Taylor talks about establishing goals

By Chuck Hackenmiller

Steve Taylor, Nebraska Cornhusker who is going to play professional football in the Canadian Football League at Edmonton, finds that establishing goals are important.

He wanted to become a professional athlete. Taylor went on to become a skillful quarterback that lead the University of Nebraska to a Big 8 title his senior year.

TO ACCOMPLISH academic goals, Taylor said he had to work very hard and stayed up late at nights studying. "My mother was very strict on this. There were a lot of things that I had to sacrifice to achieve my goal," Taylor said.

Among those sacrifices was to move away from his family and friends and attend a high school in San Diego, where he would have a better opportunity to be recruited by a major university. And he was — by the University of Nebraska.

"Be focused on whatever you want to do. Learn your weaknesses and also learn to get along good with people. Find out what you do well and focus on that," Taylor mentioned. He said that "success is not how

So you've had "one of those days?" We'll wager it was nothing compared to what Officer Frank Hanlon endured in the performance of his duties one bright morning in 1875:

"Officer Hanlon went out on the morning in 1875:

"Officer Hanlon went out on the road to Florence this morning to levy an execution on some property belonging to a man named Wiggins. He arrived at Wiggins' mansion at an early hour, just as the morning hash was being dished up for Wiggins and the little Wigginses by Mrs. Wiggins. The officer of the law was conducted into the sitting room, where he made known his mission to Wiggins. Mrs. Wiggins, who was engaged in frying beefsteak, hearing the announcement gave a shrill shriek, and fell fainting on a chair mear at hand: Her weight, 195 pounds, emoralized the chair, and a pan of hot grease was knocked over. The contents fell on the household pet, an aged cat.

"Catastrophe upon catastrophe

*Catastrophe upon catastrophe followed in quick succession. The singed feline, feeling intense pain, gave one jump and went through the only whole pane of glass in the window. In the course of her aerial flight,—she collided—with a castor in the hands of the eldest Wiggins girl, who was setting the table. The castor dropped upon the tail of the dog, snoozing on the floor. He gave a yelp and bounced through the window, after the cat,—breaking out what the cat had left unbroken, and knocking down one of the little Wigginses.

"THE DOG AND cat, upon emerging from the house, frightened Wiggings' chickens so they flew to the yard of his neighbor, a Mr. Hansen, Hansen, upon seeing Wiggins' chickens trespassing upon his premises, came out of the house with a double-barreled shotgun. It was his intention first to give the Wiggins dog a shot, and then to let fly at the Wiggins chickens. In the excitement of the moment, his aim was unsteady. He missed the canine, but wounded the feline, and killed three of his own chickens, who had become mixed in with those of Wiggins. All of these exciting events occurred with such rapidity that Officer Hanion had hardly time to realize the situation before they had all

"The report of the gun, how-ever, drew him out of the house, and-he-settled-the hostilities that were brewing by threatening to arrest Hansen then and there if he

"RETURNING TO the house, he assisted in quieting the seven hun-gry young Wigginses, who were all crying, and who thought they were all going to be murdered, and in reviving, with two pails of water, Mrs. Wiggins, who, upon hearing of the wound that had been inflicted upon her pet cat, almost fainted again.

"After peace and quietude had been restored, the cruel-hearted officer loaded up his wagen with a loaded up his wagen to exempt such articles as were not exempt from execution of $13.85, and brought them into town to be dis-posed of at auction. When he left the cat was doing as well as could be expected under the circum-stances."

However, the exact amount of excess revenue is not available at this time. Additionally, if other programs are passed which require new funding, such as the Gover-nor's income tax reduction bill or the indigent care bill, sufficient revenue may not be available even for the first year.

If the economy would slow, the

And then I forget about them. The reading material is soon covered by more "ideas" and by then there is no more room to stack anything in that corner of the desk. So then I move to another corner of the desk and soon that is filled. It doesn't take long before the four corners of my desk are completely overtaken by paper

So then I get a card table and start filling in the corners of that. Now, I have barely enough room to locate my computer and I'm forced to place the keyboard on my lap to type this column.

I would say I'm a classic example of how "not" to handle paper

LET ME analyze this a little more. This is a brief inventory of what is on my office desk. I have five news releases from Wayne State College to run in upcoming newspaper edition; an old city council and school board agenda along with information that was distributed at a previous city council meeting; a three deck cil meeting; a three organization tray that is completely in disarray, with pieces of paper sticking out in each level; bookends and slots to hold plat maps, a the-saurus, dictionary, some telephone books and more paper filled with notes; a city code book, a National Geographic and another magazine titled National Safety and Health Hazards; a beer mug that I use to store loose change; a telephone and stapler (somewhere); two cameras and two different lenses; mileage log book; a pocket calculator; tape recorder; a photo cube featuring my family members: featuring my family members; some paper clips scattered throughout; note pads; photo negatives and tapes; and a folderorganizer which represents my "good intentions."

The overflow to the card table isn't any better.

BUT I'M NOT the only person in the world who has a unique way to organize their desks.

I recall city administrator Phil Kloster's desk totally covered with paper — but he certainly knew where to look when I asked for information. Other office desks I often see are in the county court Judge office, staffed by Pearla Benjamin and Carol Brown. They seem to do a good job in keeping all the records of court matters in their right places.

Sources say that Max Kathol, accountant from Wayne, has an "organized clutter" on his office desk, with files within easy reach. Tax preparer Ray Buell also has a clear avenue of paperwork on his desk, which is important if you want to see the person talking to you from across your desk.

Dr. Donald Mash's desk, in the executive office at Wayne State executive office at Wayne State college, is certainly neat and clear. And I must say that Superintendents Francis Haun and Don Leighton, desks that I see often, seem to bear no resemblance to a messy desk. I can't verify those facts however when it comes to facts, however, when it comes to putting the budget together. So what am I going to do about my messy desk? I have three options, I believe.

I CAN EITHER get on my high horse and start doing some spring cleaning before the desk collapses; cleaning before the desk collapses; I can have a garage sale; or I can make the Boy Scouts rich by donating all the paper to their recycling cause.

Perhaps I can buy that book on paper waste. There's a small section on my desk that I can store it until I'm ready to read it.

"A cluttered desk is postponed decisions," the speaker (who inci-dentally wrote a book on paper waste) said in her speech following

With a little over two-thirds of the session over, the Legislature is effectively on its way to providing property tax relief that has only been talked about for so long.

As I indicated last week in this column, a new proposal has been developed. LB 84, considered a compromise between urban and rural interests, was given first round approval by a significant majority this past week. The bill calls for both homestead exemptions to homeowners and rebates for agricultural and commercial owners.

The bill calls for a two year program that would result in an estimated $94 million property tax reduction. There have been claims the bill could become law without a tax increase. This is based on the amount of current revenue collected above projections. lected above projections.

After the amendment sparked debate regarding the amount of funding needed to guarantee the property tax relief plan, I withdrew it until we have more exact information on which to base our decision. I do not want the promise of

Also advancing this week was a bill sponsored by Senator Hefner, LB 325 would make Nebraska the first state to ban the sale of certain non-degradable products. These products are becoming a very seri-ous environmental and solid waste ous environmental and solid waste disposal problem that we must address. Items in the bill include plastic rings that hold beverage containers together, plastic bags and disposable diapers. The ban would go into effect over the next Four years.

Because of Senator Hefner's effort and individuals concern with our environmental responsibility, the Legislature advanced the bill

THE BILL contained three parts. The first part would ban all beverage container plastic rings by 1991. In their place the bill calls for biodegradable or photodegradable rings. The second part would prequire grocery or shopping bags to be degradable or recyclable by January of 1992. The third provision requires disposable diapers be of the degradable variety by 1993 if the Director of Environmental Control determines these diapers are available and competively priced at that time.

The significance of this legisla-tion is two-fold. First, it brings about pressure on the industries to make changes for the future to help protect the environment. And, second, the major alternative to the plastics that are currently being used is a material that is made with corn.
This would greatly enhance the market for one of our abundant market for one of our abundant agricultural products. We know that technology has already developed the products; the problem is that the industry does not have the incentive to pursue and perfect them to adequately compete with the postpage. with the petroleum based products. The Legislature is providing this incentive. This legislation can help bring about the pressure that environ-mentally concerned consumers have been unable to apply.

Japan could reduce trade tensions

The government of Japan, which has made a commitment to double its official development assistance, could use a significant portion of that increased foreign assistance to purchase U.S. agricul-tural commodities and make those commodities available to international hunger relief programs.

I have introduced a resolution in the House of Representatives that urges the President to direct the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of State and the Admin-istrator of the Agency for Interna-tional Development to encourage the government of Japan to use a portion of its increased foreign as-sistance funds to significantly in-crease the availability of international food aid supplies.

The United States has demonstrated a sustained commitment to making food available for devel-opment and relief purposed through the PL 480 Food for Peace and other food donation programs. Japan has now made a commitment to double its official development assistance from $25 billion between 1983 and 1987 to $50 billion between 1988 and

At Kerrey's recommendation CRP regulation changed

Following a recommendation Following a recommendation from U.S. Senator Bob Kerrey, the USDA has changed a regulation that discouraged farmers from enrolling land in the Conservation Reserve Program (CRP).

The regulation, which came to the attention of Kerrey through input from Nebraska farmers given to Kerrey's Nebraska Agriculture representative Gene Glock, stated that farmers who farm their own land in addition to land owned by others, such as schools and churches, needed to get permis-sion from such landlords before the farmér could enroll even his own land in the CRP program.

THE RESCINDED regulation also made all the farmer's landlords liable if the farmer violated his CRP contract only on his own farm.

"I am pleased that through input from Nebraskans, the has agreed that we needed to change a regulation that was unfair to farmers and a significant deter-rent to CRP "enrollment," Kerrey

"It was wrong to hold others liable in the event that a CRP con-tract was breached, and I com-mend USDA for recognizing that this policy was unfair and short-sighted," Kerrey said.

"This change should help the Ag Department reach the man-dated goal of 45 million acres placed in the CRP program by 1990," Kerrey said. He added that notices will now go out to ASCS offices informing them of the changes.

Consumers open markets

This week, April 23-29, is National Consumer Week. The annual observance recognizes the consumer as an important part of our economic system. The theme for 1989 is "Consumers Open Markets."

This theme is especially appropriate in the rural areas. Consumers open and close markets by their shopping patterns. The recent survey of Wayne consumers by the Wayne Herald points out another important responsibility of the consumer. It is up to the consumer to communicate their needs and preferences to the businesses in their community.

Another important responsibility is for consumers to be informed One.

Another important responsibility is for consumers to be informed. One function of National Consumer Week is to provide educational information to consumers.

What is your "sales IQ?" Maybe the next article will update your sales

Watch for special sales
Thrifty consumers are always on the alert to stretch their resources while obtaining satisfactory goods and services.
Shopping at special sales can be a good way to save money. Take advantage of special sales if they offer products and services you need at lower prices. But for some, the word "sale" can catch the eye and end in an unplanned rush to the store.

Businesses offer sales for many reasons, such as to make room for new merchandise, to sell surplus or old items, to encourage you to come into the store, and to introduce new products. For example, clearance sales are generally used to sell items left at the end of the season or discontinued models. Anniversary and special promotion sales (such as Back-to-School) are used to increase sales.

Shopping at sales involves the same kind of thinking, planning and comparing used to determine a good buy anytime. Examine sale items carefully! Be alert to prices — have they really been reduced? Although sale items may be regular, high-quality merchandise, lower merchandise is sometimes offered.

Learn about "sales talk" — it is a special language. For example, when "irregulars" or "seconds" are being offered, the color, construction, size or other features may not be perfect. Such imperfections generally do not affect the use of the item. "Slightly damaged" items also are not in perfect condition, but you may be able to repair the flaw if necessary. "Soiled" items may be dirty from customer handling.

Remember:

-Nothing is a bargain unless you need it. -Know the price the item usually sells for -The time, money and energy spent getting to the sale may offset the savings.

—For the best bargains, shop at the beginning and the end of a big

ane. —Be alert and watch for damaged articles. —Know the store's policy about returning sale items.

Farmers improve their irrigation scheduling

The number of farmers using irrigation scheduling to determine when to irrigate has been increasing since 1984, according to a 1988 survey conducted by Extension Irrigation Specialist Bill Kranz.

The survey was conducted as a follow-up to the Agricultural Energy Conservation Project conducted by the Cooperative Extension Service between 1984 and 1988 by Kranz of the University of Nebraska Northeast Research and Extension Center in Concord. Extension Center in Concord.

The survey indicated a 19 per-cent increase in the number of farmers who have heard of irrigation scheduling practices and a 25 percent increase in the number of farmers who currently use scheduling in their farming opera-

A move away from self-scheduling to hiring a consultant or field scout to determine when to irrigate was also found, according to Kranz.

"We found that time availability was a big deterrent to using irrigation scheduling, but farmers have solved that problem by hiring peo-ple to determine when irrigation is needed," he said.

The goal of the Ag Energy project was not only to decrease the amount of energy used by farmers in pumping water, but also to encourage water conservation. To accomplish these goals, extension specialist assisted 35 farmers between January 1984 and January 1988 with irrigation scheduling uses 1988 with irrigation scheduling us-ing tensiometers and evaluation and adjustment of pumping plants.

Each farmer in Holt and Antëlope counties irrigates an average of 460 acres of their farmland. Farmers being supplied with irriga tion scheduling assistance applied approximately 9.5 inches of water to their crops, while those not receiving assistance applied approximately 10.9 inches of water.

FARMERS TAKING part in the FARMERS TAKING part in the project also experienced a yield increase of four bushels per acre, according to Kranz.

"Although that number isn't statistically significant, the yield increase equals a $1,500 increase in return per irrigation pivot. In addition, the farmers using irrigation scheduling experienced a $450 decrease in pumping cost per year," he said....

"The information collected year," he said...

"The information collected shows that the use of irrigation scheduling is cost effective, and it doesn't matter whether the farmer schedules his own fields or employs someone to do the scheduling f him. The key is to apply only the amount of water needed by the crop, and apply it when the crop needs it," Kranz concluded.

Information on irrigation scheduling can be obtained from local extension agents or from Kranz at the university of Nebraska Extension and Percentage Northeast Extension and Research Center in Concord.

Puttin' up with Pete By Kevin Peterson

It's finally here. All winter long the anticipation of getting back on the golf course grew to the level of counting days and hours before April would get here. In fact, with the super warm January we experienced, I managed to sneak a few holes in on Super Bowl Sunday. Although winter is not my favorite time of year, when the Country Club doors open on that first day of April, I knew that spring had finally made its entrance.

Before we go any further I have to mention some of my Wayne Herald comrades who also joined the Country Club for the first time this year and are trying their hands at league as well.

First off, there's Rick Kerkman. "Kerk" is the closest to my age and he began playing golf around the time that I did. We also golf approximately 90 percent of the time together. He of course knows all 37 of my weaknesses and I know his. But that's as far as it goes. We know each others weakness but we can't correct it. Once we get something down, something else fails that we were managing to do right to begin with.

Then there's "Hack" who has the best nickname on the course. I got to admit, Hack can hit a ball with the best of them. Unfortu-

Then there's "Hack" who has the best nickname on the course. I got to admit, Hack can hit a ball with the best of them. Unfortunately, playing softball doesn't count on the golf course. No really, he's got a fine drive and if he ever puts it in the right fairway, he'll probably get an exemption for the tour. Hack's a lot of fun to play golf with and even though he may not have shined on opening league night, I guarantee he'll have his game face on when his team plays mine.

Gary Wright is tackling the course in league for the first time and according to him, the course is tackling back.

The person who really deserves the credit for hauling us four out

The person who really deserves the credit for hauling us four out to the course is Dave Diediker. Dave is a fine golfer but I only have one complaint about him. He can hit a 275-yard drive and be disappointed because its just off the fairway. The only 275-yard drive I've ever hit is on number 11 where I promptly got a hold of a long ball into the corn field.

Dave has helped my game to some extent just by watching. Of course the reason why he's helping me is because he gets bored waiting to hit his second shot because I'm laying four when we get to where his drive landed.

At any rate, Wednesday came and went just like any other day. I thoroughly enjoyed myself, incidently, I was pitted against Don Larsen. Of course everyone knows Larsen, you know somewhere around 7 foot tall, compared to me, just over 4' foot. I was already intimidated.

It was a good time however, and I promised Dennis Spangler that I would leave some space in my column for his eagle. Dennis easily eagled number two after a good drive and a spectacular second shot which left him about eight feet from the cup.
Larsen had a nice birdie on number five even though he got some help by our Mike Fillipi who hit his ball on a chip of his own. As nervous as I was, golfing against better players, I believe I fared O.K., and the main thing was that I had fun and am already looking make a person faster or stronger, said Goetz. He said steroid use is illegal, except for when the drug is used for medical purposes to treat people who must add more weight.

HE SAID A tip-off in detecting steroid users is by observing their record of injuries. They can easily sprain their ankle, twist a knee or sometimes have 15 injuries within a three week time frame "Their body is not made to carry pounds on a frame made 150 pounds," said Goetz.

Steroid use can also be de-tected if a person lifting weights often gets a bloody nose. That is due to the rise in blood pressure and increase in cholesterol. Another bad side of the drug is that the oils it produces can cause acne problems later on.

Women who use steroids, which wither with des steads, with is likely only a small percentage, will find themselves taking on male characteristics in later years.

Most of the steroid products are—purchased—through_the_black market. There were times when the drug was advertised through publications or information on the publications or information on the product was sent out on flyers.

THE STEROID origin goes back to the Hitler era. The drug formula was found in 1935 and Hitler used was found in 1935 and Hitler used the drug to increase the weights of individuals at the concentration camps, or he gave the drug to his troops so that they were bigger and more aggressive.

Goetz said steroids came into the sports scene in the 1950's, often used by the Russians and East Germans in athletic events.

"What good was it to win a race and then be found dead weeks and then be found dead weeks later," said Goetz to the Middle School students.

'If steroids are supposed to be such good things to use, then why isn't everybody talking about them," he added.
