fairness, ought to be accepted by the entire community. I have not heard of a better way for all of us to contribute our fair share than through the proposed city sales tax.

Where tax applies

In recent weeks you have read and heard numerous articles and letters stating positions on the City of Wayne sales tax issue that will come before the voters on May 12. Many statements made by the opponents to the issue have lacked the correct statistics and information.

Between now and May 12, I will be regularly addressing the constituents of Wayne with facts and data that will, hopefully, clarify the sales tax issue and assist them in making an intelligent decision on how to vote May 12.

In a recent letter to the Editor, a statement was made that the proposed sales tax will be applied to services in the community. State of Nebraska tax statutes exempt most services and itemized labor charges from the sales tax.

The City of Wayne has no latitude on how it applies sales tax. The sales tax guidelines are set by Nebraska State Statutes and cannot be changed without the approval of the Nebraska State Legislature.

College does benefit

Seldom does a college benefit from the kind of genuine, active support that Wayne State College receives from the Wayne community. Last Thursday, March 5, a group of Wayne business people traveled to Lincoln to the Appropriations Committee hearing on the funding for the state colleges. These men and women from our community who took time from their busy lives made very special efforts and went through a difficult day to show this community's support for Wayne State.

I thank each member of the delegation and those who encouraged and helped to make the delegation possible. The delegation and their activities were deeply appreciated.

They were most impressive and provided real encouragement for this college. A special thanks to Mr. Ken Olds and the members of his Chamber Legislative Committee for endorsing the idea and to Mrs. Carolyn Vakoc, the President of the Wayne Chamber, as well as Ms. Linda Brown for her organizational efforts. A special thanks to Mr. Phil Kloster who stepped in at the last moment to give testimony before the committee supporting the college's requests and representing the city of Wayne and the Wayne Chamber. Unfortunately, Mayor Wayne Marsh, who was to be a member of the delegation and provide the testimony, became ill the evening before the hearing. Mr. Kloster took his place and his testimony was thoughtful, knowledgeable and as always, excellent.

Again, thanks to all for the most recent example of why Wayne State College is fortunate to be a part of this wonderful community.

Collision course

Worried?

Wasn't too long ago we were all worried about the "Urban Sprawl" taking all the good farm land out of production and we were all going to starve to death. Now the fella's tell me they are (USDA) paying $70.00 per acre to take the no good farm land out of production in order to reduce the surplus mounts of grain, cheese, etc. So now we are going to have to worry about what will happen if and when both ends meet. Probably justify the imports from Brazil or wherever, eh?

Rotarians to meet

An encouraging nucleus of Wayne business men availed themselves of the invitation to become new Rotarians or to continue in a civic organization from a previous state residency.

Breakfasts will continue to be sponsored by the Norfolk clubs on Wednesday, March 18th and 25th at 7 a.m. at the Sportsman's Cafe. Any questions should be directed to Dr. Tom Coffey, Wayne State College; Jim Remick of Timpfe; or Gil Haase of the Wayne Care Centre.

District 565 Past District Governor Roland Tillson of the Norfolk Noon Rotary Club spoke on various aspects of Rotary and the many civic projects available to Rotarians. "In fact, your projects can be and should be as varied as your imagination," stated Tillson.

According to Haase, Rotarians can be expected to encourage an occasional joint civic club project for the good of the Wayne community. "We're all here to be of service to Wayne," he stated.

Tillson also discussed the 4-Way Test as established by Herbert J. Taylor while he was president of Rotary International: 1. Is it the truth? 2. Is it fair to all concerned? 3. Will it build goodwill and better friendships? 4. Will it be beneficial to all concerned?

Rotarians are expected to conduct their business and personal lives using these precepts.

WSC receives contribution from Burlington Northern

The John G. Neihardt Scholars Program at Wayne State College received a significant contribution to its endowment.

The Burlington Northern Foundation has granted $50,000 for the college's Neihardt Scholars Program, according to Shane Giese, executive director of the Wayne State Foundation.

The $50,000 matching grant from the Burlington Northern Corporation's foundation matched $50,000 given to the Neihardt Scholars Program through fund raising efforts at the college.

"The grant was made available through discussions with Donald K. North, president of the Burlington Northern Foundation," Giese said in a news release. "The matching funds came from area business people, alumni and Wayne State Foundation Trustees, including a major gift from J. Alan and Diana Cramer of Wayne."

The John G. Neihardt Scholars Program is a four-year award specifically for academically-talented students attending Wayne State. Students must have strong academic achievements and active involvements in activities outside of the classroom to qualify for application.

Neihardt Scholars receive scholarship assistance, scholastic honors and advanced academic preparation as well as specially-assigned faculty advisors for four years if they maintain high academic standards.

"We sincerely appreciate Mr. North's consideration of higher education and the Burlington Northern Foundation's commitment to funding scholarships for this region's best and brightest students," Giese said.

The Wayne State Foundation also extended its appreciation to the many people who gave to the Neihardt Scholars Program making the Burlington Northern matching gift possible.

Donald L. Tremblay of the Burlington Northern Railroad in Lincoln came to Wayne to present the $50,000 check to the Wayne State Foundation.

Reductions

areas of state support funding.

The list of proposals totals $301,485. Among the listed are reductions in state supported programs at the college, and possibly reallocating within the college system to meet the greatest needs.

Those constructs were presented in late February to the college students and faculty. "They are beginning point ideas," Coffey said.

LACK OF state funding could bring on reductions to theatre productions, the campus newspaper, student government, intramurals, music tours, the forensics team, intercollegiate athletics and international programs.

He emphasized that he didn't like to see reductions in these areas. And he added he is not making a "hit list."

The amount of reduction in state support, he said, will hurt the college's current and future enrollment. The quality, service and programs of the college could suffer, he said, because it currently is underfunded now.

A committee has been established to review the areas affected by state reduction. The committee will review the proposals already mentioned and receive other opinions, statements and modifications from individuals and organizations with the college community, then report their findings to Dr. Coffey by April 10.

Members of the committee are Dr. Arnold Emry, Dr. Pearl Hansen, Cliff Ginn, Dr. Russ Rasmussen, Joan Bonodus, Art Degryse, Jan Stalling, Thomas Carsey and Troy Heitman.

On March 5, a group of Wayne State students, faculty and business people from the Wayne community attended a legislative hearing on the proposed state support reductions. The state senators were certainly aware of the Wayne State College delegation," said Coffey.

A decision on the reductions, he said, may not be made until the first or second week of April — or later.

COFFEY ALSO commented on the new Rice-Carlson Recreational facility and its association with the financial conditions of Wayne State College.

He said not one cent of the college's general fund money, or of taxpayer money, will be used on the new building.

"That is a revenue bond building. Most of the cost will be carried by student fees. It will be absolutely primarily for student use," Coffey said.

When it is open for the public, user fees are anticipated.

"You can just charge the students, and then not charge others for using it," he said.

Coping with today's fabrics Fabrics available on today's market either in ready-to-wear or as yard goods, offer the consumer an endless variety in aesthetics, function and service.

As a result of changes in fashion, research and development, new fabrics are being developed. These new fabrics help the consumer achieve a pleasing appearance in a fashionable style, meet special purpose needs, and at the same time provide durability and quality performance. Consumers cannot afford to be ill-informed about textile products available on the market. A poor choice which may become an expensive mistake can be avoided. The consumer must make decisions about textile products in keeping with individual needs, desires and budget.

CLOTHING LABELS provide consumers with information about the clothes or fabric they buy. Fiber content labels identify what the garment or fabric is made of and provide clues to the use and care of fabrics.

Care labels provide recommended cleaning methods for specific garments and fabrics to safely clean clothes. Care labels must state the type of care needed, and the instructions must be followed by the consumer. When the consumer has followed the care instructions, and is not satisfied with the way the fabric responded, a complaint should be filed.

Sometimes deciphering care labels can be difficult. A care label must state if a garment should not be cleaned by a certain method, for example labels stating "Do Not Dryclean."

A label stating "Machine Wash, Tumble Dry," means that any temperature of water — hot, warm or cold — and any machine setting for drying can be used.

Some labels include symbols along with written care instructions. Do you need a chart to understand these symbols to give your garment proper care? No, all garments sold in the U.S. must provide written instructions which comply with Care Labeling Rules.

FOR MORE INFORMATION on reading fiber and care labels, attend the lesson "Coping with Today's Fabrics."

Anna Marie White, extension agent-home economics, will present the lesson on March 19 at 7:30 p.m. in the Wayne County Courthouse meeting room. Or contact your Cooperative Extension Service, 375-3310, for more information.

Calcavecchia takes PGA by storm

By Gregg Dahlheim
Sports Editor

"It was quite amazing, I'm still in shock," those were the thoughts of Mark Calcavecchia after winning the $600,000 Honda Classic last weekend in Coral Springs, Florida.

The $108,000 Calcavecchia collected for winning the tournament was his largest paycheck as a professional. Calcavecchia, who was born in Wayne 26 years ago, has earned $235,025 this season placing him third on the PGA money list for the year.

His latest four victory was the second of his career. Last September the former Laurel resident won the Southwest Classic in Abilene, Texas.

These are the best of times for Calcavecchia. But the pro told the Wayne Herald in a telephone interview Tuesday that it wasn't that long ago that he was struggling to stay on the tour.

Calcavecchia turned pro after leaving the University of Florida in 1980. He played for the first several years without much success. In 1985 his game hit rock bottom. He lost his PGA card and was ineligible to play. In order to remain active a golfer has to finish in the top 125 on the money list.

He went through qualifying school to get reinstated but he still didn't qualify. At that point he said he got serious about the game.

"I decided to do it," Calcavecchia said. "I was just tired of not getting anywhere. I knew I was just as good as any other guy on the tour."

That's when the North Palm Beach resident contacted golf pro Peter Kostis of Boca Raton, Florida and began taking lessons.

Calcavecchia said during those several months he went through a growing up process. He played everyday for eight to 10 hours. He said he was exhausted after each day. He would come home and eat dinner and be in bed by eight each evening.

"I told myself that I wasn't going to be in awe of anything," he said. "When your playing with guys like (Greg) Norman and (Jack) Nicklaus its easy to stand around and just watch them."

After rededicating himself, Calcavecchia started playing again in four events. He regained his card in 1986 by playing well and earning $155,000 for the year. He finished the season 58th on the money list.

The pro said competition on the tour is fierce. He said anyone can win a tournament on a given week.

Calcavecchia said he is always trying to improve his game. He said the mental aspect of the game is an area he needs to work on.

"I can't slip," he said. "You have to avoid the frustration and hang tough. When I'm concentrating I rarely hit a bad shot."

The Nebraska native said he is hitting the ball about as good as he ever has. He said his short game, around the green, is his strong suit.

The PGA prides itself on proper etiquette by its players but Calcavecchia said play on the tour isn't always as prim and proper as it appears on television. The pro said the courses always look greener on TV.

"The competition gets fierce, it gets rough at times," he said. "When things go bad nobody on the course feels sorry for you but still the PGA tour is the best place to play golf in the world."

Calcavecchia said he expects to play in 32 tournaments this year. The win at Coral Springs last weekend qualified him for the biggie, the Master's Tournament. Calcavecchia said he will also play in the U.S. Open and hopefully the British Open later this summer. He said winning the Honda Classic enabled him to play just about wherever he wants.

Calcavecchia said if his family hadn't moved to Florida when he was young he wouldn't be in this enviable position. In the last 13 years since he left Nebraska for Florida, he said he can't remember going for more than a week without playing golf. He said even now if he goes four or five days without hitting the links he has trouble.

Calcavecchia said he credits his late father John and his older brother for getting him interested in the game. He said when he was very young he used to go to the Cedarview Country Club in Laurel with them and they would let him putt when they reached the greens. When he turned eight or nine he got a junior set of his own and from there a star was born.

I'm sure playing in the Master's and walking down the 18th fairway at Augusta was the farthest thing from his imagination. But who knows, this spring Laurel's favorite son maybe wearing the famed green sports jacket that goes to the winner of the Master's. Never the less, he's come a long way from the nine hole course that he called home for many years.

Barb Hansen, Gail Twiford selected to Lewis & Clark first team

The Lewis and Clark Conference has announced its all-conference basketball teams for the 1986-87 season.

Laurel, Allen, Wakefield and Winside athletes were, for the most part, overlooked. Gail Twiford of Laurel-Concord High School and Barb Hansen of Allen were the only two named to the first teams. No area boys were selected for first-team honors.

Twiford, 5-11 senior, was selected to the Clark Division first team for the third straight time. Wausa, a state tournament qualifier, placed three girls on the first team. Wynot had the other selection.

Laurel teammate senior Sara Adkins was a second-team pick. Sophomore Kristy Miller of Winside was also selected to the second team.

Freshman Amy Adkins and junior Becky Christensen of Laurel were honorable mention selections. Other area girls selected to the honorable

Cats sweep pair from Peru State

The Wayne State baseball team kept its perfect record intact with a doubleheader sweep of Peru State Wednesday afternoon in Auburn.

The Cats whipped the hosts 17-11 in the opener and 11-5 in the nightcap.

Freshman Omar Serghini ran his record to 3-0 by allowing eight runs on 10 hits in four and two-thirds innings. Randy Raabe came on in relief and earned the save.

The Cats struck for 10 runs on six hits in the first two innings. Wayne State struck for seven more runs in the fifth, sixth and seventh innings to claim the win.

Pat Salerno fueled the offensive attack with three hits. The junior also scored twice. Gale Bretschneider went one for three and scored four runs and stole two bases.

In the second game Ed Heritage started the game but gave way to Dana Armentroul in the fourth inning. The freshman from Irwin, Iowa gained the win by not allowing a run in his three and one-third inning stint. The win boosted Armentroul's record to 2-0. He leads the pitching staff with a 0.99 ERA.

Dale Clayton put the Cats on top 1-0 when he crunched the first pitch of the game for a home run. The shortstop finished the game 3-5 with three RBIs and a stolen base. Clayton leads the team in stolen bases with 15 thefts in as many attempts. As a team, Wayne State is 37-39 in stolen bases.

Peru State responded with a leadoff homer in its half of the inning to tie the score. The Cats tallied three runs in the second and one in the third to take a 5-1 lead. The Bobcats rallied for three runs in the fourth to knot the score at five. Wayne State won the game by scoring five runs in the fifth and sixth innings.

Third baseman Craig Koehler also turned in a fine performance. The junior from Omaha collected three hits and scored three runs. Koehler is 14-34 for the season, hitting at a .412 clip.

After the first 10 games Paul Calvert leads the Cats with a .571 batting average. The senior outfielder is 12-21. He's walked nine times and struck out only once.

Wayne State opened its home portion of the schedule with a doubleheader Saturday against Dana College. The Cats travel to Lincoln Tuesday for a single contest against the Cornhuskers.

An Aspirin A Day?

Recent research has revealed an important new use for an old medicine. Scientific studies show that taking one or two aspirin a day can help to prevent a second and possibly a first heart attack.

As a result, many doctors now prescribe aspirin therapy as a preventive measure because aspirin increases the ability of the blood to stay fluid (like an anti-coagulant). In fact the U.S. Surgeon General, Dr. C. Everett Koop, who himself takes an aspirin a day, supports this use of aspirin. Dr. Koop recommends aspirin for heart attack prevention for anyone in their 40's and older.

A Vital Part of Today's and Tomorrow's Agriculture

A salute to the adaptability of our farming community

AG DAY
MARCH 20, 1987

WAYNE COUNTY PUBLIC POWER DISTRICT

SERVING RURAL WAYNE AND PIERCE COUNTIES SINCE 1939

AG WEEK

MARCH 15-21

"The agricultural industry of Nebraska is important to all of its citizens, both in the rural and urban sectors. Every year, Ag Day gives us the opportunity to acknowledge the role of agriculture, and its vital relationship to the entire state."

"As governor, I am faced with the challenge of restoring to our premier industry the best possible economic environment for both the production operations and agribusiness of the State. History shows us that when agriculture is doing well, so does the entire Nebraska economy. We all need to work together so that everyone can again enjoy full prosperity."

...Statement By Nebraska Governor Kay Orr

NATIONAL AGRICULTURE DAY 1987 — LET'S CELEBRATE

Some people might say that National Agriculture Day shouldn't be celebrated this year. Some might say that amid all the farm foreclosures, sluggish Ag exports, weak market prices and declining land values, there's no reason to celebrate anything to do with agriculture.

They're wrong.

Agriculture remains Nebraska's foundation industry. The farmers and ranchers who produce the food, along with the agribusinesses that support them, remain the backbone of the State. National Agriculture Day is no time to mourn, it's time to celebrate. It's no time to complain or reflect bitterly on the past... It's time to look ahead with optimism and encouragement.

Bryan Neldig of Madison, Neb., president of the Nebraska Farm Bureau, says it this way: "I hope on Ag Day and throughout the year, we can take real pride in the fact that agriculture is the basic industry on which we all depend. We must not only grieve and sympathize, but also support and rejoice in our individual parts in the plan of things, then we will all be the better for that."

No one wants to encourage a utopian outlook for Nebraska agriculture. There are problems to deal with. Sometimes, they seem insurmountable. Many hardworking farmers and ranchers have left agriculture, primarily due to forces out of their control. For a significant number of farmers, profits remain hard to come by.

But anyone who thinks a few problems are going to make farmers and ranchers give up doesn't really know this nation's core of people who are dedicated to producing food for dinner tables around the world.

Jacque Cunningham, Nebraska president of Women Involved in Farm Economics, says, "When we celebrate National Agriculture Day, let us recognize and give thanks to the producer. Our food supply is not only the most abundant and stable food supply in the world, it is also the lowest in price. Without hard working farm families, this nation could never have risen to a standard of living envied by the entire world."

Let's build on what agriculture has already provided this nation with. National Ag Day is an opportunity for urban and rural residents to join together in showing appreciation for all of the people in agriculture and in coming up with ways to preserve agriculture as the vital industry it should be.

The link between the people who produce the food and the people who eat it hasn't always been strong. It should be. We all have a vested interest in seeing that agriculture remains strong.

"Farmers, ranchers and city people are interdependent — and Ag Day gives us a special opportunity to recognize that we all have the same long-term goals," says Tom Scott, executive secretary of the Nebraska Feeder Council.

So, celebrate National Agriculture Day this year. Celebrate it by spending some time thinking about the problems evident in agriculture. Celebrate it by taking time to realize how privileged the United States is to have a stable, abundant supply of food.

National Agriculture Day, it's worth celebrating!
