Wayne siren usage adjusted for daytime fire alarms and for siren

testing, according to Wayne City Administrator Rhil Kloster.
The Wayne City Council recently received a petition, signed by 16 members of the Wayne Day Care Providers group, requesting that the siren testing time be changed from the usual time of Friday at 1 p.m.

They also asked that use of the fire siren be restrained, since the Wayne firemen wear beepers alerting them.

of a fire emergency.
The Day Care Providers stated that most of their children nap during the early afternoon hours, and that the noise from the sirens wake up the children and scare them.

Kloster told the city council, during its region meeting on Tuesday, that there has been a change of procedure in how the sirens will be utilized.

An adjustment has been made in the number of sirens being utilized or daytime fire alarms and for siren sting, according to Wayne City Council provents and inistrator Rhill Kloster.

"We're only going to be using three sirens the one located behind the fire hall, another in the northwest corner of Greenwood Cemetery, and the other located near the El Toro Lounge." Kloster said.

"The rest of the sirens will be curtified for the City of the city as far as fire operations ned," he said

Also, the testing of the sirens will take place on Fridays from 11:45 to n at announced times instead of "The system needs to be tested.

Traffic count

The Wayne County Sheriff's Department has released information from the Nebraska Department of Roads concerning 1987 motor vehicle accidents throughout Nebraska and specifically, Wayne County.

Sheriff LeRoy Janssen reports that in 1987, there were total of 38,070 motor vehicle traffic accidents statewide. That total is up 3 percent from 1986.

In 1987, there were 297 fatalities in Nebraska, which is about a 3 percent increase from the previous year when 259 fatalities were reported.

The statistics reveal that although the fatalities and accidents have increased, the fatal accident rate decreased by 9.5 percent per 100 million miles traveled by motor vehicles in Nebraska. This simply stated means that the more exposure (miles traveled) there is, the more likely accidents

Janssen noted that of the Nebraska fatality statistics that are completed, it reveals that about 6 times as many people died not wearing seat belts as opposed to those who were wearing seat belts. Approximately two times as many people were injured not wearing belts as opposed to those who were In about one of every 14 accidents across the state, alcohol was involved and related to at least 97 fatalities and 1,565 persons being injured.

There were a total of 10,770 rural road traffic accidents from which 184 fatalities occurred. These figures indicated that only about 28 percent of the accidents occur on rural roads, but 187 of 297 (over 61 percent) of the fatalities did occur on the same rural Nebraska roads

Farm tractor or farm equipment accidents took an approximate 20 percent decrease over last year. State-wide, however, there still were five fatalities and 30 injuries resulting from these accidents.

Sunday morning, from midnight to 3 a.m. seems to be the most accident prone time of day on rural roads. Fifty percent more fatal accidents happened at this time than at any of the other time slots throughout the week.

Janssen said that in 1987, there were 117 total accidents in Wayne County (outside the city limits of Wayne). Approximately 24 more accidents occurred on rural roads as compared to the highway system. Seventy percent of the persons injured were involved in accidents on rural roads.

In 75 percent of the accidents where alcohol was involved, someone was injured. Janssen said that, of the Wayne County statistics, it is shown that twice as many people were injured not wearing their safety belts as compared to those who were wearing belts.

Janssen said the three major catagories of contributing circumstances leading to accidents in Wayne County included: speed too fast for conditions, failure to yield and improper driving. Eighty-two percent of the driver's involved in accidents in Wayne County were within 25 miles of home.

Janssen said that the above information has been provided to make dirvers more aware of areas they need to pay particular attention to while traveling Wayne County and across

With the summer travel season approaching, we should all pay particular attention to our driving habits in order to share the roads in the safest manner possible.

As Janssen mentions: Buckle up and drive carefully in 1988.

I'm against child abuse because, it is a wrong thing to do and people are getting carried away with it. If we don't stop it now, it might turn out to be the number one murder rate in the United States. I think we should do the same thing to the parents that the do abuse.

The kinds that do get abused are probably goning to do the same thing to their kids and it will keep going on. Chris Barner

Respect rural areas

After giving this some thought and a certain amount of deliberation, I decided to write this letter in hopes that ''someone'' would read this and take their ride in the country for a different reason next time.

Irealize that most people in the city of "Wayne America" take a certain amount of pride in the appearance of their personal property, as well as the public property. Rightfully so, as they well should and sometimes maybe a little more often, especially on the public property.

I only wish that they would respect the property of their neighbors in the "rural" community also. Maybe all too many of us should give a second thought as to where the city of Wayne receives the majority of its economical livelihood.

What I'm referring to is the practice which some of us have, both urban and rural, of touring the rural area only to deposit our garbage. Specifically, the person or persons who dumped their lawn clippings in the middle of the road three miles I realize that most people in the ci who dumped their lawn clippings in the middle of the road three miles and 134 west of Wayne on Thursday evening. I only hope that they felt relieved that they were able to find a place and at such an economical fee. Not that they should feel alone. I observed a Department of Roads employee ridding himself of his tree branches on state right-of-way, also not long ago.

or anches on stare right-or-way, also not long ago.

I realize that it's not quite as easy or inexpensive as it used to be to rid yourself of your so-called garbage in Wayne, but that doesn't warrant

Wayne, but that doesn't warrant depositing it in the country. There are people in Wayne who make their living doing this for you. I would suggest discussing this with them or your city government. If you can't afford to have that done, then I'd say you spent too much on your lawnmower. Next time buy one without the grass catcher, the money you save can be spent on your garbage collection fees.

Please remember that most of us

ise remember that most of us in the "rural community" have a cer tain amount of pride in our ap pearance also!

Asbestos deadline extension sought

Representative Doug Bereuter has Introduced a biil that will extend for six months the deadline for school districts to provide management plans for eliminating asbestos hazards. The bill leaves in place the July 1989 deadline by which schools must begin to encapsulate or remove asbestos.

Bereuter's bill also would provide funds to states to hire additional qualified personnel to adequately review management plans and provide encouragement for training of school personnel to become accredited inspectors.

In addition, the bill would provide for reimbursement of certain categories of schools for the costs of contracts entered into before May 15, 1988, for inspection and management plan development services. This provision addresses inequities that have been created because some schools have aiready entered into contracts to meet the requirements, while some have been idle in the hopes that Congress will rescue them by modi-fying the requirements and others have not had the resources to pro-

"While school and state officials have expressed concern that they cannot meet the October deadline, many parents and national ogranizations share my concern about extending the July 1989 deadline for beginang the July Mov deadline to begin-ning the removal or encapsulation of asbestos," Bereuter said. "No one wants children and staff in schools containing this hazardous material exposed to it one day longer than is absolutely necessary.

"While there are several bills pending in Congress that would extend both of the deadlines for complying with the law, I am concerned that simply extending deadlines will do nothing if we fail to address some of the serious problems states and school districts face in trying to comply with the law," he said.

"This bill addressed the problem of lack of availability of trained personnel for asbestos inspections and for review of management plans. It also addresses my concern that states may simply be relimbursing a few of their most needy schools for the purchase of inspection services, rather than trying to train a large force of school personnel who would then be on staff and available to monitor schools for asbestos problems and perform the subsequent three-year inspections required by the Asbestos Hazard Emergency Response Act.

"With a few refinements in this law, I believe the Federal government can work with the states to insure that the goal of ridding the nation's schools of dangerous asbsestos materials," Bereuter said.

Story of Ft. Robinson invasion told

It was 1943. The invaders came from the east, flying low in the bright morning sky. Some of the planes carmorning sky. Some of the planes car-ried paratroopers, are vously prepar-ing to jump. Others towed gliders at the end of thousand-foot ropes. As the planes neared the target, parachute slik dotted the sky. Cut loose, the gliders coasted to rough landings. Troops poured out, some with bicycles. The invastion had begun.

The scene was not western Europe. but western Nebraska. Fort Robin-son was invaded, not by Axis soldiers but by troops from near-by Alliance air base. The objective of the maneuvers: to penetrate to the heart of the Fort's operations.

Even though it wasn't a real inva Sion, the event made a lasting im-pression on both those who took part and those who watched. Their reminiscences have been collected by Tom Buecker, Curator of the State Historical Society's Fort Robinson

For two days airborne troops and soldiers and dogs from Ft. Rob's K.9 units played cat-and-mouse. "The airborne troops were surprised at the dogs' ferocity," one soldier recalled. "I remember the Colonel in charge, who jumped, landed in a tree and was captured by a K-9 soldier with a dog

THE NEWSPAPER reported, "It was a wonderful sight," but the maneuvers weren't flawless. "They cut the gliders loose fairly low and did not give the pilots much time to find a level place to land. You could see them trying to pull up and then come down 'ker splat' in a big cloud of dust," one observer said. THE NEWSPAPER reported,

There were numerous injuries, and many close calls. "My wife worked in the PX, and she told me that the glider pilots were shaking so bad they couldn't hold a cup of coffee. They had to lean down and slurp it up from the cup off the counter."

At the maneuvers' end, the invaders were judged victorious, "I heard that the enemy penetrated the C.O.'s office," one veteran recalled. "They left a note on the Colonel's desk," another wrote.

The invaders' presence was felt in town, too. One Crawford woman reminisced, "The paratroopers invaded with no respect for anybody or anything. They insulted women on the streets, ripped up pool tables, etc. My folks kept me home till they left."

Photographs of the mock invasion are featured in a new exhibit at the Fort Robinson Museum. Opening to the public May 28, the new exhibit emphasizes the Fort's many-faceted history since 1900.

Check shelves for Humco brand

Health department warns about ipecac

The Nebraska State Health Department is asking hospitals, nursing homes, emergency squads, poison control centers, doctors' offices and parents of small children to check their shelves for Humco brand ipecac syrup.

The syrup has been recalled by the federal Food and Drug Administration instead of ipecac.

|pecac syrum is used — mostly for young children under four — to induce vomiting after the ingestion of a poisonous substance or an overdose of medicine. Eucalyptus oil is commonly used in minute amounts in vaporizers, nosedrops and cough drops. It is safe for these purposes, according to the FDA, but it should never be ingested because even small amounts can cause convut.

Last week the FDA issued an appeal to parents to search their medicine cabinets for "one-ounce bottles" of Humco ipecac syrup. Up to 400,000 of them have been shipped from Humco Laboratory in Texarkana, Texas, since February, 1987.

Up to 200,000 of the bottles are still in the channels of distribution, while another 200,000 are in the hands of consumers.

Bottles of the syrup have been found in Nebraska, but it is unknown how many have been distributed here. Will Davis of Sav Mor Pharmacy said his business had stocked the Humco ipecac syrup, and they are returning the product to its manufacturer. "There are companies other than Humco that make it syrup to induce vomiting),"

Some of the Humco one ounce bottles have been distributed as part of health fair promotions, primarily in the areas of poison control.

Pizza Hut promotes reading among schools

If parents noticed their children reading books more than usual these past few months, if might be because they've had pizza also on their mind. For the third straight year, Pizza Hut of Wayne has been promoting student reading by providing students the incentive to reach achievable goals.

Chapter of the International Reading Association presented Pizza Hut manager Lynn Trevett a special award for the restaurant's ''outstanding contributions to the 'reading council's activities.''

Personal goal charts line the walls of the Wayne Pizza Hut, which tells the progress of the many area students in grades one through six who participated in the program this The five month program begins in October and ends in February

Each of the students read to their goal established by the child and the teacher. Pizza Hut provides the inby presenting a coupon for a Per-sonal Pan Pizza redeemable at the restaurant, along with a special badge that is presented by the Pizza Hut area supervisor.

Each student has the opportunity, if goals are reached during each of the five months, to earn five Personal Pan Pizzas and the badges. If all the children in the class reach their goals in four of the five months during the tenure of the annual program, they are provided a pizza party that is catered to the school.

Teachers in the area have noticed an increase in the number of books which children have read, and credit the motivation promotion of Pizza as instrumental in creating

The special award for the Pizza Hut reading program was presented by Kathy Muller of Wakefield, vice president, and Alice Johnson of Wakefield, state director of the Nebraska Chapter of the International Reading Association.

Nicotine Gum For Smokers

Nicotine gum therapy appears to be a safe and effective way for some smoked to gradually give up smoking. The gum (prescription only) is available in 2 milligram (mg) pieces. Physicians who prescribe nicotine gum often ask smokers to stop smoking before starting to use the gum. Nicotine gum does not taste as good as regular chewing gum, and users may require several days for adjustment to its taste as well as the way it should be chewed.

At first, as many as 20 to 25 pieces of 2 mg gum may be chewed in a 24 hour period. The gum should be chewed for about 10 to 20 minutes, in order to allow the nicotine to be released from its slow-release base. Placing the gum between the teeth and the upper cheek after it has been chewed is an excellent way to insure the absorption of additional nicotine into the bloodstream.

While many nicotine gum therapy programs run for about 3 months, heavy smokers sometimes require 6 months or more of treatment. Nicotine gum, when used alone or in conjunction with other programs (e.g., psychological treatment), has been found to produce good results in those who want to quit smoking.
