Australians find Wayne a friendly territory

By Chuck Hackenmiller
Managing Editor

Two men visiting the confines of Wayne have found things here to be just like their home state — a state that is 1,500 miles wide from one end to the other and is on the northern part of the Australian continent.

Sandy Anderson, age 40, and Roger Gwynne, age 23, have been on a "holiday" touring the United States since they arrived on June 2. Both are farmers, and they reside on family farms just seven miles from each other in the Australian state of Queensland.

Anderson, in partnership with his brother, is an "all grain" farmer, working land that covers 640 acres. He raises primarily sorghum and also wheat, barley, a little corn and soybeans and sunflowers.

Gwynne works with his father in farming 1,400 acres and leasing an additional 300 on the flat, black soil, fairly prosperous country. In the summer they plant sorghum and sunflowers and are experimenting with growing cotton. "We've given up on corn," Gwynne said.

In the winter (there is a growing season in Australia that lasts all 12 months) they grow wheat, barley and chick peas, which is a winter growing legume that United States citizens might see on their tossed salads now and then.

This is Gwynne's first trip to the United States. Anderson made the trip once before, on a 1985 "holiday."

"I came with a group of farmers and we toured the agricultural area. But the four never look in what I really wanted to see. I liked the Midwest and I wanted to come back in a year or two," Anderson said.

THEIR LONGEST stay has been in Wayne — almost 10 days at one of the local motels. They've toured California, the Black Hills, Mount Rushmore, Custer's Battle Field, Grand Teton, Bear Tooth Mountains, Montana, Utah, the Badlands, Texas, Arizona and Las Vegas.

But it has been Wayne's hospitality which "got us trapped here," said Gwynne.

"We love the people here. We're sorry we have to leave. They look after us so well here," mentioned Anderson.

Neither of the two Australian gents have any kin in Wayne. It appears that a tip from someone on where to purchase some farm equipment brought them in to the local community. Since they have arrived, the Wayne greetings have continued to flow.

"One guy from here asked if we were from Arkansas (because of dialect). We told him we were a little bit more south of that," Gwynne joked.

GWYNNE AND Anderson know they are saving money when it comes to buying their farm machinery in Wayne. "All exports we get from the United States are particularly high priced in Australia," Anderson said. Recently, combines and tractors have jumped up to 30 percent in price. When dealing with just a small market, higher prices are inevitable.

"Combines cost twice as much as here. You would pay about $95,000 for one here and it would cost $195,000 there [in Queensland]," Anderson said.

In Australia, anhydrous ammonia could be around $370 a ton. Here, it averages around half that amount. Fuel can range from $2 to $2.30 cents a gallon in Australia.

The two Australians had come to the United States with the intention of buying two second-hand planters. They bought two new planters locally instead.

The planters come from the factory disassembled. The Australians must place the planters inside shipping containers that are 20 feet long by 8 feet wide. The containers will be taken to Omaha, placed on the railroad and transported to Long Beach, California where the equipment will be put on a freighter and shipped to their native homeland.

Anderson looks at Wayne's agricultural location as a very prosperous area. "It looks as if you guys have turned the corner and are starting to go uphill," mentioned Anderson.

"I don't think the worse has yet to come for us. We're up to two years behind you. Next year will be a hard one for us also," he added.

THE TWO farmers from Australia found Wayne area soybean plants to be taller than back home. From left are Sandy Anderson, Roger Gwynne and Don Larsen of Wayne, who among others from the area have been showing the Australians around.

THE STORIES THEY TELL mirror that of American agriculture, in some respects. Foreclosures are on the horizon. Gwynne said there has been a couple of foreclosures which have received high media coverage. "The banks are reluctant to go through it again because it reflected badly on the banks," said Anderson.

Some of the lending institutions have set a "interest holiday" hoping that the farmers will get the wheat crop in. "It could be that the end of the year could be the end of the road for a lot of them," mentioned Gwynne.

Lack of rain certainly isn't helping the situation. Queensland usually averages 24 inches of rain annually. The total thus far has been 15 inches. Sometimes they get 13 inches of rain annually, other times 30 inches. "It's a land of drought broken up by intermittent flooding," said Gwynne.

While here in Wayne, Gwynne and Anderson have been escorted by area hosts to the Northeast Nebraska Extension and Research Center, where they have looked at various corn and wheat plots.

THEY HAVE pest problems, but no rootworms or corn borers.

Gwynne said that currently, prices on grain commodities are covering the operating costs. "But we can't afford to miss a year or we'll be a year behind," he mentioned.

"The grain prices have never gone as low as they are here," remarked Anderson. "Australia gets very little government subsidies for agriculture."

"Australia can't afford to subsidize the way you do it here," said Gwynne.

Anderson said he is impressed with the fact that 30 percent of American agricultural land is out of production (because of the subsidy program). If the subsidies in America are lost, that will put 30 percent more land into production. "If that happens, we might as well close the door," he said.

It would eventually hurt their export business and also hurt the prices for grain.

THE WEALTHY state of Queensland is the biggest export earner per capita in Australia. It is close to the Barrier Reef and is one of the biggest sugar cane exporters in the world.

Yet Australia, Anderson said, could just as well be America's 51st state because of its many similarities. They have shows in Australia where they display their agricultural accomplishments, much like the Wayne County Fair which they visited during the past week.

"We found the pick-up pulls and the tractor pulls to be very interesting," said Gwynne.

"Our lifestyle is the same. The food is the same and we talk the same, although many people find it hard to understand our speech," he added.

Both Australians had a couple of stories that they wanted to set straight for the record. Anderson is not related to Greg Norman, the professional golfer, as some people in the community have speculated.

And the talk about kangaroos becoming so few to the point of becoming extinct is far from the truth.

THEY ARE pests, said Gwynne, and there are plenty of them. The kangaroos kick down fences, cause crop damage and "if you go west, you don't even have to look for them."

The kangaroos, like deer in America, have the knack of jumping directly into the paths of oncoming cars. Yet they are protected by the government.

Anderson said that the koala bear is certainly a threatened species — but not by what people have done. It is a certain type of disease that is killing them, he mentioned.

The motion picture "Crocodile Dundee" has certainly helped the tourism trade in Australia, both admit. Anderson said a lot of Americans do not realize the size of Australia.

"It is not the size of Texas, but as big as the United States with 16 million people living there."

Fifty percent of the income of the country is derived from the 4 percent population of farmers, while another 40 percent of the country's income is gained by the 2 percent of the people represented in the mining industry.

Anderson and Gwynne will return to Queensland around Aug. 22, after a short stay in Hawaii, with no bad experiences on their "holiday", and they will have fond memories of the United States — particularly Wayne, Nebraska.

"We're not ones for going to the big cities. We just felt at home here. The people around here have shown us a good time. I'd like to get some of these guys around here down to visit us," said Gwynne.

ESU One approves 1987-88 budget

By Chuck Hackenmiller
Managing Editor

Education Service Unit One Board of Directors approved a 1987-88 budget of $2,500,388 during last Tuesday's regular meeting in Wakefield.

That amount includes $300,000 in cash reserve, up from the $225,000 that was budgeted for cash reserves during the 1986-87 year.

Not taking into consideration the cash reserve, the passed budget reflects a $148,285 increase.

The original budget proposal presented to the board was $2,423,472 (including cash reserve). That amount was increased with an additional $50,000 placed in the cash reserve and another $26,916 added to the budget for special education, which was approved by the board Tuesday evening, bringing the budget total to $2,500,388 (including cash reserve).

The additions were made, according to ESU One Administrator Rodney Garwood, because there was "more money available than anticipated."

One reason for that, he said, is because "collections were up."

MOST OF THE increase appears in the area of special education. "The budget presents an increase because of an increase in contracts with schools for the services we provide," Garwood said.

Budgeted expenditure amounts for 1987-88 include $1.33 million for special education services (nearly 53 percent of the total budget); $565,230 in the general-level services; and $303,750 in transfers.

Even with the budget at an increase, Garwood said the tax levy will remain at what it has been for at least the past two years — 3.5 cents per $100 valuation, which is the maximum which the ESU unit can tax.

"The levy has to be set before we know what the actual valuation is," Garwood said.

Based on only "estimate valuations," Garwood mentioned that the amount which the levy will bring in is $511,929 in total property tax requirements throughout the 10-county area which ESU One serves.

That amount is approximately 2 percent less than the previous year and 5 percent less than the 1985-86 year.

The "estimated" 1987-88 total valuation for the counties of Cedar, Dakota, Dixon, Knox, Thurston, Wayne, Antelope, Pierce, Stanton and Cuming was $1,462,713,321, a decrease of about $29.8 million.

Programs that are funded by the county levy include health services, staff development, media, board, administration, administrative supervision, business office and operation of the plant, maintenance and transportation.

ALSO FIGURED into the budget are the hiring of three additional employees. One of the positions will be in the area of the preschool handicapped program. Tuesday night the board approved a contract hiring Kerry Kreuzer Carter as a teacher at the Bryan School, working with severe and profoundly handicapped youths.

The board also hired Joyce Botts to work in the service area as an occupational therapist aide. "This will allow us to provide more service to the children who need it," Garwood said.

In other action Tuesday evening, representatives of the Wayne County Rural School Board Association representatives met with the ESU One Board of Directors on matters pertaining to the services which are to be provided by the service unit.

THERE WERE three major areas of discussion between the ESU board and the rural school board representatives, according to Garwood.

Those areas, he said, included the rural school board's convictions that their contribution to the cost of the nursing program provided by ESU was too high; that the media and delivery service of the ESU to all the rural schools in Wayne County is not what it should be; and whether or not the pre-school handicap program is necessary.

Also Tuesday evening, the ESU board:

• Accepted the resignation of Karen Bressler, ESU One Nurse, who served the schools in Thurston County, primarily Pender, Winnebago and Walthill.

• Heard a report from the Board Member Search Committee. There is a vacancy on the board for a representative of Thurston County.

Serving on the search committee are Ken Lahr of Ponca and Leo Krampfer.

Garwood said the board hopes to have a proposal for next month's regular meeting.

• Reviewed the board policy to change the wording to be in compliance with regulations and also set the terms of condition of employment.

• And approved a recommendation by Garwood to sell one of the two memory typewriters which are currently being leased to the schools. The service unit will continue to retain one typewriter for that purpose.

For dual membership

Wayne State to apply to NCAA

Wayne State College is among four Central States Intercollegiate Conference (CSIC) schools that have decided to apply for membership in the NCAA Division II, according to William Nester, Kearney State College president and chairman of the CSIC Council of Presidents.

Wayne State will maintain membership in the NAIA as well, holding a dual membership in both athletic organizations.

The three other CSIC schools applying dual membership are Kearney State, Ft. Hays State and Emporia State. Earlier this summer Pittsburg State, Missouri Southern, Missouri Western and Washburn University applied for membership in the NCAA Division II and Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association (MIAA). Those four schools will be leaving the CSIC after the 1988-89 academic year.

"This move will allow flexibility for these schools as they plan for 1989," said Nester about the latest move. "These institutions are considering a number of exciting options to be pursued in the next two years.

A couple of the options have been mentioned. One is to find schools to fill the four vacancies in the CSIC. Another option is to join an existing conference and let the CSIC fold.

If the schools are accepted into the NCAA they will have to conform with both organizations' policies.

The presidents of each school met last Saturday in Kansas City to make the decision. Wayne State plans to make its formal application to the NCAA by Sept. 1, according to a release sent out by the school.

Marathon golfers

THE FOURSOME OF Ann Perry (back left), Jill Jordan, Eric Runestad (front left) and Jed Reeg spent Friday golfing for the American Cancer Society in the "Longest Day of Golf" at the Wayne Country Club. The group started at 6 a.m. and didn't finish until about 9 p.m. Their goal was to play 109 holes, the amount last year's foursome played. About $5 a hole was pledged to help fight cancer. Jeanie Sturm was this year's chairperson.

Wildcats name team captains

Four seniors have been elected by teammates to captain the 1987 Wayne State football team, according to Coach Pete Chapman.

Linemen Ben Lehr, Mike Anderson, Dave Uhlers and linebacker Greg Cavill will be this year's quad captains.

Lehr, 6-2, 250-pound offensive lineman from Omaha, is a three-year starter for the Wildcats. Anderson, 6-4, 265-pound offensive lineman, is a graduate of Tekamah-Herman High School. Last year he was named to the all-American honorable mention team and was a District 11 First-Team selection.

Cavill is a graduate of Greendale High School in Wisconsin. The 6-0, 205-pound linebacker led Wayne State in tackles last year and was second-team all conference and all-district honorable mention. Uhlers, 6-2, 245-pound linebacker, enters the season as a two-year starter. He is a graduate of Hamilton High School in Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

WSC opens the season Sept. 5 at Omaha against UNO.

Sports Med Line

By Stephen Henry, M.D. and Regina Durbin, P.T.

Aerobic dance exercise has spread from the health clubs and church basements to include even the football field. More individuals are performing aerobics each day. As this movement has grown, the need for qualified instructors has increased as well. In addition, since there is no single licensing body, the need to set standards intensifies.

Ads in the classifieds want "certified" instructors. What "certified" means can vary from a "nonsmoker, can jog one mile and can lead dance" to a person who "completes a 3 hour exam, demonstrates the ability to lead a class and can perform CPR." Some organizations even certify instructors via the mail. It should be apparent that some consistent guidelines must be drawn to "certify" aerobic instructors.

The IDEA Foundation (International Dance Exercise Association) is the first group to undertake a national certification exam that does not require their specific training. The exam offered by IDEA covers anatomy, kinesiology, exercise physiology, nutrition, and exercise programming as well as several other areas. It is offered at several sites throughout the nation on three days per year throughout the Educational Testing Service. The advantages of requiring one criteria for instructors is so that consumers know what they are getting when they take classes from a "certified" instructor. The main flaw in the IDEA Foundation Certification is only a written exam with no practical portion is offered at this time.

Other organizations such as AFAA (American Fitness Aerobics Association) and Jazzercise offer well-rounded training and testing which then leads to certification. These type organizations offer "one stop" certification. While this is convenient for the instructor, it is expensive.

If the aerobics community is to grow into a unified, professional group then they must find a way to have one voice. They must also find a way to work with each other to develop standards of practice, before these are legislated for them by law.

For information about certification write IDEA Foundation, 2431 Morena Blvd., Suite 2D, San Diego, CA 92110 or AFAA, 15250 Ventura Blvd. Suite 310, Sherman Oaks, CA 91403.

If you have any other sport-medicine questions please write Dr. Stephen Henry, 1361 Tyler Park, Louisville, Kentucky 40204.

News and Notes

by Mary Temme, Extension Agent-Home Ec.

Quackery has come a long way since the days of magic elixirs and travelling medicine shows. Now it's known as "health fraud," and it has a million and one disguises, and costs billions of dollars every year. Quackery may appear as an electrical device that "cures" arthritis or as a tonic that "grows" hair. It may be advertised in a magazine or promoted in a best-selling book. It may cost $1.99 or $199. But no matter what disguise it wears, where it's advertised, or how much it costs, health fraud's only real results are unfulfilled wishes, wasted dollars and, all too often, endangered health. Quackery is often successful because it appeals to the human desire for simple solutions to complicated problems. Most quackery promotions include one or more of the following appeals. Being able to recognize them can offer consumers protection against being victimized by quackery. The product's "cure" is quick and painless. The product is a special, secret, ancient or foreign formula available only through the mail, or only from one supplier. The product's advertising relies on testimonials or case histories from satisfied users as the only proof that it works. The product claims to be effective for a wide variety of ailments or conditions. The product claims to be a scientific "breakthrough" or "miracle" cure that has been kept secret or overlooked by the medical or scientific community. Keeping these five characteristics in mind should help. But if you have any doubts about a product or treatment, check with your doctor, pharmacist, or a registered dietitian. Or you could write or call the Better Business Bureau, your local consumer protection office, your state's attorney general; the Food and Drug Administration office nearest you; or the Extension Service.

Save the trees The cedar grove in Greenwood Cemetery provides a unique spot, a little space that offers natural beauty and a perspective on life itself. It is not landscaped; it is not artificial. We are fortunate that those who came before us left such a legacy. At this time we need to both tell the members of the cemetery board how we feel and offer them our assistance in order to retain the grove. Please join us! From information in the paper there are enough burial sites for 15-20 years. Replacing the grove would only extend that period one year or less. Nearly the same amount of money could be raised by increasing the cost of the remaining sites by $10. We believe the trees are beautiful and worth saving. You can help by contacting members of the board to ask them to reconsider their decision. Serving on the board are Rowan Witse, Chair, Mrs. Alfred Sievers, LaVerne Hilton, Mylet Bargholz, Chris Bargholz and Bonadelle Fredrickson. You can also help by attending the Annual Meeting at 10 a.m. Tuesday, August 12, 1987 at the Woman's Club Room. Anyone may attend but you must be a lot owner to vote. Please let the members of the cemetery board know how you feel. Once the trees are cut it will be too late! Kathleen Conway

MEETING NOTICE The annual Lot Owners meeting of Greenwood Cemetery Association of Wayne, Nebraska will be held Tuesday, August 18, 1987 at 10:00 a.m. at the Wayne Women's Club Room. Any information, contact Mylet Bargholz, Secretary-Treasurer.

Don't Blame Your Age For Poor Hearing.

Chicago, Ill. — A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of the smallest hearing aid Beltone has ever developed will be given absolutely free to anyone requesting it. It's yours for the asking, so send for it now. It is not a real hearing aid, but it will show you how tiny hearing help can be. The actual aid weighs less than an eighth of an ounce, and it fits completely into the ear canal. These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Although a hearing aid may not help everyone, more and more people with hearing losses are being helped. For your free sample send your name, address, and phone number today to: Department 78416, Beltone Electronics Corporation, 4201 West Victoria Street, Chicago, Illinois 60646.
