Ceremony set for Sunday

Hospital plans to dedicate addition

A dedication of Providence Medical Center's recently completed addition is scheduled at the hospital for Sunday, April 30 at 2 p.m.

Groundbreaking ceremonies for the building project took place April 18, 1988.

The need for the addition was recognized by the Governing Board of Providence Medical Center to accommodate: expansion of services; outpatient clinics; community service meetings; storage requirements for equipment and records; maintenance equipment storage; an need for access for incoming ambulances; and domiciliary services.

This new 12-bed equivalent wing addition was structured so that if there was a need for more acute care beds or other levels of care, the ground floor space could be converted to the level of care rooms needed and the storage, meeting rooms and other areas could be moved to the basement with little added construction.

PRESENTLY, the new wing has a multi-purpose room which can be used for detention or other acute care needs. The pharmacy at the hospital was moved to the new wing, and in the former pharmacy location is an outpatient clinic office. A large meeting/education room is also available. On Monday, a group of students from the Wayne-Carroll Schools was using the large meeting room to learn CPR techniques.

Also in the new wing are a medical record and equipment storage area and an intensive care room adjoining the two now available for cardiac patients.

Another feature in the new wing are two rooms provided for domiciliary care. A domiciliary facility is any institution, facility, place or building where there is provided accommodations and supervision of individuals for a period exceeding 24 consecutive hours.

These individuals are essentially capable of managing their own affairs, but are in need of supervision — including supervision of nutrition — by the care facility on a regular, continuing basis.

Providence Medical Center is owned and operated by the Missionary Benedictine Sisters.

Wayne America nixed

By Chuck Hackenmiller
Managing editor

"Wayne America" won't be painted on the white-colored standpipe on the west edge of Wayne.

Neither will the word "Wayne." All that the standpipe will get is a fresh coat of white paint.

At the April 11 city council meeting, city council members were approached by Lyle George of Wayne to approve a plan to paint "Wayne America" on the standpipe — to be consistent with the similar name painted on Wayne's newest water tower on the east edge of the city limits.

Prior to George's request, the city council had accepted the bid of W.S. Bunch Company of Omaha to paint the exterior and interior (if needed) of the standpipe at a cost of $36,787. The alternate bid said it would cost another $750 to paint the words "Wayne America" instead of just "Wayne" on the city standpipe.

GEORGE SAID lettering the previous water structure "Wayne America" has greatly benefited the city of Wayne because of the publicity the water tower has already received. He said there are at least 18 other cities across the United States that have the name of Wayne. Designating Wayne as "Wayne America" would separate this community from the other cities, he said.

The council, at that previous meeting, said they would look into George's request and discuss it at their next council meeting, which they did review on Tuesday night.

However, there was little discussion. A motion by Councilman Darrel Heier to allow the standpipe to be painted, with no lettering whatsoever, was approved unanimously by the city council.

Students conquer English barrier

By Chuck Hackenmiller
Managing editor

English can be one of the world's most difficult languages. There are words that sound the same but are spelled differently. Some words have the same spelling but have many definitions.

Both Brian Li and his sister, Jane, know first-hand about the complicated English language. They came to Wayne during the summer of 1988, with their mother Grace, to be reunited again with their father, Terry Li who is currently a math/science instructor at Wayne State College.

Their home had been Taipei, Taiwan. Their father was well acquainted with the English language while living in Taiwan. Brian, age 14, knew a little English. Jane, age 12, and her mother knew only of reading and speaking the language of their Taiwan homeland and consequently were not able to fluently speak the English language.

So when both Brian and Jane enrolled into the Wayne-Carroll School District this school year, school board members and administrative officials knew what objectives had to be accomplished to meet the two students' educational requirements.

It was necessary for both to learn the English language before each could concentrate on many of the required subjects offered by the school districts at their own grade level.

AND AS THEIR language arts instructor, Jill Pickinpaugh, would attest — both Brian and Jane have made enormous gains in learning the English language. Jane, who at the start of the school year could only speak in short phrases and recite the alphabet, is now at the sixth grade level in language arts.

"They are both excellent in grammar and learning parts of speech. They are doing just super," said Pickinpaugh.

Brian has competed in various Math competitions and assists his schoolmates in Wayne with the subject of Algebra. His other high school subjects and activities include Art, Cadet Band (he plays the trombone), Physical Education and English. This year he is also participating in track and also played basketball.

Jane also studies Math along with her Language Arts and is involved in music, playing both the clarinet and the piano.

During the initial stages of teaching the English language to Jane, Pickinpaugh said the lessons in speaking and writing the language were learned through identification of pictures and then through repetition.

PICKINPAUGH is encouraged by the rate which both Brian and Jane have progressed through the English lessons. It would take an English-speaking child, beginning at the baby stage, about 20,000 hours to learn the language. It takes an average of 1,800 hours for those enrolled in an "English as a Second Language" (ESL) classroom to grasp the language. For adults attending college, it takes an intensive 280 hours or more to learn the English language.

JANE, BRIAN and their English teacher Jill Pickinpaugh have worked together in mastering the English language.

Family reunited after 49 years

A search which began in 1988 ended recently when rural Wayne resident Pat Oberg and her brother, Harold Larsen of Warren, Texas, were reunited with a sister, Rita Soland, after 49 years.

Pat and Harold were adopted by Melvin and Mildred Larsen of Wayne, while sister Rita was adopted by another family at the time of separation.

In 1982, while checking her adoption records for health reasons, Rita discovered she had a brother and sister, although she was given no information on their whereabouts.

It was in the fall of 1988 that Pat began a search for her sister, making several trips to Omaha to check records, etc.

Since both sides of the family had made an application for family information, the legal process was overcome and family information was given to Rita.

Rita contacted Pat on Nov. 16, 1988.

ON JAN. 2 OF this year, Pat and Harold traveled to Lowell, Wyo. to meet with their younger sister Rita and brother-in-law Irvin.

Rita and Irvin came back to Nebraska to visit the Obergs on April 2. From Wakefield, the two sisters and their husbands traveled to Warren, Texas to visit older brother Harold.

Wayne boys win triangular Monday afternoon was parent's night for the boys and girls track teams. It marked the end of Wayne's home track stand with the triangular against Hartington Cedar Catholic and Pender.

In the boys division there was no race at all. Wayne breezed effortlessly to a 110-32 score over runner-up Pender. Cedar managed just 19 points. Wayne finished with 12 first place finishes in 15 events.

Jess Zeiss copped first place in the long jump with a leap of 19'1" and teammate Chad Davis took second with a jump of 18'9". John Murphy placed fourth in the long jump. Matt Peterson was the top high jumper with a 5'6" leap while Cory Wieseler took runner-up honors.

Wayne finished first, third and fourth in the shot put with Eric Liska winning the event with a put of 43'10 1/2". Matt Bruggeman placed third with an effort of 39'11" and Neil Carnes took fourth with a put of 38'6".

Matt Peterson made it two gold medals on the day by capturing the 110 meter high hurdles with an 18.48 time. Jason Ehrhardt placed second with an effort of 18.9. Chad Davis meanwhile led the Blue Devils to a first, second, third place finish in the 100 meter dash with a time of 11.81. Davis barely edged Zeiss who finished second with a time of 11.82. Mike Hillier placed third with an 11.9 effort.

Craig Dyer was the top 400 meter dash man with a 53.1 time while Greg DeNaeyer was runner-up with a 53.6 time. Adam Mnsny placed fourth with a time of 55.1. John Murphy breezed to the finish line in first place in the 300 intermediate hurdles with a 44.5 effort. Matt Peterson finished third in the same event with a time of 48.0.

Chad Davis earned his second individual gold by winning the 200 meter dash in a time of 23.98. Wayne incidently finished first, second, third and fourth in the event. Mike Hillier finished second with an effort of 24.54 and Craig Dyer notched third at 24.66 and Rusty Hamer grabbed fourth in a time of 25.01.

Willy Gross ran a 2:12.7 time in the 800 which was good enough to win the event while Jeremy Fletcher finished fourth in the same event with an effort of 2:21.9. Todd Fuelberth and Ben Tierney finished third and fourth respectively in the 1600 meter run with times of 5:21.0 and 5:26.02. Wayne captured all three of the relays, the 4x100, 4x400 and 4x800 with times in order of 46.66, 3:42.77 and 9:06.1.

Among the three events Wayne didn't capture first in was the discus, where Matt Bruggeman, Eric Liska and Dan Wiseman finished second, third and fourth each. Bruggeman's second place toss was for 119'10" while Liska's was for 113'3". Wiseman tossed the discus for 113'1".

In the 3200 meter run Ben Tierney placed second with a time of 12:08. K. Saito and Scott Fuelberth finished third and fourth in the same event. Todd Fuelberth and Ben Tierney each placed third and fourth in the 1600 with Fuelberth timed at 5:21.0 and Tierney, 5:26.02.

Cedar edges Wayne
Hartington Cedar Catholic and Wayne's girls track teams have virtually battled to the wire during every meeting they've had this season. Monday was no exception, however, this time Cedar edged the Blue Devils by a 68-59 margin. Pender finished third with 23 points.

The Blue Devils had eight first place finishes out of 15 events compared to six by Cedar, but Cedar got more production out of third and fourth places. Dana Nelson took top honors in the long jump with a leap of 14'7 1/2" while Danielle Fallesen did likewise in the high jump with a 4'11" effort. Tonya Exleben finished second in the high jump with a 4'8" leap and Dana Nelson finished fourth in the event.

Heidi Reeg won the shot put with a put of 32'9" and Cher Reeg finished third in the event to her cousin with a put of 28'3 1/2". Teresa Ellis took first place honors in the 3200 meter run with an effort of 13:28.3 while Tara Exleben finished third in the same event at 15:48.2.

Tammy Geiger took first in the 800 meter run with a 2:28.2 and Holly Paige took the final individual first place finish in the 1600 meter run with an effort of 6:14.19. Karl Lutt finished fourth in the event with 6:47.5 effort. Wayne's foursome of Holly Paige, Rachel Haase, Teresa Ellis and Tammy Geiger took some more time off their 3200 meter relay time with a 10:22.7 clocking. That time may well place them at the top of Class B at the present time. Wayne's sprint relay team also took time off of their previous best with a 43.78 effort.

The 4x400 meter relay team finished second with a 4:30.1 time. Kristy Hansen and Dana Nelson finished third and fourth respectively in the 100 meter dash with times of 13.4 and 13.6.

WSC record even

The Wayne State baseball squad has won 10 of its last 14 games and are sitting on a .500 mark for the season at 22-22. During the past four days the Wildcats played eight ball games and until Tuesday afternoon at Overin Field, coach Lenny Klaver was witnessing a streak of six straight victories.

Visiting Morningside put an end to that streak Tuesday as they swept a twin bill from the hosts by scores of 19-17, and 9-6. In the opener Wayne State pounded out 21 hits in a remarkably high scoring baseball game. Morningside shelled out 20 hits.

"It wasn't so much poor pitching as it was just great hitting," Klaver said. "Morningside hit the ball hard and of course we come up with 21 hits." Rob Zulkoski had a marvelous opening game with two home runs and a 3-5 performance from the plate with five RBI's.

Tim Wobken rapped three hits and recorded three RBI's and John Staab was a perfect 2-2 in the contest. Destrly Jaeger went 3-4 and Scott Schultz was 2-5 with a pair of RBI's. Therron Brockish and Jeff Pasold went 3-4 from the plate each with Brockish notching two RBI's in the process. Brockish however, was credited with the loss on the mound.

Wayne State still hit the ball hard in the second game but the Wildcats could not come up with the split as Morningside took a 9-6 decision. John Hagen took the loss from the hill.

On Monday at Overin Field in Wayne the Wildcats came up with two big victories over the University of Nebraska-Omaha, (UNO). In the opener Chris Simon was on the hill and pitched Wayne State to an 8-5 victory. Wayne State came up with two fourth inning runs and exploded for five runs in the fifth and added one more in the sixth to account for the score.

The Mavericks were ailed by 12 walks to Wayne State batters. Destrly Jaeger hit a solo home run in the sixth inning and Jeff Pasold, notched a single and Wayne State's final three hits came from the bat of Pat Wordekemper. Wordekemper had a pair of singles and a 2-run double. Simon incidently, gave up only two hits.

Don Graham tossed a 2-hit shut out in the second game which enabled Wayne State to take a 4-0 decision and the sweep. Graham struck out four including three in the sixth inning. Wayne State scored all of its runs in the first inning.

Destrly Jaeger had a 2-run double and Scott Schultz notched a single for all the hits the Wildcats would get in the entire contest.

Last Saturday Wayne State swept a pair from Dana by scores of 11-9 and 5-3 and on Sunday the Wildcats traveled to Doane and swept a pair from them by scores of 8-3 and 13-3.

Kevin Boham tossed 3-hitter in the opener and Corey Weinmaster took the victory in the second game as both pitchers pitched complete games.

Spring game set

This Friday signals a new beginning and an end for Wayne State. The Wildcat football team will have their annual spring game. First, its the beginning of the Dennis Wagner regime as mentor of the Wayne State football program, and Second, it marks the end of spring practice for the players.

Wagner is going all out in his initial year. He has started something which hopefully turns in to be an annual event marking the end of spring football. It is designed for the community and surrounding communities to support Wayne State athletics in a positive way in which everyone gains something.

For instance, Friday night from 5:30-7:30 p.m. at the Wayne Country Club is a Beef and Beer, (and pop). Bash with proceeds going toward the athletic fund. The cost is $15 per couple and $10 for an individual. Those under the age of 21 pay just $3.

The cost includes all the beef you can eat and all the drink you can drink plus the cost allows you a ticket to see the spring game which begins at 7:15 at the college field.

That's not all. If you are a golf fan then Wagner and company has designed something for you as well. For $25 you can eat and drink all you want at the bash on Friday night at the Country Club and go and watch the game at 7:15 at the college field. However, on Saturday morning about 9 a.m., tee-off for an 18-hole golf tournament will be held at Wakefield's Country Club. The one cost of $25 includes everything. Not a bad price!

Wagner's recruits for the 1989 season will be on campus Friday and the spring game will be their first opportunity to see how things are going to be run on the college level.

At 4:30 p.m. the pre-game meal will take place with the players and the recruits eating together. The pre-game meeting from 5:30-6:30 p.m. will also consist of the players and recruits. The half hour between 6:30 and 7:00 will see the Wayne State coaches with the recruits only, and according to Assistant coach Andrew Disney, the first part of the game will be like regular practice for the benefit of the recruits.

"We'll have a 40 to 60 play scrimmage," Disney said. "We'll go through different situations like running consecutive plays where we have a first and ten, and then going through plays like its third and four, etc."

There will be a public address announcer explaining what is going on at different times for the public to make it easier to watch and understand.

This is a new beginning for the Wildcats and I personally think it's a perfect opportunity for the community to get and out and support the new staff from the onset. Having a large crowd on hand for the bash, the golf and the game would not only give the staff an extra emotional lift to end spring drills on, but it would pump up the players that much more and that would undoubtedly carry over into the fall, and who knows what could happen.

Carnival fun

Pickinpaugh said Brian will accomplish learning English, the second language, in 270 hours. Jane should complete her ESL in 485 hours. Brian will be a sophomore at Wayne Carroll next school year and Jane will be in seventh grade.

Brian said he finds Wayne-Carroll School not so similar to his school in Taipei, Taiwan. "In Taiwan, students have to go to school at 7 a.m. and they get out of school at 6:30 in the evening," he said. The students attend five full days of school and also go for a half-day of classes on Saturday, he said.

"We bring our own lunch bag and we have to take many tests each day," he said. His high school curriculum in Taiwan would consist of Chinese, English, History, Social Studies, Health, Math and two Science courses, he added.

Taiwan students must pass a test to get into high school. They also must pass another test to advance on to college, Brian said.

"If you don't pass the test, you must try again because if you do not go to college, it is very hard to find a job," he said.

BRIAN SAID HE likes everything about the United States "but the weather." Jane says she enjoys the weather and likes the American food. Both said they miss their friends and relatives in Taiwan. In Taiwan, the Li family lived in an apartment. "Now, our home is bigger than an apartment, but it is not a big home," Brian said.

Next school year Pickinpaugh will be teaching the sixth grade students at the Wayne Middle School. Brian and Jane will be mainstreamed into their respective grade levels. Both feel a bit worried and concerned.

"But it's going to be exciting, too," Jane said.

Pickinpaugh is optimistic about how Brian and Jane will perform academically in the years ahead.

"They'll do fine. Both are hard workers. In their culture, they know how to study hard," she said.

Questions raised on project assessment place an old problem-causing line — would be assessed 2/3 of the cost of the project while the city would pick up the balance.

Kloster said the council, at the time when the project was discussed, was insistent that all those who were using the old water line would have to sign their name to the contract before the project could begin. It was believed that all the adjacent property owners along the old water line had signed the contract.

HE SAID THE city later became aware that the Cap Peterson property was hooked to the old water line. Kloster said there was nothing that could be done to force the Peterson property to go into the improvement district, nor was there anything that could be done to force him to get off the existing line.

"It would not have been in the best interest of the city or the property owners along the improvement district if the property were to remain on the old line. If he stayed on the old line, he would have had to be assessed the whole liability on that street," Kloster said.

The city used the best remedy available to handle the situation, he mentioned.

Wiltse asked the council: "If anything happens to the new water line, will everyone be assessed the same charges?"

Kloster said that it would be the city water distribution's problem, not the homes adjacent to the new water main, should problems arise. "If problems developed from the water main to the property owner's house, then it would be your own individual problems," he said.

Assistant City Attorney Bob Enz said the actions, from a legal standpoint, were proper because all parties involved were operating with the knowledge they had of the old water line.

IN OTHER action Tuesday, the city council heard a request to allow a trailer home to be parked at a short term construction site at 10th and Logan in Wayne. The request was from Pastor Jeff Anderson, pastor of Grace Lutheran Church in Wayne.

A Lutheran Student Center will be constructed on the site by Laborers for Christ, a project expected to begin on June 12 and continue for six to eight weeks. Another five or six trailers will be parked in Victor Park on the south side of Wayne.

No action on the request was taken by the council. Instead, Enz advised the church representatives to contact the city planner and go through the permit process channels.

The city council also gave their endorsement to F.A.C.T. (Friendliest of All College Towns), a project of the Educational Committee of the Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce. Dr. Wayne Wessel, co-chairperson with Faunei Bennett of the Education Committee, said the F.A.C.T. project has "caught fire this year."

"We would like to build a community-awareness to create a friendly atmosphere," Wessel told the council members. "We would like to create an atmosphere in Wayne where friendliness is readily recognizable."

Bereuter: Celebrating Arbor Day

Arbor Day is a day that is rich with tradition and uniquely tied to Nebraska, its heritage and its future. I recall as a boy participating in Arbor Day ceremonies and learning about J. Sterling Morton, the man most associated with Arbor Day. Each spring when we celebrate this occasion, I am reminded of his contributions to our state and our nation—his concept of beauty and his vision of the future.

When Nebraskans celebrate Arbor Day, our past, present and future come together. We recall the open prairies battered by brutally strong winds. And we remember the dedicated efforts of one man to plant trees and promote conservation. Today in Nebraska we see all around us the evidence that he was right and that he succeeded. And, we know that all of us have a responsibility to carry on that task.

WHAT SORT OF a man was J. Sterling Morton? What was his background? Where did he come from? We must go far indeed, to George Morton, who was one of the Pilgrims, helped to make the arrangements for the Mayflower, and came to Plymouth. The Morton family lived first in New England, then moved from Vermont to New York State and then to Michigan. J. Sterling Morton came to the Territory of Nebraska after he finished college. He had an illustrious career here in Nebraska and a brief and very interesting career in Washington as Secretary of Agriculture.

In 1871, J. Sterling Morton told Nebraskans that "Orchards are the missionaries of culture... If every farmer in Nebraska will plant out and cultivate an orchard and a flower garden, together with a few forest trees, this will become... the best agricultural state in the Union."

Three years later, in 1874, the Governor of Nebraska proclaimed the state's first Arbor Day. Within the next ten years, by 1884, 350 million trees and shrubs had been planted in Nebraska.

We see J. Sterling Morton's monument in Nebraska, and we see it in Washington, D.C., as well. Washington is a city of government buildings and monuments, but it is also a city of trees. An abundance of flowers, shrubs, and trees makes the Capitol grounds beautiful.

Sometimes in the evening when the Congress is running late, I like to walk around the Capitol for some exercise and a short breather from the day's activities. Oh one of my walks, I noted that many of the trees are coded, which prompted me to do some further checking.

I LEARNED THAT since the early 1900's more than ninety-four memorial and historic trees have been planted on the Capitol grounds, seventy-three of which are still there. Naturally, I reviewed a list of those trees to see who or what was being memorialized.

Nebraska has donated and planted more trees on the grounds of our Nation's Capitol than any other state in the Union. The State of Nebraska has planted seven trees, the first of which was planted in 1936 to honor J. Sterling Morton. The last tree was planted on Arbor Day in 1976 to commemorate the state's Centennial.

We Nebraskans have reminded the Nation what can be done to add grace and beauty to our landscape. Arbor Day is a way that we can show respect for our environment. It is a time to remember the harshness of the frontier days and to remind ourselves that, just as our forefathers solved their problems, we can solve our problems.

On Arbor Day, we look back to the life and work of J. Sterling Morton, who came to Nebraska from Michigan as a young journalist and published, and practiced politics, and planted trees. He was a student of agriculture. His goal was to educate his fellow Nebraskans. And, in the long run, he educated his country.

Nebraska the answer

Top pesticide user?

Based on a 1982 statewide survey, approximately 30.1 million pounds of pesticides (active ingredient-a.i.) were used on Nebraska's major crops and rangeland. This statistic identifies Nebraska as one of the major users of agricultural pesticides in the United States.

With this in mind, pesticide stewardship should be a high priority. Extreme care should be practiced in terms of pesticide use regarding both personal and environmental safety, particularly as it relates to water quality.

The easiest way of preventing pesticide contamination of our very important resource, groundwater, is to substantially reduce or eliminate the use of pesticides. However, since this is not immediately realistic, at least one should ask some very important questions prior to using a pesticide.

1. Is the pesticide use necessary or is an alternative method of management or control equally effective and available?

2. If the pesticide application is necessary, is the application in accordance with the product label in terms of rate, method and timing of application and site of application?

3. If some pesticide remains in the spray tank, how can it be properly disposed of?

4. How can the pesticide containers be properly disposed of?

Many other questions could be asked, however, these are the most important. Protect our groundwater by eliminating potential contamination practices, reduce use whenever possible and properly dispose of remaining pesticide and their containers.

Scout fields now

Alfalfa weevil here

Alfalfa producers should begin scouting fields now for alfalfa weevils that have the potential to decrease yields and reduce hay quality. According to a University of Nebraska-Lincoln extension entomologist, early detection could deter potential problems which may be the result of this year's mild winter and the high infestation of weevils in the past.

Steve Danielson said the alfalfa weevil generally won't destroy an entire crop, but has the potential to significantly reduce the yield and quantity of the first cutting. Therefore, he said it is important for producers to begin scouting as soon as the new growth is about six inches tall.

Farmers should look for the weevil's early feeding damage on the newest leaflets. The damage will appear as small pin-sized holes on the newest leaves at the stem tips. The larvae, which are only an eighth-of-an-inch long at first, and green or yellow in color, may feed on these leaflets for three to four weeks during April and May.

DANIELSON suggested that fields be scouted on a weekly basis before the alfalfa reaches the bud stage. The stem-count method, which he recommends, involves carefully cutting 30 to 50 random stems from across the field. After collection in a bucket or other container, shake the stems to dislodge the larvae. Count the stems, measure their height and calculate the average stem height. Count the number of weevil larvae in the bottom of the container and divide by the number of stems to determine the average number of larvae per stem.

By comparing the number of larvae per stem to the height of the alfalfa on a chart, a producer can best determine the proper course of action. Danielson said that after the alfalfa has reached the bud stage, it is probably more profitable to harvest than to treat with an insecticide to control the alfalfa weevil larvae.

If the insecticide option is necessary, Danielson cautioned producers to follow the label directions carefully and wait the suggested amount of time before harvesting the alfalfa.

He warns producers "not to get caught unaware." Especially after the first cutting, inspection must be done every three to four days, as the adult weevils could be feeding on the new growth as it emerges, thus retarding growth and preventing the fields from "greening up." He said that if no significant growth is apparent in seven to 10 days, an insecticide application should be considered.

ALTHOUGH THE weevil is a potential problem for every alfalfa field, Danielson said not every field will be afflicted, he suggested that farmers maintain a close watch on the whole crop and check fields individually.

Factors which affect the severity of damage caused by the alfalfa weevil include alfalfa variety, growing conditions, degree of parasitism of the larvae and the weather. Danielson said weevil-resistant varieties of alfalfa can help to limit the amount of damage.

Danielson suggested that farmers refer to the 1989 Insect Management Guide for more information concerning appropriate insecticide application.

Keep a first-aid water tank

Anhydrous ammonia burns need quick treatment

Farmers injured in anhydrous ammonia application accidents may compound their injuries by delaying emergency treatment until they reach a hospital, a Cooperative Extension Service safety specialist said.

Rollin Schnieder, an agricultural engineer at the UNL Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, said anhydrous ammonia burns need prompt attention.

"The injured area should be flushed with water for at least 15 to 30 minutes before going to the hospital," he said. "Don't call for help. Let someone else do that."

Many people often mistakenly flush the injuries with water for a few minutes before going to the hospital, Schnieder said. But, he added, that response sometimes can worsen the wound, especially with eye injuries.

Dr. Robert Gillespie, who heads the burn center at St. Elizabeth Community Health Center in Lincoln, said an injured person might irrigate the eyes and think all of the chemical is out. But, he said, it usually isn't and the burn continues.

THE EYES should be flushed for at least 15 minutes, Gillespie said. Rescue personnel will continue to flush the eyes until the injured person reaches the burn center. Once there, the eyes are flushed for 24 more hours.

Schnieder said that doesn't mean all anhydrous ammonia cases shouldn't go to the hospital immediately.

People who inhale a high concentration of the liquid fertilizer need oxygen quickly, he said. And, people who swallow anhydrous ammonia should drink a lot of water to dilute the chemical and then go to the hospital. Do not induce vomiting.

Anhydrous ammonia is highly pressurized and stored in specially designed tanks. When the outside temperature rises, so does the tank pressure. At 100 degrees F, the pressure can reach nearly 200 pounds per square inch.

A dark hose will absorb the heat and may allow pressure to increase compared to a white tank with a reflecting hose, Schnieder said. Often, producers can tell tank pressure by outside temperature.

"When the hose ruptures or a valve opens accidentally, the high pressure can cause ammonia to spray your body before you can react," he said. "Ammonia quickly vaporizes in the air and becomes cold. It can freeze skin tissues instantly."

PEOPLE WHO handle anhydrous ammonia need protective equipment, especially when transferring ammonia from a nurse tank to an applicator tank. Schnieder recommends a full-face ammonia chemical respirator to protect mouth, nose and eyes.

Clothing type can mean the difference between a minor and severe burn, he said. Anhydrous ammonia will cause synthetic clothing to freeze to the skin. Schnieder suggests heavy-duty, long-sleeved clothing. Also, wear lined rubber gloves.

Keep an emergency first-aid water tank on the nurse tank in case of injury. Schnieder also said producers should carry five gallons of water on the tractor and a four- to six-ounce plastic bottle of water in their pocket.

Estimates rise

"Fantastic News." That is the reaction from Nebraska Governor Kay Orr following the latest projections from the State Forecasting Board. The Board, citing the continued strength of Nebraska's economy, raised year end revenue projections an additional $35 million.

"This is great news for Nebraskans. If these projections hold true, $85 million would be available for direct property tax relief this year under my proposal LB 809. That would mean an eight and a half percent reduction in property tax bills. Let's return it right back to Nebraska taxpayers" said the Governor.

She added "Every Nebraskan deserves credit for our outstanding economy. More Nebraskans are working and the benefits are being enjoyed along main streets from one end of our state to the other."

The Governor reminded Nebraska state senators that the current economic strength should be used to directly assist Nebraska property and income taxpayers, rather than be used for new spending programs.

She cautioned: "We are currently in a serious dry spell that could result in a down year for our number one industry, agriculture. In fact, Franklin County is already seeking federal assistance for haying and grazing needs. Senators must be cautious with spending plans, and approve only programs we can afford into the future."

Nebraska BPW selects Waldbaums for Employer of the Year honors

The Milton G. Waldbaum Co. of Wakefield has been named the 1989 Employer of the Year by the Nebraska Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Inc. (Nebraska BPW).

The award was presented to the company during the group's annual convention banquet on April 22 in Omaha. BPW delegates from over 35 communities, representing over 1,300 members, attended the convention.

Accepting the plaque for the firm was Leslie Beebe. Others in attendance were Tim Beebe, David and Jeannie Gardner, Larry and Bonnie Hintz, Jim and Fran Hallstrom, Eilene Miller and Jocie Bull.

THE COMPANY WAS recognized for its policies, benefits and working conditions aimed at meeting the needs of working women and their families, according to Charli Smith, chair of the selection committee and member of BPW's National Council on the Future of Women in the Workplace.

The company, one of the largest integrated egg processing operations in the world, was cited for its dependent care program, flexible working schedules, promotion policies, and its cooperative education program.

The company employs 640 persons, 37 percent of whom are women. Nearly 39 percent of its 78-member management team is female.

WOMEN IN OUR organization today can be found working side-by-side with their male co-workers in any area from entry level labor to company management.

"There are women who drive semi-truck, operate forklifts, supervise egg grading and drying equipment, manage poultry houses, perform maintenance work, supervise quality control, perform clerical duties and assist at top levels of financial and managerial decisions," said Larry Hintz, director of personnel.

Where would we be without animal study?

NEBRASKA FARM BUREAU FEDERATION by Cheryl Stubbenieck, vice president/information

The issue of animal welfare is being raised on many fronts and will doubtless be the issue for the livestock industry in the 1990s. Although voters in Massachusetts defeated a referendum last fall which would have legislated livestock production practices in that state, animal rightist and animal welfare organizations are planting their ideas everywhere.

Even young children are a target. Even "Weekly Reader," one of the highlights of the week in elementary school, asks in a recent cover article, "What Rights Do Animals Have?" Although the reporting is balanced, after a fashion, the writing is simplistic, which is the best vehicle for the animal rightists' message.

Although we in Nebraska recognize the importance of animal agriculture, we can't be complacent that animal welfare organizations will not make attempts to regulate livestock production practices here. And we also can't afford to focus only on the production agriculture aspect of the animal welfare plan. The other major front these groups are attacking is the use of animals in medical research.

ANIMAL RIGHTISTS argue that animals have rights equal to those of humans and one of those rights is to not be used in medical research.

Scientists and others argue that humans have the right to the medical advances which animal research has helped to provide.

Consider this -- if there had been no animal research, then:

--Polio would kill or cripple thousands of unvaccinated children and adults this year.

--75,000 newborns who develop jaundice each year would develop cerebral palsy, now preventable through phototherapy.

--Most of the nation's 500,000 insulin-dependent diabetics wouldn't be insulin-dependent. They would be dead.

--The U.S. would experience 1.5 million cases of rubella, more than 400 times the current annual incidence of this disease.

--Fifty million Americans would be at risk of death from heart attack, stroke or kidney failure for lack of medication to control their high blood pressure.

--Without cataract surgery, more than 1,000,000 people this year would lose their vision in at least one eye.

--More examples could be cited, but what it comes down to is this: without animal research, all of the medical advances of the last century might never have occurred.

NOW, WHAT about now? Without animal research now underway:

--There is no hope of finding a safe and effective vaccine against AIDS.

--Methods to prevent many cancers will never be found, because theories about genetic and environmental causative factors cannot be tested in humans.

--A cure for diabetes is beyond reach.

--Researchers will be unable to clarify the cause of Alzheimer's disease, and without that knowledge, the prognosis for the 3,000,000 Alzheimer's victims will remain bleak.

--New surgical procedures to repair congenital heart defects will have to be abandoned or tried for the first time on children.

Again, there are more examples. And research that has benefited animals themselves has necessarily been conducted with animals. The point should be clear: the benefits of using animals in medical research far outweigh concerns about their rights.

Those of us who are closer to animal production than to animal research need to understand that the two issues are closely related. They're just different fronts in a battle neither farmers nor scientists nor people in general can afford to lose.

By Pat Meierhenry

This column was written by Sue Bainter, daughter of the Farmer's Wife.

The 28th of this month marks the birthdate of my grandmother. I'm not exactly sure how many it is, I know we celebrated a significant one a few years back with a surprise lunch. She probably wouldn't want me to disclose this information anyway.

I suppose you've all been wondering about the mother of the Farmer's Wife. What could she be like?

My early memories of going to Grandma's house in Lincoln are probably similar to those of many people: good things to eat (that I didn't get at home), her big garden, a beautifully manicured lawn, going to the children's zoo, sitting on the curb with a dime waiting for the ice cream man; and probably the most vivid, is Grandma dancing around the kitchen singing, "Silly Ol' Grandma sittin' on a fence, can't turn a nickel into fifteen cents."

I'm not sure where that rhyme came from, maybe one of you can tell me.

And of course, my grandmother is also THE best cook ever. Her peach pie should be immortalized! Many holiday dinners have been shared around her large table in the basement when we all got to sample a little homemade rhubarb wine.

WHEN WE girls hit the mid-teens she began preparing our dowries. Silverware (piece by piece), embroidered towels, crocheted afghans, and hand-made quilts are just a few of the things she has supplied us with.

Another big event comes with the advent of our 12th birthday-pierced ears! Since mom believes that if God wanted us to have holes in our ears He would have put them there, this was another special gift that we looked forward to.

Earning her GED at about age 50 is just one of the things she has accomplished in her life on her own. Her days are so active, it puts the rest of us to shame. Swimming, aerobics, biking, walking, church activities, sightseeing tours all over the U.S., and trips to Kansas City to watch her Royals play baseball are just a few of the things she does to keep busy.

A few years back she finally retired from her long time position as a nurse aide at the V.A. Hospital in Lincoln. However, it wasn't long before she was working as a hostess at Arby's. She kept the dining room spotless, emptied trash cans, poured coffee, passed out cookies, and generally made people feel welcome. It got to the point where all of her co-workers were affectionately calling her "Grandma" and looking forward to their birthdays when some homemade goodie usually turned up.

BEING HER first grandchild, I feel pretty close to her even though I don't get to see her much anymore. I guess I cut my first tooth while she was babysitting me during Mom and Dad's Black Hills vacation.

Anyway, I plan to celebrate this birthday with her and many more. I know she can always be counted on to have supper waiting, no matter how late we are! We love you Grandma--Happy Birthday!

Concerning child abuse

Scouts offer awareness training

Adult leaders who work with youth groups in northeast Nebraska will have an opportunity to gain a better understanding of child abuse during a series of training sessions scheduled throughout this area.

To help promote April as National Child Abuse Prevention Month, the Diamond Dick District of the Boy Scouts of America in cooperation with the Goldenrod Hills Community Action Council and the Northeast Nebraska Committee for the Prevention of Child Abuse and Neglect are conducting training sessions on child abuse awareness in six communities throughout northeast Nebraska.

The Youth Protection Training is part of a national campaign program initiated by the Boy Scouts of America. It is designed to enlighten adult leaders of the sign of child abuse—emotional, physical and sexual. This program consists of a training session which takes two hours to present. It includes a 90-minute videotape, training syllabus, handouts and group discussions. Officials trained in recognizing and handling child abuse will be present for these sessions.

Because the leadership of the Boy Scouts of America feels that the problems of child abuse need to be addressed and corrected, all registered adult leaders are required to attend this valuable and informative training. The general public is also invited and encouraged to attend this free training, which is being offered as a community service.

"THE PROGRAM is designed for any adult who works with youth," Mike McMorrow, district executive with the Boy Scouts said. "It is intended to better inform our adult leaders and the public about the problems of child abuse and ways to deal with it."

All upcoming sessions are scheduled for 7-9 p.m., which include Thursday, May 11, in the Student Center on the Wayne State College Campus in Wayne.

The program is designed to help people better understand child abuse and realize that it can happen anywhere, even here in northeast Nebraska," McMorrow said.

In northeast Nebraska, there were 1,106 reports of child abuse investigated with 802, or 72 percent substantiated during 1987, according to the Research Division of the State of Nebraska Department of Social Services. The report represents 19.8 percent of all reported abused children in Nebraska covering an eighteen county district.

All sessions are free and open to the public. For more information, please call Mike McMorrow at (402) 371-8358.

The ELEMENTARY SCHOOL CARNIVAL was a tremendous success! How can we begin to thank the many Moms and Dads who made it work? Thanks to all who helped organize and work booths and those who baked goodies for the Cake Walk. We also want to thank the many businesses and organizations who made generous donations: Carhart Lumber Co., Dairy Queen, Tri-Tri Travel, Magnuson Eye Care, Pizza Hut, Pac-N-Save, Wayne Greenhouse, Midwest Land Co., First National Bank, Wayne Herd, KTCIH, Bill's GW, Circle K, Pinewood Derby, Methodist Clown Club, Pioneer, Star Farm, After-From Committee. Thanks go to the children for behaving themselves and having a lot of fun. The main goal was to build a fund memory for the children. We feel that this was accomplished. A special thanks goes to Mr. Lutz for his support and guidance.
