JOHN ANDERSON HAS MUCH to smile about Friday after winning an annual award for dairy farmers.

Anderson wins award

Dairy farmer honored at banquet

By Mark Crist
Managing Editor

For years, John Anderson's love for dairy farming has continued going strong and Thursday night in Columbus, he was honored for it.

Anderson, a Wayne dairy farmer, was awarded the Distinguished Dairyman Award at the annual meeting of the Nebraska State Dairyman's Association for his 90-cow herd production.

According to information from the Department of Agricultural Communications, Anderson's production has gone from 14,895 pounds per cow in 1985 to 20,497 pounds per cow in 1989.

"It was a shock to me that I was even being considered," Anderson humbly said Friday after he had received the award. "Our youngest daughter Julie is busy with 4-H and the Wayne County Extension Office and she had learned about the possibility of my being nominated from Rod Patent. They then gathered data about the farm and about a month later, Don Kubik contacted me to inform me that I had won the award."

ANDERSON, HOWEVER, doesn't take all the credit for winning the award. He says he couldn't have done it without his family's support.

"As I told the group, the award is called the Distinguished Dairyman Award, but it should be called the distinguished family award," he said. "It was totally a family operation. To call it the Distinguished Dairyman Award is really a misnomer. Nobody knows that better than I do."

Anderson said his love for dairy farming began when he was a young boy. He said his father was a farmer and when he was about 10- or 11-years-old, his father purchased his first dairy cows on his farm near Dodge, but after a few years, his father sold the farm. He said ever since that time, he has had an interest in dairy farming.

"I still see as much challenge in dairy farming today as I did when I was 10 or 12," he said. "Working the animals is like waking up every day to the sunrise — they're both there every day. I find it a challenge to take care of the animals as best I can. You see, if you treat your animals in a caring fashion, they'll take care of you."

WITH THE CHALLENGE of farming still present for Anderson, and having the family there as a support staff, it makes things easier for him. He said there's been a lot of things during his career that could have deterred him from dairy farming, but with the support and interest he has for his career, nothing ever has.

"There was never really a point in my life that I didn't think about getting into agriculture," he said. "I was going to go into ag engineering but my math wasn't as good as it could have been, so I focused in agriculture and dairy production."

Anderson said his career has taken several turns along the way. He said in 1972, he and his wife and six children moved to Wayne because the facilities they had in Dodge County were too small while those in Wayne fit their needs. He added that his involvement in the Wayne County Farm Bureau kept his attitude positive when times made it difficult to do so.

"I've always said don't criticize until you've done everything you can," he said. "There's still things in agriculture that I don't like but I'm always positive, and you have to approach things from that perspective. It seems to me that it makes more sense to see the positive aspects of things rather than the negative."

Miller shares tales of early mountain man with Rotary

By Mark Crist
Managing Editor

Although the age of the mountain man ended about 150 years ago, Gary Miller still takes time to keep the memory alive.

Miller, who spoke at a Wayne Rotary Club breakfast Wednesday, Feb. 21, went over some of the traditions of the fur trapper-mountain men, whose history is interlaced with that of Nebraska's.

Dressed in a buckskin suit with Sioux Indian designs, Miller addressed the audience with the traditions of the fur trapper, as well as providing a demonstration of how flint was used to start fires and how muzzle-loaded rifles were loaded and fired.

Miller, who said his Indian name is Minus Two Feathers, dated his historical information as far back to the Pawnee Indians who once roamed what is now Nebraska. He said when Spain claimed the territory north of the Mexican border to Canada, the first contact with the Pawnee was in 1720 when Spaniards came to Nebraska in search of gold, a trip which established trade with the natives because of the valuable furs which were once readily available.

MILLER CONTINUED his historical speech to 1739 when French explorers traveled along the flat river, of flat water as it was called by Indians, and named it River LaPlatte, which is known today as the Platte River. He said in 1798, Spain gave up their claim to the land as the French assumed it. Shortly following that time, President Thomas Jefferson contracted the land from France in the Louisiana Purchase.

Following Jefferson's deal with France, trappers commonly traveled along the Platte River from the Colorado and Wyoming mountains to Fort Atkinson, which was located near where Council Bluffs now exists. As the history continues, and Indian attacks forced the closure of trail travel along the Missouri River into South Dakota, the Platte River was more utilized by trappers until 1840 when silk replaced buckskin as the material to make clothes.

In 1841 and 1842, however, the trail began to see emigrants moving westward, which resulted in the trail becoming the Oregon Trail, which it is known as today.

advances in the field. He said his family's operation depends on computers today, where when he started it was all calculated by hand.

"When I graduated college, a cow would give about 40 lbs. of milk and today, you get over 100 lbs. a day," he said. "The production is over twice what it was in 1951."

He said because of the dramatic climb in the amount of production, the consumers are the ones who gain.

"What does this mean to the consumer?" he asked. "It means they're getting a better product at a lower price. The American consumer is the beneficiary of American agriculture."

AT&T announces plans for new site

AREA - AT & T announced Thursday at a press conference that it has opened a long distance facility two miles west of Norfolk that will impact economic development and have far-reaching implications for businesses in Norfolk, Hartington, Madison, Neligh, O'Neill, Pierce, Stanton, Wakefield, Wayne and nearby communities.

At a news conference attended by Norfolk City Administrator Mike Nolan and other area civic leaders, two AT & T executives — Ray Hicks and Hank Krings — discussed their company's plans for the 2,100-square-foot building. AT & T officials said the cost of the facility was estimated at $4.6 million.

Krings, AT & T manager of network operations, said AT & T chose to make such a substantial investment for the area because it strongly believes in the future of the area.

"The opportunities for economic development here are unbelievable," he said. "Norfolk and other communities in this area have a tremendous future, and we want to be a part of that future."

KRINGS WENT ON to say that the new facility houses digital telecommunications equipment that allows long distance customers in the area to have access to AT & T's Worldwide Intelligence Network. Formerly, only analog service was available in the area.

"With this new digital facility, we can offer higher quality, more reliable service," he said. "What's more, we're now able to provide highly specialized and advanced long distance services ... services that are especially designed for businesses and are economically priced."

He added that the Norfolk facility is monitored 24 hours a day so that customers can be assured of uninterrupted service.

"This is an exciting day for us," Jim Langridge, AT & T's sales manager for Nebraska, said. "And it should be an exciting day for economic developers and the communities."

"This new office and the capabilities that it offers should enable Norfolk and other nearby towns to make even greater strides in attracting new industry."

LANGRIDGE CONTINUED by describing some of the business services that are now available through the digital office. Two such services, he said, are Megacom (R) WATS service and Megacom (R) 800 service, which are designed for medium- and high-volume users of outward and inward long distance calling.

There's also Software Defined Network Service, which is for large businesses that have geographically dispersed locations and special internal, corporate communications requirements.

In addition, there's AT & T MultiQuest (SM) service, a new nationwide, interactive 900-type telephone service that will enable businesses such as telemarketing companies and financial institutions to provide callers with information via two-way communications. The service enables companies to offer information on topics ranging from consumer product reports to stock quotes.

"I mention these services because hopefully, they illustrate our strong commitment to meeting our customers' growing needs. It's a commitment we've had for over 100 years and one we'll always have."

He added that Moore's Transfer will be the first business customer in the Norfolk area to use Megacom WATS and Megacom 800 services.

John Wilkins or Moore's Transfer said that his company plans to double its business within the next year and believed that these AT & T services would enable him to achieve his plans.

START team holds first session

WAYNE - All 41 members of the START Leadership Team met March 22 for the first of three strategic planning sessions of the START program in Wayne.

The team identified economic threats and opportunities for the Wayne community. As a result of small group discussions which took place, several dozen key issues were proposed for further study.

Among these issues were quality of life for youth and elderly in the Wayne community, promotion and expansion of existing businesses, promoting awareness of the community's assets and developing Wayne as a hub for north-east Nebraska.

Manufacturing group discussion leader Jeryl Nelson said, "people in our community want to see a relationship between their level of taxes and the quality of the services these tax dollars provide for them."

He added that while taxes in Wayne are higher than some other communities, Wayne residents also enjoy a higher quality of life because of the services these tax dollars provide. Discussion group members thought this gives Wayne an edge in attracting new businesses.

Discussions in the agriculture group focused on community image and connecting Wayne to the larger, northeast Nebraska community.

Group sees poverty first hand

By Mark Crist

Seeing poverty up close was something a group of Wayne State College students said they weren't likely to soon forget.

Students belonging to the Newman Ministry, a Catholic sponsored organization on the WSC campus, spent their spring break in Jackson, Ky., a town in the Appalachian Mountains which is in a county which has the second highest poverty rate nationwide, according to federal government statistics.

The trip allowed the group to experience poverty first-hand, according to Sister Rita Marie, who is the sponsor of the organization.

together Thursday to again share their collective experience.

"Dealing with the people I found was difficult," said WSC student Greg Morrison of South Sioux City. "The experience taught me to communicate in almost a different language. The people there weren't there to hear words, they responded to action. I think I learned not to take anything for granted but the work I did wasn't a chore — it was self-fulfilling work. That's hard to describe to people who ask you what you did for spring break."

Many of the students said they found it hard to believe that people in the U.S. live in those types of conditions. According to some of the group members, the local governments around that area didn't make the effort to repair rusty piping or provide clean water to the people living there.

Seven students, of the 11 who went, who met to share their experiences, said the government has made it so the people in the poverty-stricken areas can't fight because laws are designed around them. One member of the group said governmental structuring and politics are against them.

BUT THAT'S NOT to say the people who live in Jackson, Ky. aren't content with their livelihood. The students agreed that the families are close and polite to people from outside their domain.

"I would go back again," said Teresa Dvorak of Dodge, Neb. "It's the most rewarding way to spend a

All facets of a healthy lifestyle will be explored — from dieting to exercise, to mental health and self-esteem, to employee fitness and wellness programs.

Chris Bos, also of Dodge, said the closeness of the families seems to overcome their poor economic conditions.

"They're living in poverty in an economic perspective but the entire time we were there, they were more concerned about our needs than their own," he said.

The students, however, seemed to agree that it was a learning experience. They all agreed that it was a nice change of pace to spend a break in that fashion.

"You feel good about giving instead of doing everything for yourself," said Patty Gubbels of Osmond, Neb. "You felt like you were doing something good and didn't expect anything in return."

The students departed for their journey Friday, March 9 and returned Saturday, March 17, according to Sr. Rita Marie. She added that statistics show 54 percent of the people living in Jackson, Ky. are below the poverty level, but she added, that it has long been a goal of hers to take Newman Ministry students there to experience it.

"One night we shared symbols and the night we did that, I said I felt like an eagle flying high because I was able to bring my college students there," she said.

Sr. Rita Marie said she learned of the trip through the Missionary Benedictine Sisters, since the Jackson, Ky. poverty is one of the parish's missions. She said all of the students had a positive experience and she hopes to be able to take a group again sometime in the future.

Diffendal to present slide show at WSC

WAYNE - Anne Diffendal, a consultant in exhibit planning and coordination, will present a lecture/slide presentation entitled "The LaFlesche Sisters: The Omaha Tribe in Transition" tomorrow (Tuesday) at Wayne State College.

Diffendal's presentation, originally scheduled for Women's History Month, March 5-9, will begin at noon in the Great Plains Room of the College's U.S. Conn Library. The public is invited to attend.

The five LaFlesche sisters were daughters of Joseph LaFlesche, Jr., the last traditional chief of the Omaha. Their generation was forced to adapt to the destruction of their tribal system due to the influx of white settlers, the disappearance of the buffalo and the move to a reservation.

Two of these women achieved national recognition: Susette as a publicist and lecturer on behalf of Indians' rights, and Susan as the first Native American woman to earn a M.D. degree. All of them played prominent roles during the years of transition for the tribe.

Anne Diffendal

The lives and work of these women illustrate many of the important issues raised by the encounter between Indian and Anglo-American cultures in the late 19th century.

Tales

"I've always had an interest in this," Miller said. "My interest in early American history stems back to my love for the outdoors. Doing these types of presentations is really great fun. When I give them, it takes me away from the modern world. It's relaxing for me to get away from the modern world."

ALONG WITH MILLER'S interest for history and his love for the outdoors, he annually has the opportunity to live a similar lifestyle to that of the pioneers. He said each year there is a group of about 1,000 people who get together for a jamboree where they all live off the land.

"I still love to hunt with muzzle loaders," he said. "There are groups that get together and live primitively for about a week, but, of course, we still take along our coolers."

Part of the reason for that is because only certain game can be hunted during seasons established by the states, so the coolers are needed to keep their food if it's needed.

"You build up several friends through these contacts," he said. "There's a certain camaraderie that exists."

All-Area girls team released

Wayne seniors Teresa Ellis and Heidi Reeg head the Wayne Herald's Annual All Area Girls Basketball Team today. Joining them on the first team is Laurel-Concord's Heather Thomas, Allen's Cindy Chase, Winside's Jenny Jacobsen and Wakefield's Lisa Blecke.

In an unusual twist the all area team consists of three sophomores and three seniors. There was not one single game this year for Wayne in which Teresa Ellis or Heidi Reeg weren't the leading scorer. The two-some had to carry a huge burden on their shoulders all season as they provided leadership to much younger players.

Reeg's ability to out rebound much taller opponents made her a force in the middle while Teresa Ellis had the ability to take complete control of a game with her decision making abilities and three point shooting.

The only other senior on the first team is Laurel's Heather Thomas. Thomas could run the floor real well and it was not uncommon to see her on the fast break. Thomas was also a consistent force on the boards and helped lead Laurel into the finals of their sub-district before bowing out.

Our super sophomores include Winside's Jenny Jacobsen. Jacobsen led the Wildcats to their first winning record in over a decade. She consistently led Paul Giessemann's squad in scoring and with her jumping ability, she was always among the rebounding leaders.

Wakefield's Lisa Blecke continues her assault on the Wakefield girls scoring record as for the second consecutive season, she led the Trojans in scoring. Blecke is another one who can run the floor very smoothly for a post. Our sixth first teamer comes from Allen and she became one of the most prolific scorers in all of Northeast Nebraska in this her sophomore season.

Cindy Chase may not be one of the most vocal players around but her ability to light up a scoreboard speaks for itself. First year coach Lori Koester can only smile about the fact that Chase has two more seasons in which to improve for the Allen Eagles.

The second team all-area squad consists of Wayne's Jennifer Hammer, Allen's Denise Boyle, Winside's Jenny Topp and Wendy Rabe and Wakefield's Kristen Miller.

Hammer will be the inside force Wayne looks to next season not only for scoring but for rebounding. Hammer came on strong the second half of the season which aided in her selection.

Denise Boyle may be one of the smallest forwards around but the Allen sophomore isn't shy about crashing the boards as she did all season. Boyle was a force on the boards and the continued combination of her and Chase for the next two seasons should give the Eagle fans something to cheer about.

Jenny Topp and Wendy Rabe were two other factors that led to Winside's winning record this season. Giessemann credited Topp as being one of the hardest workers he's had while Rabe, only a sophomore at 6-0, can run the floor with ease and should be a force for the next two seasons.

Wakefield's Kristen Miller on the other hand has the ability to change a complexion of a game. While most of Wakefield's opponents concentrate intently on shutting down the Trojan inside game with Lisa Blecke, Miller often brings them out of the compact zone with her three point shooting ability.

Wakefield is another team which could really rise up and take charge next season as three of the five starters this season were only sophomores.

Wakefield's Lisa Anderson, Allen's Robin Schroeder and Steph Carlson along with Wayne's Erin Pick make up the honorable mention list for 1989-90.

The area coach of the year award goes to Winside's Paul Giessemann for guiding the Wildcats to a winning season—it's first in over 10 years. Giessemann, a graduate of Wayne State, also coaches volleyball at Winside.

Sluggers in Missouri

Heading into Friday afternoon the Wayne State baseball team was 2-1 in the Missouri Southern Classic with wins of 13-3 over Washburn, Kan., and 7-4 over William Jewell. The Wildcats lost a close 1-0 game against Missouri Southern.

Lenny Klaver's clan opened up play with a 13-3 win over Washburn with Kevin Boham grabbing the pitching victory while Jeff Gohr got the save. Rob Zulkoski was the catalyst from the batter's box with a 3-3 outing which included four RBI's. Scott Schultz was 2-4.

Boham incidentally, allowed just three hits in the contest. The Wildcats did not suffer any errors in the five inning contest.

Steve Kellifer was given the loss from the mound in Wayne State's 1-0 loss to Missouri Southern. Southern scored in the first inning as the lead off batter got a ground rule double off the fence and then came home on a sacrifice fly. Kellifer allowed just three hits while striking out five.

On Friday morning the Wildcats got past William Jewell, 7-4 in six innings. Wayne State led 6-0 heading into the bottom half of the third inning when William Jewell scored three runs.

Wayne State meanwhile, pounded out 14 hits in the contest while William Jewell managed just five—all singles. Don Graham was the winning pitcher as he came in during the third inning and relieved Chris Simon.

Upset by attendance

Last Thursday afternoon the Wayne Chamber of Commerce and Agribusiness Council, with the assistance of the Northeast Cooperative Extension of WSTC sponsored a water quality seminar.

Don't people in northeast Nebraska realize there's getting to be a water problem or don't they care about their health?

As I attended three of the seminars, I could see what's coming in the future. It's just too bad the people didn't support those who put the seminar on.

Column ideas wrong

In regard to Crist's column of March 15, a few facts:

1. The Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act prohibits felons, dishonorably discharged servicemen, mental incompetents, illegal aliens, and those who have denounced their citizenship from receiving, possessing, or transporting firearms.

2. Semi-automatic technology has been a staple of the American firearms industry since before the turn of the century.

3. When a law is passed for societies protection, it must accomplish two things: 1. Solve the problem, and 2. Have the respect of the people.

totally ineffective in keeping those weapons out of the hands of criminals. Less than 1 percent of military style semi-auto loaders are used in criminal homicides.

Secondly, your placebo approach of more restrictive firearms laws serves only to inflate the egos of those who would rather scapegoat inanimate objects than face their impotence in combating violent crime.

4. Over 90 percent of American's know the real cause of crime in this country is the complete breakdown of the criminal justice system. Plea-bargaining, paroles, and furloughs have become the rule rather than the exception.

Stop at the signs

STOP: To bring to a halt; cease progress or motion. This is the meaning of those yellow and red signs which are placed at the northeast intersection of the Carroll Public School grounds.

On more than one occasion, I have observed vehicles coasting or driving right on through this intersection without giving any indication of coming to a complete

STOP. I am sure if I were to be sitting on the streets with a vehicle which had red lights on its roof that greater care and adherence to this traffic monitor would be seen.

SENIOR CITIZENS
Shorty Avery will be the featured entertainment for the Senior Citizens at their meeting today (Monday). It will be held at the village auditorium starting at 2 p.m.

Please come to this meeting March 27 in the Stop Inn at 7:30 p.m. This project is being promoted by Winside school personnel, the Board of Directors and the School Advisory Council.

There will be an informational and organization meeting to discuss setting up a scholarship foundation for Winside high school students.

More and more students compete for available scholarships and perhaps some students don't get a chance to better themselves with more education because of the high cost of college.

A few of the area communities are attempting to help their high school graduates by setting up scholarship foundations. The purpose of these foundations is to receive money in the form of donations, bequests, memorials, etc. and to disburse the money in the form of scholarships to graduating seniors.

Approximately 27 seniors attended the meeting last Monday. The ladies made an Easter craft, taught by Barb Leapley, while the men played cards. Hostesses were Lea Applegate and Marie Suehl.

"You can bank on it."

For well over one hundred years now, Nebraskans have depended on their hometown banks. Ever since the first one opened in 1855, Nebraska banks have been the cornerstones of the communities they serve. The bankers and the people have established an ongoing, personal relationship...a valued relationship of trust and a shared commitment to the community. Can you imagine what your town would be like without your local bank? It would be a lot different without the bank working to keep the community and the economy strong.

Commitment, dependability, security...some of the things you can bank on at your hometown Nebraska bank.
