In the Greenwood Cemetery renovation story, the reporter was told that a grave site space sold for $200. That amount is actually $250. Also, the fund raising benefits being planned for the cemetery will also help to finance work on the office there and the construction of another road in the second ad-dition of the cemetery.

Troop 145 plans

Troop 145 plans Cadet Troop 145 will be work-ing along with the Senior Troop 243 at Super Foods Grand Opening. On July 16,17 and 18, the scouts will be selling root beer floats for 39 cents each at the store. All ingredients have been donated by Super Foods and local merchants with the proceeds going to the troops.' In August, the cadet troop will be working at the Wayne County Fair, helping with set up and taking down exhibits. The scouts will also be getting ready to start their meetings on a regular basis again.

Places at Inventor's Fair Country Boy' Dranselka invention gains popularity convalescing individuals in exercis-ing — all from the comforts of their favorite chair. The Country Boy Exerciser, in-vented by Marvin Dranseika of Wayne, recently won fourth place at-the inventor's fair conducted recent-ity at Norfolk. There is a patent pen-ding on Dranseika's exerciser that attaches to a chair or wheel chair frame so that individuals can exer-cise either the arms or legs while sit-ting down (for both upper and lower body exerise). He already has a patent on the ex-erciser, which was obtained in 1980, that provided exercise only to the legs and did not have the features (such as the adjustment for exerci-sing the arms, a squarer unit and dressier look, and velcro added to the pedals of the machine) which the latest Country Boy Exerciser version contains. "Right now we're in the process of latest Country Boy Exerciser version contains. "Right now we're in the process of getting a patent on the rest of the changes," Dranselka said. DRANSELKA HAS been a life-long resident of the Wayne area. He's been farming since 1955, first north of Wayne, and then in 1973 at his pre-sent 240 acre dairy-offspring farm operation located three miles south and 4 miles east of Wayne. He and his wife, Virginia, have two daughters — Theresa Linn Dooley better." When Dranselka moved to his pre-sent location, there was plenty of steel and wood fence posts to be removed. He invented a 3-point post puller, attached to the back of the tractor.

Five hundred units of the post Five nundred units of the post puller were manufactured from a licensed facility in Graettinger, lowa. Up to 480 units were sold in a limited time. However, he said the lowa firm feit manufacturing of the post puller was no longer warranted.

MANY OF THE things which

Dranselka Invents are for his own benefit, he said. Only the post puller and the exerciser have ever been marketed. "One year I put together a locking hitch pin. It bugs me that a bolt and nut were being used to pull 200 bushel loads." he mentioned. "Even some of the things that I buy new. I still Iry to make better. Most people take things for granted and use as is." Dranselka pointed out. Dranselka came up with the idea of the Country Boy Exerciser in 1979, basically to fulfill a need for his all-ing father. His father, who was sick and need-ed leg therapy, had to spend three weeks in the hospital. A stationery bike was not suitable, Dranselka said, because his father was a big man with poor balance. So Dranselka came up with a way to allow his father to sit down while exercising. "Usually, I visualize what I want, go to the shop and put together a rough version It." Dranselka said. He found a steel folding chair in the basement of his home and salvaged

Dranselka said. He found a steel folding chair in the basement of his home and salvaged the parts of a bicycle which he at one time rode to country school. This allowed his father to sit in the chair and pedal. Afterwards, prior to when he applied for the patent, Dranselka had the exerciser con-dessed and brought draws smaller in when he applied for the patent, Dranselka had the exerciser con-densed and brought down smaller in size. "It was too big and awkward at first," he said. Later, a friend needed to rehabilitate an arm and elbow in-jured in a combine accident. So Dranselka adapted the exerciser to fulfill two rehabilitating roles—for both the upper and lower halves of the body. FOR THE LEG exercise, the exer-ciser slips beneath the chair where it is held firmly in place. As the pedal-ing begins, there is -an adjustable drag installed to vary resistance on pedal rotation. The exerciser also telescopes out to adjust to the size of the user. The lichtweight exerciser as ba

HE FOUND THE Inventor's Fair at Nortoik to be fun and informative. "You get new ideas or how to go about doing other things." he said. The first place finisher at the re-cent inventor's fair had an entry dealing with photography. Another entry dealt with a solar heated satellife dish, hooked up to a hot water heater. "Mine was more of in the mechanical division." Dranselka mentioned. -People tend to think that farmers.

People tend to think that farmers People tend to think that farmers are only interested in ideas on how to make their farm machinery run bet-ter or more efficient. Dranselka is the first to disagree with that view-point. "Some people think farmers just have tunnel vision. But we think about diversified ideas," he said. His invention of a item which will ald in the rehabilitation and body strengthening of the elderly or others in rehabilitation is a lesson in diver-sification which all people should take note.

Russel Anderson of Hastings, a member of the music department from 193646, started the camp by 'begging' for money, then had to move part of the instruction to the downtown Wayne city auditorium because he didn't have enough space on campus.

"We used lots of P.R. then," he ad-ded. Public relations is still used today to attract students, although O'Leary said if he wanted only to make the camp larger, he could admit junter high students. The skill level of the senior high musicians, however, best suits the camp, he said. The application deadline for the camp participants should contact the Fine Arts Division at Wayne State at 402/375-2200 by that date to enroll, O'Leary said. The enrollment, of course, is done on a computer.

O'Leary said the musi-clans are always busy, but not always in instruction. Students are scheduled in at least five of eight dai-ly class periods and attend (or per-form at) an evening concert-program. A dorm dance or a movie usually concludes each day. The week ends with a semi-formal "prom-like" dance Saturday night — even a king and queen are crowned — and two final concerts on Sunday. Students in the computer classes use different software packages for skill improvement. There's one THEN THERE'S a software O'Leary calls "music processing," which allows students to match plt-ches, which O'Leary said takes a great deal of practice. The computer emils a sound and the student must punch the correct key to match it. "There are various levels of dlf-ficulty on this software," O'Leary said. "One gets up to where the music faculty has to sit and concen-trate to get it right." Another program teaches study

Where is a cane fishing pole when you need H? During the past two weeks, I've been familiarizing my son, Ryan, with the sport of fishing. Prior to breaking him into the sport, the question came up as to what type of fishing pole to get a four-year old youngster. My first instinct was to get a simple fishing rod. The cane fishing pole never came to mind at the time we were considering a pole purchase, but area stores had rod and reel sets for young children — so that's what Ryan was given. It was a wrong move, for several reasons. A cane pole would have been the right choice. No reeling, less chance of fangles and quicker reaction to pulling in the fish, no fancy gadgets — that's what the cane pole is all about.

MY YOUNG son's first experience at fishing was at Ike's Lake this year, during the annual fishing derby. He caught 13 fish, which is fairly good for the first time, although there were some his age who pulled in up to 90 or more fish. The trouble was that my son was more interested in the functions of his rod and reel than in catching the fish. Why stare at, and walt, for that red and white bobber to go down when more time could be spent learning the art of casting?

art of casting? His first cast into the lake was less than picture perfect — his momen-tum carried him foot-first into the water. During the rest of the after-noon, his tennis shoes and socks had to dry out. But do you think that stopped him from wanting to cast? I'd throw the line in, and two seconds later he would be disgusted that the fish didn't bite and he would reel in the line, and then beg to throw out the line himself.

IT WENT ON like this for about three hours. Kids have no patience when they are at the age of four. Again and again I'd let my son attempt to throw in his line. One time the fishing line got tangled on a bench nearby. Another time he started to throw his line while I was baiting his hook and my thumb almost became lish bait. The third time he about took off my ear. As the afternoon progressed, his form improved. But somehow the distance wasn't there.

ustance wasn't there. During the course of all this, the fishing line inside the reel became tangled and had to be taken apart to unscramble. That took at least 15 to 20 minutes. (They really cake the grease inside those fishing reets). Through all the delays, we still managed to coax 13 fish to take the hook.

A good natured fisherman at lke's told us our hook was too big and of-ered us a smaller one. It worked like a charm.

Tered us a smaller one. If worked like a charm. ON MONDAY of this week, my son and I went fishing again. We couldn't find a single worm, so I decided to get those plastic worms that were on sale at a Wayne store. Two years ago I received in the mail, from a fishing pole manufac-turer, a can of spray that resembled the scent of worms. But I gave it to my father. So instead of the real thing, my worms smelled and probably tasted like plastic to the fish in the small lake where we were fishing. Once again my son barked whenever he could not cast, so I let him cast to his heart's content. A half-hour later, he is turning the reel but the line is not coming back on shore. We pull the reel apart and notice that the line is broken. I connect the line with a knot my own father taught me whenever the twine in the hay baler would break. Ryan casts again. Five minutes later, the same problem. So I take the fishing for today!'' I wonder how many Wayne dads can relate to taking their son fishing for the first time.

for the first time. Like I said, where was the cane pole when I needed it.

ELLINGSON'S E-Z SERVICE Station is the newest addition to Ellingson

Ellingson Motors offers top selections

Ellingson Motors is completing its 13th year on the Wayne business scene. Ellingsons pur-chased the dealership from Ed Wolske, a long-time car dealer in Wayne, on Jan. 1, 1975. Ellingson Motors is Wayne's Calillac, Buick, Pontiac, Chevrolet, Oldsmobile and GMC truck dealer. "With a staff of 19, we provide our customers with full sales and service of General Motors products, as well as all makes of cars." said Grant Ellingson. "We also have a fine selection of previously-owned vehicles." Are adved. "It anyone is in the market for a new or us-ed car or pickup, think of us. We want to deal," he added. "We believe that Wayne is growing, and we deal," he added. "We believe that Wayne is growing, and we we plan on growing right with the communi-ty," Grant said. One area Elilingson Motors has grown is in the service station business. In April of this year, Ellingson Motors purchased a service station (Merchant Oil Co.) and now has added service work space. "Eilingson Motors also has a gas and thre business now available that we didn't have in the past," mentioned Grant.

The recently acquired service station will e named Ellingson's E-Z Service. A grand pening is planned in the future at the service station station. Ellingson Motors dealership has a wide selection of automobiles. "We have over 200 different models that are available to choose from to satisfy anybody's transportation needs," he said.

Grant said Ellingson Motors has the ex-perience and expertise in helping individuals pick out the car of their choice. "We've been in business for nearly 13 years and we have an idea of what the people want and need. Customer loyalty and a good reputation is important to us," Grant said.

Juniors win pair on the road

By Gregg Dahlheim

The Wayne Junior Legion squad ran its record to 7-11 by taking a pair of road games over Pender and Plerce this past week. The Juniors have won their last three bailgames heading down the homestretch of the regular season. The Juniors clubbed Pender 9-1 Wednesday night behind a fine pit-ching performance by Russ Longe. Longe went all the way allowing one run on four hits. The Wayne defense also sparkled as it was flawless in the field.

field. Pender got its only run in the top of the first to take a 1-0 lead. But Wayne tied it up in the bottom of the first when Ted Lueders walked and scored on a infield groundball by Longe. The locals came right back and grabbed the lead for good with two runs in the second when Jason-Jorgensen and Steve Lutt scored. Wayne made It 7-1 in the third. Ted[®] McCright accounted for two runs when he ripped a home run that chas-ed Rob Gamble home. Lutt followed with a single and Scott Nichols reach-ed after being hit by a pitch. Lutt scored on a single by Mark Creighton and Nichols came home on a past ball.

Iall. Wayne completed the scoring in he top of the fourth when Jorgensen ranked a two-run homer after Gam-ie doubled earlier in the frame. The Juniors finished the game with 0 hits. The foursome of Bill Lan-langer, Gamble, Jorgensen and Lutt ach collected two hits.

Wayne disposed of Pierce 15-5 in six innings Thürsday night. Scott Hammer pitched into the fourth inn-ing but failed to go the required distance necessary for the win. Lueders entered the game in the fourth with and pitched his way out of a jam to earn the win.

Wayne led early with two runs in the top of the first. Gamble ripped a RBI double in the frame to score Lan-danger. The locals made it 5-0 in the second inning. Nichols, Landanger, Lueders and Gamble singled in the Inning. Wayne came up with three more in the third on doubles by Lan-danger and Lueders and a base hit by Lutt. dang Lutt.

The visitors made it 10-0 before Pierce got on the board in the bottom of the fourth with three runs. Lut's runscoring double in the top of the fifth made it 11-3. The hosts got two runs back in the bottom of the fifth but that was all they could punch across. Wayne completed the scoring with three runs in the sixth inning across. Wayne completed the scoring, with three runs in the sixth inning. Lutt and Gamble collected RBI singles in the frame. Wayne ripped the Pierce pitching staff for 15 hits. Lutt led the way with four while Lueders and Gamble had three hits aplece. Landanger and Jorgensen each added a pair of hits.
