At A Glance

Fantasticks

Wayne State College Theatre Department will be presenting Tom Jones' and Harvey Schmidt's "The Fantasticks", in Ley Theatre on Friday, June 26 at 8 p.m. and Saturday, June 27 at 8 p.m.

General admission is $3 and W.S.C. students are admitted free with identification. For further information, call or write: Wayne State Theatre Department, Wayne, Nebraska 68787, 375-2200 extension 354.

Give a cheer

The 12th annual International Cheerleading Foundation cheerleading clinic will take place at Wayne State College July 12-15.

The four-day, three-night clinic is for senior and junior high cheerleaders wishing to learn or improve their cheers, chants and jumps. Instruction is by members of the ICF, all of whom are college and university varsity cheerleaders.

The cost of the clinic is $102.50 for those staying on campus, and $58 for commuters. Cheerleading sponsors may attend and stay on campus for $82.50.

For more information, contact the Wayne State Student Activities Office at 402/375-2200, extension 322.

No quake here

Furniture didn't scoot across the floor, dishes didn't rattle and mirrors didn't break in Nebraska when an earthquake shook 14 states at 7 p.m. on Wednesday, June 10.

The moderate earthquake was centered in Southern Illinois and was felt at the Ak-Sar-Ben horse racing stadium in Omaha and nearby Bellevue.

The last earthquake in Nebraska occurred Jan. 1 and was centered at Crawford, measuring 3 to 3.5 on the Richter scale.

Since 1867, 113 earthquakes had epicenters — where most quakes are normally centered — in Nebraska. Forty-three were felt by Nebraskans, and the remaining were detected only by instruments.

Keeping cool

The Nebraska Department of Social Service announced there is funding available to help eligible Nebraska households pay their cooling bills this summer.

Households are eligible if: the household's income and resources are within the program guidelines; they are responsible for paying their cooling bills; and a member of the household is 70 years of age or older or has a medical condition or illness that requires a cooling facility.

Automatic payments will be made, by June 12 of this year, to households where the head is 70 years of age or older and received heating assistance last winter.

Apply by Aug. 31 to the local Department of Social Services offices if automatic payment is not available.

A childhood dream

Circus draws over 3,000 people

By Chuck Hackenmilller
Managing Editor

The Carson & Barnes Circus performed before capacity crowds in both shows on Thursday — displaying thrills, spills and laughs to the audiences in the afternoon and evening performances.

Temperatures were in the 90's for the first showing on Thursday afternoon at 2 p.m., (seemingly hotter inside the largest big top on earth), but that didn't stop the circus personnel from their daring and brave acts within the five rings in the circus tent.

Wayne Kiwanis Club, which sponsored the extravaganza, estimated the total attendance of both shows at over 3,600 people. Approximately 1,624 circus admittance tickets were sold to children and up to 2,010 tickets had been sold to adults.

Ken Holehouse, public relations director with the Carson & Barnes Circus, has no complaints about the attendance in Wayne. "The last weeks we've had very good business. The turnout has been well for us," Holehouse said.

CURRENTLY, THE CIRCUS staff numbers approximately 200 people. But another important part of the show is the wide variety of animals which the circus provides for viewing and performing. There are 23 elephants, 30 horses and ponies, nine lions and tigers, two camels and one llama, rhinoceros, hippotamus, snakes and tarantula.

Holehouse, who at one time was an language-arts instructor at a school in Illinois, said the circus travels 250 days out of the year. "It's been a blast, going to different towns every day," he said.

"You really have to like to travel. This is the twelfth week and we have already put on over 6,000 miles," he mentioned.

The biggest circus big top in the world that is basically "rain proof and wind proof", he said, can seal up to 3,000 people per show. It takes approximately two hours to set up the big top, according to Holehouse, and much less time to pack it up and prepare it for the next trip.

Board approves process of WSC president search

Nebraska State College Board of Trustees approved a process for search and selection of a new president for Wayne State College Friday. The board met on the Wayne State campus.

No time table was established for the search. Basically, the same format will be used as in past presidential searches. A board task force will be named along with an area committee. That committee will be comprised of Wayne State faculty, students, administrators, support staff, alumni and foundation as well as local and regional representatives.

The local committee will be charged with identifying issues facing the college and formulating a desired profile of the candidates. The position will be advertised in appropriate publications with a deadline established as to how long applications will be received. Following the deadline, the board task force and the committee will review the applications and select a limited number of applicants for further review by the two groups. Eventually, a few finalists will be invited to be interviewed by the board and committee. Final action will be for the board task force to visit the final candidate(s) for further investigation and make a recommendation to the entire board.

"WE HAVE NOT set up a time table as yet," board chairman Tom Morrissey, Tecumseh, said Friday. "We want to be sure that the local committee will have ample time to examine all facets of the candidates including the interview process. Therefore, we will be quite judicious about setting a time table that allows everyone's input."

That schedule will probably be announced at next month's meeting in Chadron, Morrissey indicated.

In other action, the board voted 3-2 to "endorse the concept of a change in the name of the State College system and its constituent campuses to a State University system." The motion was made by Jean Lovell of Gering, chairman of the board's personnel and policy subcommittee. Voting "no" were new trustees Gret-

Pac-N-Save supermarket will be coming to Wayne

By Chuck Hackenmilller
Managing Editor

The Russell Endicott family of Seward, Nebraska has finalized a lease agreement with Roy Coryell of Wayne to convert the former Chevrolet and Oldsmobile dealership in Wayne to a "Pac-N-Save Discount Supermarket."

It will be located at 1107 West 7th Street (Highway 35) on the west edge of Wayne.

Renovation of the 20,000 square foot building will begin immediately. The projected grand opening is slated for the middle of September or the first of October.

Pac-N-Save will be Wayne's first full-line warehouse supermarket. It will be Endicott's second Pac-N-Save Supermarket. Their other location is in Seward.

United A.G. Cooperative of Omaha will serve as the supplier for the supermarket, supplying Nebraskans with the opportunity to stay within the state workforce.

ACCORDING to a news release from United A.G. Cooperative officials, personal commitment of pride and consumer need within the community has led the Endicott family to consider the Wayne location.

Don Endicott, along with his brother, Rick, and brother-in-law, Ted Baack, will move with their families to Wayne.

The news release mentioned that the supermarket will feature fresh and choice product availability in the perishable departments of meat and produce, complemented with a large variety of consumer brands available in the grocery, dairy and frozen categories.

The product availability line will be further supported with health and beauty aids, non-foods, a deli department and front-end, fast-paced scanner checkouts.

WAYNE'S Pac-N-Save will afford nearly 35 new employment opportunities for local residents.

The new supermarket will feature the Shurfline, Shurfresh, and Price Save label products.

Pac-N-Save offers to the town, in which they are located, a strength in

BRAN bicycle riders get a taste of Wayne

By Chuck Hackenmilller
Managing Editor

As the BRAN (Bicycle Ride Across Nebraska) pedaled their way into Wayne on Thursday, most of them were in good spirits.

After all, the storms stayed away and the wind velocity was low. Temperatures soared into the 90's in the afternoon. By that time, most of the bicyclists had made their camp on the Wayne State College campus.

The 550 plus cyclists began their ride on Sunday in Alliance. By the time they reached Wayne, the bicycle riders had traveled nearly 375 miles over all sorts of highways.

The Neligh to Wayne leg of the BRAN trip, which was the fifth day of the seven day trip, covered 72 miles. BRAN riders left Neligh north on Highway 70 for 15.5 miles, traveled east on Highway 20 to Plainview, southeast on Highway 13 through the Foster and Pierce, and on into Wayne from Highways 98 and 35.

Area riders on the BRAN trip included Breck Giese (who pedaled in to Wayne between 10 a.m. and 11 p.m.), Dr. Jim Lindau, Joan Brogie, Jed O'Leary, Michael Freeman, Dave Curley and John and Jeff Struve.

Giese said the trip to Wayne had been the best day for biking. Prior to the Neligh-Wayne destination, the bicyclists had encountered rough wind and rainy weather.

While camping out at the Willow Bowl, many of the tent sites strung a line from tree to tree so they could dry some of the clothing which was soaked from the expedition. Repairs of bicycles were more common in BRAN 7, said a member of the repair vehicle, than in any of the other rides. The repairman said at least 10 bikes daily have had to be fixed or adjusted, primarily because of the road conditions on the BRAN trip.

BOY SCOUTS and Girl Scouts assisted in guiding the bicyclists through Wayne and passing out information about Wayne. The riders were given tours of the community on hay wagons, with tractors to pull the wagons donated by Wayne implement dealers.

At 4:30 a.m. Friday, members of the Wayne Educational Office Personnel Association served breakfast to the riders at the Sav-Mor parking lot.

On Friday, the riders pedal south and southeast from Wayne to Tekamah, a 62.7 mile journey. The last day of the ride, which is the shortest leg covering 39.2 miles, takes the BRAN 7 riders from Tekamah to Fort Omaha.

APPROXIMATELY 75 support people followed the bicycle riders across Nebraska. Some carried the 400 or more tents and the great many more sleeping bags in accompanying vehicles.

BRAN 7 is sponsored by the Northwest Omaha Rotary Club and the Omaha Pedalers Bicycle Club. It began in 1981 with 68 riders and it started in Fremont and went west to Scottsbluff.

This year's BRAN ride covers 475 miles. The longest ride of BRAN was the fifth year of the event, which covered 549 miles.

A BRAN RIDER takes a relaxing moment to capture a few hours of sleep at his campsite at the Willow Bowl in Wayne. A vote taken by the bicyclists shows that Wayne was the top spot to visit along the 475 mile BRAN ride, according to Wayne BRAN participant John Struve. The bike riders reached Fort Omaha early Saturday morning, ending the seven day trip. More photos will appear in Thursday's edition of The Wayne Herald.

Clowns in town

so, things should be down by 11:20 or 11:30," he said.

THE WORKERS ARE awakened at 5 a.m. the next day by a horn blast of a diesel truck as it travels around the circus grounds.

What makes the Carson & Barnes Circus, which claims it is the biggest circus in the United States to do one day stands, so popular?

"We aim to be clean family entertainment and run a good show," Holehouse said.

Are there any particular favorites which the audience enjoys watching?
"People seem to like the entire show," he answered.

Most of the performers keep busy in the morning setting up their props for the 2 p.m. show. "A lot are practicing their acts after the afternoon show," Holehouse added.

Most of the acts stay the same as when the season started, although the trapeze act is working on new stuff for this year, he said.

Elephants are used to help erect the big top, but they even are more impressive in a ring. Holehouse said that elephants range in price from $50,000 to $100,000.

HOLEHOUSE SAID the Carson & Barnes inventory of animals is well into the millions as far as dollar value or worth is concerned.

Small towns and communities the size of Wayne are places where Carson & Barnes like to perform. Largely populated cities "just have too much competition," he said. "There is just too many other things going on."

The owner of the circus is D.R. Miller, who has been in the business for 50 years. He knows beforehand, through his ample experience, about whether or not a circus will succeed in a community.

"He does it better than anybody in the whole world," said Holehouse.

The Carson & Barnes Circus, which performs seven days a week, left Wayne early Friday morning to its destination in Onawa, Iowa.

Wayne Kiwanis member Pat Gross, who rode an elephant as did Lyle George, Mayor Wayne Marsh, Phil Koster, Swan Johnson and several others during the circus parade, complimented the circus operation. "They were very professional, clean, and also very well organized," Gross said.

The circus also had some kind words to say about the Wayne community and the service which was provided to them.

Gil Haase, administrator of the Wayne Care Centre, appeared in both shows with the Carson & Barnes clowns, and Mark Ahman spent the opening moments as ringleader.

For many children, and adults, the day the circus came to Wayne will be something to remember for a long time.

chen Hirschbach, South Sioux City, and Keith Blackledge, North Platte. Favoring the motion were Lovell, Morrissey and Pete Kotsiopoulos of Kearney. Trustees Joe Lutjeharms of Lincoln and Celann La Greca, Omaha, were absent.

THE NAME CHANGE issue has been before the board since December. Kearney State President William Nester initiated the discussion and study in behalf of Kearney State at the request of Kearney faculty and student senates.

Both Hirschbach and Blackledge stated that the term "endorse" seemed too strong and indicated that the board was committing to the name change. Morrissey concurred that the motion was the "first step" in changing the names of the State Colleges to State Universities. However, Lovell said she intended that the motion clarify the issue that all colleges — the system — should undergo the change to university status and not just Kearney.

The motion further states that "the board will continue dialogue and discussion and seek consultation with other publics with an interest in this issue..." Final authority on a name change would rest with the Nebraska legislature.

THE BOARD also:

•Set the salary of interim Wayne State President Dr. Joe Fleck at $60,000 annually plus $8,000 annual housing allowance;

•Authorized 3 percent salary increases for the other presidents and raised their housing allowances to $10,000;

•Approved tuition increases from $31.50 per student credit hour to $33 for undergraduate students and from $33 to $35 for graduate students. Non-residents will be charged $54, up from $52, as undergraduates and graduate students will pay $56, instead of $54 currently.

•Distributed $120,000 funded by the legislature for "merit, performance or marketplace (salary) adjustments as follows: Chadron, $15,276; Kearney, $74,064; Peru, $13,680; and Wayne, $16,980.

•And elected Kotsiopoulos board president and Lyle Ginn as vice president.

'Hacken' Away

by Chuck
Hackenmiller

Classroom bullies — what school doesn't have them? When I was attending elementary school, there was a kid about three years older than me.

Now kid was a rather heavy set, broad-shouldered individual who took no guff from anyone. To the students in grades under him, he was a person to avoid in the school hallways or playgrounds.

But if you did happen to cross his path, the thing to do was to analyze his facial expressions. By looking at his face, I could tell if he was in a teasing mood, or in a mood to level my head off.

Because of his tough physical stature and because nobody wanted to be on the bad side of him, he would always have people following him around — usually classmates who enjoyed watching the younger kids being put into difficult situations.

I had seen him, after losing an intramural basketball game, take his fist and put a substantial dent in a steel locker at the school. Last time I was at that school, that dented locker was still present.

But the guy did have a heart, I found out.

One time he confronted me (with his group of friends) and said he wanted to fight me. He humiliated me before my friends, ordering me around like a pet, and then making me shed a tear or two when it came time for me to "put up my dukes" against the bully.

Naturally I was scared out of my wits.

THIS SAME guy that put his fist through steel was about to give me two permanent black eyes.

Then, he backed off — and ordered a younger student to fight me.

He laughed. Maybe that's why I felt bad about the whole incident the next day. Here I had a chance to stand up to the bully and make my feelings known (although knowing I might not be able to remember what had happened after regaining consciousness), but he sends in a substitute to do his dirty work for him.

A news release from the National School Safety Center in Encino, California, says (as taken from a study produced by Harvard University) that one in seven students across the world are either bullies or victims of bullies, and that one in 10 students will be victimized by bullies.

TO SOLVE THE bullying victimization phenomenon, five key issues which must be acknowledged are: that schoolyard bullying is a significant problem; that fear and emotional physical suffering is becoming a way of life for bullying victims; that young bullies are more likely to grow up and become criminals and suffer from family and professional problems; that the prevailing attitude that kids fighting each other are just experiencing normal youthful aggressive behavior must be discarded; and that the United States should follow the lead of Japan and Scandinavia whose governments have addressed their bullying problems with national intervention and prevention programs.

School districts have to be careful about lawsuits when it comes to bullies. Lawsuits have been filed against school districts and administrators, by bullying victims, who claim they were denied the right to attend a safe, secure and peaceful campus.

You see, fear becomes a way of life for bullying victims. Children routinely avoid areas on campuses where bullies hang out — such as bathrooms or other places on school grounds that are considered "unsafe turf."

It's been hard to forget about the opportunity I had to face up to the guy, and never did. I even with the pain the next day, I'd have felt a whole lot better.

National Weather Service planning for tornado emergencies

Tornadoes are among nature's most violent storms, warns the National Weather Service. They can topple buildings, roll mobile homes, uproot trees, hurl heavy objects through the air for hundreds of yards (even miles), and fill the air with lethal, windborne debris. In seconds, a thriving community can be reduced to rubble. The key to surviving such a devastating disaster is advanced planning, advises AAA of Nebraska.

Households, businesses and schools should devise safety plans to follow when severe weather strikes, and should conduct drills to practice these plans. Everyone should also know how to find the safest areas in a home, office or any other public building, plus understand safety precautions to follow during any adverse weather conditions.

Eastern Nebraska and western Iowa are in the northern part of what meteorologists call "Tornado Alley," an area of intense activity extending from northern Texas into Nebraska and Iowa. In an average year, more than half of the tornadoes that develop over the continental U.S. hopscotch across the Midwest.

It is impossible to predict exactly when or where a tornado will touch ground. Although most tornadoes occur between April and September, during the mid afternoon or early evening (3-7 p.m.), they can develop at any time; often with little or no warning. Funnel clouds are most often associated with unseasonably warm and humid conditions, while large hail is often a warning a twister is approaching, says the Cornhusker Motor Club.

THE NATIONAL Weather Service issues a "Tornado Watch" whenever the conditions are right for the development of a tornado. If a watch is issued, monitor the television or radio, stay alert, watch for funnels and listen for roaring noises, which are signs of an approaching tornado. "Tornado Warnings" go out only after a tornado actually has been sighted or indicated on radar. Take cover immediately following a warning. Most cities and towns affected by a tornado warning will sound their sirens until the danger is past.

The latest findings have shown the southwest corner of a building or basement isn't safer than any other. Experts advise to stay well away from exterior walls entirely, cornered or uncornered. It was once thought opening a window helped minimize damage, but is no longer recommended. Furthermore, opening the wrong window can actually increase damage. AAA of Nebraska offers the following tornado-survival advice:

— IN HOMES: Go to the basement (interior room if possible), or storm cellar if available, and crawl under a piece of furniture. If no basement is available, put as many walls between you and the outside as possible. Get into a closet, interior room, interior hall or under heavy furniture. Stay away from doors, windows and outside walls. Protect your head with blankets, pillows or a mattress. Climbing into the bathtub or an interior bathroom and covering your head with a mattress is also an alternative. In many homes, a stairwell makes a good shelter area. As a last resort, crawl under a bed and use a mattress as a barricade against shattering windows in the room. Take a flashlight and a battery-operated radio and tune into a station with weather coverage.

— In high-rise buildings, it may not be practical for everyone to reach the lower floors, but the occupants should move as far down as possible and take shelter in interior small rooms or interior stairwells.

— In schools, offices or other public buildings: Move quickly to the designated shelter, and apply the same rules of safety as you would at home. Follow the advice of store personnel. Do not seek shelter in auditoriums, gymnasiums or other structures with wide, free-span roofs.

Never attempt to reach parked vehicles.

— Outside: Move immediately to the nearest shelter. If none is available, lie face down in the nearest ditch, depression or culvert, covering your head with your arms.

— IN A CAR or other vehicle: Get out! Never attempt to outrun a tornado. Pull to the side of the road immediately, and seek shelter in the nearest building. If none are nearby, take refuge in a ditch or culvert.

— In mobile homes: Abandon immediately. If there is no reinforced building or underground shelter nearby, take cover in a ditch or depression.

Other tornado safety measures suggested by AAA of Nebraska include:

— Don't use a telephone during a tornado warning. More valid, up-to-date information can be obtained from a radio or television. Besides, overloaded lines might prevent emergency messages from getting through.

— Don't go outside looking for the funnel when a tornado warning is effective.

— Don't panic. Families and businesses should develop plans for all emergencies, and conduct drills so everyone knows what to do when severe weather threatens.

— Don't touch fallen or exposed wires. Report them to the local electric power company.

ALWAYS STAY informed about approaching storm systems. If a tornado or funnel cloud is spotted, report it immediately to a local government agency or law enforcement agency and ask them to relay your report to the National Weather Service. Persons may also call the Nebraska State Patrol Highway Help Line, 1-800-525-5555, to report such emergencies.

Businesses needing assistance in establishing a "tornado emergency plan" are encouraged to contact the county Civil Defense Bureau.

Ask A Lawyer

A public service of the Nebraska State Bar Association

Q. Our neighbor has a tall elm tree that is dying. If it falls, it could do a lot of damage to my home and car. Can any legal action be taken to require him to remove the tree before something happens?

A. If the tree is on private property, you may be able to take legal action to require your neighbor to remove it, if you can convince a court that the tree constitutes a nuisance. In the broadest sense, a nuisance can be anything that interferes with another's enjoyment of his or her own property. If a court determines that the tree is indeed a nuisance, it can order the landowner to remove the nuisance or face misdemeanor charges.

If the tree is on city property or other public right-of-way, contact the city forester city attorney or local governing body to determine what their procedure is for dealing with this problem.

Q. If two names are inscribed on a certificate of deposit, does the first named person have any advantage over the second person listed? If so, what and why?

A. No. Naming more than one person on a certificate of deposit does not give the first-named person any advantage over the others.

If you have a legal question, write "Ask a Lawyer," P.O. Box 2529, Lincoln 68502. This column is intended to provide general legal information, not specific legal advice. "Ask a Lawyer" is a public service of the Nebraska State Bar Association.

Letters

"Good-Bye Dean!!!!!!"

Dear Dean Jacobs:
As you have stated "where do I begin?" Along with the community of Wayne and Wayne State College, I would like to say, with warmest regrets—"Good-bye Dean!" You will be missed, but never forgotten! It's hard to believe one person could do all the things that you did while in Wayne. There isn't enough space here to list them all, so in order to keep this short and sweet—"Good-bye Dean, we'll all miss you!!!!"

Out Of Old Nebraska

Recently the Lincoln Journal reported that Nebraska ranks fifth in the nation for tornadoes, and that it is a myth that Lincoln is immune. There is an old legend that Indians fled to this area for safety when threatened by violent weather; there is another old legend that long ago the first Catholic bishop of Lincoln, Bishop Thomas Bonacum, blessed Lincoln to keep it safe from tornadoes.

Until a fateful night in 1928, old timers had long held that McCook, Nebraska was "tornado-proof," possibly because of its geographical location or the local climatic conditions.

On Monday, June 11, 1928 at 8:15 p.m., however, an "inky, whirling cloud shot down out of the southwest on McCook like a demon and cut a million dollar swath of ruin."

In describing the storm, the McCook Daily Gazette said that there was little doubt that the McCook tornado was "as violent as strikes anywhere in the United States."

The Gazette, on microfilm at the Nebraska State Historical Society, reported that "houses crumbled, trees were uprooted, telephone and light lines were whipped about the street like snakes, automobiles were sent rolling across streets and vacant lots like toys..."

"Bark was peeled from trees which were left standing," according to the newspaper, "grass was pulled up by the roots, straw, feather and other fragile objects were driven into pine boards...heavy timbers were driven like arrows through house walls."

Heavy concrete blocks sailed through the air like paper, torn from foundations.

The tornado was visible to the southwest of McCook before it struck.

There were no sirens to warn the people of the impending danger, but in 1928 there were telephones. Minutes before the tornado struck, "the telephone exchange was swamped with calls from dozens of frenzied subscribers who sought to warn friends or relatives."

Knowing that his five children were home alone, Burlington dispatcher R.V. Cadman phoned to urge his children to go to the basement. The home was demolished, but the children escaped serious injury.

An injured mother was unable to tell what had happened to her baby before she was taken to the hospital. An hour or so after the storm, search was made the weekend infant in the coal bin in the basement of the ruined home. The baby was wrapped in a blanket and had been covered with a pillow for protection against the falling debris.

Though there were numerous injuries, there were no deaths. There were many close calls. In one home there was a rejoicing even though the roof of the house was off, the front caved in, and the interior torn to pieces. Though bricks had fallen all around the baby in her bed, she was unharmed.

The day after the tornado was bright with June sunshine. The talk was of rebuilding—over 100 homes were destroyed and more than 40 were damaged.

Bank president P. Walsh said, "I have lived in this community for 45 years...we will demonstrate to the outside world the kind of stuff from which we are made."

And yet, even today my husband stands and studies the sky when it looks threatening...because even though he was very small, he still remembers being in the McCook tornado.

Friends and relatives of both couples are invited to attend. The families request no gifts.

News and Notes

by Mary Temme, Extension Agent-Home Ec.

Consider house design when repainting

Are you planning to paint the exterior of your home in the near future? Will you use the same color or are you ready for a change?

A new color scheme can spruce up the home, emphasize its architectural style and increase its appeal.

Take some time to plan the color scheme carefully. Think about the different exterior features of the home, its size and shape, its architectural style, its historic significance, the other homes in the neighborhood, surrounding out-buildings, and even the climate.

Also, consider your personal preference. Do you want a conservative or restful color scheme? Or do you want a bold, bright or unique color scheme?

START WITH the colors that are given. What is the color of the roof, a fence, or the unpainted elements, such as masonry walls or stone chimneys. The color scheme you choose must include these features.

Historic or traditional architecture can also suggest color schemes. For example, Victorian styles, such as Queen Anne, use multi-color schemes designed to highlight the diverse architectural elements. Colonial styles, such as Georgian, are commonly white or use restrained color schemes. A neighborhood with historic homes may even have restrictive covenants that designate appropriate colors and color schemes.

What architectural elements do you want to emphasize or minimize? Increasing the contrast between the main color and the trim color will emphasize details. Only a few details painted in contrasting colors will make those elements more distinct.

WHAT ABOUT climate and landscape features? How will the color scheme look in summer, surrounded by foliage? Compare that to the look in winter, with bare trees and brown lawns, or with snow cover.

Look around the neighborhood. What are common color schemes? Do you want to make your home blend with the neighborhood? A neighborhood with homes of a similar architectural style can gain elegance by the use of complementary color schemes.

Or, the appeal of your neighborhood may be the diversity of style. You may want to choose a color scheme to make your home distinctive.

Give your home's color scheme some careful thought. Try out the color scheme, using tracing paper over a photograph of your home or with a sketch of the house.

A quality paint job can last 10 or more years. So you will want a color scheme that is appealing.

SUMMER PROGRAM

The Winside Public Library kicked off its summer reading program Monday with a circus parade. Approximately 65 youngsters participated from pre-schoolers on up. They brought their wagons, doll buggies and various other carriages some literally filled with stuffed animals. From the library they paraded to the city park where they circled the shelter for judging.

Brian Deck received a special gift for having the biggest animal, a lion that completely covered his wagon. Bethani Fale had the smallest while Joe Schwedhelm had the most ferocious. Nichole and Sara Wagner held the most loved animal while Amanda Deck had the most colorful and Benji, Bob and Tom Wittler along with Audrey and Amber Potts had the most unusual animals. All of the children were treated to Samoa sandwiches by the Winside Library Board. After a playtime in the park, they headed back to the library for books and some contests. Theme for this year's program is "The Greatest Show of All." The library summer program is open to all youngsters and is held each Monday evening through Aug. 10 at 7 p.m.

BIBLE SCHOOL

Trinity Lutheran Church and United Methodist Church of Winside combined their resources for the June 1-5 Vacation Bible School for children.

Theme for the week was "Jesus is King." Forty-six youngsters participated in the Bible studies, craft projects, video tapes and daily singing. They were served cookies and kool-aid daily. Classes were held from 9 a.m. until noon.

On Friday evening, June 5, they presented a musical program to their families and friends. Jennifer Jacobsen accompanied the youth on the piano. Refreshments were served afterwards.

Mrs. JoAnn Field and Mrs. Donna Jacobson were co-superintendents for the week. Teachers and their helpers included nursery — Janni Topp, Kristy Miller and Angie Thompson; kindergarten #1 — Cathy Dalton, Tammi Hartmann and Brian Thompson; kindergarten #2 — Janice Bowers, Michelle Thies and Leha DuBois; first and second grade — Sue Rabe, Rose Jensen and Wendy Rabe; third and fourth grade — Pat Burris; fifth and sixth grade — Barb Stenwall and Jenni Jacobsen.

CHURCH WOMEN

ed at the June 10 United Methodist Church Womens meeting. Eight members were present. Mrs. Nelsen also led devotions, "They Did Not Understand."

The secretary and treasurer reports were given. An invitation was read from the Randolph United Methodist Church, Women for their evening of fellowship, June 25 at 7:30 p.m.
