Struve resigns from WSC post

Finance John Struve has resigned to become Director of the budget at Kansas State University.

His resignation becomes effective Jan. 8 and ends 18 years of service at Wayne State.

"At K-State Struve will be responsible for preparing and monitoring the university's annual budget," said Thomas Schellhardt, Kansas State's assistant vice president for ad-ministration and finance.

"He will be responsible for preparation of the university's legislative requests submitted to the Kansas Board of Regents and the state budget division, and will assist In the defense of the request as it is reviewed by the governor and state legislature."

Other major responsibilities for Struce will be to participate in the university's strategic planning pro-cess and preparing decision support material for use by academic ad-ministrators and others to manage operating budgets and prepare quent year budget requests, added Schellhardt.
"The Kansas State opportunity is one which fits in well with my profes-sional goals. The promotion will allow me to experience a larger institution with more focused respon-sibilities than I have at Wayne State," said Struve.

"I ALSO FEEL very strongly that at some point it is time to move on. After-18 years, I'm near or beyond that point. My intultive feeling is that it's time to leave," he added.

"Wayne State truly does have a highly dedicated, talented staff and I'm always impressed with the high quality of the students I come in contact with," said Struve.

TWO MAJOR AREAS of concern for the college right now are the underfunding of staff salaries and the operational budgets. "Those things need immediate attention, but the outlook of financial support of those areas is not promising."

Struve said the changes in the col-lege's top administrator over the last three years did not play a factor in his decision to leave Wayne State.

Union election set for Friday

The election to decide whether or not Timpte, Inc. factory workers will unionize is scheduled to take place Friday, Nov. 20, from 2-4 p.m. at the Timpte manufacturing plant.

Allied Industrial Workers of America filed a petition on Sepf. 21 of this year for the purpose of certification to represent the Timpte workers. Approximately. 210. Timpte employees would-be affected by the bargaining unit proposal, and all 210 of the plant workers have the option of voting or not voting.

If passed, the bargaining unit would consist of all full-time hourly factory employees. Excluded would be office clerical employees, professional employees, guards and supervisors.

If the vote is against union representation, then no union, during a one year period, can come back to Timpte and try again to establish a union. Timpte management has gone on record saying that they are "committed to maintaining a non-union status of the Timpte plant." Timpte employees have said the fear of getting fired for no reason, a cleaner atmosphere to work in, better wages and benefits, no lay-off policy and poor communication with management were reasons why Allied Industrial Workers was contacted for representation. with its employees, and had sent out correspondence in the mail in an effort to discourage the union representation.

Allied Industrial Workers representatives have countered with how the unions can benefit employees.

Neither parties can be making campaign speeches to assembled groups of employees on company time within the 24-hour period before the election.

by Donald V. Zeiss ARE YOU A TELEVISION ADDICT?

How big a role does television play in your life — and your children's lives? The answer might surprise you.

Following are some questions to help you decide whether you and your family might be addicted to television:
How many hours a week do you warch TV? Keep a log for a week for find out if your estimate is correct. Write down the programs you watch, how long you watch, and why you watch.

- If a program your child liked was on TV, but a friend called him or was on TV, but a friend called him or her to go out and play, would your child stay home and watch TV alone, or go out and play?

— Do you automatically turn on the TV set when you get home? Do you automatically turn it on when you have nothing to do?

 Do you watch whatever happens to be on, or only programs you've decided ahead of time to see?

If they had to choose, would your children rather give up their mother/father/best friend or their TV set for a month? How about you?

— Do you and your family spend more time watching TV than you do nother activities you enjoy?

When you have the TV on, do you do other things at the same time?
 Could you live without television? Really?

The questions are based on a quiz om the book Children and Media, from the book Children and Media, published by Instructor Books, Inc., 548 Fifth Avenue, New York, New York 10017. The book contains activities that can help kids and parents explore their viewing habits and attitudes toward television, and to encourage children to understand and judge what they see.

Take With Water

Water is the most common substance occurring in the body. It is there to provide a number of important functions which are necessary to our survival. Water is also an important part of the environment outside our bodies. Because of the general abundance of water in most communities, we often forget about its importance. When it comes to medications, water is critical in at least three areas:

Disintegrates Medications: Solid doses (e.g., tablets and capsules) must be broken down in the stomach if they are to be properly absorbed into the blood stream. Water promotes the disintegration and absorption of these medicines.

Dilutes Medicines: Water is the large solvent in which various chemicals in the body, including drugs, are disssolved. Water helps keep drugs from irritating the lining of the stomach. It also prevents the more potent drugs from becoming unduly concentrated in the body. Drinking adequate amounts of water is essential if this diluting function is to be maintained.

Works with Medicines: Certain drugs, such as the sulfonamides, bulk forming laxatives, and urinary tract antibacterial agents need water in order to work efficiently.
