Sewer rate down

The Wayne City Council passed an ordinance Tuesday evening, which will lower the sewer rates for the summer months. A revision of the sanitary sewer ordinance will establish a 20 percent reduction in rates for the meter readings in the months of July, August and September.

Fire calls

Dale Preston, Wayne fire chief, presented the annual report of the Wayne Volunteer Fire Department to members of the Wayne City Council on Tuesday evening.

The report period is from May 1, 1986 to April 30, 1987.

The fire department answered a total of 33 alarms — 17 rural, seven in the city, four each as rescue and false alarms and one call for mutual aid.

Estimated damage from fire calls last year was at $9,800, with approximately 33 hours spent on calls and 570 total man hours spent on calls.

Other facts and figures: miles traveled on fire calls, 101; miles traveled on rescue calls, 17; average number of people answering calls, 19; average number of persons answering rescue calls, 8; hours spent on training, 129; man hours on training, 1,049; estimate of value of property saved, $3,250,000; and number of personnel on fire department as of May 3, 1987, 40.

Gardner honored

Dan Gardner of Wakefield was selected recently as one of nine to receive the Department of Aging Private Sector Initiative Award. The presentation was made during the Governor's Conference on Aging banquet last May at Kearney.

Dan and his wife, Jeanne, were present at the banquet to accept the award on behalf of the Milton G. Waldbaum Company.

Since the Wakefield Senior Center opened, the Waldbaum Company has donated space, including the cost of utilities, to support the center and its programs. In addition, the company provides support for fund raising events and meal programs which amounts to an average gift each year of $2,700.

Advisor gone

Debbie J. Matcha, who advised in the Wayne County area for the League of Human Dignity, has been transferred to the Lincoln office of the League of Human Dignity as of June 1.

She will be covering the counties of Washington, Dodge, Cass and Saunders.

North Dakota couple purchase Wayne Herald

Forty-year publishing tradition ends

A 40-year publishing tradition ends in Wayne July 1 with the transfer of ownership of The Wayne Herald. New owners are Gary and Peggy Wright of Killdeer, North Dakota.

Alan and Diana Cramer and Jim Marsh, stockholders and officers of The Wayne Herald Publishing Company, Inc., announce the sale. Wrights have purchased the assets of the company. The Morning Shopper, owned by Cramer, has also been sold to the Wrights.

Mark E. Cramer, Cramer's father, purchased the newspaper from Eugene W. Huse in 1947. Mark E. Cramer was killed in July of 1954 while his son was a University of Iowa student. Following completion of a college degree and military service, Alan Cramer purchased The Wayne Herald in 1957 from his mother, the late Margaret E. Cramer, and sister, Mrs. Bob (Adele) Wohlers of Lincoln.

MARSH JOINED the company as an advertising salesman in 1961 while a student at Wayne State. In 1969 he became vice president and business manager.

Under the tutelage of Marsh and Cramer, The Wayne Herald has won over 70 state and national newspaper awards and has become known as Nebraska's Prize Winning Newspaper.

Wright's are natives of Fargo, North Dakota. They owned the paper in Killdeer from August, 1980 until last January when they sold the Dunn County Herald and Shopper XTRA to three North Dakota natives.

Prior to purchasing the Herald, Wright managed the Banner in Hillsboro, North Dakota and had worked at newspapers in Cassellton and Lisbon, North Dakota. The Wright's newspaper won 11 North Dakota Newspaper Association awards during their ownership.

Cramer converted The Wayne Herald to the offset process and a semi-weekly publication in 1966. Moved the paper to its current location and named the facility the "Newspaper Building."

THE HERALD was a pioneer "central plant" in Nebraska; printing newspapers for other communities. Twenty-three regular publications are currently printed in The Wayne Herald plant, along with a host of semi-regular flyers and advertising circulars.

"When I bought the Wayne Herald, we were using about one railroad car of newsprint a year," Cramer said. "Now we use a semi-trailer load every three weeks."

The number of full-time employees have grown from eight to 21 along with 23 carriers and 13 news correspondents.

Wayne Country Store Day promises fun for every age

By Chuck Hackenmiller
Managing Editor

Country Store Day in Wayne, scheduled for this Saturday, June 13, will have activities for all ages.

Kicking off the day filled with events will be the Country Store Day Flower Show at the Wayne City Auditorium. The theme of the flower show is "Bit of Country" and is open to anyone.

From 8:30 a.m. to 10 a.m., entries for the contest must be brought to the auditorium for judging, which will begin at 10 a.m. and will end at noon. The flower show will be open to the public from noon to 9 p.m.

Categories will include bouquets, arrangements, single specimens and potted plants. A "best of show" ribbon will be awarded to the entry that best expresses the theme of the flower show.

Gail Korn is chairman of the event, with assistance from the Roving Gardeners Garden Club.

Also beginning at around 8:30 a.m. will be the Flea Market.

LINDA BROWN, executive vice president of the Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce and Wayne Industries, said the Flea Market will feature the sales of mostly craft items. It will take place on the corner of 2nd Street and Pearl.

Among the early afternoon events will be an ice cream social, sponsored by the Order of the Eastern Star. The social, which features homemade ice cream, pies and cakes, begins at 2 p.m. in the Womens Club room.

A new twist to Country Store Day will be a Buffalo Chip Throwing Contest (for accuracy), which will get underway approximately 2 p.m. at the corner of Main Street and Second Street.

Another "throwing" activity will involve horseshoes. The horseshoe pitching contest begins at 3 p.m. near Godfather's Pizza.

Starting at 4 p.m. will be Kids Games, which will take place north of the fire station. Prizes, donated by Chamber members and businesses, will be awarded.

HIGHLIGHTING Country Store Day will be a free Bratwurst Supper, located on West 2nd Street, from 5 to 7 p.m. On the menu will be bratwurst, sauerkraut, chips and milk or juice.

Brown said that in 1986, over 1,500 people were served at the bratwurst supper. Four lines will be utilized this year.

She said the free bratwurst feed is not only an act of appreciation to the customers of Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce businesses, but also to the employees of the businesses.

The free tickets to the bratwurst feed can be obtained from most Wayne businesses. The outdoor beer garden, which opens at 5 p.m. for Country Store Day, will be located near Godfather's Pizza. Also, at late dusk, outdoor movies will be shown at the Godfather's location. The films will be provided by the Wayne Public Library. The popcorn will be provided by Dairy Queen, according to Brown.

There will be square dancing north of the fire station, between 7 and 8 p.m., with Wayne Lorenzen as the caller.

Recommendations presented to reduce energy costs

By Chuck Hackenmiller
Managing Editor

Wayne's city council gained some insight in controlling the city's electrical load and how to cut down costs following a presentation by a Rock Rapids, Iowa firm during Tuesday evening's regular city council meeting.

The presentation of the Western Area Power Association electrical study results was made by David DeVries of the firm of DeWild, Grant and Reckert in Rock Rapids. DeVries called the study a "load management feasibility study."

DeVries said the city of Wayne buys approximately 25 percent of its power from Western Area Power Association and 75 percent from Nebraska Public Power District (NPPD). The rates are considerably higher with NPPD, he mentioned. About 65 to 70 percent of the cost which the city pays is based on the peak demand.

"We'll look at that as a place to reduce costs," DeVries said.

As part of the study, residents, small commercial customers and most of the large industries were presented with electrical power usage surveys. DeVries said it appears that Wayne already has a "rather effective load management system" through its peak alert warning system used in past years.

However, there are several other ways which the city can control the peak load without the daily announcement of peak alerts.

ONE OF THE most promising methods, he said, would be to have a "voltage control" system. When the load nears peak alert, the system's voltage is reduced by 2 1/2 percent — no more than 5 percent — which will reduce the load on the system at one time.

"None of the consumers will realize any hardships and there will be a significant reduction in the system's peaks. Consumers will also save through less cost for energy consumption," DeVries mentioned.

Through voltage control, the city could save up to $20,000 a year. "You already have a 24 hour man at the power plant. There is no need for an increase in personnel," he said.

Another option, he mentioned, which would save approximately $10,000 annually would be to shut off the power plant load during the peaks.

He said the addition of an elevated water storage tank will allow the city to shut down some water pumping during some of the summer months.

Utilizing all three items, DeVries said the city could save up to $48,000 annually. "And that's not hay," he said.

The city council took no action on the study and presentation at Tuesday's meeting.

Remick gives status on Timpltpe

By Chuck Hackenmiller
Managing Editor

"Timpltpe is convinced that Wayne, Nebraska is where we should be in our second century of business."
Timpltpe President and Chief Operating Officer Jim Remick said those words during the Tuesday evening meeting of the Wayne City Council.

Remick gave a status report on the company, and following his presentation, Timpltpe Executive Vice President of Finance and Administration, Ken Allred, presented the city with a check of $21,250 to cover its first installment of loan repayment to the city of Wayne—all during the regular meeting of the city council.
Timpltpe had received a $500,000 loan from the city of Wayne in May 30, 1986. The city had received the funding for the loan to Timpltpe from the state of Nebraska in the form of a community development block grant.

Terms of the 15 year note states that Timpltpe must repay the loan interest only to the city of Wayne during the first five years, then the principal and interest during the next 10 years.
Allred said that when the entire note is paid off in 15 years, the total amount repaid to the city of Wayne will be about $723,000 in principal and interest.

WHAT IS REPAYED to the city will be used to generate more industrial or business development projects in the future. Allred said that if the city of Wayne invests its repayments from Timpltpe, over $980,000 would be available (in 15 years time) to lend out for industrial development in the community.

"Since Timpltpe began manufacturing in April of 1986, over 1,490 refrigerated trailers have been produced, Remick mentioned.

The company employs approximately 260 people, which includes factory, office and corporate head-quarter personnel, he said.
"Our annual payroll is $4.3 million," Remick said. The amount which Timpltpe pays annually for city utilities is nearly $170,000, and the company's 1987 property tax bill was $87,000, he added.

Remick said Timpltpe is currently producing eight refrigeration trailers a day. "We'll be increasing that to 10 trailers a day within the next few months," he said.

With the increase in production, Remick said the company plans on hiring 40 to 50 more employees. "That will increase the Timpltpe annual payroll, which will be of more favorable economic impact to the greater Wayne area," he said.

"During the first full year of Timpltpe's operation in Wayne, the company lost over $2 million, he said. "That sounds like a lot. It is a lot. But when you make this investment, starting a plant from a green field, one should expect a loss," he said.
With the increased volume of production and a reduced learning curve (training costs), the losses should turn into revenue, he said. However, Remick said it will be several years before the income levels produce a satisfactory return. The company had anticipated this, he said.

THESE TWO SIX-YEAR-OLD YOUNGSTERS were making sure Tuesday afternoon that nobody left downtown Wayne unaware of the upcoming Carson & Barnes Circus. Robbie Sturm, at left, and Chris Van Meter were decked out in circus posters as they made their way up and down the street announcing the five-ring circus which visits Wayne today.

Circus arrives Thursday in Wayne

Carson & Barnes will roll its caravan into the Wayne County Fairgrounds this morning (Thursday) after shows in West Point on Wednesday. The arrival will begin about 8 a.m. or earlier, and hundreds of Wayne area folks are likely to be there to watch the magic of creating a one-day circus city.

Entry to the fairgrounds will be limited to the west gate, on the road one mile west of Wayne's Main Street and south of Highway 35. Members of Wayne Kiwanis Club, which sponsors the circus performance here, will direct car traffic to parking areas.
There is no admission charge to visit the fairgrounds. Carson & Barnes welcomes people to watch the whole process of setting up the whole circus, which will be complete well before noon.
Visitors can watch circus elephants pull up the 400-foot-long

Big Top and see the menagerie of some two dozen species of animals. There are several sideshows, and some of them will charge for admission or participation.

TICKETS FOR the 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. shows will be on sale for people who did not buy tickets in advance. If enough tickets are sold before show time, circus officials can decide to add a third show, at 5 p.m.
The shows will go on, even if there's rain.
Circus officials invite people in wheelchairs to arrive early—about 30 minutes before show times—and they will be guided to a special place for viewing the circus.

Actually, because of the expected crowds, everybody is advised to arrive considerably early. That is especially true for those who must buy show tickets on the site.

Kiwanians who have worked with the circus management say Carson & Barnes likes to have lots of local people involved—like riding the elephants in each show's opening grand parade. Mayor Wayne Marsh agreed to make such an appearance. Several local characters are booked to ride elephants, although it was not clear at press time who would ride at which show.

Gil Haase, administrator of Wayne Care Centre, will don a clown costume and join the circus clown cast sometime during the show. Gary Davis, Wayne State band director, took an invitation to lead the circus band for a brief stint. Mark Ahmann will take a turn at assisting the ringmaster.
Kiwanis Club expects to use its proceeds from ticket sales to provide some public service.

Teachers contracted for 1987-88

By Gregg Dahlheim

The Wayne-Carroll Board of Education approved the appointment of four teachers for the upcoming 1987-88 school year.

Three of the teachers will be new to the district. The fourth, Kathleen Rasmussen, will move from her position as resource instructor in the middle school to kindergarten teacher at the elementary school.

The new instructors for the upcoming year all have close ties to the area. Cheryl Overhue will be the new first grade teacher. She is a graduate of Wayne State College and she did her student teaching at Wayne. Rocky Ruhl was selected out of the six applicants that interviewed for the math position at the high school. Ruhl will also be the assistant basketball and track coach. He is a graduate of Wayne State. Ruhl did his student teaching at Wakefield. Vicki Mayer will fill the resource center position at the middle school left vacated by Rasmussen. She will also be the 7th and 8th grade volleyball coach. Prior to coming to Wayne she was the resource instructor at Laurel.

Superintendent Dr. Francis Haun said that at this time all of the vacancies have been filled.

In other action:

The board viewed the work completed on the gym floor. The floor was resurfaced, at a cost of $6,000, by Carl Bohmeyer of Lincoln. Haun said the floor needs to be buffed and one more coat of sealant must be applied before the project is completed.
Haun informed the board where the district stands in its efforts to obtain an energy grant loan and matching federal funds for a roofing insulation project at the high school. The superintendent said the district's application has been approved by the state. He said the federal application is now being reviewed.

The board listened to a presentation by Wayne State Athletic Trainer Dan Sedory about the possible updating of the schools athletic training program. Sedory told the board what small steps could be taken to make the current training room into an adequate training center.
He said some of the other things the district can do to improve the current procedures is to review policies and procedures for injury management and with the next teaching vacancy hire an instructor that also is a certified trainer. Sedory said the only additional cost would be to pay the teacher an assistant coach fee for three seasons.

Attorney Ken Olds spoke to the board about the possibility of forming a non-profit foundation for the district.
The foundation would provide financial support for school activities that could not be provided by tax dollars. The foundation would be an avenue for people wanting to donate money to the district for specific activities.

Olds said the cost of forming the foundation would be about $30-$40 in filing costs. Olds said his firm would file the papers and get the corporation started at no cost to the district.
The attorney said the foundation should secure a tax-exempt status so contributions would be deductible. Board Vice President Cap Peterson recommended that the item be put on next month's agenda for further discussion.
Peterson presented Edna Nissen with the Distinguished Service to Education Award in recognition of her work as a cook in the Wayne school lunch program from its inception in 1959.

The board set July 14 at 8 p.m. for its next regularly scheduled board meeting.

Session dominated by development bills

The 1987 legislative session is now history and those individuals looking back to ascertain its impact will undoubtedly focus their attention on the business development bills which dominated the agenda during the last few weeks. So much has been written and said about these particular bills that little needs to be added.

The gamble Nebraska has undertaken by adopting this type of economic development has a certain attractiveness; for the first time in a long while, Nebraska is attempting to direct its own future instead of allowing itself to be buffeted by the currents of the national economy. Omaha has already seen business improvements such as ConAgra's promised expansion and the move of People's Natural Gas to Omaha from Council Bluffs, whether rural Nebraska benefits directly or picks up the tab for Nebraska's major city is yet to be seen.

Ag issues key at Summit

When Administration officials came before the House Foreign Affairs Committee's Subcommittee on Europe and the Middle East last week to brief committee members on the agenda for the Vienna Summit meeting, I told them that the United States must have two priorities with regard to agricultural issues.

First, I said that we must make no concessions whatsoever on matters regarding agricultural trade. For example, we must not make any agreements that would compromise our export enhancement program, which allows us to compete with the Europeans.

In addition, we should try to gain a wide degree of support for the OECD (Organization for Economic Cooperative and Development) formula for calculation of the extent of the subsidies that each country accords to its agricultural interests. This agreement would provide a common standard for comparison of subsidies among countries.

Also, we need to move rapidly toward an agreement to implement a multilateral phase-down in agricultural subsidies at the time of the 1988 GATT meeting.

I made it clear to the Administration that this summit is not a time to turn off the heat on matters of agricultural trade.

CCC Funding Burden Not on House
We have seen much rhetoric in recent weeks blaming the House of Representatives for delays in the emergency funding bill for the Commodity Credit Corporation.

The House of Representatives passed the CCC funding bill on April 24. In addition, the House deleted a number of expensive and unnecessary amendments. The bill was sent over the Senate with fewer amendments than it had when it came to the floor of the House.

The burden was not on the House of Representatives, and it is unreasonable for Senators to blame the House for this delay.

CBN cuts back to make up for drop in revenue

The Christian Broadcasting Network announced several measures designed to respond to a drop in revenue.

The cutbacks include reductions in the workforce, budget reductions in most major ministry areas, elimination of CBN's current toll free 800 number, and indefinite delay of planned for construction projects.

Attributing a major portion of the dramatic drop in CBN revenues to the spill over effect of guilt by association, Pat Robertson, Founder and Chief Executive Officer of CBN said, "The shock of the Jim and Tammy scandals has hit the evangelical world like a bombshell. We probably have the best financial controls and forecasters in the evangelical world, but how could we have planned for this?"

A recent Gallup poll indicates that 50% of all donors to all American evangelical radio and television broadcasts have stopped contributing. In May 1987, CBN provided a week of national broadcasts detailing financial information and followed up by making that same information available to all of its regular contributors as well as to the major national news media.

HOWEVER, falling revenues have necessitated an immediate $25 million budget reduction which includes a layoff of 500 regular, part-time, and on-call ministry personnel. This will reduce the world wide CBN regular and part time workforce from 2,104 to 1,634 and constitute a 22.3% reduction in force.

A great deal of satisfaction this session came from several of the amendments that I offered to other Senator's bills during debate, amendments that I felt were needed to make the legislation more in line with the needs of my constituents. The so called "Conway Amendment" to LB 775 was a good example. The amendment was originally accepted by the Governor and then ultimately removed from the bill after ConAgra resisted the change, but because of the debate other language that was not fair was also removed at my direction.

Legislature favored metro area

This was Omaha's year in the Nebraska Legislature.

The Omaha Chamber of Commerce and the urban business community were the not so hidden forces that helped create a new corporate and individual income tax system and provided a tax credit package that will provide qualifying large companies which invest in new equipment and create new jobs with 15 years of freedom from income and sales taxes.

LB 775, Gov. Kay Orr's tax credit measure was much debated in the Legislative chamber and much heralded by its supporters as the medicine needed to restore the state to economic health. But the benefits from LB 775, for the most part, will trickle down to the rest of us.

For rural Nebraska the Legislative pickings were slim.

LB 736 will allow development of small business development centers across the state.

LB 390 will hopefully expand the number of doctors available for rural communities. It allows the state Board of Examiners in Medicine and Surgery to waive two of the three years of residency required of doctors with degrees from foreign medical schools if the doctors will practice in a rural community.

LB 270, which expands tax credits for smaller businesses that expand, could help create new employment in non-urban areas.

LB 114, gave local communities some power over location of hazardous waste disposal sites in their counties.

MUCH OF THE attention paid to business, particularly urban business, was the result of power. The Omaha area alone has 14 senators, almost 30 percent of the state's 49 men and women who make Nebraska law. Another five senators are elected from the Lincoln area. Though these senators seldom vote as a block on issues, the needs of their particular constituents are different from the needs of residents in less populated areas.

Only eight senators live west of Kearney.

But the rural-urban split is not merely Omaha-Lincoln interests versus the rest of the state.

"There is a little city in all districts," says Scofield. On school district reorganization, for example, many senators have differing needs within their district, she said. They represent larger towns which might benefit from reorganization and very rural areas where reorganization is despised.

Part of the problem, according to Scofield, is ignorance.

"I have been appalled," she said, "by the ignorance and lack of understanding of geography."

PEOPLE HAVE said to Scofield, "Your part of the state is where there are lots of rattlesnakes and little animals that poke their heads out of holes in the ground."

"That's more Lamb's (Sen. Howard Lamb of Anselmo) district. I have pine trees."

Other senators have asked Scofield if she is going home for the weekend. "I want to answer, 'are you going to Chicago for the weekend?' At least you can fly there."

People will say they want to set up a meeting in the "middle of the state," Scofield says. "They set up the meeting in Kearney. That's 130 miles from Lincoln and 330 miles from Chadron."

When there are budget cuts, state agencies centralize, she said. "If you lose 100 employees in Lincoln, there are reductions in services. If you lose one person in Harrison, there is no service."

One of the basic issues that needs to be addressed, she says, is how do we deliver services in sparsely populated areas.

But there is one thing that all residents have in common, according to Scofield. "Everyone thinks they pay more in taxes than they get back."

In spite of this serious cutback, we are striving to continue with the thrust of CBN's ministry to people across our nation and around the world," Tim Robertson, president of CBN, said.

New efforts to meet needs include the launching of a new nationwide radio network which will provide a package of contemporary, Christian music, news, and special interactive version of "The 700 Club" television show. Still the cuts are painful. "In 25 years of ministry, I have never cried wolf, and I am not doing so now. The crisis is real and the need is urgent," Pat Robertson said.

OTHER MAJOR reductions will include curtailing 6 a.m. and weekend repeats of "The 700 Club" television show in some markets. This will not affect the live airing of the show on broadcast stations or cable systems. Although seminars and conferences now being conducted by CBN will continue to be provided, planned construction of an international seminar and conference center on the CBN grounds will be put on hold indefinitely.

Impact substantial

Timpte, Inc. provided a "state of the company" address to the city council members and audience on Tuesday night. And the results are certainly encouraging.

People have asked: Just what is the impact of Timpte, Inc. to the Wayne community and the greater area?

As the story on Timpte indicates, the industry is contributing largely to the economic vitality of this area. They are providing a substantial growth to the property tax rolls as evidenced by the $87,000 it pays for 1987.

The annual payroll is in the millions — $4.3 million to be exact. And the company pays $170,000 for Wayne utilities.

With the money it repays the city, from the $500,000 loan provided to the company by the city of Wayne in May of last year, more industry will benefit because the loan repayments will be redistributed to help other industry or business expand.

Economic impact? We feel that Timpte, as well as other industry in Wayne, contributes in a large scale to this area's economic development.

And the figures speak for themselves.

A glance back

THE WAYNE HERALD received these two photographs recently from Mrs. Kathleen J. Passer of Milton, Wisconsin. She writes: "While searching through old pictures, I came across these postcards. Thought perhaps someone in your town would like these. I was born in Wayne many years ago while my father was supervising the construction of your post office." In the top photo, a view of Wayne's Main Street looking north. And the lower photo shows the Hotel Stratton, now Geno's Steakhouse.

Population up

Alfalfa weevil arrives

One of the worst outbreaks of alfalfa weevils in more than 10 years is forcing Nebraska farmers to increase their insect-identification skills.

"Most people are familiar with worms, but not with pupae or adults," said University of Nebraska-Lincoln extension entomologist Steve Danielson. "People need to be educated about what they're looking for."

Speaking of the June 8 meeting of UNL's extension agricultural climate situation committee, Danielson said the incidence of alfalfa weevil may be higher now than at any time since 1975-76. Though weevil population may be cyclical, cool temperatures at the time of first cutting probably allowed the survival of more of the insects than normal.

"Larvae usually don't survive first cutting in hot, dry weather," Danielson said. Another factor could be that the insects were closer to adult stage than usual. Regardless of the cause, weevils are much more numerous this year. Many fields are not greening up because the insects are feeding on new growth.

Danielson said most farmers can identify weevil larvae, which are all green except for a light yellow stripe down the middle. Adult weevils, on the other hand, are tan with a dark brown stripe covering half the body and are about three-sixteenths of an inch long.

Another committee member, extension plant pathologist David Wysong, said lack of regrowth does not necessarily indicate insect problems. "Don't discount diseases," he warned. Anthracnose typically prevents alfalfa green-up. Disease symptoms include crown rot and diamond-shaped lesions on the green stem.

Public hearing set for rehab services

The Nebraska Division of Rehabilitation Services (DRS) announced a statewide public hearing schedule for their state plan to provide vocational rehabilitation services to people with severe handicaps.

Dennis Dunn, program Planning Administrator for the agency said this is the first time the DRS has actively solicited public comments for annual program planning. Dunn said the action results from recent changes in the federal rehabilitation act which now places a greater emphasis on meeting the specific needs of people who are severely disabled.

The state vocational rehab agency is asking for direct information from people with a disability about their needs, and particularly about the extent to which those needs are now met. "We hope to get constructive comments from the first line experts, the consumers, people who have experienced severe disabilities, on how to best serve their special needs in vocational rehabilitation," Dunn said.

The Division of Rehabilitation Services provides a variety of services to help the handicapped develop new job skills and find employment through its 10 office state-wide network. Dunn said, "Last year nearly 1900 Nebraskans with physical or mental disabilities were evaluated, trained and placed in jobs through the program. We're hoping the information gained through these public meetings will help us do and even better job while serving even more people in the future."

Public meetings are slated for June 15 through 17 in five Nebraska cities; Kearney, Lincoln, Norfolk, Omaha and Scottsbluff. Dunn said the agency is encouraging written comment from those unable to attend one of the public meetings. He said written comments received by the June 19 will be incorporated in the final state plan.

The Norfolk meeting is set for June 17, 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the community room of Commercial Federal.

The list below indicates dates, times, location and cities scheduled for public comment sessions:

Lincoln, June 15, 7 p.m. to 9 p.m., Conference Room, Division of Rehabilitation Services, 5143 South 48 Street; Omaha, June 16, 7 p.m. to 9 p.m., Conference Room F, 3rd Floor, Peter Klewli Conference Center, 1313 Farnam on the Mall; Scottsbluff, June 16, 7 p.m. to 9 p.m., Blue Stem Room, University of Nebraska Panhandle Extension Center, 4502 Avenue I, Kearney, June 17, 7 p.m. to 9 p.m., Conference Room, Division of Rehabilitation Services, 2916 West Highway 30; and Norfolk, June 17, 7 p.m. to 9 p.m., Community Room, Commercial Federal, 602 Norfolk Avenue.

Written comments are encouraged. These will be included in the final State Plan Supplement if they are received by June 19. Please send all written comments to: Administrator of Program Planning, Division of Rehabilitation Services, P.O. Box 94987, Lincoln, NE 68509

An anti-smoking group says that, even in persons of advanced age, there can be a dramatic improvement in health in just a short time after stopping smoking. Action on Smoking and Health (ASH) in Washington, D.C. says that those who quit cigarette smoking show remarkable health gains within days or weeks after they stop. Meantime, a Yale University study found that the death rate from coronary heart diseases among senior citizens is 75 percent higher for smokers than ex-smokers.

The day's activities began with teachers devotions and Pastor Fale's study.

Nursery through second graders were treated to a puppet show, Lucy Lamb and Judah Lion, presented by Darrin Wacker and Lisa Janke. They also viewed a "Nanny and Isaiah" video and music. Songs were led by Shawnette Janke, Lisa Janke and Heidi Hansen, accompanied on the piano by Connie Oberle.

One of the major activities for the week was a balloon launch held at noon on Friday from a hill on the north end of Winside.

All of the youngsters wrote or drew a personal message and a message of God's love on a card that was attached to 100 balloons.

At 1:20 p.m. on Friday afternoon, the church received a telephone call from a farm family that found one balloon 13 miles east of Laurel.

MEMBERS OF THE Winside High School band put on a performance at Worlds of Fun at Kansas City.

Performs at amusement park

Band has 'worlds of fun'

by Cindy Berg

On Friday, May 29, the Winside High School Band embarked on a three-day weekend to Kansas City, Missouri. The 44 band members, band director Curt Jeffries and his wife Coteen, boarded an Arrow Stage Line chartered bus at 10 a.m.

Four other sponsors, Mr. and Mrs. Don Leighton and Mr. and Mrs. Dale Topp followed in a car. Approximately five hours later, the band arrived at the KCI Airport Hotel, located near Worlds of Fun.

Friday night was spent "winding down" by enjoying the features of the hotel, such as the sauna, whirlpool, and indoor and outdoor swimming pool. Not a lot of sleep was acquired by anyone that evening. Saturday morning, a little before 9:00, the band loaded up the bus and headed for a busy day at Worlds of Fun. At 10 a.m. the band played several selections, ranging from "Louie, Louie" to "We Built This City." During the performance, Kim Damme did several twirling routines. The rest of the day was consumed by all of the attractions at the amusement park.

The daring souls eagerly stood in long lines to ride the Orient Express upside-down roller coaster, while others preferred tamer rides such as the log ride in Scandinavia Land. By 9:00 that evening, nearly everyone was ready to return to the hotel.

Sunday morning. The last day, and what a way to wrap-up the trip! The Winside Fine Arts Boosters furnished tickets to the Kansas City Royals vs. the Texas Rangers baseball game. The extra inning was exciting, but very disappointing to some when the Royals didn't win with a score of 2-3. On the way home, the band stopped at a restaurant near St. Joe; Missouri for supper and 50 exhausted bodies arrived in Winside at approximately 12:30 Monday morning.

The trip proved that the adventure never ends when you are part of a band!

In electrical bills

NPPD announces cut

Wholesale and retail electric customers of Nebraska Public Power District (NPPD) are going to be paying less for the electricity they use—due to an increase in the Production Cost Adjustment (PCA) credit on electric bills.

The increase in the credit will be effective with billings rendered on and after July 1, 1987. The credit is a result of a $4.1 million surplus accumulation in the PCA account which is to be returned to customers. The PCA account accumulates variations between estimated energy costs and actual energy costs. The $4.1 million surplus accumulation is the result of lower than anticipated fuel costs at Gerald Gentleman Station, the availability of Cooper Nuclear Station which displaced higher cost generation, increased production from hydro generating units and purchases of energy from other utilities at costs lower than originally anticipated.

The bills to NPPD's retail residential customers will go down approximately 1.0 percent, but will vary depending upon usage. A residential customer using 1,000 kilowatt-hours per month will pay 78 cents per month less on their electric bill. A total electric (electric heat and water heating) residential customer will see their electric bill go down $1.17 per month based on 1,500 kilowatt-hours.

Rates for wholesale customers vary because of differing demand and usage patterns but the additional PCA credit will result in an average bill decrease of 1.7 percent.

NPPD serves approximately 107,000 customers at retail and provides total wholesale requirements to 52 municipalities and 26 other public power districts and rural cooperatives. In total, the District's system serves approximately 760,000 people in 87 of Nebraska's 93 counties.

Medicaid funds requested for mental retardation

Governor Kay A. Orr announced that she has submitted an application to the Federal Department of Health and Human Services requesting approval for the use of federal Medicaid funds to provide home and community-based services for eligible persons with mental retardation.

Governor Orr said that she has been concerned about how to develop services for over 400 persons waiting for community-based mental retardation services. Use of the waiver will allow the State to serve all persons with mental retardation currently waiting for the specialized services provided by community-based programs without increasing the requirement for state or local tax support. The increase of federal support will provide for the creation of jobs across Nebraska to develop these community-based services.

There are also 347 persons currently served in privately owned nursing homes for persons with mental retardation. This Medicaid waiver application will allow for Medicaid funds to follow these persons if they would choose to transfer to community-based services.

To receive federal approval for a Medicaid waiver, the State must show that: (1) the person with mental retardation has a choice between a nursing home for persons with mental retardation and a community-based alternative, and (2) the State can develop less expensive community-based programs for the person to choose as an alternative service. This federal option is based on the assurance by Nebraska that the Medicaid budget will be less with a Medicaid waiver than without the waiver.

Without the Medicaid waiver, it is projected that the total number of persons choosing nursing home services will increase to 1,878 persons by June 30, 1990, compared to only 500 persons if a Medicaid waiver is approved. The difference of 1,378 persons will be served in low cost community-based services.

Based upon the potential saving or cost avoidance of $9.5 million by the Federal government, it is hoped that the Department of Health and Human Services will approve Nebraska's waiver application. Development of services to persons on the waiting list is dependent on Federal approval. The Federal government has from 90 to 180 days for review.

The Department of Social Services is also preparing a Medicaid Plan Amendment for case management services for persons with mental retardation. This will also allow for the use of Medicaid funds for community-based mental retardation services.

Governor Orr said that there was a growing list of persons waiting for mental retardation services. The inter-agency cooperation between the Departments of Public Institutions, Health, and Social Services, working with local public and private mental retardation service providers, shows that the State of Nebraska is forging ahead to provide all possible resources to develop services for persons with mental retardation.

Civil rights legislation will affect farmers, too

by Cheryl Stubbendieck
Nebraska Farm Bureau

Farmers might not think they would be affected by civil rights legislation pending in Congress, but if so they would be wrong. Legislation in both houses of Congress carries the potential to restrict and regulate farmers under civil rights law.

Understanding how this came about requires a look into recent history. In 1984, in a case titled "Grove City College vs. Bell," the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that Title IX of the 1972 education amendments to the Civil Rights Act applies only to a specific program in an educational institution, not the entire program or activity receiving federal funds. Thus the court said that if one program at a college practiced discrimination, only that program would be denied federal funds, not the entire college.

The court's decision was and is controversial. Civil rights groups and their congressional supporters — led by Massachusetts Sen. Ted Kennedy — said the decision "unduly narrowed" the previous institution-wide enforcement of the law, and cast doubt upon the broad application of other civil rights laws dealing with discrimination based on race, age or handicap.

Shortly after the decision, Kennedy and others introduced legislation which they said was intended to reverse the Grove City College decision and restore civil rights laws to what they had been before the Supreme Court decision.

HOWEVER, those bills go much further than that, and it's here that farmers and ranchers begin to be involved. The bills broaden other anti-discrimination laws to cover both direct and indirect federal assistance, including ultimate beneficiaries of a federal aid program. And that means farmers who participate in price support programs and other USDA assistance programs.

Farm Bureau doesn't normally get involved in civil rights legislation, but the "restoration" bills, if enacted, would have a direct effect on farmers. For farmers, this would mean more federal paperwork requirements and random, on-site compliance inspections by federal agencies. These inspections could be made without an allegation of discrimination. In addition, farmers would be subject to lengthy and complicated regulation. As with other pending legislation, this would increase their exposure to costly private lawsuits.

IT WOULD seem a simple matter to exempt farmers from the discrimination provisions, but it's not. Other interest groups are involved in other provisions of the restoration legislation, including groups on all sides of the abortion issue.

During the last Congress, Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas introduced a different bill which simply reversed the Grove City College decision, without all the other stuff attached. A similar bill has been introduced this session in the House of Representatives.

It might be easy to dismiss the threat posed to farmers by the restoration legislation. Proponents might argue that if farmers do not practice discrimination, they have nothing to worry about. But, the proposal must be viewed for what it is: an attempt to greatly broaden and extend federal authority in private business.

LOWER ELKHORN NATURAL RESOURCES DISTRICT

NEW OFFICE LOCATION

The Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District will move its headquarters office to 700 West Benjamin Avenue - Country Club Plaza in the north central area of Norfolk. The office was located on South Highway 81 since 1972. The move will be completed in the near future and the Lower Elkhorn NRD Board of Directors and Staff invite you to stop in and look over the new facilities. The Lower Elkhorn NRD telephone number will remain the same, 402-371-7313.

The Nebraska Department of Water Resources (DWR) will also move with the NRD staff and will remain closely associated with the Lower Elkhorn NRD. DWR has a two member staff that is responsible for water rights administration, flood plain management, stream gaging, stream measuring and dam inspections in Northeast Nebraska. The Department of Water Resources telephone number will remain the same, 402-379-2730. The University of Nebraska-Lincoln, Conservation and Survey also has a Research Hydrogeologist (groundwater specialist) assigned to Northeast Nebraska and is associated with the Lower Elkhorn NRD sharing offices. The telephone number of UNL Conservation & Survey, 402-371-6512, will remain the same.

EXTENSIVE RIVER BANK EROSION

There has been a lot of coffee shop talk this spring concerning river bank erosion. Some suggest that bank erosion on the Elkhorn River has been particularly more severe this year during high spring flows.

Hydrologic data obtained from the U.S. Geological Survey and Nebraska Department of Water Resources may support this contention. Gaging stations on the Elkhorn River show significant flooding events occurred on the Elkhorn River this spring. The River stage at Neligh on March 19 is considered a 40 year flood. The amount of water measured on March 19 at the Neligh Gage of 14,500 cubic feet per second is the maximum discharge for 54 years of record at the site.

The South Fork of the Elkhorn River at Ewing Gage recorded what is considered a 100 year flood. On March 18, 6700 cubic feet per second was measured at this site. This stage is the maximum ever recorded for 27 years of record at this site.

The severity of the Erosion on the Elkhorn River appears to have been compounded by the long duration of the high flows. While there were high stages during the latter part of March, a second peak of high flows occurred on the Elkhorn River in the first week of April resulting from a snow melt on the Upper Elkhorn Basin. This unusual event of double peak high flows on the Elkhorn River took its toll causing extensive bank erosion. Hopefully some of these floods will not recur for the 40 to 100 years as the Hydrologic Analyst's predict in their mathematical computation.

William H. Birkel, Division Engineer, Nebraska Dept. of Water Resources.

WHAT ARE TREES WORTH?

Are trees and woodlands worth managing? This is a question landowners often ask when deciding what to do with their woodlands.

An exact dollar value is difficult to determine for many subjective woodland benefits, e.g. wildlife habitat, recreation, watershed protection and beauty. However, a dollar value can be placed on timber products. For example, assuming proper forest management on good sites, a landowner can expect the following average return on common timber species (based on current market value) in Nebraska:

Black Walnut = $15,000-$25,000 per acre in 45-50 years

Cottonwood = $200-$300 per acre in 35-40 years
Bur Oak, Silver Maple, Hackberry, Ash = $500-$1000 per acre in 50-60 years
Red Oak = $1000-$2000 per acre in 60-80 years

The demand for fine hardwood timber is expected to double by the year 2030. Therefore, the above figures may be understated. Planting and managing trees for timber products may be the best alternative, especially in inaccessible areas, odd corners, or on marginal land that is producing minimal or no return.

PUMP CHECK CAN REDUCE IRRIGATION COST

Crop producers continually search for methods to save energy when irrigating. Using less energy to pump irrigation water means lower costs to produce the crop. This will improve the profitability of the irrigation enterprise.

Energy can be saved by improving irrigation pumping plant performance or by pumping less water. Pumping less water means that both water and energy are conserved.

The first step in becoming energy efficient is to be sure that the pumping plant is properly designed. The pump and the power unit must be sized to match the required discharge pressure from the pumping plant. A performance test will indicate if an existing pumping plant is operating at its peak efficiency. The test will give a rating that can be compared to Nebraska performance criteria — criteria that were developed to represent properly designed and maintained pumping plants throughout the state have indicated that the average pumping plant operates at between 75% to 80% of Nebraska performance criteria. This means that pumping plant performance can range from relatively low cost items to replacement. The cause of poor performance will determine what is necessary to improve it. Performance may be improved by adjusting the pump or turning up internal combustion engines. Just before the irrigation season is an excellent time to have a performance test made to find ways to reduce irrigation energy use.

The second consideration to becoming energy efficient is to use the lowest possible discharge pressure from the pumping plant. Many sprinkler systems now use relatively low discharge pressures — 30 to 40 psi (pounds per square inch) as compared to 70 psi. The higher the pressure the more energy that will be required. It may be possible to convert high pressure systems to lower pressures or lower, the application rate is normally increased and runoff problems may result. It is important to match the sprinkler package with the soils and topography of the field that is being irrigated.

The third way to save energy is to use effective irrigation management. Good irrigation management also conserves water. The goal should be to meet the water needs of the crop as required to meet the irrigator's production objectives.

Management includes scheduling along with operation of the irrigation system to uniformly distribute the water.

CHECK YOUR CEDAR WINDBREAK

Eastern Redcedar is the "backbone" of many windbreaks in Northeast Nebraska. Disease problems with redcedar have occurred in several windbreaks. Unfortunately, if the disease problem is not controlled, many trees will die or be so damaged as to be ineffective.

The most damaging disease problem on redcedar and other junipers is Carospora Needle Blight. Severe infections over three or more years can result in tree mortality.

SYMPTOMS:

Carospora blight can usually be distinguished from other juniper diseases by the pattern of foliage infection and death. Typically, the other foliage in the lower and inner portions of the inner tree crown are usually infected first. Affected branches will often fall from the tree during October and November. The disease progresses slowly from the interior of the tree crown outward, and from the lower branches to the younger, higher branches. Severely infected trees may have only a small tuft of green foliage on the branch tips.

INITIAL INFECTION OCCURS DURING LATE JUNE AND EARLY JULY. Infected leaves first turn brown at the leaf tips, then gradually become completely brown. Smaller shoots and branches of the inner tree crown are usually infected first. Affected branches will often fall from the tree during October and November. The disease progresses slowly from the interior of the tree crown outward, and from the lower branches to the younger, higher branches. Severely infected trees may have only a small tuft of green foliage on the branch tips.

CONTROL:

Applications of Bordeaux mixture (a lbs. hydrated lime/4 lbs. copper sulfate/50 gal. water) or a liquid copper fungicide, such as Tenapog or Fungox, effectively control the disease. At least two applications are necessary for best control.

The first fungicide treatment should be applied during the first half of June, just prior to the initial infection period. The second treatment should be applied during the last half of July. The second application normally gives good protection against infection for the remainder of the season. However, additional applications may be necessary during periods of frequent rains. Rain favors disease development as well as reduces fungicide longevity.
