Hoax time again.
This holiday season newspaper offices were deluged with requests to place an article in the news columns about a terminally ill boy from Florida who wanted to break a world record for Christmas cards received.

Apparently the post office in Florida got a whole bunch of greeting cards, but there was nobody on the receiving end.

Several years ago a terminally ill child in another country had mentioned a wish to get as many greeting cards. ticle in the news columns about

A grand virtue of this hoax is that there are caring people out there who showed concern and wanted to help get this fictionary child a world's record.
Most people, I believe, are softies when it comes to these situations. I am. But I'm also cautious. Perhaps too cautious. This never made the news columns of our newspaper.

One thing that I did happen to print — with extreme reservation — was an article about the 'blue star' tattoo laced with LSD that is being distributed.

The news release that parents or concerned citizens presented to me contained lots of information — but no facts to back up the information. There was no direct quote or authori

Still, I became a 'softie' when another request came in to publish the news release.

I should have gone with my first instinct and not published the article.

Now, a person working at a chemical dependency department at a Council Bluffs hospital said they are having trouble countering a hoax chain letter about these LSD-laced stickers.

It's just that we want to be sure about we want to be sure about something before it gets into print and over 5,000 people read about it.

This story isn't a hoax.
I wasn't going to play a didn't think there would be

But by golly there are people out there who really are concerned about my absence on

I think this same person is one who tikes to live dangerously and has no fear of golf balls whizzing past bodies — especially when I'm at the tee.

In a previous 'golf column' I wrote about my problem of los-ing golf balls in ponds and

Duplicated bill proposals inevitable

Last Thursday, Jan. 19 was the final day for the introduction of bills. At the beginning of each session, Art me beginning of each session, senators have ten days in which to introduce bills. This year the Legislature introduced 808 bills. This compares with 761 bills introduced in 1987—the—last comparable, time period.

The 808 figure is in some ways misleading. It does not mean there are 808 different topics being considered by the Legislature. Because each senator is allowed to introduce legislation of their choice on any mather, there are often several bills that are duplicates with only minor variation. These duplicates with only minor variations. These duplicates are openation. tions. These duplicates are generally heard by the same committee at the same time. The committee will then same time. The committee will then choose among the bills and will normally advance only one of these similar bills to general file if it advances any on the topic at all. In addition, a lot of the bills repre-

an addition, a lot of the blis repre-sent various solutions to a general problem. For example a number of bills dealing with changes in the state income tax were introduced this year. There seems to be general agreement that something should be done to correct this. Several solutions have been offered. Some of these bills have been offered. Some of these bills will be combined into a single measure and advanced to general file to be heard before the whole body: Others will be killed in committee.

After we have reduced the number in these ways, what is left? Does the remaining number represent major changes in the law? In many cases, changes in the law? In many cases, no. At least 30 of these bills are what is known as Revisor Bills. These bills are recommended by the Revisor of Statutes and are only technical in nature, such as punctuation and centiling changes. spelling changes.

Also, a good percentage of the bills introduced represent changes. Nebraska must make to be in compliance with changes in federal law. With the federal government's growing involvement in many areas, the Legislature has found itself each Legislature nas found itself each year having to pass an increasing amount of legislation in order not to violate federal standards. Several other bills must be introduced every year in order to renew our support for an ongoing form of business or governmental program. governmental program.

In the final analysis there are a nn me find analysis mere are a number of bills with substantial changes in the law. But as can be seen, the growing number of bills introduced does not necessarily mean the. Legislature is increasingly becoming overzealous. Now that the introduction of bills is complete, we introduction of bills is complete, we can begin gleaning the wheat from the shaft.

Loan program established for drought and disaster

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's Farmers Home Ad-ministration has launched a $200 million "drought and disaster" loan guarantee program for rural businesses suffering effects from 1988 weather disasters, according to Acting State Director Lowell W. Waldo.

Under this new program, FmHA can guarantee up to 90 percent of a loan to help alleviate financial loan to help alleviate thancial distress caused, directly or indirect-ly, by drought, hail, excessive moisture, or related conditions oc-curring in 1988. The maximum loan amount is $500,000.

The program was authorized by the Disaster Assistance Act of 1988. Interim regulations implementing the program were published in the Federal Register on January 3, 1989. with a 60-day public comment period. The program became available upon made after the comment period.

The program will parallel in most respects the existing FmHA business and industry guaranteed loan program. Loans will be made by regular commercial lenders, at negotiated interest rates, with FmHA guarantees providing protection against loss should the loan fail. The main difference between the programs, in addition to the $500,000 cap. grams, in addition to the $500,000 cap, is that the drought and disaster program will guarantee only principal, while the regular business and industry program guarantees both principal and interest.

Interested parties may obtain addi tional information by contacting the FaHA State Office, Community and Ranka State Office, Community and Business Programs Division at 402-437-5556. Information packets will also be available at the FmHA District Office located in Norfolk. On-ly the State Office will accept and process applications, however.

Alternatives to Gallstone Surgery

Gallstones are formed when ar abnormally large amount of choles-terol is secreted by the liver and crystallizes in the gallbladder. An estimated 20 million Americans have gallstones.

Historically, surgery was the only way to rid the gallbladder of these stones. But stone-dissolving medications and alternative procedures are now available.

Recently the U.S. Food & Drug Administration approved ursodiol, a prescription drug that dissolves gallstones. Ursodiol, a bile acid derivative, destroys small-to-medium sized stones that do not contain calcium and cannot easily be seen in x-rays. This new medicine reduces stones to a liquid that easily passes through the bile ducts into the small intestine. It is prescribed for non-emergency and high-risk surgical candidates. It is welltolerated and has few side effects.

Some stones can be broken down without medicines through the use of shock wave lithotripsy. With this nonsurgical method, stones are pulverized to a powder. Stones found in the common bile duct occasionally can be dissolved with an infusion of a cholesterol solvent medicine. Removal of stones can be accomplished by inserting a probe with a small wire basket into
