Stalling enjoys teaching, counseling at Wayne State

By Pat Murphy
WSC student

For the past four years, students and staff of Wayne State College have turned to Jan Stalling for guidance, knowledge and support.

Stalling began her work at Wayne State College in 1985 when she was named the interim assistant dean of student services. The following year she became director of counseling, and this year she chose to pursue classroom teaching when offered the position of assistant professor of psychology and counseling.

"I HAD JUST completed my leave of absence to work on my doctorate, the faculty position was available, it was offered to me and I accepted," Stalling said.

Although she enjoys her new position as assistant professor, Stalling still has fond memories of her counseling days.

"I miss counseling. I miss the one-on-one aspect of counseling. In a class I'm speaking to a group, although the classes I'm teaching are about counseling."

But the main reason Stalling is working at Wayne State is simple,

Planning provides relief from early morning madness

Do early mornings at your house Monday through Friday resemble a three-ring circus with you as the disorganized, frantic ringmaster?

With a little pre-planning, early morning can be easier for everyone, said Kathy Prochaska-Cue, University of Nebraska family economics and management specialist.

"Stop and think about how you spend your time now so you can spot time-wasters," Prochaska-Cue said. "Decide which morning activities are essential, which ones can be done at some other time, which ones can be delegated to other household members, and which ones can be cut out altogether."

PROCHASKA-CUE suggested moving some or all of the following activities to the night before:

— Pack homework into bags and briefcases and put them near the door at the launch site — that special place for everything that needs to go out the door including coats, notes, money, band instruments, even shoes.

— Decide what clothes will be worn and lay them out. Or Sunday evening plan clothes for the coming five days, and gather everything needed for each day on one hanger in the closet.

— Make brown-bag lunches and put into the refrigerator.
— Plan breakfast and set the table, fill the coffee pot and make juice.

— If you have a young child, pack the bag with all of their essentials; put filled bottles in the refrigerator.

OTHER SUGGESTIONS for easing morning madness include staggering wake-up times. Then everyone will hit the bathroom, shower and breakfast table at different times. Or encourage everyone to bathe before bed the night before. Then the bathroom is more accessible in the morning.

In the morning, wake sleepyheads by pulling the shades and letting the sun help wake them up. Give slowpokes additional time by waking them 15 to 20 minutes early.

"Two alarm clocks set five minutes apart with the first one by the bed and the second across the room works well," Prochaska-Cue said.

Be prepared for emergencies. Be sure keys are returned to their home spot. Have on hand the telephone number of someone who can come to your house when a family member is sick. Keep a little extra change in the house to send with someone who forgets to tell you the night before that they need money.

Finally, get everyone into the habit of picking up after themselves before they go to bed. "Waking up to an orderly house makes the morning more enjoyable for everyone," Prochaska-Cue said.

The ten books on the national best seller list for fiction on Dec. 10 were: 1. "Daddy", Danielle Steel; 2. "The Dark Half", Stephen King; 3. "Caribbean", James Michener; 4. Best selling non-fiction titles are: 1. "My Turn", Nancy Reagan; 2. "All I Really Need to Know I Learned in Kindergarten", Robert Fulgham; 3. "Roseanne", Roseane Barr; 4. Among Wayne readers, these 10 are on the most widely read list:

1. "All I Really Need to Know I Learned in Kindergarten" (Fulgham); 2. "It was on Fire When I Lay Down on It" (Fulgham); 3. "The Way Things Work" (Macaulay); 4. "My Turn" (Reagan); 5. Again, these are not in any particular order of popularity. These are the non-fiction books most popular with Wayne readers at this time.

If you come to the library for a specific book and do not find it on the shelf, stop at the desk and ask to have that title put on the reserve list for you. When it is returned, a librarian will call you to let you know it is available.

Stalling

and she is quick to point it out.
"Students. I love working with students. I like the college atmosphere and it is my area of interest."

LAST YEAR, Stalling was busy as a student herself. While still counseling students at Wayne State and teaching a night class, she was attending the University of South Dakota (USD) working towards her doctorate.

For some persons, that might seem like too much responsibility to handle at one time. But it didn't bother Jan at all.

"They are all areas I enjoy — learning, teaching and being able to counsel. If I can be involved with a lot of things, then that's a real source of energy for me," said Stalling.

ACCORDING TO Stalling, one of her typical days is very eventful. "I'm either in my office, in the classroom, whether it be teaching or as a student, or in my car traveling to attend or teach classes."

In addition to the classes she teaches at Wayne State during the day, Stalling also teaches night classes at Wayne State and is completing classes at USD this semester. She says this schedule keeps her away from home four nights a week.

"So how does she relax after a week consumed with activity? "What I really like is music. I'm not a big television fan. If I can have classical music around, whether it's in my car or office, I find that a release. I also like to read and be at home."

STALLING IS THE middle sister of four brothers and is married to Clayton Stalling who is a wildlife biologist in Norfolk. She has two daughters, Kathy, 20, who is married, and Valerie, 22, who graduated this month from Wayne State.

Following graduation from Wakefield High School, Stalling graduated from Wayne State College Summa Cum Laude, earned her master's degree from Wayne State in 1983 and began work on her doctorate at USD in 1987. She hopes to complete her doctorate in August 1990.

For United States competitiveness

Ag research investment essential

A major national investment in agricultural research is essential to keep the United States internationally competitive, the director of agricultural research at the University of Nebraska said.

Once the world's leader in agricultural production and technology, the United States is quickly losing ground to foreign competitors who are putting more and more money into agricultural research, said Darrell Nelson, dean of NU's Agricultural Research Division and director of the Agricultural Experiment Station.

"In the 1970s, we were about the only players on the block," Nelson said. "Now we're competing with a number of countries that are exporters of the same agricultural products that we're producing."

Congress is expected to consider early next year a proposal to provide an additional $500 million annually for research in agriculture, food and the environment.

The initiative would provide competitive grants for basic and applied research, equipment and graduate fellowships, Nelson said. The grants would be for research in natural resources and environment; nutrition, food quality and health; new products and processes; markets, trade and policy; animal systems; and plant systems.

THE PROGRAM would be administered by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. USDA now provides about $45 million annually in competitive grants, Nelson said, but they are only for basic research in very specific areas.

"There's not a competitive grant program for the vast majority of the agricultural researchers in the country," he explained. "There's no place that they can access federal grant dollars."

Funding the initiative "would really turn around the agricultural research establishment in the country and give us a lot of opportunities to meet the needs of agricultural producers," Nelson said. "It would be a quantum leap in capability."

Agricultural research at land-grant universities receives only about 1.5 percent of all federal research dollars, Nelson said, and federal funding for agricultural research at state agricultural experiment stations has dropped about 20 percent in real dollars since 1979, Nelson said.

THE IMPACT OF that dwindling research capability reaches far beyond the farm, Nelson said. It affects everything from food processing and consumer food prices to environmental quality and the nation's export strength.

"The bottom line is that if we're going to stay in the export business, we're going to have to compete on the basis of price and quality," Nelson said.

If the United States is not internationally competitive, ag exports will drop, creating a domestic market glut and lower prices, he said.

"We also run the risk of having imports of ag commodities coming into this country if competitors can produce more cheaply than we can," he said.

This gloomy scenario underscores the importance of the national initiative proposal, he said. It also explains why the substantial funding increase is being sought despite the federal budget deficit.

"It's an investment. There's a demonstrated need for these funds. By any standard, we've been highly successful and have used our dollars very wisely," Nelson said. Studies from the 1944 to 1983 show that agricultural research yields 30 percent to 100 percent annual return on investment.

FUNDS FOR the $500 million annual grants program could come from reductions in federal farm programs, Nelson said. USDA's payments to farmers are expected to drop about $15 billion to $9 billion annually in the next few years.

"Instead of paying farmers directly, we can make an investment that's going to pay big, big interest in indirect ways to farmers and the nation over the next 50 years," Nelson said.

The national initiative program could mean $10 million to $20 million in additional grants for NU's Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, Nelson estimated. The Agricultural Research Division now receives about $5.3 million annually in grants and contracts from the federal government, he said.

WAYNE-Dean Schram of Wayne was the winner of the Wayne Herald football contest last week. Schram escaped a 3-way tie with Neva Echtenkamp of Wakefield and David Nicholson of Wayne. Schram, however, was the closest on the tie breaker and Echtenkamp was the next closest to claim the runner-up prize.

Interim football coach named

WAYNE-Mark Gritton of Visalia, Calif. has been named interim defensive coordinator for the Wayne State football team, according to athletic director Pete Chapman.

Gritton, 30, will join the Wildcat coaching staff in January, replacing Andrew Disney who accepted a coaching position in Japan. Gritton comes to Wayne State from the College of Sequoias in California where he was the defensive coordinator and head men's swimming coach. He has also coached at Humboldt State in California and in Finland. His varsity playing experience was at Humboldt State.

He earned his M.A. in physical education in 1987 from Humboldt State and his B.A. in physical education in 1985. Gritton will also be on staff in Wayne State's HPLS Division.

WSC hires volleyball coach

WAYNE-Nancy Clark of Newberry, South Carolina has been named head volleyball coach at Wayne State, according to athletic director Pete Chapman. Clark, 30, replaced Doug Feagan who resigned in November.

Clark has spent the past five seasons at Newberry College, a private, four-year college in Newberry, South Carolina. Clark coached both softball and volleyball at the school. In her five seasons there, Clark's volleyball teams never failed to have a winning season and made the district playoffs all five years. Her 1989 team won the conference championship.

Clark earned her M.A. degree from Western Kentucky University in 1984. Her undergraduate degree is from Northeast Missouri State University. She is a native of Mount Vernon, Iowa. She begins her duties at Wayne State in January.

WSC coach resigns

WAYNE-Defensive Coordinator Andrew Disney has resigned his duties at Wayne State College and has accepted as Corporate Fitness Director and football coach for the Tokal Bank in greater Tokyo, according to head football coach Dennis Wagner.

Disney's resignation from the Wayne State football staff will be effective at the end of the current semester. Disney, 29, had just completed his first full year on staff with the Wildcats. He was named to the head defensive position last December when Wagner was named Wayne State's head coach. Disney previously coached with Wagner at St. Cloud State.

The Japan position involves coaching an international football team representing the Tokal Bank. Disney will be responsible for organizing and starting the team for the bank.

Disney will also serve as the Corporate Fitness Director at the bank which has approximately 15,000 employees. The search for a new defensive coordinator will begin immediately, according to Wagner.

WSC player ineligible

WAYNE-Senior Kyle McCormick of the Wayne State men's basketball team will not be granted eligibility to play during the 1989-90 season, according to athletic director Pete Chapman.

McCormick, a 6-9 forward from Madrid, signed last spring with Wayne State. He had previously attended Mid Plains Community College in North Platte. McCormick's grade point average was not in question during the eligibility process, according to Chapman. However, his semesters of attendance exceeded the national limit and he cannot be certified to participate.

Grad assistant named at WSC

WAYNE-Kyle Eller of Columbia Heights, Minn. has been named a graduate assistant football coach at Wayne State College, according to athletic director Pete Chapman.

Eller comes to Wayne State from Northwestern College in St. Paul, Minn. where he coached quarterbacks and running backs last season. He earned his B.S. degree in Psychology in 1989 from Northwestern in St. Paul.

Eller played four seasons at Northwestern, including three years as the team's starting quarterback. He earned all-conference honors and served as the team's captain.

At Wayne State, Eller will also have teaching responsibilities in the HPLS Division while he pursues his master's degree.

Eller begins his duties in January. He is the first of two graduate assistants named to the football staff. Tim Johnson left to enter law school and Chuck McGinnis will be teaching in the Crete public school system.

Wakefield hires coach

AREA-Joan Reznicek has been hired to coach junior high girls basketball this year. The Wakefield school board authorized her hiring at their regular meeting recently.

Reznicek was previously head girls basketball coach at Pender and is currently attending Wayne State College fulltime working on her masters degree.

Patrol suggests survival kit

Precautions are urged against 'silent killers'

A winter storm can be nature's silent killer, if a traveler hasn't prepared for it. Now that winter has come to Nebraska, the Nebraska State Patrol has issued a list of recommendations in case of dangerous weather.

A motorist should always listen to weather reports and, if possible, get off the road before a storm strikes. If you must travel, and the storm becomes more severe than you thought, take refuge immediately. It is better to be late for an appointment than risk your life.

It is a good idea to inform someone of the route you plan to take, and do not deviate from that route. If you change your route, tell someone. If possible, travel with someone.

Since winter storms can strike unexpectedly, it is wise to make sure your vehicle is always in good mechanical condition, equipped with the proper tires for winter driving and has a full tank of fuel. For safety's sake, adjust your speed to the road conditions and carry a winter survival kit.

Following are suggested items for winter survival kits.

At the minimum, a motorist should carry in the vehicle: a steel shovel or hoe (to help dig out of drifts); two wool blankets, and/or a sleeping bag; candles or several cans of "Sterno" (make sure your vehicle is ventilated when using these); matches or a cigarette lighter; a 3 pound metal coffee can (for melting snow into water); and two plastic garbage bags (can be used to keep you dry).

THE PATROL'S mini-survival kit adds these items, which can be placed into the coffee can, or inside a plastic ice cream pail. They are: canned food; can opener; high-energy food; first aid kit; rope, cord and/or strong string ... at least 30 feet; scissors; tissues; flashlight and/or pen light, the pen light is handy inside the vehicle and a powerful flashlight would be better to signal for help; extra batteries, remember, cold temperatures reduce the strength of batteries, so if you leave your kit in the car, check all batteries periodically; pocket knife; red flag, bandana or cloth ... affix this to a part of your car to signal passersby that you are in trouble; metal cup; space blanket; pencil ... to leave a note for troopers or other rescuers who find your vehicle after someone else has picked you up; ice scraper; safety pins; coins taped to the lid for phone calls ... the State Patrol's toll-free highway help line number is 1-800-525-5555; a whistle ... to signal for help; and a plastic spoon.

There are a number of "survival kit" recommendations from other agencies and authors. These items are taken from five lists (including the State Patrol's) and would increase survival chances if you add them to your mini-survival kit. They are warm clothing such as scarf, mittens, stocking cap or other warm headgear, coats (hoods on coats are most effective in maintaining warmth), snowmobile suit, 2 pair wool socks; extra footwear ... warm and preferably waterproof (such as snowmobile boots); newspapers ... these provide insulation; soap ... for first aid purposes; extra coffee cans; booster (jumper) cables ... plus goggles and rubber gloves for protection while attaching cables; sand, kitty litter, poultry grit, "sidewalk salt" ... provides traction; tow chain or cable; hand ax; fire extinguisher; plastic sheeting ... 2 pieces, 6 foot square; flares/reflectors; fuses; citizen band radio ... to call for help; and transistor radio ... to monitor weather bulletins.

THE MOST effective way of surviving a winter storm is by avoiding it. But if you are stranded on the highway in winter, stay with the car! It provides shelter and is easier to spot than a person walking. A full kit will make you more comfortable while you wait to be rescued.

If stranded, do not panic. Do not overexert yourself trying to free your vehicle. But stay active. Clap your hands and move arms and legs vigorously from time to time to stimulate circulation.

Run your engine as little as possible to stay warm. Remember to keep the downwind window open slightly to prevent a carbon monoxide build-up. Keep your exhaust pipes clear of snow so exhaust fumes will not be trapped in the car.

Do not let your fuel tank fall below half empty.

Keep watch. Someone in the vehicle must be awake at all times to signal help when it nears, since your car may not be completely visible to the search teams.

TIME LINE

By the Nebraska State Historical Society

The last decade of the last century is often referred to as "the Gay Nineties." But for farmers in Nebraska, the nineties were not so gay. Ample rainfall had produced bumper crops in the 1880s. Then as now, high yields meant low prices. An economic depression hit in 1890; that same year it rained only 17 inches. By December, conditions were lightyears from gay. A farmer from Frontier County wrote:

"We receive the Christmas box all right and words cannot express our gratitude to all who remembered us with such a timely present. In regard to our condition — I do not think we will starve or freeze, though we may have to fare very poor sometimes."

"I have to haul fuel (green wood) twelve miles. I could get coal at Indianola at $4.60 a ton, but I have not the money, and there seems no way to get it. I offered to mortgage my team for $10 at the bank and they wouldn't do it; so you see how hard it is to raise just a little money. I believe that nine out of ten families will have to have help or nearly starve. Some aid is being sent in. I got a sack of flour the other day, but can't tell when or how the next will come."

"The farmers held a meeting last week to see about what could be done. We appointed a committee to go to Lincoln to lay our needs before the Governor and the Legislature, to see what could be done for this drought stricken people. And such a crowd! There must have been 800 men there, and I was surprised at the destitution too apparent to be doubted."

"There are plenty of provisions to be had if one has money, but we have not got it and have no way of getting it. We have clothing to do. I need an overcoat the worst, but I can get along some way."

"I must say a word about the poor cattle and horses. Mine have done pretty well so far, but now the ground is covered with snow, and I don't know but the poor things will die. There is no hay or corn for them. There was no hay to put up, and so little corn stalks to cut up in fodder that there is comparatively no feed in the country. Now I do not write this to trouble you. You wanted to know. The truth is bad enough and cannot be over-pictured."

Sad to say, the worst was yet to come for writer D.B. Coryell and his fellow farmers. Continued low prices, drought and financial panic leading to world-wide economic depression in 1893 made the "gay" nineties decidedly grim for many Nebraskans.

The GOLDEN YEARS

By George C. Marshall

Much public attention is given to the wear and tear of aging, but very little to "the flip side." A noted journalist, Enid Nemy took up the subject, with examples of active men and women who don't dwell on how many years they have lived, then run into younger people who do. One older woman told of a bright conversation with two younger women at a party. One of the younger women expressed surprise that "an older woman would be so knowledgeable about...things that interest us." The conclusion? Old age can be "a state of someone else's mind."

Medicare is easing some of its restrictions on reimbursement for home health care. Eligible people now are covered for up to four visits per week for as long as they need care, and five times a week or more for two to three weeks. Starting January 1, coverage will be extended to six days a week with no time limitations, and seven days a week for up to 38 consecutive days.

Remember When? 1953 — George C. Marshall, United States Army Chief of Staff in World War II and later Secretary of State, received the Nobel Peace Prize for the Marshall Plan, the massive United States aid program which helped war-shattered Europe rebuild.

By Pat Melerhenry

The past week has been a true test of batteries, starters, tank heaters and insulated coveralls. With wind chills of -50, it's been difficult to feed livestock and get to work.

We can cancel school, but we can't close the hospitals. Cattle need feed just for energy to withstand the cold. Ernie, the black Lab, hangs out in the barn.

Our friend Jessie saw a cold little sparrow in her yard. She brought him in to warm up. When it thawed out, it got away and flew around in the house. Martha, the cat, got hold of it, and Jessie had to twist her tail to get her to let loose. But to no avail; as eventually the bird was gone and the cat was licking feathers.

Sue's and Monte's spoiled kittens lay on a towel in front of the oil burner. We went to their house for supper Friday night. It's such a pleasure to see our children as adults. Their tree is lovely, the duck was tasty, the chocolate mint pie sinfully rich and the wedding china still shiny.

After stuffing ourselves, we watched "It's A Wonderful Life" on the VCR. I've often read about this Christmas classic, but had never seen it. A young Jimmy Stewart and Donna Reed star in a very old-fashioned story that people seem to relate to; probably because it reminds us of the value of friends.

It seems to me there are more Christmas lights this year than ever. There is a farmstead on Highway 81 south of Yankton that has the house outlined in lights so it looks like a gingerbread house.

As I finished writing the rest of the cards and wrapping the last of the gifts, I made the last of my resolutions. Next year, for sure, I will start sooner. I will make more of my gifts, spend less money, cut the card list and leave the peanut brittle alone.

And if you believe that, there really is a Santa Claus! Actually, I prefer Buscaglia's "Christmas Angel." I collect angels, and they are a beautiful symbol of Christmas.

The wind's gone to the south and the forecast is for a warmer holiday. Hopefully, everyone who wants to get home for Christmas will be able to. Holiday basketball games will be played. Ice fishing tournaments are being planned.

And on Saturday, Dec. 30, there will be another benefit coal volleyball tournament. So if you are looking for fun and games, stop in at the Winside High School gym. Happy New Year!

Den reports followed the Pack announcements, highlighted by the 5th grade Webelos showing their counted cross-stitch ornaments they made for the Fantasy Forest tree. Darla Munson spearheaded the counted cross-stitch endeavor.

Individual awards were presented to the following scouts:

Aquonaut Badge — Tom Zach, Tyler Endicott, Adam Dangberg, Terry Hamer, Neil Munson, Chris Davis, Micky Rutenbeck, Trever Luther and Jeremy Lutt.

Handyman Badge — Ryan Feagan. The Cubbie Award for best attendance was won by Den #2. The colors were retired by the 5th grade Webelos.

Business Management Skills

Class offered

The University of Nebraska Extension Service is again offering an opportunity to improve business management skills. The class will meet for six consecutive Wednesday evenings from 7 to 10 p.m. The instructors, Tim Garvin and Rose Jaspersen, are business educators who will focus on targeting your market, managing and motivating employees, building a customer base, financial statements and ratios, merchandising, developing a composite business plan, customer relations, inventory control, advertising, goal-directed management and financial projections.

The Managing Main Street Business program has been well received in this area. Workshops have been held in Wakefield, Laurel, Allen and Wayne. There is a $150 fee charged per-business to cover instructors' time and expenses. All materials are furnished. It is encouraged that all management and/or owners participate in the program. The fee is on a per business basis and there is no charge for any additional members from the business to attend.

K-12 is cheaper than 5 to 10. Education is Nebraska's best investment.

Here in Nebraska, it costs $3400 to send one child to school and over $16,000 to support one penitentiary inmate for one year*. Statistics support a direct correlation between the performance of our schools and financial demands from the penal system. When performance ratings rise, the need for total prison funding lowers. From a financial point of view, education is not only a good value, but a good investment for the future of our economy.

Property taxes finance nearly 70% of Nebraska's annual investment in K-12 education* — $3400 each for over 263,000 public school students.* Yes, it is a big price tag, but it's also a price we must pay or be willing to sentence our children to live with the consequences.

Nebraska's property tax system is riddled with loopholes and inequities. Each loophole and exemption narrows the tax base — leaving fewer of us responsible to provide the same dollars. Until legislative relief is granted, local school boards must continue to ask for higher property taxes.

Alternative financing proposals are currently being prepared by the School Finance Review Commission, a study group formed by the Legislature and appointed by the governor. The commission will present the 1990 Legislature with recommendations for a new system of public school financial support. Taxpayers and school boards alike can look forward to a more stable, adequate and equitable tax system.

To learn more about the future direction of property tax legislation and proposals for school funding, please contact your state senator. Property tax reform and school financing were thoroughly discussed in the 1989 Legislative Session, so every senator is aware of the urgency of this problem and should be willing to discuss it with you.
