On task force

Gov. Kay Orr announced Tuesday the appointment of Senator Gerald Conway of Wayne and Stan Staub of Norfolk, manager of the Lower Elkhorn Natural Resource District, and 20 others across the state, to a special task force intended to study a variety of issues related to low level radioactive waste disposal.

The task force will be responsible for reviewing past events and actions on the national level and within the Central States Compact; studying short and long-term liability issues facing the Compact states and determining if additional legislation dealing with liability is necessary; determining if the best option for disposal of Nebraska's low-level radioactive waste is to continue to participate in the Compact process; and ultimately, how Nebraska's interest can best be protected.

Special Olympics

The dates have been set for the annual Area 4 Special Olympics track and field event and swim meet.

The swim meet will take place on Friday, April 24 and the track and field events will take place Saturday, April 25, both at Wayne State College.

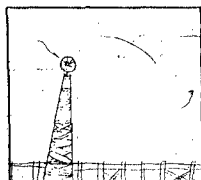

Knights of Columbus and Kiwanis Club members will assist in the event, with more help offered by Wayne State College students.

Old Settlers

Members of the Wayne County Old Settlers Committee will be meeting Thursday, April 9 at Lee and Rosie's at 8 p.m.

Radioactive waste dump site plans presented

By Chuck Hackenmiller
Managing Editor

Bids for construction of a low-level radioactive waste disposal facility for a five-state region (including Nebraska) were submitted by Westinghouse Electric Corp.'s Nuclear Fuel Business Unit of Madison, Pennsylvania and U.S. Ecology of Louisville by the April 1 deadline.

Sections of Wayne County are still being considered as areas not excluded as potential radioactive waste dump sites.

It was proposed in the bids to construct a below grade (ground), above grade, or partly above grade facility for the five-state region.

According to James Neal, public information officer of the Nebraska Department of Environmental Control, Westinghouse has submitted a plan for a "below grade" facility, or an engineer's version of shallow land burial.

The radioactive material would be placed in steel-reinforced concrete hexagonal containers. The containers are expected to have a life span of up to 500 years.

Neal said U. S. Ecology has come up with a design base option and two alternative methods.

HE SAID THE "design base option" plans consist of constructing an above grade storage facility using a concrete vault, surrounded by earth fill and capped with a multi-layer cover.

The radioactive waste would be received in metal containers and stored in the facility.

The first alternative plan also calls for the same type of system, with the waste storage stored in a more secure container. This plan is more expensive, according to Neal.

And the second alternative plan proposed by U.S. Ecology mentions a "partially above grade" and "partially below grade" facility.

Neal said the Department of Environmental Control must now get copies of the submitted plans by the two companies and send the materials out to the information centers so that "people will have the opportunity to dig into them."

He said there will be one meeting in each of the Central Interstate Low-Level Radioactive Waste Compact Commission states, including Nebraska, to allow public comment on the plans before the Compact Commission can make a decision on the plans.

"The Compact commission can either accept a proposal or they can reject both proposals if they do not like them," Neal said.

A DECISION could be made on the developers' submitted plans in June.

Mrs. Allen Schrant of Winside had testified against underground or above ground radioactive waste containment facilities that would use soil as barriers for the radioactive wastes in Nebraska, particularly in the northeast Nebraska area.

Schrand made her comments at a hearing in Columbus on March 17 at the Platte College Campus gymnasium.

Ray Peery of the Central Interstate Low-Level Radioactive Waste Compact Commission had listened and taped testimonies at the hearing Peery is the five-state Compact's executive director.

According to Schrant, comments from local people or letters can be sent to the Nebraska Department of Environmental Control in Lincoln until April 15.

Public opinion is high on the department's agenda as to whether or not a community will be a willing host.

FORTY-FIVE packets of information from area residents were delivered on Friday, March 20 to forty-five senators at the State Capitol and to the Environmental Control office. The packets consisted of photo copies from Wayne, Colfax, Curming, Stanton, Thurston and Madison County residents.

Their personal comments, signatures and 186 opinion sheets all voiced disapproval of becoming a site for low-level radioactive wastes that would use soil as a barrier for containment of hazardous radioactive wastes.

The nine issues concerning storage, disposal and potential sites in northeast Nebraska, and involving legislation, were studied at the public meeting in the Winside Auditorium on Feb. 27.

Those wanting more information can contact Mrs. Allen Schrant at 286-4287 between 10 a.m. and 12 noon on Monday through Saturday.

The Central Interstate Low-Level Radioactive Waste Compact Commission has set April 20 as the rescheduled date for a meeting in Alliance. Documents discussed will be the Draft Phase II Site Exclusionary Study, the Draft Regional Management Plan and the Proposed Public Participation Plan and Procedures for the compact.

These documents and other documents on low-level radioactive waste have been placed in information repositories across Nebraska by the Nebraska Department of Environmental Control. The repositories in this area are located at the NRD offices in Norfolk. The documents are also available through local libraries through the Nebraska Library Commission's inter-library loan system, and at the Department of Environmental Control main office in Lincoln.

Chamber takes sales tax straw poll

A "straw poll" vote on the city sales tax issue took place last Wednesday at the Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce general membership meeting.

The area Chamber members were asked to vote on whether or not they would be in favor of a 1 1/2 percent city sales tax.

Among the 27 members present, the vote showed 15 favoring the sales tax, 8 voting against it and four members who were undecided.

The 1 1/2 percent sales tax proposal will be placed before the Wayne voters on Tuesday, May 12.

Daub to visit Wayne State

An open, informal question and answer session with students highlights an April 14 visit of Nebraska's second district U.S. Representative Hal Daub to Wayne State College.

The question and answer forum with Daub is slated for 3 p.m. in Ley Theatre in the Brandenburg Education Building. The general public is invited to the one-hour forum.

The Omaha Republican will arrive on campus at midmorning.

"Congressman Daub wants the opportunity to visit the campus, meet with students, participate in some classes and to visit and get to know the faculty and administration," said Dr. Thomas Coffey, president of Wayne State.

Harold John Daub, Jr. was an Omaha attorney before his election to the House of Representatives in 1980. A fourth generation Nebraska, the 45-year-old grew up in Omaha and earned his undergraduate degree from Washington University in St. Louis. He received his law degree from the University of Nebraska in 1966.

He is a member of the influential House Ways and Means Committee.

'Hacken' Away

Old pictures sure do bring back a lot of memories. Sunday, from 1 to 5 p.m., I manned the Wayne Herald booth at the Wayne 1987 Expo. In our booth we featured discounts on subscriptions, a display of what publications are printed at The Wayne Herald, and copies of The Wayne Herald cookbook and the 1984 Wayne Centennial Edition. We gave out free notepads, too.

However, the most popular item in our booth was a conglomeration of old pictures which appeared in the Wayne Herald that were found in our basement, most of them taken in the 1960's or earlier.

Before people start jumping all over me and complaining: "C'mon, the 1960's wasn't that long ago!" — remember that whether we like it or not, it was nearly 27 years ago.

Pictures are worth a thousand words, they say. In this instance, pictures were worth a thousand memories.

The only problem with our booth was that it was near the entrance to the Expo. So many people had to stop and look at the old pictures that the traffic through the city auditorium was sometimes impeded.

Some stood looking at the pictures for over 30 minutes.

WE HAD quite a mixture of pictures — sporting events, clubs and organizations, construction of buildings, a farm auction or two, awards and acknowledgements, and even past Expo events.

Seems like everyone has scrapbooks. Everyone likes to look and compare people today to the past. That's part of history. And pictures of the past is a vital link.

Said one lady: "I don't know why I'm looking through all these pictures, especially when I have a whole closet full of old pictures at home."

In looking through the old photographs, many people were surprised to find a picture or two of themselves. Those people who did find themselves could not remember at the time the reasons why the picture was taken. But they grabbed them up quickly.

One person found a photo of himself somewhere down in the bottom of the stack catching a touchdown pass when he played football for Wayne High School. That, to him, was a treasure find.

OTHER PEOPLE found former business people in Wayne. A cheerleading photograph taken many years back will likely be used as a prank among friends.

It was fun listening to the comments as they rummaged through the pictures. Some little girl asked: "Is that really you mom?" of which the immediate reply was "Yes! And don't you dare start laughing!"

It was an enjoyable experience. Although I didn't live in Wayne during the 60's, I certainly heard and seen pictures of what Wayne and the surrounding area was like.

A reminder to our readers, if there is a photograph which you would like that appeared in our publication, they are available for people to pick up. And if you submit a photo for publication, please reclaim the photo so that in 25 years or so, they won't be added to our "old photo files."

Speaking of pictures, a blunder of sorts occurred last week as I was photographing an activity at Stepping Stones Preschool. Rev. Keith Johnson was there in a clown suit, and he was demonstrating to the 10 or more students about the art of clown make-up.

Later, I detected that the film did not advance because of a tear.

So my apologies to Mr. Johnson and to Stepping Stones teacher and students for the error.

Legislature debates living wills

by Senator Elroy Hejner
This week a resolution was passed congratulating the Nebraska State Patrol on their 50th birthday. The patrol was created by the first Unicameral 50 years ago and has expanded its staff from 44 to 554. May 11 marks the official anniversary. The Legislature's Judiciary Committee held a public hearing on LB 88 which deals with "living wills" earlier this month. As many of you are aware, this bill would allow competent adults to sign documents saying they wish to end life-sustaining treatment if they are terminally ill. Supporters of the bill feel the terminally ill should be allowed to die with dignity. A representative from the Nebraska Medical Association indicated that many times physicians have no idea that their patients would like to refuse life-sustaining care.

Another organization testified that the living wills could save the patient, relatives and government thousands of dollars otherwise spent caring for terminally ill people who don't wish to live.

Opponents of the bill feel that such a bill would lead to mercy killings by relatives and physicians. They feel it would be difficult to define terms such as "terminally ill" and "chances of survival" in carrying out the wills.

Living wills are being written in Nebraska, but physicians feel that they could be found liable for following them because they are not backed by law. Living wills are legal in 38 states.

THE COMMITTEE has not taken any action on LB 88 at this time. I have not supported the living will in previous years, but am doing some research to determine the feasibility of such a measure.

LB 875 which would end the death penalty in Nebraska was advanced to General File by the Judiciary Committee on a 5-2 vote.

This bill would replace capital punishment with a mandatory minimum of 30 years imprisonment. Passage of the bill would reduce the sentences of 14 men awaiting execution in the state prison to life imprisonment.

A similar measure was passed in 1979 and then vetoed by the Governor. At that time Senators failed in their attempt to override the bill. I have always been a strong advocate for retaining the death penalty in the Nebraska Statutes and will continue to do so. I feel that it serves as a deterrent to murder.

Chain break

Chain letters are not only a farce—they are also illegal.

According to the postal inspection service in Omaha, chain letters are described as any correspondence requesting money, bonds, books or other items of value which will promise substantial returns to the remitter. The letter is dependent on the activity of those who follow in the chain.

However, the letter is considered as mail fraud and according to the United States Code, penalizes senders of the chain letters up to a maximum of $1,000 and less than five years in prison, or $1,000 and less than two years in prison.

Chain letters that concern recipes or picture postcards do not constitute anything of value are legal and can be mailed, according to the postal inspector.

Even with these laws, people can still send vicious chain letters — such as the ones that have no signatures but something like "St. Jude, It Works."

An employee at The Wayne Herald has received two letters such as this in the past month. It simply states that people should send no money, but a person could be out nearly $7 million if they fail to send 20 copies of the letter within a period of 96 hours.

"A person in the Philippines lost his wife six days after receiving the letter and had failed to circulate the letter," it said. "However, before her death he received $7 million."

One guy received $40,000 and lost it because he broke the chain. And the trouble with this type of letter is that it begins by saying "with love all things are possible."

People who are superstitious will likely absorb this letter and mail it out of fear.

How would you feel if you received a chain letter that described how "Dalan Fairchild received the letter and not believing, threw the letter away — nine days later he died."

The Omaha postal inspector says these types of letters (signed as St. Jude) are not illegal. They have been around for a long time, he said, and he would like to see it stopped. We couldn't agree with him more.

Bereuter requests funding toward Missouri National river project

Representative Doug Bereuter went before the House Appropriations Committee Subcommittee on Energy and Water Development on Wednesday to request funding for the Missouri National Recreation River Project. At the hearing, Bereuter announced that he and Representative Tim Johnson of South Dakota are introducing a bill to exempt the project from local cost sharing rules.

"This bi-state project is truly unique in the nation," Bereuter told the subcommittee. "because it combines efforts and planning capabilities of the Army Corps of Engineers and the Department of Interior. It provides an opportunity to preserve the unusual recreational potential along the last remaining unchanneled portion of the Missouri River, and it gives us a chance to protect the river banks from the extraordinary and excessive erosion rates caused in part by the Gavins Point Dam."

"This project results from the grassroots level efforts of concerned local citizens who saw the severe erosion of farmland and the loss of an invaluable national resource that could provide recreational opportunities for hundreds of thousands of visitors," Bereuter said.

"As Federal legislators, we cannot turn our backs on local citizens who have waited patiently for almost a decade to receive promised help to address very real and serious bank erosion problems that are the direct consequences of Federal action," he said.

"When Congress designated this stretch of the Missouri River as part of the nation's wild and scenic river system, it did so in an effort to preserve for the nation an historic part of its heritage. It is therefore appropriate that Federal government should bear the cost of that preservation as it has done in all similar cases. Cost sharing, to my knowledge, has never been applied to any recreation project designated under the Wild and Scenic River Act.

"LOCAL GOVERNMENT units in both Nebraska and South Dakota have agreed to share in the cost of constructing such initial facilities as boat ramps, parking areas and restroom facilities. There is, however, no way that a state or local entity can come up with the funds needed for any significant amount of bank stabilization on this 59 1/2 mile stretch of river.

"If we are to fulfill the mandate of the original Missouri River authorization," Bereuter said, "Congress must exempt the project from cost sharing rules."

Bereuter also asked the subcommittee to continue support for the High Plains States Groundwater Demonstration Program, a program which resulted from legislation that he introduced in the 98th Congress. He pointed out that funds will be needed in 1987 to begin construction of groundwater recharge demonstration projects throughout the plains and western states.

"If we do nothing to slow or reverse the trend of declining water tables, whole areas of the country will face drastically altered conditions," he said. "The economic impact of inadequate water supplies on municipal systems, industrial development, agricultural production and energy supplies will be staggering."

Recalls performance

In your March 12 issue you ran a picture and article on John Brandstetter. It might interest you to know that several years ago, I was privileged to hear him in an opera that was presented at West Palm Beach, Florida.

He had the lead role and was really "super" — I didn't give it much thought — other than that he received his musical education at the University of Nebraska — little did I think he was a native of my home town.
