Curley plans to bike across America

By Chuck Hackenmiller
Managing editor

Two years ago, when David Curley of Wayne was featured in this newspaper, he told the reporter that some day he would like to ride his bicycle coast to coast across the United States.

The story appeared just as Curley was about to embark on a 475 mile journey across Nebraska in the annual BRAN (Bike Ride Across Nebraska) event.

Well, it appears Curley will be making that coast to coast venture. He will be participating in the second annual AFFBRAAM (Annual Fun-Filled Bicycle Ride Across America) coming up this summer.

IT WAS BACK in August, 1981 when Curley was a passenger in a vehicle that was broadsided by another vehicle at an intersection between Atkinson and O'Neill. He was critically injured.

Curley, who prior to the accident was an avid runner, underwent rehabilitation at Sister Kenny Institute in Minneapolis. At one time he was looking down the road of recovery from a wheelchair.

Then he became interested in bicycling. About four years ago he purchased a 10-speed bicycle and his love for the two-wheel mode of transportation has continued to flourish. Now Curley, who is a student at Wayne State College, has an 18-speed lightweight bicycle used in his 475 mile jaunt across the Nebraska countryside which he will use again in his upcoming 5,200 mile bicycle ride across America.

Curley plans on doing just what the brochure about AFFBRAAM says: "Bike America from sea to sea, ride through the majestic mountains and parks of the far west, across the spacious plains to the fruitful farmlands and sparkling lakes of the midwest, finishing in the graceful mountains and peaceful valleys of the east."

THE AFFBRAAM trip begins for Curley on June 4 — the day the tour travels 80 miles from Anacortes, Washington (the far northwestern corner of the United States) to Newhalen, Washington. The ride, which averages 72 miles a day, should be completed on Aug. 25 with the final stop at Bar Harbor, Maine. States that he will pass include Washington, Montana (along with a trip into the Canadian provinces), North Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine.

The $100 to $120 cost of the tour includes a supportive and helpful staff; a banquet at the beginning of the tour; overnights at schools or campgrounds; shower facilities; baggage truck for gear; sag wagon service; a mobile bike shop service; marked tour and route map; information sessions on the next day's ride; a T-shirt for cross-state riders and one long and three short sleeved T-shirts, sweat-shirt and jacket for the cross-America riders; a celebration at the finish of each cross-state tour and a plaque at the finish of the entire AFFBRAAM tour.

The recent hot weather has been helpful in Curley's training for the long trek across the United States. Last Friday and Saturday Curley rode his bicycle at least 150 miles by making a trip from Wayne to West Point and the following day, from Wayne to Norfolk.

CURLEY SAID he plans to keep a log book or diary about his trip across America and lots of pictures. He compared his 475-mile BRAN ride in 1987 to a "matter of looking at the miles as inches."

Miles can be made into inches if "our drive and motivation leads us to believe such is such," according to Curley.

There appears to be no lack of drive, motivation or courage within the thoughts of David Curley as he prepares for yet another goal, another challenge.

Detention Center statistics since opening given

By Chuck Hackenmiller
Managing editor

Statistics show that the average daily population at the Wayne County Juvenile Detention Center in Wayne has been 3.6 since the facility opened last December.

The detention center began operating Dec. 8 of last year. Since the opening date on up to March, 1989, the facility held 53 juveniles (43 males and 10 females), according to information provided by Wayne County Sheriff LeRoy Janssen.

Average length of time that juveniles have stayed at the detention center was 7.7 days.

The 53 juveniles were booked on at least 15 different charges. Ten were booked for violation of probation; eight for runaway; seven for theft; six for alcohol related offenses; five for violation of parole; five for safekeeping; three for motor vehicle theft; two for possession of stolen property; two for burglary; and one each for forgery, assault, escape, use of a firearm and murder.

COUNTIES which have contracted for juvenile detention in the Wayne facility since December include Burt (one day stayed); Cedar (one day stayed); Cumming (14 days stayed); Dakota (35 days stayed); Knox (three days stayed); Madison County (48 days stayed); Nance (140 days stayed); Pierce (nine days stayed); Platte (50 days stayed); Stanton (two days stayed); State Parole (11 days stayed); Wayne (25 days stayed); Saline (45.5 days stayed); and Saunders (24 days stayed).

A grant for the centralization juvenile detention center in Wayne County was approved last October by the Nebraska State Crime Commission. The grant money and the local match (paid for through county contract fees and per diem rates charged by Wayne County for holding the juvenile) finance the following: salaries to staff members, education and counseling of the juveniles; operation of the facility; and purchase of necessary supplies.

THE WAYNE County jail facility used as the detention center can hold up to 20 juveniles. Adult prisoners are being sent to neighboring counties with jail facilities.

Wayne was selected as the site because of its more modern and adequately sized jail facility and because of its centralized location.

Currently, the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act necessitates the establishment of separate juvenile detention facilities. Wayne County, along with other counties across the state with jail facilities, are required to keep juveniles "sight and sound separated" from the adults at the county jail sites.

Twenty-three counties within the Northeast Nebraska Sheriff's Association District would be entitled to use the central facility for their juveniles on a space available basis and for a per diem cost.

OAT BRAN AND SERUM CHOLESTEROL LEVELS

Oats and oat bran are receiving a lot of public attention these days. The health benefits of these products are being advertised on cereal boxes, TV and magazines. Part of the reason is the apparent effect oat bran has on lowering cholesterol levels.

Beyond all the hype there are some research proven facts to consider. Certain types of fiber known as water soluble fibers seem to be helpful in reducing serum cholesterol levels. High serum cholesterol levels are a major risk factor for heart disease.

Oat fiber is one source of soluble fiber. Other sources include dried beans, peas and other vegetables. Wheat bran contains mostly insoluble fiber. It is not beneficial in lowering serum cholesterol levels, but it may have benefits for bowel regularity.

Recent studies have shown that two ounces (about 3/4 cup) of oat bran in muffins or cereal each day helped lower serum cholesterol levels about eight percent when eaten with a low fat, low saturated fat diet.

How this happens is yet unknown. Some believe the soluble fiber interferes with cholesterol absorption from the intestinal tract. Others theorize that soluble fiber results in increased excretion of bile acid cholesterol. It may be a combination of these actions or some unknown action.

Before you jump on the oat bran bandwagon consider these important points:

Oats are just one type of soluble fiber. Dried beans and peas also contain soluble fiber.

Check the fiber content of oat products. Let the buyer beware. Oats should be the first ingredient listed on the label. Avoid oat products with saturated fats such as coconut, palm or palm kernel oils, lard or hydrogenated vegetable fat.

Consider the amount of oat bran and frequency you eat oat bran. The studies used the equivalent of 3/4 cup of oat bran daily. You may or may not achieve the same results.

Include other cholesterol lowering behaviors in your lifestyle. The participants in the studies were already eating a low fat, low cholesterol diet. Exercise and maintaining ideal weight can also help lower serum cholesterol levels.

Eating a bowl of oatmeal, oat bran muffins or other oat products taste good and have many nutritional qualities. Including oat products in a well balanced, low fat diet may help reduce your risk of heart disease.

Wedding of the Year

Changing Medicare catastrophic provisions

Bereuter co-sponsoring bill

Representative Doug Bereuter is one of the introducers of a bill that will make significant changes in Medicare catastrophic provisions. Bereuter and other sponsors of the catastrophic coverage reform act talked about their bill at a press conference in the Capitol on April 18.

The bill that Bereuter is co-sponsoring would repeal the income tax surcharge that is imposed on every Medicare-eligible American individual with an income level of $15,000 and couple with an income of $20,000. It retains the spousal impoverishment protections contained in the Medicare Catastrophic Coverage Act of 1988, as well as the expanded number of consecutive days of home health services. The new bill also provides tax incentives for the development of the long-term care insurance market.

THE 100TH CONGRESS took action to expand the Medicare program to cover catastrophic illnesses. The new law seeks to shield Medicare beneficiaries from "catastrophic" levels of hospital and doctors' bills related to acute illnesses. It also provides the program's first broad coverage of outpatient prescription drug costs.

"The outcry from older Americans on fixed incomes who cannot afford this surtax makes it clear that the senior citizen organizations who came up here in 1988 and lobbied for the catastrophic health bill were seriously misrepresenting the wishes and the best interests of their members," Bereuter said.

The bill was vigorously supported by the AARP, the National Council of Senior Citizens, Blue Cross-Blue Shield and a number of other senior citizens' organizations. Bereuter said that, since the passage of the bill, he has had a high volume of mail and telephone contact from Nebraskans who object to the new law.

"I HAVE RECEIVED more mail on this issue than on any other current issue," he said. "Based on AARP's advocacy and supposed representation of its members' views, Congress thought that the nation's senior citizens wanted this kind of self-financing program. It seems clear, however — at least in this instance — that AARP did not represent the positions of a majority of its members."

"The bill that we are introducing now includes some improvements, and it protects spouses from impoverishment, but it isn't fair to those people who have scrimped and saved and now can just barely manage to provide for themselves. Those people do not need another tax."

Rough times

Necessities of life were often hard to come by in early settlement days on the Nebraska plains. Settlers often shared what little they had with one another. Such generosity was not always extended, especially if the "necessity" was liquor, and the person in need was obviously wealthy. The North Platte Semi-Weekly Tribune of 1919 gave the following account of the high cost of high living in 1872:

"A group of North Platte's old timers were recalling early day experiences Saturday evening, and naturally the late Colonel W.F. Cody figured in many of the incidents. One of the men said he remembered when a member of a hunting party chaperoned by Col. Cody bought a ranch in order to get five gallons of whiskey.

"The hunting party, one of whom was a sporty young Irish lord, left Ft. McPherson for a buffalo hunt over south in the Republican valley. When they left the fort part of the supplies was a keg of whiskey, but in rough driving over the hills and through the canyons the cork in the keg became unloosened and when the members of the party went to the keg to refill their private flasks they found that the liquor had all leaked out.

"THERE WAS great consternation for the party was then sixty miles from Ft. McPherson, the base of their supplies. The Irish lord said whiskey must be had and appealed to Colonel Cody.

"The Colonel thought a moment, then smiled. He remembered that a few weeks before while out scouting he had run across a shack inhabited by a man who had given him a drink; perhaps he had some left. The shack was about a dozen miles distant and he asked the Irish lord to accompany him.

"They started and in due time arrived at their destination. 'Any booze left?' asked the Colonel of the shack inhabitant.

"Well, about five gallons,' he replied. 'How much do you want? The ranch goes with the liquor. Price of the ranch is $500.'

"The Colonel said he could not pay $500 for five gallons of whiskey and started to induce the man to lower his price. The Irish lord sidled up to Colonel Cody and whispered to take him up at the price for fear he might withdraw it or raise the price.

"The deal was closed then and there, the Irish lord producing a roll and skinning off $500. The keg was tied on the Colonel's horse and telling the man they would call the next day for the deed to the land, they rode off to camp. It is needless to say the deed to the land was not called for the next day."

For seed

Twain's request

Spring finds many Nebraskans carefully selecting seeds to plant in their gardens. Ninety-five years ago, Nebraskan J. Sterling Morton, then U.S. Secretary of Agriculture, received this request from another careful seed-selector:

"Dear Sir, Your petitioner, Mark Twain, a poor farmer of Connecticut — indeed the poorest one there in the opinion of envy — desires a few choice breeds of seed corn and in return will zealously support the Administration by all ways honorable and otherwise. To speak by the card, I want these things to carry to Italy to an English lady. She is a neighbor of mine outside Florence, and has a great garden, and thinks she could raise corn for her table if she had the right ammunition.

"I myself feel a warm interest in this enterprise, both on patriotic grounds and because I have a key to that garden, which I got made from a wax impression. It is not very good soil, still I think she could raise enough for one table, and I am in a position to select that table.

"If you are willing to aid and abet a countryman please find the signature and address of your petitioner below. Respectfully yours, Mark Twain."

"P.S. A handful of choice (southern) water-melon seeds would pleasantly add to that lady's employments and give my table a corresponding lift."

Secretary Morton, founder of Arbor Day and himself an avid gardener, responded:

"Dear Mr. Mark Twain, I have your note of the 18th petitioning for choice breeds of seed corn and promising in return therefore to support the Administration in all ways, honorable and otherwise.

"The support you offer is so strong that the seed corn is forwarded at once. It is hoped that the "crop of support" may be much larger than is now promised among some of our friends in New York.

"I am much pleased that you will become an agent for the introduction of corn as a food among the Italians, and it is to be hoped that by a vigorous effort on the part of the English lady who is to cultivate the cornfield and a strong appetite upon your part when the corn shall have been grown and boiled, that this delicious food may be popularized among the de-luded consumers of macaroni. The water-melon seeds are also sent, and will no doubt produce fruit calculated to inspire larceny among all the youthful lazzaroni who may long for lusciousness.

"Very truly yours, J. Sterling Morton."

Viewpoint

Reaching a compromise

The present amended version of LB 89 appears to be a compromise between those who would like to see teachers' salaries raised to compete with teacher recruitment in surrounding states, and those who would like the increases to be decided by school board control.

LB 89 came out of floor debate with $20 million appropriated to school districts for the next school year and then $20 million more the following year.

The original bill would have established a minimum annual salary of $18,000 for full-time teachers. The minimum salary was later lowered to $17,000.

But now, the minimum salary figure provision is removed. That measure is replaced by a proposal to provide some sort of incentive for school districts to raise the salaries. School districts would receive aid to increase their teacher's salaries based on a formula taking into account the number of teachers in each district and their salaries.

Here is how the formula works. Teachers are grouped into four categories: teachers earning less than $16,000 annually; teachers earning between $16,000 and $19,000 annually; teachers earning more than $19,000; and teachers with advanced education degrees.

No school district will receive any of the incentive salary aid for their teachers in the first category.

Districts will then receive incentive aid for each of the other three categories, receiving more for their teachers in the third and fourth categories than for the second category.

The qualifying $16,000 amount is raised to $17,000 in the program's second year, according to information furnished by State Senator Elroy Hefner.

The compromise amendments were sponsored by Wayne Senator Gerald Conway.

Local school board control falls into place in the following stage — the money the school district receives through LB 89 would be earmarked for teacher's salaries, but the local school boards would determine through negotiations how that money would be distributed.

We favor placing the issue of salary increases in the hands of the local school board. The board members are elected officials who must decide what is the best and the most affordable for the constituents they represent.

A pay raise to bring in top quality teachers into the school system, and to keep those teachers that already are doing an outstanding job, is a good idea. The LB 89 proposal, as it stands, will allow this increase to happen, provide some state funding for the increases and still bring the school board into the decision-making process.

Not always so dull

Year before decade change

Nine seems to be the forgotten number. This is 1989 and for certain, a year that happens to come before a change to a decade. It won't be long and 1990 will be here and it's time for another census.

So let's go back to the years before there was a change in the decade, to the years that nobody seemed to care about, to those nines of long ago. This is with apology to those who have birthdays and anniversaries on "year before decade" dates.

You will find that lots has happened in these years. For instance:

In 1929 — Wall Street laid an egg and it took years to put the country back together again. In a single day, Oct. 29, 16 million shares were sold off. Panic followed as stock values dropped some $15 million by the end of the year. Other events included the execution of the Moran Gang during the Chicago gang wars. It became known as the St. Valentine's Day Massacre. Janet Gaynor and Emil Jannings won the first Academy Awards as best actor and actress.

Hoagy Carmichael wrote "Stardust" and the radio show Amos 'n' Andy made its national premiere.

In 1959 — Alaska was admitted to the Union as the 49th state on Jan. 3, 1959. Later that year, Hawaii was admitted as the 50th and last state in the U.S., on Aug. 21.

In 1969 — Man landed on the moon. "It's one small step for man, one giant leap for mankind," said Neil Armstrong as he set the first footprints on lunar soil on July 20. Back on earth, Hurricane Camille, perhaps one of the most destructive storms ever to strike the United States, devastated the Gulf Coast in August. And the New York Mets, on the way to becoming a power, won their first World Series since their inception in 1962.

And in 1979 — Three Mile Island, a nuclear plant, suffered an accident. Evacuation plans were prepared for people living 10 to 20 miles downwind of the plant, but it was not necessary to put them into effect. Also, outside the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, Iran, mobs shouted denunciations of the United States and demanded, "Give us the Shah!" On this day, rioters seized the Americans inside and held them hostage. It was to be more than a year before negotiations attained their release.

And at the White House, a peace treaty was formally signed by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

So, people who say that the year before the decade change is boring and unexciting — better think again.

The Wayne Herald is still seeking some questions from readers or other interested participants in our "For Your Information" column that will be appearing in future editions of this newspaper.

Some of the questions which may come to mind may have to do with the city's water rates or recent water improvements, the school board's handling of budget matters, Wayne State College's position on competing with other state colleges regarding instructor salaries, the county's role in keeping up the roads and bridges, or the Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce's theory on community promotions.

Send those questions to The Wayne Herald, Box 70, Wayne, NE 68787 or phone us with your questions at 375-2600. Questions can be phoned in or written anonymously.

Wildcat record remains even

Wayne State's baseball nine earned a split during Wednesday's double header at Yankton, S.D. and Mt. Marty. The Wildcats lost the first game despite a valiant comeback effort, 9-8. Kevin Boham took the loss from the mound.

"We were down 9-3 and we had a nice comeback but it was just a little short," coach Lenny Klaver said. "Mt. Marty got seven of its nine runs on two hits, one a 3-run home run and the other, a grand slam home run."

Pat Wordekemper went 2-3 to lead the Cats at the plate while Destry Jaeger cranked a home run.

In the nightcap Wayne State's pitching ace Corey Weinmaster continued his wizardry over opponent's this season with an 11-4 decision. Weinmaster's record improved to 7-1 and he struck out nine batters in the process.

Wayne State shelled out some big hits in the second contest including a pair of round-trippers by Tim Wobken. Wobken notched three rbi's with his two home runs. Don Graham smacked a 3-run home run and John Staab was 3-4 from the plate.

Incidentally, Destry Jaeger and Corey Weinmaster were named District 11 players of the week last week for their efforts at the bat and at the mound respectively. Jaeger was 13-28 on the week for an average of .464 and recorded 13 rbi's in the process. Weinmaster went 2-0 on the week pitching two complete games. He struck out 13 batters in the two games combined.

Wayne State's record is still at .500 with a 23-23 mark. The Wildcats two wins over Doane last Sunday clinched a berth in the District 11 play-offs for the Wildcats.

Senior outfielder Destry Jaeger currently leads the Wildcats in hitting with a .360 season average. Jaeger also leads the team in rbi's with 28, runs with 38, and triples with three. Pat Wordekemper, in his first year on the baseball team, leads the Cats in home runs with seven.

From herbicides
Avoiding groundwater contamination

Herbicides have proven to be valuable tools in the fight to control unwanted weeds, and as a result, have helped American farmers become the most efficient food producers in the world. However, if used improperly, herbicides can pose a risk to Nebraska's groundwater supply. It is important to understand how herbicides can reach the groundwater system and what measures can be taken to minimize the contamination risk.

A major concern is point-source contamination where herbicides have a direct pathway to the water table. An example is instances of chemical spills near wells. Many wells are not adequately sealed and herbicides can seep through the well casing and flow directly into the groundwater supply.

Another problem associated with wells is chemicals that are mixed at a well source and back-siphoning occurs. One way to avoid this problem is to mix herbicides and clean sprayers in the field away from the well by using a nurse-tank as the water source.

tank and must fill at a well, be sure to keep the end of the hose above the water level in the spray tank. Anti-backflow devices can be purchased and should be used when drawing water from a well or pond.

Point source contamination can occur away from wells also. This can happen if a major spill occurs in the field or when containers or excess spray materials are not disposed of properly. Herbicide containers should be triple-rinsed and the rinsate should be poured into the spray tank. Excess spray solution and rinse water should be disposed properly. Solutions and rinsate should not be drained near ditches or water sources.

Groundwater contamination from herbicides can also occur from non-point sources. The potential for non-point source contamination depends on herbicide and soil properties, as well as cropping practices and proximity to the water table. There are several approaches to minimizing non-point source contamination.

An integrated approach should be used to control problem weeds. Crop rotation, rotary hoeing and cultivation can reduce the reliance on herbicides. When herbicides are used, follow herbicide label directions and calibrate sprayers so that you apply no more herbicide than is necessary.

IT IS ALSO A good idea to use short residual herbicides. Band applications of herbicides should also be considered to reduce contamination potential. This applies to both soil and foliar applications of herbicides.

Even when measures are taken to reduce herbicide usage, contamination may still occur. Certain areas, are more prone than others to non-point source contamination. High risk areas include fields where the water table is close to the surface, soils low in organic matter and clay content and high pH soils.

Special precautions should be taken in these situations to avoid groundwater contamination. Herbicides can also get into groundwater by transport in surface waters. Practices which reduce soil erosion reduce herbicide transport into surface water and should be considered on highly erosive land.

Spill causes concern

A spill of fertilizer and herbicide powder Friday afternoon caused city police and volunteer fire department crews to close off to traffic a section of East Seventh Street in Wayne.

The spill incident was reported to the Wayne Police Department at approximately 2:10 p.m. Friday. Traffic was again open after clean-up operations at around 7 p.m. the same day.

Dale Preston, Wayne Fire Chief, said a suction hose came loose from the floater equipment owned by Terra International of Wayne as it traveled down East Seventh Street. The product spilled out onto the street. Traffic had to be re-routed.

Spilled were approximately 324 gallons of 28-0-0 liquid fertilizer. Mixed with that amount were about 40 pounds of wettable powder called Conquest, a herbicide for grass and broadleaf control. Most of the concern was in the clean-up of the herbicide.

Preston said the spill ran for about a half mile. However, traffic drug the spill at least another quarter of a mile, he said.

Preston said EPA recommended that the spill be soaked up with dry dirt. The dry dirt would then be cleaned up and disposed of.

"The method to dispose of the dirt was to apply it at the proper rate of where it was intended to go in the first place," Preston said. Terra also was helpful with the clean-up operation, he said.

A public hearing was held on the City minibus. Senior Citizen Coordinator Georgia Janssen asked Council to approve application for capital funds to replace the existing minibus.
Resolution 89-13, instructing the City to apply for Federal funds for a minibus, was adopted.
Council decided to make the wording on the standpipe an agenda item for the next Council meeting. In the following two weeks, Council will be looking for input.
Administrator Kloster asked Council members to sign letters to the six Northeast Nebraska Senators asking their support in bringing LB 683 out of Committee.
Mr. Kloster said the Nebraska Department of Environmental Quality court order was dismissed with regard to the Wastewater Treatment Plant. The reason is that the Wayne facility is the only one in the state of Nebraska that passed the minnow test. A second test has been taken and all the minnows survived the second test.

Mr. Kloster announced that a meeting has been scheduled in the Council Chambers for April 18, 8:00 p.m., with the Wayne Board of Education and City Council.

PRINTING
LEAVES AN IMPRESSION ON OUR LIVES
FOR MORE THAN FIVE CENTURIES, printing has enlightened and helped develop the human race. It's made progress possible in education, science, medicine, government, religion, commerce, manufacturing, and virtually every field of human endeavor.
Almost every day, printing has an impact on your life. For selling, informing, instructing, illustrating, or entertaining, printing gets your message across.
And when you communicate with printing, you leave a lasting impression, because people can go back to look at printed messages again and again.
With printing, you can communicate with color, with feel, with size and shape. You can be subtle or bold. You can communicate single messages, complex ideas, or multiple images.
With changing, expanding technology and sophistication, printing continues to be the most flexible communication medium today.
So next time you need to communicate and leave a lasting impression, use printing.
