Positions at college eliminated

By Chuck Hackenmiller
Managing Editor

Several changes in the administrative organization at Wayne State College have been announced by interim Wayne State President Dr. Joseph Fleck.

The administrative changes are subject to new organization chart approval by the Board of Trustees of the Nebraska State Colleges, according to Fleck. Members of the board of trustees will be meeting on the Wayne State College campus next Thursday, June 11 and Friday, June 12.

One position eliminated, Fleck said, will be the position held by Dean Jacobs as assistant to the president. Jacobs' duties also including supervising alumni relations.

The college will maintain the alumni relations office and will continue employing a full-time secretary. The office will be supervised by Shane Giese, who will be responsible for alumni relations and also for the Wayne State College Foundation.

"So much of the functions [with alumni relations and the Foundation] overlap," said Fleck. "This will be a move in the right direction."

Previously, Giese worked only with the Foundation, Fleck mentioned. Combining alumni relations with Foundation would result in more efficiency, he said, and savings in costs.

"I didn't feel there was a need for an assistant to the president," Fleck added.

Another position eliminated was that of Dean of Administrative Services, which was a position held by Randy Shaw.

Shaw will be returning to teaching duty in the Division of Applied Science at Wayne State College, Fleck said. That change will be in effect on July 6.

Functions of the Dean of Administrative Service office have been placed under the supervision of John Struve's office. Struve is currently Wayne State's vice president of finance.

Fleck said that even with the personnel added to Struve's office in relation to the administrative service duties, the WSC administration changes will result in an estimated savings of $40,000.

Butane sale ban announced

Two Wayne businesses have announced they will halt the sale of butane fuel.

Bill's GW of Wayne made the announcement Monday that their shelves would not stock the butane fuel because of recent reported cases of misuse of the product in Nebraska and across the nation.

On Thursday, Pamida issued a press release stating that butane fuel would be removed from the sales inventory.

Pamida, Inc., headquartered in Omaha, has ordered the removal of the butane fuel from the shelves of its 167 retail stores, including Wayne, according to Byron Wolff, company vice-president of advertising and sales promotion.

Butane fuel, which normally comes in 2½ ounce containers, is used in refillable cigarette lighters. Inhalation of the product alters the chemistry of the lungs, thus reducing the amount of oxygen in the blood system causing various symptoms, such as irregular heart rhythms and possible brain damage.

A 16 year old Omaha youth allegedly had inhaled butane prior to his death on May 17 of this year.

"The potential for misuse of this product and concern for our customers and their families has prompted recall of this product from our shelves," explained Wolff. "We care about the safety of all our customers and take extra precautions against products that could be misused in such a manner as to pose a health risk," he added.

Signs explaining the company's decision will be posted in Pamida stores.

Clown around

SANDY BURBACH of Carroll has her face painted into a clown by Kathy Hankins during the Carroll Public Library summer reading program of "Greatest Show of All". Twenty-one children participated in the week-long program, involving kindergarten to fourth grade. Adding spirit to the occasion is to dress up as clowns — just prior to when the Carson and Barnes Circus comes to Wayne June 11.

Show date for circus draws near Judging from the windows on Wayne's Main Street, the Carson & Barnes five ring circus arrival date is fast approaching.

Grace Holman, press agent for the circus, was in Wayne on Tuesday, promoting the gala extravaganza that will come to the community on June 11 at the Wayne County Fairgrounds, with shows slated for 2 p.m. and 8 p.m.

The event is being sponsored by the Wayne Kiwanis Club.

On Wednesday, Dudley, who is the national touring "advance clown" of the 5-ring Carson & Barnes Circus, performed before members of the Wayne Senior Citizen Center, at the Wayne Public Library and at the Wayne Care Centre.

Care Centre Administrator Gil Haase will be appearing during the circus performances as a "guest clown," according to Holman. He will be tagged as the clown called "Karl."

Holman said that about 9 to 11 a.m. would be the high time to see most of the setting-up action on Thursday. By that time, she said, the company's procession of about 80 vehicles would have arrived at the Wayne County Fairgrounds.

AFTER THE TENT trucks arrive, circus crews will find the exact site planned for the Big Top, staked out a day earlier by the "24-hour man." Then trucks will drive into place to unload big tent panels from rollers.

After the panels are laced together, the circus elephants will pull up the tent, just like in the good old days that many people can recall.

Carson and Barnes uses modern machinery, like stake setters. Men with sledge hammers used to pound in hundreds of stakes. Now a machine does it.

"But we still use the elephants to pull up the tent," said Ralph Gifford, the brigade manager who visited Wayne last week. He's been with the circus for 20 years. He noted that lots of people remember what circus used to mean. It will be what they remember, he said.

Some other Wayne area residents will also be involved in the circus shows, according to Holman. At least one will be a clown. One will direct the circus band for a number. One will do a brief stint with the ringmaster (the announcer). Several will get a rare privilege: they will ride an elephant in the show's grand entry parade.

Several Carson & Barnes representatives have said the circus really does encourage people to come out — with their children — and see how the company sets up its one-day city. There is no charge for this or for viewing the menagerie, which will be on display through afternoon and

'Hacken' Away

Chicken scratches is what some people commonly call this column.

And with the publicity the chicken industry is getting these days — as far as poultry consumption — I don't particularly fancy that term. Apparently, some television broadcast had given a view of the processing of chicken for food, which had shed a bad light on the chicken food industry. I never saw the telecast.

But had the cameras been rolling whenever my family decided it was time to butcher the roosters, no doubt we would be part of a national scandal. During one particular time of the year (usually in the middle of the summer and the hottest days), we would corner the roosters from the hen house and place them in wood crates. Some 25 of the birds would fall before the hatchet before the day was done.

Our "grading" system was that of "wait until they are big enough to butcher."

And some of the roosters really knew how to put up a fight, using their beaks and sharp claws to try and escape their doom. The execution of the birds was a simple matter in itself. No need to elaborate on that here.

The rooster, after it was no longer alive and kicking, was then dipped in scalding hot water. Mother would have the task of removing all the large feathers off of the bird, throwing handful after handful into a pile.

And then, all the children would have the most tedious task of picking away at all the pin feathers of the bird at every spot imaginable.

From there, the rooster was placed above an open fire over the oven, where hair on the bird was burned to the skin.

The butchering began. Chicken parts were placed in old milk cans and stored inside the milk can cooler for a few days until mother could begin freezing the chicken parts, with enough chicken frozen to last almost the entire year, until it was time in the summer to butcher again.

The spools would go to the hogs. The hogs never got the gizzards, liver and the neck.

Evidently, we weren't too afraid of food poisoning — we had chicken almost every Sunday.

Nowadays, there are electric "chicken-pluckers" that speed up the process.

Also, when I was growing up on the farm, we also butchered for beef and pork. That in itself was at least a two-day undertaking, sometimes longer if one counts the time it took to make the sausages and bologna.

It wasn't like the swift work done at the packing plant. But the meat tasted excellent. No complaints about that.

Next week will be a managing editor's dream come true of having ample material to fill up a front page full of news and features, and then some.

It will also involve a lot of work on the part of The Wayne Herald staff.

During the first part of the week are the meetings of Laurel Ag Days, the Wayne city council, Wayne Carroll School Board and then the Educational Service Unit meeting over in Wakefield.

After information for Thursday's paper is put to bed, then the staff must begin working on gathering information, photos and features on the Bike Ride Across Nebraska (as they pull into Wayne on Thursday) and the big Carson and Barnes Circus that will take place on the same day.

On the weekend will be Country Store Days in Wayne, with lots of activities that include a big braiwurst feed.

Sandwiched in between all of this are other features and events that we hope to cover.

And then in July, the annual Wayne Chicken Show will take place. So mark your calendar.

Letters

Saying goodbye

Dear Wayne:
Where do I begin? There has been so many great times and memories that it is difficult to focus on only a few. I have watched young Wayne people grow from sixth grade to heading off for college. I've seen businesses come and go, and others that seem never to change.

I've traveled around the world, but always look forward to coming back home to Wayne. In my travels I've had the opportunity to meet people of all makes and kinds, but none as enjoyable as the ones I found at home.

I believe one of the biggest challenges in life is to discover who I am and what makes me ME. All the activities and involvement I've had since I've been here have helped mold me to become the person I am. Many special things have happened to me that have shaped me, of which I am so grateful. The awards and honors, serving as the Student Senate President of Wayne State, working with the Chamber of Commerce on community projects such as the Welcome Back Dance and the Easter Party for the Care Center. I'm proud to say that I've always believed in Wayne, Nebraska, by shopping in town for my needs and wants. The business people have always treated me well, so it was a pleasure to give them my business.

I've grown much since the fall of 1980 when I first moved to Wayne to attend college. I learned how to tell my parents that I loved them for the first time. I had my heart broken and survived, as all of us do, and made many life-time friends. One of my favorite stories will be the trip I made to Norfolk one winter for a high school basketball game. I think the entire town of Wayne was there. Boy, what a game! And I think I lost 10 pounds playing Catman that night! I miss bringing the smiles to the young people's faces and uniting a crowd behind a cause.

I will also miss the friendly hello's as you walk down the street, the quiet walks across the campus at night, the friendly bank teller who knows your name, catching up on the gossip at the barber shop, and the sense of being someone and not just a number.

I want to thank all the people of Wayne who shared a little of themselves with me. The congregations of St. Paul's and Redeemer Lutheran churches for allowing me to become a part of their families. The people of Wayne have been good to me and I will always remember them for that, especially my good friend "Mom" Wette. You will always be in my heart and in my prayers. I hope you all find your dreams and "pot of gold at the end of your rainbow." And always remember—keep smiling, because it's a good life!

Good-Bye Wayne.
Sincerely,
Dean Jacobs

Ask A Lawyer

A public service of the Nebraska State Bar Association

Q. I'm retired and rent my farm out. What is the law if I should decide to change tenants? Are there deadlines for giving notice? Is there a difference between a verbal lease and a written lease?

A. There is a set of statutes called the Residential Landlord Tenant Act which governs such questions when the property is rented primarily for residential purposes. The Act specifies duties owed by the landlord to the tenant, and vice versa, in residential situation. It also specifies how rental agreements may be terminated, and on what grounds, to keep dealings between landlords and tenants fair and equitable. Since rental agreements for agricultural purposes are exempt from this Act, landlords and tenants in such agreements are free to set their own terms. However, there are deadlines for giving notice.

Agricultural land usually carries a lease term of March 1 through the last day of the following February, with the requirement that if either party wishes to terminate the lease, notice must be given before September 1. If a termination notice is not given, the lease is automatically renewed. In other words, ending a year-to-year lease requires six months' notice, unless otherwise stated or agreed.

There are differences between an oral lease and a written lease. Generally, leases for a period of more than one year must be in writing; oral leases can be for no more than one year, though they can be extended on a year-to-year basis with the agreement of the parties. Written leases can be for any length of time as long as the term is agreed to by the parties and is not unconscionable.

If you and your tenant have a verbal lease, you can change tenants by notifying him before September 1, 1987, that the lease will end as of the last day of February 1988. If you have a written lease, the terms of that agreement would govern both parties rights and duties.

Amendment halts trade competitor subsidies

When the House Banking Committee's Subcommittee on International Development Institutions took action on the Multinational Development Bank Reauthorization on Tuesday, Representative Doug Bereuter successfully added an amendment to prevent financing of projects that will increase the production of commodities that create export competition for U.S. producers.

The amendment added by Bereuter directs the Secretary of the Treasury to instruct U.S. Executive Directors of Multinational Development Banks to oppose the financing of projects that produce export commodities that are in surplus on world markets and, which therefore, are likely to cause injury to U.S. producers.

"When Multinational Development Bank loans are used to stimulate the production of agricultural commodities that are intended for world markets already overburdened with surpluses, then those loan policies are detrimental to U.S. producers, and are actually counter-productive in alleviating hunger in a developing country.

"In light of the economic problems in rural America, low commodity prices and ever more competitive world markets, the Multinational Development Bank policies have a direct economic impact on U.S. producers as was demonstrated by a World Bank loan to Argentina last year. The purpose of this amendment is to eliminate the conflict between basic agricultural development in the Third World, and U.S. commercial export sales of agricultural products."

U.S. producers can benefit where Multinational Development Bank loans help to improve the income and living standards of farmers in developing countries, according to Bereuter. Statistics show that, as the per capita income of foreign nations increase, so do their purchases of U.S. products, especially agricultural commodities and food products.

"Under the right circumstances these loans can benefit both the recipient country and U.S. farmers and agri-business," Bereuter said. "However, we cannot support loans to foreign countries to boost their agricultural exports without damage to American farmers, rural areas and our taxpayers who finance larger subsidy programs. Soybean exports from Argentina have increased eleven-fold since 1981, and in 1985 the International Finance Corporation loaned $12 million to Argentina with the primary result being greater soybean production. This nonsense, financed with major American contributions, has to stop, and my amendment is intended to stop it."

Display flag on June 14

Spirit soars on Flag Day

It's a Grand Old Flag, it's a high flying flag, and every June 14th Americans take time out to honor our national banner.

According to The World Book Encyclopedia, in 1916 President Woodrow Wilson issued a proclamation that established Flag Day as an annual national celebration and in 1949, President Harry S. Truman officially recognized June 14 as Flag Day by signing the National Flag Day Bill.

Flag Day was first officially observed in 1877 to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the selection of the flag. Congress requested all public buildings to fly the flag on June 14 of that year.

The date, June 14, was chosen in memory of the day in 1777 when the Continental Congress adopted the Stars and Stripes as the official flag of the United States in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

It is not an official holiday, but the President proclaims a public Flag Day observance every year. Pennsylvania is the only state that recognizes the celebration as a legal holiday, although all 50 states honor the flag with parades and other demonstrations.

The flag's original design, which sported 13 alternate red and white stripes and 13 white stars in a blue field, representing the 13 original colonies, has been updated numerous times as states joined the Union. The 48-Star Flag served as the national flag the longest of any flag, from 1912 to 1959. The present version was made in 1960, when the 50th star was added for Hawaii.

World Book Encyclopedia has illustrations of many of the flags under which Americans have fought. One flag had a pine tree on it and the words "An Appeal to Heaven."

Another had a rattlesnake and the words "Don't Tread on Me," and another had "Liberty or Death." The first flag to represent all the colonies was called, the "Continental Colors," in which the British flag appeared in the upper left corner.

Oddly enough, no one knows who designed the first official U.S. flag, or who made it. Most historians do not support the claim that it was Betsy Ross. While there is no record of why red, white and blue were chosen as the colors for the flag, a 1782 Congressional resolution states that these colors stand for on the Great Seal of the United States: the red stands for hardiness and courage, the white for purity and innocence, and the blue for vigilance, perseverance and justice.

The Stars and Stripes stands for the land, the people, the government, and the ideas of the United States. Display the banner proudly this June 14.

Sioux City West powers past locals in twinbill

Sioux City West invaded the friendly confines of Hank Overin Field Wednesday and took no prisoners enroute to its doubleheader sweep of the Wayne Junior Legion.

The visitors from across the river went home with 12-0 and 14-2 wins over the locals. The losses dropped Wayne to 3-3 on the year. West improved to 2-3.

The winners struck early. West posted three runs on three hits in the opening frame. They fanned four runs in the second, three more in the third and two in the fourth to close out the scoring.

In the meantime West pitchers Todd Henningfeld and Terry Steele were mowing down the Wayne hitters. The pair struck out 12 Wayne hitters. The locals were limited to two hits, singles by Ted McCright and Scott Pokoff. Wayne's biggest threat came in the fourth inning. Three runner reached base and two, Ted Lueders and Russ Longe, got as far as second base.

Longe was also the pitcher of record. He took the loss by throwing the first three innings, allowing 10 runs on nine hits. Rob Gamble came in relief and allowed two runs on one hit in two innings of work. Seven Wayne errors aided in the lopsided defeat.

The nightcap remained tight until the sixth inning. With the game tied 2-2 the visitors erupted for six runs in each the sixth and seventh innings to put the game out of reach.

West jumped on top 2-0 in the top of the first on a single and two errors. Wayne got one run back in the bottom of the inning. Gamble led off the inning with a walk. He went to third on a hit by Lueders and scored on a double play by Longe.

The locals tied the score in the bottom of the third. Gamble led off the inning with a double. Lueders singled and Gamble was thrown out at the plate. Lueders stole second and later came around to score.

The floodgates opened in the sixth inning when 12 West batters went to the plate. After it was all over six runners scored on four doubles and two singles.

Things got worse in the seventh when the visitors struck for six more.

Lueders started the game on the mound. He controlled the visitors until the sixth inning. McCright came on in relief in the sixth. Scott Nichols finished the game.

Girls crush Pilger 15-6, 22-5

The Wayne girls softball teams had a pleasant ride home Thursday after sweeping two games from Pilger.

The 15 and under team got things started by whipping the hosts 15-6 to even its record at 1-1.

After a scoreless first inning Wayne clicked for four runs in the second. The first three hitters of the inning, Tara Erxleben, Clair Riedel and Angela Schrier, all reached base and later scored. Karl Luft also scored in the inning.

Pilger came back with one run in the bottom of the second but Wayne answered with a four spot in the top of the third to make it 8-1. The locals added to the lead in the top of the fourth by tallying three runs, the big blow being a home run by Shannon Holdorf. Erxleben tripled in the frame.

The hosts had a big inning in the bottom of the fourth as three Pilger runners crossed the plate to cut the margin to 11-4. Wayne closed out its scoring in the top of the fifth, scoring four runs with two outs. Pilger made it 15-6 with a pair in the bottom of the fifth.

Karl Luft recorded the win for the locals. Holly and Shannon Holdorf led the way offensively. Holly went 4-5 at the plate while Shannon collected two home runs.

The 18 and under squad survived a shaky start and came on strong to record a 22-5 win. Their record stands at 3-1 on the year.

The Wayne girls collected three runs in the top of the third. Leslie Keating led off the game with a base hit and scored along with Amy Schluns and Kathy Mohlfeld.

Pilger grabbed the lead in the bottom of the inning by tallying five runs off of pitcher Dana Nelson. After the rocky start Nelson shut down the opponent in the next two innings before giving way to Robin Luft who pitched the last frame.

The locals recaptured the lead 7-5 in the second inning. Triples by Kristy Hansen and Schluns and a double by Suzy Luft accounted for the runs. Wayne came back with five more in the top of the third to up the margin to 12-5.

The girls ended the contest by scoring 10 runs in the fourth frame. Fourteen batters came to the plate as nine recorded hits. Shelly Gilliland ripped a pair of singles in the inning.

The local girls accounted for 19 hits. Schluns went 4-4 with a triple and a double while scoring four times. Suzy Luft and Gilliland each went 3-4. Hansen was credited with a pair of triples.

The girls will play on the road Tuesday when they travel to Emerson in Northeast Nebraska League action.

Nebraska Outdoorsman

by Tom Keith - Nebraska Game & Parks

Tick season is rapidly approaching

If you are a fisherman, camper or someone who likes to relax by walking through the woods on a warm spring or summer afternoon, chances are a tick or two will go home with you at the end of the day.

Ticks are more of a nuisance than anything else, but you should be aware of potential dangers the tiny insect presents.

There are both dog ticks or wood ticks in Nebraska. You may occasionally find a dog tick on your clothes or body, but chances are slim it will bite you; it would rather snuggle up with Fido. Wood ticks, on the other hand, go after humans like kids after cookies and milk.

Nebraskans have to contend with the greatest numbers of ticks during spring until about July 15, according to Don Jensen, Lancaster County Extension Horticulturist, who says that by then most of them have either died, burrowed into the ground or gorged themselves on blood from a host animal and fallen to the ground to lay eggs.

People are most likely to encounter ticks in thick grassy areas and wooded spots, along trails and waterways where there is a good deal of animal and human traffic. The best way to minimize exposure to ticks is to avoid those places by camping or walking where grass is kept short by regular mowing.

But, outdoors people don't always stay in neatly manicured areas. Luckily there are some things they can do to protect themselves from ticks. The best is to use an insect repellent with a high "DEET" content. Jensen says aerosol sprays work best for covering clothing, and special attention should be paid to pant legs and cuffs when the spray is applied. Because some repellents put directly onto the skin may be absorbed by the body, it is important to follow container directions carefully.

Dr. Paul Stoesz, Director of the Disease Control Division of the State Department of Health, says people who spend time in the out-of-doors should check periodically for ticks. "People should inspect each other," he said. "It is important that areas not accessible to a person's own vision be inspected."

Many ticks will be found on the clothing and it's a good idea to leave clothes and camping equipment outside after a trip rather than introducing ticks into your home. A good machine washing and drying will eliminate the little critters from the clothing.

Ticks may be found anywhere on the body, but are most often located in hairy areas on the upper portion of the body. Hair on the back of the head seems to be a favorite spot, as are constricted areas like around the waist where ticks are halted in their travels to a person's upper body.

When a tick is located, it should be immediately removed. If it is embedded in the skin, the best removal technique is to grasp it with a forceps or pair of tweezers and gently pull it away. Don't try to jerk it loose because sometimes the tick may break, leaving its head and mouth parts imbedded in the skin. A second technique Dr. Stoesz recommends is dipping a cotton swab in rubbing alcohol and applying it to the tick, which causes it to release its hold and back away. Forget the old "burn 'em on the back with a cigarette method, because that's an easy way to burn the person's skin. And, if the heat kills it, the tick is harder to remove than ever.

After the tick has been removed, the area should be cleaned with a 70 percent isopropyl alcohol solution to reduce the risk of infection. First-aid creams are not indicated for use on tick bites because they may foster the development of infection, according to Dr. Stoesz.

The tick's bite itself is not severe and usually doesn't even cause itching at the site. The danger comes from disease the tick can transmit to the victim. One of the biggest dangers is a disease called Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever.

Dr. Stoesz says victims usually develop flu-like symptoms seven to 10 days after being bitten by an infected tick. Headache, fever, body aches and just generally not feeling well are the first indications of the disease. If the condition isn't treated in the earliest stages, in another three to five days, a rash develops. If the victim remains untreated, the disease may be fatal.

"Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever is a disease of the blood. If recognized in its early stages it can be easily treated with an inexpensive antibiotic, but if allowed to progress to the rash stage, treatment and recovery are more difficult," Dr. Stoesz said. "Often there will be hemorrhaging of tissues in a limb — not necessarily where the bite occurred — and the patient may lose that limb. Sometimes there is sloughing of skin and skin grafting must be done, if the patient pulls through."

Early diagnosis and treatment are the keys to successful recovery from the disease. Dr. Stoesz says if someone begins having flu-like symptoms a few days after having found an attached tick on their body; they should seek medical attention and explain to their doctor they had been bitten by a tick. He emphasized early treatment is simple, effective, inexpensive and very necessary if the patient has, in fact, contracted Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever.

Ticks sometimes transmit other diseases, including Lyme Disease, which has not been a problem in Nebraska, but is characterized by a localized rash around the bite; Ehrlichiosis, a disease related to Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever; and Tularemia, which is commonly called "rabbit fever."

The chances of being bitten by an infected tick are very small; there were only six cases of Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever reported in Nebraska in 1986, and none of those victims died as a result of the disease.

People shouldn't be afraid to be outside during the tick season, but they should be aware that ticks can cause health problems, should check thoroughly for ticks after a day outside, and should seek medical attention if they begin feeling ill within a few days after being bitten by a tick.
