The special section brings readers current information on a variety of fronts, such as the importance of beef to Nebraska, nutrition, beef safety, cooking tips and recipes.

Triplet calves born near Allen

A RARE OCCURRENCE TOOK PLACE last Friday on the Jack and Rhonda Warner farm, located one-half mile south of Allen, with the birth of these triplet Holstein calves — two heifers and one bull. Dr. Ken Liska of the Wayne Veterinary Clinic said the birth of live triplet calves is "extremely rare," and estimated that chances of a live triplet birth are one in several hundred thousand. Jack Warner, pictured with the calves early Monday morning, said they were totally surprised by the triplets when they went out to check on the mother Friday. "She did it all on her own," said Jack, adding that the mother belongs to his father, Jim Warner.

ESU 1 begins screening

Area superintendents work to narrow candidates

By LaVon Anderson
Assistant Editor

The advisory council of Educational Service Unit One, comprised of school superintendents from the six counties the unit serves, has begun the process of screening candidates for the newly created position of ESU 1 inservice/staff development coordinator.

A meeting of the advisory council was scheduled May 9 to complete initial screening of the candidates.

During a meeting Tuesday night of the ESU 1 board of directors, Administrator Rodney Garwood said approximately 50 applications have been received for the position.

That number will be narrowed down by the advisory council, with Garwood interviewing the final applicants throughout the month. Following the interviewing process, Garwood will make a recommendation to the ESU 1 board of directors.

THE GO-AHEAD to advertise for the inservice/staff development coordinator came in March during the regular monthly meeting of the ESU 1 board.

The new coordinator's job description includes visiting area schools and assisting them in establishing and prioritizing needs to help them plan local staff development activities.

In addition, he or she would be responsible for developing a repertoire of staff inservice activities that would be delivered at area schools, and developing and cultivating a data base of potential speakers and resource people.

ESU 1 BOARD members heard a report Tuesday night from Marvin Borg, chairman of the building and grounds committee, regarding summer projects.

A list of projects proposed by Borg and receiving unanimous approval from the board, include: 1) Replacing the roof of the recently purchased Masonic Lodge, located on the second floor of ESU 1 headquarters in Wakefield; 2) Providing wheelchair accessibility (a ramp) into ESU 1 headquarters; 3) Purchasing a desk and furniture for the new inservice/staff development coordinator; 4) Purchasing a garage door opener for an area in back of ESU 1 headquarters where the van is loaded; 5) Replacing some tables in the ESU 1 conference room; 6) Dressing up a parking area in back of ESU 1 headquarters by possibly outlining the area in timber and adding more crushed rock; and 7) Replacing carpet at the ESU 1 Learning Center, located in Wayne, and installing a concrete pad for youngsters during loading and unloading of the van. A well located at the Learning Center will also be hooked up and a pump installed for students to take part in gardening activities.

Garwood said total cost of all of the projects is estimated to be $7,700.

BOARD MEMBER John Post reported on the coop purchasing program which is currently administered statewide by Educational Service Unit 17, headquartered in Ainsworth.

Problems have arisen regarding how the coop program is administered.

Post told board members Tuesday night that a meeting was held April 26 in Kearney at which time a committee was formed to establish a governing board which will draft a policy regarding coop purchasing.

Post said all Educational Service Units in the state also will be invited to take part in a bidding process to administer the coop purchasing program.

Another meeting is scheduled in June to discuss the policy for coop bidding.

IN OTHER BUSINESS Tuesday night, ESU 1 board members:

—Gave unanimous approval to first round reading of a limited smoking policy at ESU 1 facilities. The second and final reading will take place at next month's meeting. The policy, if approved next month, would provide a smoke free environment in areas where children are present and smoke free areas for non-smoking personnel;

—Unanimously approved the successful teaching of Sheila Bakker, Pat Baker, Lu Ellingson, Sandy Kuchta, Barb Wakeley, Lisa Sabers, Linda Hamm and Ron Lorenzen; —Accepted the resignations of Becky Ridgeway and Pam Stevens, speech therapists. Garwood said every effort will be made to replace the two, however this may

WSC joins NCAA Division II

The Wayne State men's athletic program will compete at the NCAA Division II level in the 1990 athletic season, according to athletic director Pete Chapman.

The men's program affiliation with the NAIA will not be renewed. The Wayne State women's program will continue its dual affiliation with the NAIA and the NCAA. Both programs will continue their status as independents.

"The decision to end the 75-year association with the NAIA was related primarily to scheduling options available to the men as independents," Chapman said.

"The scheduling benefits available to us as members of the NCAA became much clearer when our independent status was explored," Chapman added. "NCAA schools are more willing to enter into a home and home situation and NAIA schools are more willing to play an NCAA member because it does not affect their post-season playoff picture."

Wayne State College will continue scheduling NAIA institutions. Schools, Wayne State College has

Stenberg discusses campaign

WAYNE - With a week left before the public hits the polls, Attorney General Candidate Don Stenberg, R-Lincoln, made a campaign visit at the Daylight Donut Shop Tuesday morning.

Accompanying Stenberg was former Nebraska governor Charles Thone.

"Don Stenberg worked with me as part of my legal council," Thone said. "He's a fine leader and he'll be a fine attorney general."

Stenberg said his campaign is based on goals for Nebraska. Among his goals are plans to make Nebraska the strongest anti-drug state in the nation, produce longer sentences and less plea bargaining for criminals and support of federal legislation for fewer appeals in death penalty cases.

"No other candidate for attorney general has taken this initiative," Stenberg said in response to a letter he wrote to all the members of Nebraska's Congressional delegation.

Included in his campaign is an effort to keep state spending by the attorney general's office to a minimum.

"There are a number of differences between me and those I run against," he said. "I am the only candidate with state administrative experience."

Despite being behind in the polls, Stenberg said pre-election polls don't mean a thing.

"I'll continue to let people know that we need a strong attorney general," he said. "The only poll that counts to me is the one at the

LB 1059 focal point of school board talk

WAYNE - Issues involving LB 1059 seemed to be the main focus of the Wayne School Board meeting Tuesday night as the board focused on two areas directly affected by the school finance measure passed by the state's lawmakers.

Several board members expressed concern that school district residents did not fully understand that LB 1059 was designed to lower property taxes used to support local education.

For example, the Wayne school district will receive an additional $730,000 in state aid which would save property taxpayers approximately 40 percent of their 1989-90 property tax bill. At the same time, the bill will result in a sales tax increase of one cent and a 17 percent state income tax increase.

Also, since LB 1059 awards efficiency, Dr. Francis Haun, superintendent of schools, informed the board that the state department of education data indicated that the Wayne school district had an efficiency ranking of 5.47 percent.

Although this figure is unofficial, it represents the district's budget lid because the cost per pupil in the Wayne schools is lower than the state average, Haun said.

IN OTHER MATTERS, the Wayne Board of Education:

• Heard reports from board member Dr. Arnold Emry and Dr. Haun concerning their recent attendance at the National School Boards Association meeting.

• Finalized plans for commencement which will be held at 2 p.m. Sunday, May 20.

• Learned that work had not yet started on the proposed addition to the elementary school.

• Reviewed data from the State of Nebraska energy office which indicated that first year savings for the Wayne school district due to energy conservation measures taken last year resulted in a B.T.U. savings of 822.3 million B.T.U.'s. A story about this issue appears in today's Wayne Herald.

• Discussed but took no action on a proposed board policy concerning health insurance for board members.

School board instructs Dr. Haun to pursue possible wrongdoing

Following an executive session with school attorney Kenneth Olds the Wayne Board of Education instructed Dr. Francis Haun to proceed with implementing school law 79-12,109, which deals with possible disciplinary action for certified employees.

Dr. Haun said after the meeting that the measure deals with one of four areas: possible suspension with pay, reprimand (verbal), reprimand (writing) or consultation.

Haun would not elaborate about who may face disciplinary action or what the reason for implementation of the school law was for other than it deals with certified (teaching) staff.

The next step is to inform the person(s) in writing of seven calendar days of the meeting about the allegations, followed by establishment of a review meeting, which could be open or closed to the public, Haun said.

Haun said the action deals with regular due process, so he could not say who the individual or individuals are. He said formal action may occur if a review meeting is held and that information will be open to the public if disciplinary action is taken.

Mail room work an integral part of publishing

In most publishing companies, one of the most integral elements is not only the work done by the pressmen but what occurs after projects are completed when publications hit the mailroom.

Such is the case at Nebraska Printers and Publishers Company — better known as The Wayne Herald. Once jobs are finished on the press, the mailroom staff helps assure items make it to their destination in a timely manner.

According to Doris Claussen, long-time mailroom manager at The Wayne Herald, a camaraderie exists amongst the mailroom staff members which creates a "family" atmosphere.

"Many people familiar with the publishing business will come back in the mailroom and comment that it's such a different world back here," Claussen says. "For us, if you don't have teamwork, you don't get the job done on time. We have as many as 11 people who work back here and teamwork makes everything run smoothly."

In addition to taking care of The Wayne Herald and Marketer, the mailroom staff handles numerous other publications throughout northeast Nebraska as well as other parts of the state. Three regular customers printed on a weekly basis with very intricate mailing needs are shoppers from Norfolk, Columbus and O'Neill.

Claussen said her staff recently inserted 64,000 printed pieces with five advertising circulars each in just two days for a total of 320,000 various pieces. "Between the mailroom work for the web department and related work in the sheetfed printing department, we'll average up to 55 hours per week during busy times of the year," she says. "Sometimes we'll skip coffee breaks and occasionally even lunch. We have deadlines to meet and when the publication comes off the press (at 10,000 to 12,000 copies an hour), we have to work."

According to Claussen, that's one of the reasons teamwork is so important in the mail room: if the teamwork breaks down, that puts added pressure on everyone to make up for lost time. Once the papers come off the press, they must be stacked properly on one of many long tables. Then the tedious job of inserting begins.

According to Claussen, anyone who doesn't like getting their hands (and sometimes arms and clothes) full of ink or gets claustrophobia looking at the "mountains" of inserts, doesn't have the right frame of mind to work in the mailroom of a busy printing company.

After all the ad circulars have been inserted in the proper bundles destined for a particular zip code (post office), an identifying postal cover sheet is placed on the completed stacks which then are tightly tied by machine.

Some of the individual pieces require specific address labels, some do not. Even with the right machinery, applying labels adds precious hours to an already hectic schedule.

Next, bundles are placed into large mailing bags and additional identification is placed on the bags. After The Wayne Herald delivery van is loaded, the shipment is taken either to the Wayne Post Office or the postal sectional center in Norfolk.

Many times, the trip to Norfolk is made late at night.

When Postal Service officials receive the mailbag, the cargo is weighed and date on the detailed mailing form is verified. Before the mailing is sent, payment in full must be made based on the number of pieces, weight and size of the pieces, their destination, how finely sorted they are and myriad other factors.

Claussen said although the work is sometimes monotonous, the spirit and positive attitude of the workers helps make the job easier.

"If we didn't talk to each other and joke back and forth in the mailroom, you absolutely couldn't work," she says. "If we didn't try to have some fun, the days would be so long you wouldn't be able to navigate. We put in a lot of hours back there."

"But if we weren't back there, the papers wouldn't get to the post office. If we weren't there it just wouldn't get done. We're as important to the smooth operation of the paper as any other area and that's something we take pride in."

Wakefield boys capture conference track crown

The annual Lewis & Clark Conference Track Meet was held Saturday at Wayne State College with the Wakefield boys and the Coleridge girls taking the team championships.

Wakefield ran up 102 points to out distance runner-up Newcastle who finished with 85. Ponca held down the third spot with 67 1/2 points while Beemer scored 63 and placed fourth. Coleridge rounded out the top five with 51 points.

Emerson-Hubbard, Homer, Winside, Bancroft-Rosalie, Hartington, Wynot, Osmond, Allen, Wausa and Walthill rounded out the field of 15 teams in order of finish.

Mark Johnson highlighted the Trojan effort as he placed first in three individual events including the 800, 1600 and 3200 meter runs. Johnson was timed in 2:02.24 in the 800, 4:42.42 in the 1600 and 10:15.8 in the 3200. Johnson got a lot of support in each of those races as Matt Tappe and Marcus Tappe finished fifth and sixth respectively in the 800 with times of 2:10.56 and 2:11.10.

Ken Addink and Steve Clark placed fourth and sixth respectively in the 3200 with times of 11:01.6 and 11:20.2 and Addink added a fourth in the 1600 with a 4:55.70 effort.

Anthony Brown added a first place finish for the Trojans in the 300 intermediate hurdles with a 41.0 clocking while Tony Krusemark finished fourth in the same race with a 43.3 effort.

Brown also finished third in the 400 meter dash with a 52.9 clocking and he finished fifth in the 100 meter dash at 11.8. Wakefield's 1600 meter relay placed third with a 3:43.9 clocking and Mike Mogus and Brad Johnson placed fourth and sixth respectively in the discus with throws of 123.6 and 122.7.

The Trojan 3200 meter relay team consisting of Matt Tappe, Marcus Tappe, Mark Johnson and Jon Johnson placed second with an 8:53.1 effort and Troy Krusemark placed third in the shot put with a throw of 46-10.

Brent Oetken placed fourth in the high jump with a leap of 6-1 and he finished fourth in the 200 meter dash at 23.8. Tony Krusemark added a third place finish in the 110 meter high hurdles with a 16.0 effort.

Winside scores 26

The Wildcats scored 26 points in the meet to place eighth with Brian Thompson recording the highest finish—a second place in the shot put with a throw of 49-8 3/4. Randy Prince notched a third and a fourth place finish in the 200 and 100 meter dashes respectively with times of 23.7 and 11.8. Winside's 3200 meter relay team placed third with a time of 8:56.2 while Max Kant notched a fifth place finish in the 300 intermediate hurdles at 44.2.

Allen also competed in the conference meet and the boys managed just nine points as Shane Dahl placed second in the 400 meter dash at 52.8 and Mike Sullivan long jumped 18-3 3/4 for sixth place.

Allen girls place third

Among the area coverage teams in the girls competition, Allen placed the highest with 51 points and a third place team finish. Coleridge scored 77 points to win while Emerson-Hubbard tallied 67 which was good enough for second. Homer followed Allen with 41 points for fourth place and Ponca scored 40 points to round out the top five.

Osmond, Winside, Beemer, Newcastle, Bancroft-Rosalie, Wakefield, Walthill, Wynot, Hartington, and Wausa. Among the story lines of the girls meet was the absence of Winside superstar sophomore Jenny Jacobsen who sat out the meet nursing a back injury. Jacobsen who has yet to lose a race in her high school career in the 100, 200, 400 and long jump except for the state tournament, will be ready for the district meet on Wednesday.

Denise Boyle led the Lady Eagle charge with a first place finish in the 100 meter hurdles with a 16.5 clocking. Stacey Jones duplicated Boyle's feat with a first place finish in the 3200 meter run in a time of 12:24.6 while Brandi Blohm placed fourth in the same race in a time of 13:54.1. Jones also placed second in the 1600 with a 5:52.4 clocking.

Christy Philbrick placed third in the 300 meter hurdles with a time of 50.7 while Carla Stapleton placed fourth in both the 100 and 200 meter dashes with times of 13.4 and 28.1.

Allen's sprint relay team and 3200 meter relay team each placed fifth with times of 55.1 and 11:48.7 and Sonya Plueger threw the discus 90-0 which was good enough for sixth place.

Winside scores 32

The Winside squad struggled for points without its usual 40 point production from Jenny Jacobsen. The Wildcats managed 32 points including a runner-up performance by Tania Hartmann in the 100 meter hurdles in which she was clocked at her season best of 16.5. Jenny Topp also had a runner-up finish, in the discus with a throw of 100-2 while Patty Oberle ran to a third place time of 13:33.1 in the 3200 meter run.

Shannon Holdorf leaped 14-7 1/2 to place fourth in the long jump and she added a sixth place finish in the 100 meter hurdles with an 18.1 effort. Shawn Janke meanwhile, placed fourth in the shot put with a throw of 33-5 1/2. Oberle also placed sixth in the 1600 meter run with a 6:17.3

Wakefield's girls placed 11th in the conference meet with 19 points led by Laurie Plendl's runner-up finish in the 3200 meter run with a 12:26.4 clocking. She also placed fourth in the 1600 at 6:04.6. Heather Gustafson placed fourth in the discus following a throw of 94-4 and the Lady Trojan 1600 meter relay team ran to a fifth place finish of 4:43.6.

WAKEFIELD SOPHOMORE Brent Oetken clears the high jump bar at 6-0 during Lewis and Clark Conference Track Meet action on Saturday at Wayne State College. Oetken placed fourth in the event with a jump of 6-1. Oetken has jumped 6-5 this year and is expected to challenge for the district crown later this week. Wakefield went on to win the boys team championship by scoring 102 points.

Creighton coach Tony Barone to speak Tuesday

The Wayne Athletic Banquet will be Tuesday night in the cafeteria on the campus of Wayne State College beginning at 6:30. Following the meal will be an address by the guest speaker, Tony Barone—head men's basketball coach for the Creighton Bluejays.

Barone has just completed his fifth season at the helm of Creighton. In the summer of 1985, Barone was hired as only the 12th head basketball coach in Creighton's 72-year history of intercollegiate basketball. At that time Barone pledged to bring the Bluejay program to "Cadillac" level. Barone was hired too late to recruit for his first season but his team managed a 12-16 mark. The following season the Bluejays played with seven new faces and the mark dipped to 9-19.

Finally, in 1988 Creighton clawed back to the .500 plateau with a 16-16 record—just three years after Barone showed up on campus and only two years following his first recruiting class.

Still in 1989 skeptics felt the Bluejays were still a year away and they were picked to finish seventh in the Missouri Valley Conference. Creighton surprised everyone but themselves in '89 by taking the MVC regular season and tournament championship crown with a 11:15.48 time.

Gerry Sagehorn of Polk, Neb., Todd Dusenberry of Aurora, Colo., and Don Smith of Minnooka, Ill. have recently signed letters of intent to play college basketball for Wayne State next year according to head men's coach Steve Aggers.

Sagehorn is a 6-6, 200 lb. center/forward who is transferring from Mid Plains Community College in North Platte. Sagehorn averaged seven points and six rebounds a game last season. He is a graduate of Polk-Hordville High 20-11 record and a trip to the NCAA tournament.

For his efforts, Barone was named District 12 and Missouri Valley Conference "Coach of the Year." After just four years, Barone had put his stamp on the Bluejay program. Probably never in the history of intercollegiate athletics, has a team become the image of its coach so quickly.

Barone's animation on the sidelines, his emotional roller coaster throughout a 40-minute contest and his determination can be seen, almost like a mirror, in each one of his players' actions on and off the court.

In Cadillac style, Barone's program received national attention in 1988 when the coaches and players woke up extra early on Thanksgiving morning to help feed the hungry at a local shelter. Barone came to Creighton from MVC rival Bradley University, where he spent seven seasons as associate basketball coach to Dick Versace, now the head coach of the Indiana Pacers of the NBA.

A Chicago native, Barone is a 1968 graduate of Duke University, where he was an Academic All-American and team co-captain. The 1966 squad on which he played, placed third in the NCAA tournament and in Barone's final two seasons, the team advanced to the National Invitational Tournament.

Barone and his wife, Kathy, have three children: Amy, Tony and Brian.

Wayne girls set five records

The Northern Activities Conference, (NAC) track meet was held in South Sioux Saturday with the Wayne boys team finishing second to South Sioux with 74 points. The host Cardinals managed 96 while O'Neill placed third with 54 and Cedar Catholic finished fourth with 21.

The Wayne girls finished third out of the four team race with 52 points. O'Neill took top honors with 72 points followed by South Sioux with 65. Cedar Catholic again placed fourth with 39 points.

Although the Lady Blue Devils scored just 52 points it was a fabulous outing for the distance runners as they set five conference records and one school record. Tammy Geiger was a part of 40 of Wayne's point total as she took first place honors in the 1600 meter run with a 5:36.72 effort, the 400 meter dash with a 1:02.06 time, the 800 with a 2:24.41 clocking and as a member of the winning 3200 meter relay which set a school record with a 10:09.9 effort. Rachel Haase, Teresa Ellis and Susie Enz combined for the conference and school mark.

Geiger established new conference marks in each of her individual events, the 400, 800 and 1600 as well as the 3200 meter relay. Ellis established the fifth conference record of the day as she won the 3200 meter run with a 12:33.74 effort. She also placed second in the 1600 meter run with a 5:50.03 timing.

Sophomore Danielle Fallesen topped the five foot mark in the high jump with a 5-2 leap to lift her to the individual championship of that event while teammate

Danielle Nelson leaped 4-10 for fourth honors.

Heidi Reeg placed second for the Blue Devils in the shot put with a 36-2 throw of the iron ball while Deanna Schluns placed fourth in the long jump with a leap of 13-8 1/2. Susie Enz placed fourth in the 800 with a 2:41.04 effort and Kris DeNaeyer placed fifth in the discus with an 82-0 throw.

"That was Danielle's best jump of the season," girls head coach Dale Hochstein said. "The lack of depth on our team cost us as both O'Neill and South Sioux had better numbers than we did."

Boys hobbled

The Wayne boys had two triple gold medal winners in Greg DeNaeyer and Craig Dyer. DeNaeyer head the field in the 800 meter run with a 2:08.38 effort and was a member of the winning 1600 and 3200 meter relay teams. The 1600 meter relay ran to a first place time of 3:34.0 which was a conference record with DeNaeyer, Craig Dyer, Casey Dyer and Willy Gross. The 3200 meter relay, consisting of the same foursome ran to a first place time of 8:45.85.

Craig Dyer earned two of his golds in the same relays but his third gold on the day came in the 400 meter dash where he was clocked first in a time of 52.68. Matt Peterson and Willy Gross were each clocked at 53.3 to tie for second place honors in that same 400 race.

"I think that Thursday's meet in Battle Creek caught up to some of our runners," boys head coach Rocky Ruhl said. "We had some injury problems that caused us to lose out on some points. Matt had to pull out of the 200 meter dash and Willy pulled out of the 800 meter run because of them."

John Murphy brought home a first place medal in the 300 intermediate hurdles with a 43.84 clocking while Wayne's 4x100 meter relay team consisting of Chris Fredrickson, John Murphy, Jim Murphy and Matt Peterson placed second with a 46.52 time.

Matt Bruggeman placed second in the discus with a 140-6 throw and he placed fourth in the shot put with a 46-10 effort. Neil Carnes placed fourth in the discus with a throw of 129-11. John Murphy leaped 18-4 1/2 to place fourth in the long jump and Chris Fredrickson jumped 41-1 to place second in the triple jump. Cory Wieseler also leaped 40-3 1/2 to place fourth in the triple jump.

Wayne placed second, fourth and fifth in the 3200 meter run with Steve Dinsmore placing runner-up with a 10:33.39 effort and Todd Fuelberth running to a fourth place time of 10:55.76. Trevor Wehrer placed fifth with an 11:15.48 time.

Matt Peterson and Jose Luis Castro placed third and fifth respectively in the 100 meter dash with times of 11.36 and 11.44. Casey Dyer and Jim Murphy took fourth and fifth respectively in the 200 meter dash with times of 23.56 and 23.74. Steve Dinsmore and Scott Fuelberth placed fourth and fifth each in the 1600 meter run with times of 5:01.73 and 5:04.52.

Wayne will take part in the district meet Thursday in Columbus.

Softball team ends season

The Wayne State Wildcats softball team finished their season in the district 11 tournament over the weekend with a third place finish. Kearney State won the district title and will await to play the district 12 winner to see who qualifies for the national softball tournament to be held in Florida. The Lopers defeated St. Mary's 4-1 in eight innings of play in the finals.

WSC defeated Midland 5-0 in the opener as Roni Johnson pitched a 2-hit shut out. She struck out six and didn't walk any in the process. Offensively the Cats got a 3-3 performance out of Jodie Giffillan with three singles and a 3-4 performance from Marti Hunt—also three singles.

The Wildcats pounded out 13 hits in the game as Beth Clark belted a single and a double in three trips to the plate and Carla Gilbertson was 2-4 with a pair of singles. Dee Henningson notched a single and Jill Gengler belted a double. Megan Dolesh also recorded a single.

WSC had a much closer game with St. Mary's in the second round as Johnson pitched a 5-hit shut out en route to a 1-0 Wildcat victory. WSC was held to three hits but scored the game's only run in the fourth inning. Johnson struck out seven St. Mary's batters and didn't walk any.

The Wildcat hits came from Jill Gengler, Beth Clark and Marti Hunt—all singles.

The last time WSC faced Kearney State they were blanked by KSC pitcher Susan Johnson who struck out 20 Wildcat batters en route to a no-hitter. Well, Johnson nearly duplicated her feat as once again she pitched a no-hitter against the Wildcats and this time she struck out 18 in the process.

WSC countered with Roni Johnson and she didn't pitch a bad game as she allotted KSC just three hits but it was enough for a 2-0 Loper victory. The Wildcats then played another game with St. Mary's in the double elimination tournament and this time St. Mary's came out on top of a 5-1 score. Roni Johnson took the loss from the mound.

WSC could manage just three hits in the game with Beth Clark doubling, Tanya Gappa singling and Jodie Giffillan singling. Johnson closed out her senior season with a 20-13 record and the Wildcats finished with a 31-22 mark.

Frog Pond hosts first ever rural track meet

District five country school named Frog Pond was the host recently to the first track meet of its kind. Country schools from Districts 15, 25, 47 and 51 from Wayne County and Districts 15 from Thurston County took part in the initial track meet with all country schools. The idea and events were organized by Lanita Recob and assisted by Linda Felber from Laurel.

Each of the 78 students representing grades K-8, could choose three of the six events offered and if there was time between events the students could do three different activities and receive a certificate if they did so.

Ribbons were given to those who placed first, second, third and fourth. The event was a success and the schools are tentatively planning a similar track meet next year. Due to a limited amount of time however, some of the following distances are missing but the following is a composite of how the meet went with the placings and distances along with the district numbers the kids were competing from:

DISTRICT 15 in Thurston County was the site of a softball game played last Friday between area country school kids. Jessica Henschke pitches the ball to an opposing batter. Henschke is from District 25. Kids from grades K-8 gathered for the afternoon to play softball and to have a picnic. 45 kids took part in the softball game while most of the kindergartners and several of the first graders found the afternoon a good time to catch up on merry go round riding. The country kids also took part in a track meet recently, the first of its kind.

Women attend national assembly

Ten thousand one hundred United Methodist Women attended the 1990 national assembly held May 3-6 in Kansas City, Mo.

Women from several countries were present, along with missionaries, deaconesses and other mission workers.

The Nebraska conference representation was over 225, including Wayne residents Janet Kohl, Joyce Niemann, Verna Rees and Marjorie Porter.

Kohl, a past district president, was the representative of Northeast District United Methodist Women.

THE ASSEMBLY began with a celebratory worship service Thursday night and ended at noon on Sunday.

The four-day meeting featured internationally known speakers, musical events, exhibits, workshops, Bible study and worship events.

Concerns for the environment and for children were the major themes and speakers included Marian Wright Edelman of Washington, D. C., Civil Rights activist and advocate for children; and Noel Brown of Jamaica, a leading United Nations environmental official.

"Witnesses for a New World" was the theme of the quadrennial assembly. More than 50 focus groups explored a wide range of topics from prayer and spiritual disciplines to ways of preventing further damage to the earth.

THE WOMEN'S division of the United Methodist General Board of Global Ministries sponsors the event every four years.

Thanks to Chamber

On behalf of Nebraska's 270,000 children, I write to express appreciation for the act of civic responsibility which the Wayne Chamber of Commerce performed when it announced support for LB 1059, the school finance reform law.

LB 1059-passed and the governor's veto was overridden because of the leadership of over two dozen local chambers and organizations like the Farm Bureau, the Nebraska Realtors, the Farmer's Union and others. Those efforts paid off but the job is not done. There is a petition effort to repeal LB 1059 along with several other reform statutes designed to spread both the tax burden and the opportunity for a quality education evenly over our state.

The most recent and most accurate projection of the impact LB 1059 has just been published. I thought your chamber would want to know the results. If LB 1059 had been in effect for the 1989-'90 school year, Wayne Public Schools would have received approximately $730,065 more in state aid. That increase in state aid translates into a decrease in your local school property tax rate of as much as 61 cents per hundred dollars of taxable valuation. That is a 40 percent reduction in school property taxes in your community. Gary Christensen, President Nebraska Association of School Boards

Thanks expressed

Heartfelt thanks to the participants of the Allen community blood drive held Tuesday, April 17 at the Senior Center. Twenty-three individuals volunteered to donate, resulting in 21 pints of blood collected for the patients in our area hospitals.

The Siouxland Blood Bank gratefully acknowledges the donors and recognizes Robert Bock on becoming a one-gallon donor.

Once again, a sincere thanks to all of the volunteers and blood donors who supported the blood drive. Your contributions helped in assuring our community of an adequate blood supply. Cathy Keyser, Donor Consultant

The GOLDEN YEARS

By Sue Davis

Since 1987, Federal law generally has prohibited forced retirement at any age. One of the few exceptions allows compulsory retirement at 65 or older of certain executives and high-ranking, policy-making employees. That raises a question: How late in life can people work at jobs involving great responsibility and demanding keen intellect and the stamina to handle a heavy workload? The United States Supreme Court provides some answers — not in its decisions but in ages of the justices, who are appointed for life. The average age of today's court is 68. Several justices are in their 80s.

Adaptive aids are available today for people whose disabilities prevent them from driving standard cars. A left-foot accelerator can be installed for those whose right leg doesn't function. A spinner knob on the steering wheel allows one-handed steering. People with impairments should check with a physician to determine whether it's all right to drive. Not all car models can be adapted to the needs of a disabled person.

Remember When? June 15, 1919 — Captain John Alcock and Lieutenant Arthur Brown became the first persons to fly across the Atlantic; their Newfoundland-to-Ireland flight took almost 16 hours.

Ag museum

AREA - The Wayne County Fair and Agriculture Society is establishing an Agricultural Museum at the Wayne County Fairgrounds.

The organizations are looking for salvageable pieces of equipment on the farms and groves in northeast Nebraska. They are looking for machinery reminiscent of the late 1800s and early 1900s.

The types of machinery used by pioneers when they came west is the foundation of the Society.

Anyone wishing to donate items to this cause are asked to call any of the following individuals: Leland Herman, Mick Topp, Duane Bargholz, Kevin Frerichs, Gerald Grone and superintendent Marvis Fuoss of Winside.

Wayne High School reduces energy use, saves $5,220

WAYNE - Wayne High School achieved a 13.2 percent reduction in energy use, saving taxpayers $5,220 during the first year after completing building improvements in April of 1989. The energy-saving improvements were financed with a no-interest loan from the School Weatherization Program and a grant from the federally-funded Institutional Conservation Program. Both are operated by the Nebraska Energy Office.

"Wayne High School's savings were slightly below projections," said Gary Rex, Director of the Energy Office. Rex said the actual savings were about 91 percent of projections. "I want to commend the school board for taking action to reduce the school's operating costs," Rex said.

According to the Energy Office, insulated glazing, a new north vestibule, modifications to the lights in the gymnasium and auditorium, weatherstripping, a new roof and roofing insulation were added to the building.

"The types of building improvements made were very basic," said Rex. These improvements, which cost $101,610, will pay for themselves over the next 19 years if energy prices stay at current levels. Had the district not undertaken the improvements, these dollars would be going to purchase fuel rather than building improvement. If energy prices increase, so will the savings.

"More school districts should consider applying for technical analysis grants of up to $2,500 or no-interest loans," said Rex. "Making energy-saving building improvements is one of the easiest ways for a school district to reduce expenses."

Rex encouraged other school districts to contact Lynn Chamberlin in the Energy Office in the State Capitol for more information.

Mark'n' the Spot

The more and more information that's disseminated about LB 1059, the school refinance bill passed by the state's lawmakers following a veto by Gov. Kay Orr, the more and more confusing it seems.

That, partially, is the reason two opposition groups have formed to circulate petitions to place LB 1059 on the November ballot.

It almost seems worthless, though, to attempt to argue either side. If you're anything like me, the statistics are so confusing that it's mind-boggling. There's no point of arguing statistics when they can be contorted to mean what some believe is right and others wrong.

There is an opinion I have on the matter which deals with the steady decline in performances by students taking various exams to determine their knowledge. That point of view deals with the mistake of tenure.

A number of years ago, teacher's unions placed tenure on the bargaining table as a means of establishing security for those they represented and school boards bowed to that demand.

THE DECISION to allow tenure was a mistake that has cost thousands (if not more) children their right to be educated because once a teacher establishes tenure, they could remain in a school system for life. If you have one bad teacher instructing an important subject, it could affect a student the rest of his/her life.

That's not to degrade the good teacher because strong educators are as important to the success of the system as the poor ones to the demise of it, but tenure is wrong.

For example: If a politician is doing a terrible job, voters will remove that politician from office. Sure, maybe it will be two to six years of poor performances, but eventually that politician will be voted out of office.

Such is the case with the average business, if we do not perform our duties, we will be dismissed from employment or the business will close.

Like the politician, educators should have limited tenure. With evaluations every second, fourth or sixth year, a bad educator can be eliminated from the system. These evaluations could range from students' evaluations and classroom performances, to co-workers evaluations and parental input. In addition, instructors over the age of 50 with a positive evaluation record cannot be removed from the payroll until retirement.

It's bad enough that lawmakers have been forced to execute simple laws which temporarily alter the tax structure in an effort to improve education, but more money isn't necessarily the answer. Less tenure is.

Let's establish laws and, if necessary, constitutional amendments which eliminate tenure.

traditionally played such as Briar Cliff, Peru State, Chadron State and other schools in Nebraska will continue to be scheduled," Chapman said.

"Last year we had only nine home basketball games in a 28-game schedule. In order for Wayne State to provide a competitive edge for our student-athletes, we need more home games," Chapman said. "We believe the exclusive NCAA affiliation for men will help this situation."

Morningside and North Dakota State are already committed to a home and home schedule for men's basketball next season, as is Emporia State, a former conference opponent of Wayne State's and now an NCAA II member.

The move does not affect the operating budgets of any of the athletic programs, according to Chapman. "We have always had scholarships and operating budget needs which have to be met in order for us to compete," Chapman said. "Those needs won't change."

Wayne State's women's programs do not have the same scheduling problems as the men's, primarily because women's NAIA district opponents are more willing to play Wayne State. The dual affiliation for the women's programs will be kept in order for each program to decide which national organization best meets their goals for post season play.

Wayne State joined the NCAA and became dual members of both national athletic governing organizations following the break up of the Central States Intercollegiate Conference, (CSIC) in August of 1987. Wayne State had been granted membership in the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference, (RMAC) a year ago, but withdrew from the league in late March.

"If a conference affiliation, which would meet our scheduling and competition needs for both our men and women presented itself, we would embrace that situation, whether it was an NAIA or NCAA affiliation," Chapman said.

"We expect this move to be an exciting one for Wayne State athletics and believe that the increased visibility that it will bring to Wayne State College and Northeast Nebraska will have a positive affect on all involved," Chapman said.

booths on election day. I think people want someone who will be concerned not only with drugs but with family needs and victims of crime."

Last week, one of Stenberg's opponents was endorsed by many of the state's county attorneys, but he said that fact doesn't concern him. He said he balances that challenge with the support of several county chairmen across the state.

Also included in his run for office, Stenberg said he plans to help local law enforcement establish a network to crack down on the drug war and drug-related crimes.

"It seems to me that there needs to be a better job of delivering the resources for multi-county work against the drug problem," he said. "It's difficult for a small county to fight the drug war by itself, but if we have several counties involved, it makes the war easier to wage."

WSC graduation speaker

U.S. SENATOR J. James Exon (D-Neb.) was the commencement speaker at the Wayne State College graduation held Saturday, May 5 in the Willow Bowl on the college campus. Exon addressed 221 graduates about the future the world faces with the changes in

HARD WORK AND HOMEWORK PREPARATION FOR SEMESTER EXAMS

As the Semester II exams approach, parents and students can prepare together. Solid test preparation means solid study skills. This involves time, planning, organization, notetaking, setting priorities, reviewing, and plenty of hard work and homework. Get involved in the development of these study skills by helping to coach your son or daughter through the semester exams at the end of the month.

WHERE TO START:

- Know your son's/daughter's schedule of courses.
- Know how he/she is doing in those courses. Look at report cards, warnings, tests, and homework. Ask to see them.
- Know now he/she has prepared thus far. Look at notebooks, handouts, review sheets, past exams, and textbooks.
- Know the exam schedule.

COACHING TECHNIQUES:

- Reject student attempts to shrug you off with statements that they know everything or have no work. Everyone can improve, and has work to do.
- Provide a place to study in which the student feels comfortable.
- See to it that all required materials are on hand—notebook, texts, paper and pens.
- Set a routine—a common starting time and ending time.
- Set priorities. Homework should be done before the social life begins.
- Encourage—concentrate on helping...not just finding out everything he/she doesn't know or understand.
- Ask about teacher direction—what did the teacher say was important to study? You can be sure it will be on the exam.
- Look at the material learned in September—semester exams test for the cumulative nature of learning—not just the most recent.

By Pat Meterhenry

If you want to see "Faith in Action", just drive through the country and see all the corn being planted in dry ground. A lot of seed went in this week, and it's only the sixth of May.

Flowers and flowering trees seem to have just burst on the scene; along with yard signs, reminding us of the upcoming primary election.

Our middle daughter has a habit of saying what's on her mind. She was driving to work one day last week when a Lincoln radio station asked if anyone knew who the seven Democratic candidates for governor were. (I had no idea there were seven!)

She got to her office and called in to give it a shot. She couldn't remember Mike Boyle's first name, but said he'd been mayor of Omaha, so the announcer said he'd accept that.

Anyway, after she got them named, he asked which one she was going to vote for. She replied, "None! They're all Democrats!" To which he responded, "You said that, I didn't!" We have her well indoctrinated.

Besides primary elections and graduations, there are confirmations and first communions in May. We are often surprised and pleased to receive invitations from young people whose lives we have touched sometime in the past.

One such was to the high school graduation of a lovely girl who developed diabetes in fourth grade, when I was her school nurse. It was rough going at first, but she's made the necessary adjustments in her life.

We have the honor of Godparenting some very special men and women. There are a pair of twins at Pierce with whom I spent a long first night in the nursery before transferring the boy to Omaha.

My Sis figured the sponsors of her children should also be their guardians, so we have that special designation for all three of hers.

Once, a mutual friend, the mother of three lively boys, called to ask if she could name us in their will, in case anything should happen to both of them. I agreed, only on condition that they never go anywhere with my sis!

The aunt who was my sponsor had a large family, so she ran out of brothers and sisters, and I got to hold baby #10. I was indeed honored.

There were ten confirmations in our church today, and one was our Godchild. Christie looked very lovely and serious in her white robe. She stayed dressed up through dinner. But then the lady disappeared, and the jean shorts and t-shirt went on.

Baptism or dedication, confirmation or first communion, graduation or baccalaureate, all traditions that mark beginnings and endings; all significant steps on the path to adulthood; shared by proud parents and grandparents, friends, teachers, and members of a community. Important ceremonies that pass from generation to generation, and that mark achievements in special ways. May is a special month. Pray for rain.

FRAUD THREATENS MEDICARE BENEFICIARIES: According to an article in the April/May issue of "Modern Maturity" magazine, there's a growing epidemic of fraud committed by dishonest health equipment suppliers who are aided and abetted in their schemes by doctors who make it possible for these rip-off artists to function.

Robin Talbert, an analyst with the American Association of Retired Persons' Office of Consumer Affairs, warns consumers to be wary when considering seat-lift chairs, transcutaneous electric nerve stimulators (TENS), bed and wheelchair cushions, skin-care equipment, and three-wheel powered carts. As Ms. Talbert points out, under Medicare rules, a doctor has to certify medical necessity of health equipment before Medicare will pay for it. Without physician approval, the consumer may find himself or herself having to pay the costs for what is often very expensive materials.

Dishonest medical equipment suppliers siphon off millions of dollars a year that could help keep Medicare premiums down. But we won't be able to get these crooks out of the system unless and until enough consumers complain about them. If you suspect you've been pushed into a medical equipment purchase you don't need, or if you're caught holding the bill for a product or service you were assured Medicare would pay, call toll-free, the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services at 1-800-368-5779. (In Maryland, call 1-800-638-3986.)

HOME SHOPPING SHOWS — NOT SUCH A BARGAIN: If you know a senior citizen who is spending a great deal of money buying items through the TV home shopping shows, here's some interesting information. Studies being done on the popularity of these shows with older people indicate that many of the items they buy would be ignored in a store at lower prices. It's not the product, therefore, that's the attraction as much as it's the phone call to place the order for the merchandise. The buyers get to talk with the friendly hosts, some of whom are well known celebrities from other media. If they boast about the number of items they've already bought through the show, the host will invariably comment with an approving, "Isn't that wonderful?" behavior-reinforcement response which acts just like a verbal pat on the head. Because many seniors are alone, or have few interests outside the home, they find the shopping shows are a substitute for the social interaction otherwise missing in their lives. (And that should be your cue to try to do something to change that situation.) (Your comments are always appreciated, please write me c/o King Features Weekly Service, 235 East 45th Street, New York, N.Y. 10017.)

Calcium Carbonate Caution!
Calcium carbonate is one of the most popular ingredients in calcium supplements and is also present in many antacids. Because women are becoming more aware of the need for dietary calcium to help prevent osteoporosis, supplement sales have soared during recent years. All calcium carbonate tablets are not equivalent, however. Some products do not disintegrate (break apart) quickly and may pass into the intestine before being converted into a usable form. Official standards state that calcium carbonate tablets must disintegrate within 30 minutes. In one study, 11 of 21 samples of different brands failed this test. As food supplements having no therapeutic claims, most calcium supplements are not regulated as drugs. Ask your pharmacist for a reliable preparation.

BEEF PRODUCERS
We salute you

DR. KEN LISKA looks over a typical northeast Nebraska feedlot.

Healthy herd takes time, effort, money

By LaVon Anderson
Assistant Editor

Raising a healthy cow herd today takes more than good luck and prayers — It also takes a lot of time, effort and money.

"We have the best beef in the world," stresses Dr. Ken Liska of the Wayne Veterinary Clinic. "It's very wholesome, it's more lean, it's clean, and it's highly inspected."

Dr. Liska credits today's producers for being better educated and more aware of the various health problems which can arise — whether it be in the feedlot or in a cow-calf operation.

"Our production methods today are better. We have a highly regulated and inspected meat processing chain, and today's producer is much more aware of avoiding residues in meat, whether they be from antibiotics or chemicals in food additives."

Dr. Liska added that random samples taken show very, very low incidences of tissue residue.

"DURING THE last 20 to 25 years, and particularly during the past 10, there have been great strides in research and the production of better vaccines to prevent a lot of diseases in cattle," says Dr. Liska.

"In fact," adds Dr. Liska, "the cost of some of these vaccines is cheaper than 20 years ago and they work generally well in preventing the most common diseases we see in feedlots."

Dr. Liska cited four of the most important measures regarding the usage of vaccines to prevent disease in cow herds — 1) How the vaccine is handled and stored prior to or during use; 2) The type of vaccine used; 3) The time the vaccine is given; and 4) The condition of the animal at the time the vaccine is administered.

IN FEEDLOTS, where cattle are grown and finished, Dr. Liska said veterinarians primarily deal with respiratory infections caused by viruses and bacteria.

"The cattle are often times exposed to these various infections and diseases in concentration points such as sale barns, during loading and sorting, or during transit."

The Wayne veterinarian also cited dust, diesel smoke in transit and weather conditions — high humidity in the summer and ice storms in the winter — as the predisposing causes for many viruses and infections.

"In cattle," explains Dr. Liska, "the lung has so much surface area exposed to inhaled air. It provides a vast entry of exposure into the cow's body."

When cattle are stressed, whether it be due to weather conditions, transport or sorting, Dr. Liska said their resistance is lower and they are more apt to develop problems.

PARASITES, both internal and external, and foot problems, such as foot rot, are other problem areas veterinarians often deal with in a feedlot operation.

Dr. Liska said foot rot may arise from an infection in the soil, or a cow may be predisposed to the problem by a cut on the foot received from a foreign object in the yard, such as wire, cement, ice, etc., or from poorly maintained working facilities.

In this particular geographic area, Dr. Liska said there is a high incidence of a disease known as lung jaw — a bacterial infection which enters through the mouth, localizes in the jaw area and forms an abscess.

"We don't know why this is such a problem in this area," says Dr. Liska, adding there is some speculation that the pH balance in the soil may provide a good environment for that particular bacteria to grow.

Other minor problems often seen in feedlots include ringworm, pink eye, injuries and lamenesses, nasal polyps and wooden tongue.

"Nutritional problems rarely exist nowadays," points out Dr. Liska. "Rations are well calculated, and most feeders provide well-balanced nutrition."

A message from the Nebraska Bankers in your hometown.

TODAY, THE MOST IMPORTANT THING GROWING ON NEBRASKA'S FARMS AND RANCHES IS OPTIMISM

A salute to our cattle industry during Nebraska Beef Producers Month.

May has been declared Nebraska Beef Producers Month. "No one supports this idea with more enthusiasm than your Nebraska banks. The economic health of agriculture affects each of us. Our entire state depends on the productivity and success of farmers and ranchers.

The bankers of Nebraska salute the men and women involved in beef production, not only for their productivity but for their ability to adapt to a changing economic environment. Our beef industry has been through tough times and bankers have shared that concern. But now, throughout the state, the signs of growing confidence can be seen. The Nebraska Beef Producers are approaching the future with a realistic view of what it will take to survive and succeed in the years ahead.

Just as Nebraska Beef Producers rely on banks for their financial services, we count on them as our valued customers . . . and the reason we are in business.

As part of that commitment, Nebraska's banks have played a key role in developing a new source for long-term fixed rate mortgages on farmland through the new "Farmer Mac" secondary market. We continue to work with several very progressive ranching and beef organizations toward establishing public policy that enhances the availability of credit for most farming operations.

These events are examples of our faith in Nebraska's Beef Industry . . . a faith that we know is shared by the citizens of Nebraska from border to border as we "honor America's beef providers."

Program finds efficiency a key

By Mark Crist
Managing Editor

As most beef producers know, the most important thing in production is efficiency, and cooperative extension beef specialist Terry Mader may be able to provide some answers to increase herd productivity.

The information Mader can provide beef producers, is the result of a demonstration project he helped conduct beginning in 1983, entitled Integrated Resource Management.

"The objective was done as a framework for the livestock industry to improve efficiency of meat production," Mader said. "In Nebraska, the primary objective was to demonstrate the newest, most effective management practices for cow/calf producers. It was a cooperative effort statewide to improve the overall herd productivity (reproduction) and efficiency."

Mader explains the recommendation that proved most effective was to make sure cattle were provided with the proper levels of nutrients. He said in order to accomplish the objective, cattle producers were asked to feed younger cows separate from older cows and cows with higher production capabilities were separated from cows with low production capabilities.

THE RESULTS were impressive. Mader said open cows (cows exposed to bulls for reproduction) saw a change of 7.2 percent in their productivity. At the start of the project, 12.5 percent of the cows were not getting bred and at the end, that number dropped to 5.3 percent.

In conjunction with exposure, the percentage of calves weaned of cows exposed to bulls jumped 20.1 percent from 70.8 percent to 90.9. The 205 day adjusted weaning, according to weight and pounds, rose 38 percent from 384 to 529. Mader added that the actual pounds of calves weaned per cow exposed to bulls increased 78 percent from 271 lbs. at the start to 483 lbs. when the project was complete.

"I like this project because it allows cattle producers to fine-tune their management skills," he said. "We just assisted them to achieve these higher levels of productivity."

Mader said the response to the program has been tremendous.

"The program has been quite positive and well received," he said. "It's required that cattle producers keep extensive records and devote time to short-term as well as long-term planning, which is one area that is often overlooked."

The key to the program was not to go into a cow/calf operation and criticize producers, but rather to reinforce and broaden producers perspectives in those areas where minor management skills were overlooked.

"Some producers want to produce purebred stock, some others want club calves and others want cows with good milk capabilities," he said. "What we attempted to do was help them focus on an area that best suited the resources available to them."

He said this project is important to today's competitive market. Mader said for producers to survive, they must have a broad knowledge of breeding programs, nutrition requirements and the market they're serving.

THE PROJECT WAS conducted in conjunction with the Nebraska Cattlemen's Association and the cooperative extension service. The two groups are presently putting together a statewide Integrated Resource Management program.

For more information about the study or the program, contact your local county extension agent or the local Nebraska Cattlemen Association officers.

Another Letter From A Satisfied Customer.

Beef satisfies your appetite. Some say it suits their taste to a "T". Who could resist a delicious T-bone cooked on the grill? Seared on the outside. Inside, medium rare.

You know how simple beef is to fix. It goes straight to the grill. Cooks quickly. And oh, tastes so great!

And here's some news you may not know. Today's beef is leaner, lower in cholesterol and has fewer calories than you might have thought. Less than 200 calories in a 3-ounce serving, cooked and trimmed. Those words from the U.S.D.A.

So enjoy the great taste of beef. When you buy beef...you eat well. Satisfaction guaranteed.

Fat and its role in the eating quality of beef

by Dennis Burson
 NU Meat Specialist

Reducing the fat in beef products seems to be the current, overriding theme of the beef industry. This is appropriate because the amount and source of fat in the diet has become a concern for most Americans.

Fat appears to play a role in health problems such as coronary heart disease and also contributes calories to the diet. Because of these two major factors, dietary guidelines developed by the American Heart Association suggest limiting the amount of calories from fat to 30 percent of the total calories in the diet. It is estimated that fat accounts for approximately 35-37 percent of the calories in the diet.

As beef producers, meat processors and meat retailers attempted to reduce the fat content of beef, the major concern raised is: "How will reducing fat affect the eating qualities of beef?"

In the past, we have been led to believe that fatter beef results in beef that is more tender, juicy and flavorful. Now, with the emphasis on reducing fat in the diet, the question should be "How much fat do we need to assure the eating qualities of beef?"

Fat in beef retail cuts can be found as external fat, as seam fat, or as marbling. Each fat location can be important to reduce fat on the outside edge of retail cuts; seam fat is fat that is located between the lean muscles of retail cuts; and marbling is the flecks of fat found within the lean of retail cuts.

External fat can be removed easily from beef cuts before they are eaten. Seam fat also can be removed before consumption, but not as easily as external fat. Production of cattle with an external fat thickness of at least 0.2 inch may be important to achieve acceptable tenderness; however, trimming external fat and seam fat before cooking does not affect the eating characteristics.

Trimming this fat before meat is consumed can significantly reduce the amount of fat in the lean portion. Beef cuts with .5 inch of external fat may average 23.6 percent fat, whereas beef cuts with external and seam fat removed average 6.3 percent fat. Currently most retail stores practice trimming the external fat to .25 inch and some retail stores even promote beef that is trimmed of all external fat.

Marbling, the flecks of fat within the lean, is most often related to the eating characteristics of beef.

For young beef, it determines if beef grades USDA Prime, Choice, or Select. The percentage of fat in the lean due to marbling can range from 1.7 to 10.5 percent. Beef that grades USDA Select will have from 1.7 to 4.2 percent fat; beef that grades USDA Choice will have from 4.2 to 6.8 percent fat; and beef that grades USDA Prime will have from 6.8 to 10.5 percent fat in the lean.

The important question is: "How much marbling or fat is needed for acceptable eating qualities of beef?"

Marbling has a low to moderate relationship with eating traits such as tenderness, juiciness and flavor. The more marbling, the better the eating quality. However, it appears that the improvement in overall eating quality is greatest up to about 3 percent fat in the lean, after which the increase in eating quality due to fat is not as great.

In addition, research data suggest that the 3 percent fat level will produce beef that has acceptable eating qualities. The research is based on results from numerous studies that have evaluated the cuts from the rib, loin and sirloin.

Three percent fat is equivalent to beef that grades USDA Select. In addition, cuts that contain up to 7.5 percent fat are within the dietary recommendation of less than 30 percent of the calories from fat. Therefore, if low fat lean meats with acceptable eating qualities are desired, consumers can purchase beef that is graded USDA Select and choose retail cuts that come from the rib, loin and sirloin.

Purchasing cuts that are USDA Choice will give cuts with an even greater assurance of eating quality. USDA Choice cuts are only slightly higher in fat content but also fit within the current dietary recommendations for fat.

Cuts from the round and chuck are prepared primarily by moist heat cookery methods; for this reason there is a poor relationship between fat content and eating quality. Chuck and round cuts that are low in fat have acceptable eating qualities. Therefore selection of cuts from the round and chuck should be based on reducing the fat content without concern of a marbling level or grade to maintain the desirable eating qualities.

Beef means business in Nebraska

Nebraska, known to many as the Cornhusker State, can also stake a claim to being the "Beef State."

The state grossed $4.4 billion in farm receipts from the sale of cattle in 1988, according to the Nebraska Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS). The packing and processing industry adds nearly an additional $1 billion to the value of beef, based on estimates from the American Meat Institute.

Combined, beef production and processing represent more than 22 percent of Nebraska's Gross State Product.

For every job on Nebraska farms and ranches, there are six jobs in related supply and processing businesses. The National Cattlemen's Association has estimated that every dollar from cattle sales directly generates an additional $5 - $6 of financial activity in farm supply and food businesses.

Nineteen out of 20 Americans eat beef at least once every two weeks. The Beef Industry Council says Americans average three servings of beef a week, while Nebraska average is four servings a week.

On average, Americans actually ingest just over two ounces of beef each day, far below the recommended six ounces from the "Meat Group," as suggested by most health care organizations.

Nebraska's cattle business has been relatively stable, despite a 22 percent reduction in U.S. cattle inventory since 1976.

The state's cattle feeding industry has continued to set monthly and annual records for numbers of fed cattle marketed, and topped the nation in 1989 for the fifth time ever. Nebraska cattle feeders marketed more than five million head in 1989.

Cattle outnumber people in 89 of 93 counties. Exceptions are Douglas, Sarpy, Lancaster and Dakota. Beef processing is the state's largest manufacturing employer, says the Nebraska Department of Economic Development, accounting for half of Nebraska's manufacturing jobs.

With its large-scale beef industry, Nebraska is considered a beef-surplus state. NASS estimates that more than 95 percent of the beef produced in the state is consumed elsewhere. The "steaks" are high-Nebraska's beef industry supplies beef to more than 30 million people residing outside the state.

Beef Ambassadors on duty

Beef has a new group of boosters in Nebraska. Actually, they're more properly called ambassadors.

In October 1989, the Nebraska Beef Board expanded its promotion and consumer education programs with the adoption of the Beef Ambassador program.

Pat Mueller of Platte Center, Brenda Ruf of Cambridge and Barb Marcy of Chadron were selected as Beef Ambassadors. All are involved in the beef business.

Backgrounds in home economics and education help the women in relaying lean meat messages to consumer and student groups across Nebraska. The Ambassadors also help to answer questions from producers about the beef checkoff program by speaking at local producer meetings.

In-store demonstrations, aided by point-of-purchase materials, have shown to have very positive effects on consumer purchase decisions. This is another area Nebraska beef ambassadors coordinate.

May is Nebraska Beef Month

Fire up the grill. May has once again been designated Nebraska Beef Month.

Recognized as a key industry in the state, beef contributes more than $4 billion in farm sales to the economy. Combined with the packing industry, beef accounts for more than 22 percent of the state's economic activity. Nebraska has 33,000 beef production operations that provide a host of jobs on and off the farm. And, beef is one of the few ways Nebraska can "harvest" protein from its many acres which are unsuitable for growing crops.

Each county in Nebraska has at least 15,000 cattle. Only four counties have more people than cattle: Douglas, Sarpy, Lancaster and Dakota.

Beef is good for the consumer, as well as the producer. It provides a number of important nutrients. Known to health and nutrition professionals as a "nutrient-dense" food, beef offers a large number of nutrients for a relatively small number of calories.

Beef has become much leaner in response to consumer concerns over fat and calories in the diet. Industry research shows 90 percent of retailers now offer closely trimmed meat cuts. And through new breeding and feeding techniques, beef producers are able to offer a leaner product without sacrificing tenderness, taste or juiciness.

Nebraskans enjoy beef, too. A study conducted in 1987 by SRI Research Center showed Nebraskans prefer beef over other meats when considering convenience, cooking variations and cooking enjoyment. The average Nebraskan serves beef at least four times a week.

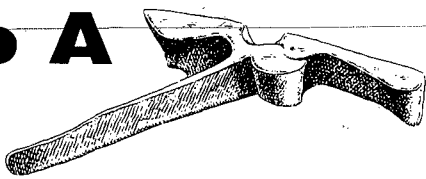

THE CATTLE IN this yard anxiously await their next meal.

Cut Across the Grain

When carving beef, cut across the grain on all but the most tender cuts. The grain is the length-wise fiber of the meat. Very tender cuts, like filets, can be sliced in any direction.

Beef Suits Nebraska To A

Make no bones about it, beef plays a part in each of our lives. After all, beef has that great taste we enjoy so much. Beef is a part of a balanced, nutritional diet. And, the Nebraska beef industry is a major contributor to our hometown economy.

All things considered, you might say beef suits us to a T.

Enjoy Nebraska Beef! Real food for real people.....

Cow herd

caif operation, Dr. Liska said the four primary problems involve reproductive failure, respiratory problems, internal and external parasites, and genetic deficiencies.

"Reproductive failure is the number one cost to the cow-calf man," points out Dr. Liska, adding that reproductive failure may occur from cows not conceiving due to infertility on the part of the bull or cow, reproductive diseases, abortion, and the poor condition of the cow at breeding time.

"Again," adds Dr. Liska, "reproductive failure is often caused by infections, most of which we have vaccines to prevent if we know what we're dealing with. That, points out the Wayne veterinarian, can often be determined through laboratory and blood tests.

Another problem common in cow-calf operations involves calf scours, the major cause of death loss in beef calves.

Dr. Liska cited a recent article which stated that only 75 percent of cows that conceive in the United States actually wean a calf. "The other 25 percent fail through abortion, still births, calf scours or other diseases."

"IN A COW-CALF operation a lot of losses occur due to the lack of close attention and observation by the management," points out Dr. Liska. "Getting that calf out of the mud or an ice storm, or treating diarrhea early, is very important.

"We're dealing with a newborn, and time is of the essence. If there is an illness in a newborn, he doesn't have a lot of body reserve.

"Early observation is the key to solving a lot of problems."

PARASITES also are a problem in cow-calf herds, "lice infested animals don't gain weight," said Dr. Liska, adding that the same is true with internal parasites such as worms.

Dr. Liska added that the most recent technique in breeding stock involves measuring the pelvic size of both heifers and bulls.

"Pelvic size is a highly heritable trait," says Dr. Liska, "and a trait that a bull will pass on to his off-spring." The veterinarian also pointed out that a heifer with a larger pelvic size is naturally going to be able to deliver a larger calf.

"It's simply a screening process," says Dr. Liska, "and one that seems to work very well."

ANOTHER simple technique done in reproduction, according to Dr. Liska, is a pregnancy test for cows and heifers.

"It's a waste to feed a cow or heifer who isn't pregnant," points out Dr. Liska. "And if that cow or heifer isn't pregnant, we need to find out why."

Dr. Liska added that cows and heifers need to be in a weight gaining condition in order to conceive. He also pointed out that when the temperature reaches 85 degrees or more, the fertility goes down because the sperm is susceptible to heat.

"Of course," he added, "breeding conditions also depend on the fertility of the bull."

"THE COST to the cow-calf producer varies greatly," points out Dr. Liska. "From doing nothing to spending $8 to $10 per head on disease and parasite prevention."

Dr. Liska also pointed out that today's beef cow is weaning a calf approximately 100 pounds heavier than beef cows 20 years ago.

"That tells us that we have more efficient cattle, and larger size cattle in better health."

Dr. Liska said growth stimulants, implants and feed additives also are available today that cause animals to grow faster.

"OUR JOB AS veterinarians," said Dr. Liska, "whether it be in a feedlot or cow-calf operation, is to first determine what the problem is and then what type of vaccine is needed and when it should be given."

The Wayne veterinarian said there are minimum standards provided by the USDA in the manufacturing of vaccines. "All reputable manufacturers meet those standards, but certain manufacturers far exceed those standards.

"There are so many different vaccines by so many companies that we spend a great deal of time sorting out all of those products and making objective recommendations," added Dr. Liska.

"The cost of preventing disease with a vaccine varies depending on the disease, the type of vaccine, and how many different diseases we want to prevent.

"We know the individual producers we work for and their specific problems, and we try to use the vaccine a particular producer needs the most."

While some producers may not feel they have a problem and see no need to take preventative measures, Dr. Liska pointed out that many diseases in cattle are sub-clinical — not detectable to the untrained eye.

"By preventing these sub-clinical diseases there is a net economic gain," said Dr. Liska.

NUTRITIONAL PROBLEMS rarely exist in today's feedlot or cow-calf operation, according to Dr. Ken Liska.

"The cost of the disease is far greater than any preventative measures."

WHILE THERE is a great deal of consolidation of cattle into larger feedlots and cow-calf herds, Dr. Liska pointed out that the average cow herd in the United States still averages 50 head or less.

"This part of the United States is typical of that," says Dr. Liska, adding that herds in northeast Nebraska range in size from 15 to 400 head.

"There is still a place for the small producer to raise cattle, furnish a good product, and provide an income.

"There are a lot of creek bottom pastures too wet to farm and a lot of waste roughage left in the cornfield. "The cow's digestive system is designed to take low quality roughage and convert it into high quality meat or milk."

DR. LISKA also pointed out that the majority of retail cost of beef comes after it leaves the feedlots, due to freight costs, the slaughtering process, packaging and retail promotions.

"That leaves the producer somewhat at the mercy of those people who handle the meat after it leaves his hands.

"And yet, it is the producer who gets the praise, or condemnation, if the housewife in Chicago doesn't like it."

THE WAYNE veterinarian also touched on the subject of animal welfare and animal activists who claim that cattle are mistreated.

"Animals do not have rights," said Dr. Liska, "but there is certainly an issue of animal welfare.

"The livestock industry has been put on the defensive by animal welfare groups, and the livestock organizations are acutely aware of activists spreading untrue propaganda.

"But I still have faith that the average American consumer believes that people who make their living in the livestock industry do so in a humane way.

"In my experience, I've found that livestock owners treat their animals with a great deal of welfare. Obviously, it's their livelihood. Why should they mistreat them?"

"Sure," added Dr. Liska, "there are some very isolated cases of animals who are mistreated.

"But that's also true of humans. Right?"

Lean beef gets support from Heart Association, Cancer Society

Beef's place in a healthy diet has received support from two Nebraska health organizations: the American Heart Association and the American Cancer Society.

The American Heart Association, Nebraska Affiliate has joined forces with the Nebraska Beef Board to alert the public about the need to follow a low-cholesterol diet to help prevent heart disease. Heart disease is the number one killer of Nebraskans.

The two groups have signed a cooperative communications agreement so that joint projects can be undertaken. William Gust, M.D., an American Heart Association volunteer, was instrumental in forging the new agreement.

"The beef that is now on the market is quite different from the product formerly available. Changes in feeding practices have resulted in beef containing far less fat and cholesterol. Because of this improved product, beef can be served within the guidelines of the American Heart Association diet," Dr. Gust said.

This is the second cooperative communications agreement undertaken by the two groups. A previous agreement resulted in the production of education materials released to the public in 1988.

Future communications projects will contain the message that a balanced, healthful diet should stress variety and moderation. While meat choices should also include poultry and fish, six ounces of lean red meat a day can be a part of a heart-healthy diet.

When choosing beef, consumers should select lean cuts, trim all the visible fat and throw away the fat that cooks out of the meat.

For more information about the American Heart Association diet, call the American Heart Association at 402-346-0771.

The American Cancer Society, Nebraska Division and the Nebraska Beef Board have teamed to heighten the public's awareness about good nutrition and suggested dietary guidelines.

What does this joint relationship mean? "As you can see by joining forces with the Nebraska Beef Board, we are saying there is a place for lean red meat in a well-balanced diet," stated Dr. Phillip Ibsenberger, American Cancer Society, Nebraska Division, Chairman of the Board.

The Nebraska Beef Board and the Nebraska Division of the American Cancer Society will continue to cooperate on nutrition education as it relates to cancer risk reduction and prevention throughout the year.

For more nutrition information, call the American Cancer Society, 1-800-642-8116; or Deb Leaders at the Nebraska Beef Board 1-800-421-LEAN.

Hay inventory — what are the costs?

by Terry Mader
NU beef specialist
Northeast Research and Extension Center

Beef cattle producers often need to maintain an inventory or carry over a portion of the previous year's harvested hay crop to ensure against future hay shortages. But long-term outside storage of hay may be costly.

Generally, hay is fed up within the first year or within five to 10 months after harvest. However, if hay is held over for use in subsequent years, storage time may run 19 to 30 months.

During the first year of storage—five to 10 months—total losses in dry matter average 10 percent to 15 percent in loaf stacks and round bales. However, stored hay continues to deteriorate over longer periods of time. Also, associated declines in protein and energy value occur, based upon University of Nebraska research results. A three-year study was conducted at the NU Northeast Research and Extension Center, Concord.

After 17 months of storage, hay in loaf stacks lost 25.3 percent of their dry weight; round bales lost 26.1 percent. An even greater loss of protein and energy occurs.

Initial crude protein contents of the hay in loaf stacks and round bales were 22.4 percent and 18.7 percent, respectively. After 17 months of storage, protein contents declined to 17.0 percent and 15.6 percent, respectively.

Declines in both protein content and total weight of hay in the package translate into a total protein loss of 43.3 percent (loaf stack) and 38.4 percent (round bale) or the protein initially in the harvested hay. After 29 months of storage, total protein losses were 53.1 percent and 42.8 percent for loaf stacks and round bales, respectively. Declines in energy are similar in magnitude.

Maintaining large hay inventories can be costly. In general, loaf stacks deteriorate less during the first year of storage. With longer term storage—from 17 months to 29 months—the rate of deterioration of hay in round bales tends to be less than that of hay in loaf stacks. Total losses for both round bales and loaf stacks are similar after 29 months.

The tight hay package of the round bale is conducive to shedding water which is good for long-term storage. However, when packing hay in round bales, hay moisture content is of greater concern than when packaging hay in loaf stacks. Therefore, the package of choice may depend upon moisture of hay to be packaged, machinery operator skills and length of time hay is expected to be stored outside. Storing hay inside will reduce but not eliminate losses in dry matter and quality.

Beef On The Grill Gets Great Marks.

A steak earns its stripes when you cook it on the grill. A real taste sensation that's just unmatched. Seared on the outside. Inside, medium rare.

You know how simple beef is to fix. It goes straight to the grill. Cooks quickly. And oh, tastes so great!

And here's some news you may not know. Today's beef is leaner, lower in cholesterol and has fewer calories than you might have thought. Less than 200 calories in a 3 ounce serving, cooked and trimmed. That's from the U.S.D.A.

So enjoy the great taste of beef. When you buy beef...you eat well.

Cattle crave corn husk residue

by Lori Hallowell
UNL Ag Communications

Grazing in a smorgasbord of crop residue, cattle seek out and devour almost every corn husk they can find, according to two University of Nebraska researchers.

Ruminant nutritionist Terry Klopfenstein and retired animal scientist John Ward discovered that corn husk residue provides a forage high in quality, fiber and energy. And, cattle enjoy eating the husks.

Corn husks account for about 10 percent to 15 percent of the total residue in cornfields after harvest, Klopfenstein said. Cattle eat a third of the total residue and all of the husks. Corn husks make up 30 percent to 40 percent of the cattle's diet while they graze residue.

That may surprise some cattle producers, the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources researcher said.

"Intuition would tell us that the leaves would provide the best source of energy, but that's not true," Klopfenstein said. "The cattle even prefer to eat the husks instead of the leaves."

Klopfenstein's and Ward's research is part of a continuing study comparing the value of corn and sorghum residue for grazing.

They also found that cattle grazing on corn residue harvest feed that otherwise may be lost.

"About 4 percent of the corn grain crop is dropped on the ground during harvest," Klopfenstein said. "And that's great feed that would otherwise rot away." Sorghum residue doesn't offer cattle, especially calves, the same nutritional balance as corn residue, he said.

The much smaller sorghum grain seeds, if eaten, are often swallowed without chewing, Klopfenstein said. The animal has no way of using nutrients inside the seeds.

"That means it does no good," he said. However, producers shouldn't avoid planting sorghum just because the residue is less nutritious than corn, he said.

"Sorghum stubble is important to beef cows because it provides most of the energy and protein they will need," Klopfenstein said. "But calves grazing sorghum residue will need protein supplements."

Klopfenstein said sorghum has some advantages over corn residue for grazing.

Sorghum stalks and some leaves remain standing after harvest while corn husks and leaves are left on the ground by the combine, he said. If the ground is muddy, cattle will trample the corn husks and leaves. A heavy snow can completely cover corn leaves. The standing sorghum stalks are less affected by snow and mud.

Sorghum stalks also continue growing after harvest until the first frost, Klopfenstein said. Sugar, produced through photosynthesis as the stalk grows, maintains energy content in sorghum.

The study's major goal has been to develop a computer model—a program based on research findings—that cattle producers could use as a management tool for residue grazing. The computer model would answer questions such as: how many animals can graze per acre, how long they should graze and whether supplements are necessary.

Klopfenstein said that sort of information will be valuable to producers.

"Producers handle their residue grazing cattle based on past experiences," Klopfenstein said. "For example, if they fed a particular supplement last year and it worked well, they'll use it again, but it may not be the most economical."

Klopfenstein expects to complete his research in one to three years, depending on the availability of graduate students to assist in the research. His research is funded by the IANR Agricultural Research Division, the Nebraska Corn Development, Utilization and Marketing Board and a Low Input Sustainable Agriculture grant.

UNL survey seeks midwest physicians' cholesterol views

A University of Nebraska-Lincoln researcher wants to know what dietary advice Midwestern physicians are giving their patients for lowering blood cholesterol.

Nancy Betts, a human nutrition researcher, is asking physicians in six states about their dietary advice. The study, "Dietary Recommendations Given by Physicians for Lowering Blood Cholesterol," will indicate whether physicians are recommending that certain foods or food groups be eliminated from low-cholesterol diets, the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources scientist said.

Physicians' attitudes about beef consumption and cholesterol levels are an important part of the survey, she said.

"There has been a misconception of beef," Betts said. "I'm hoping that the physicians recognize that beef is an important part of the diet."

The UNL College of Home Economics faculty member began her research in September 1989. She surveyed 5,900 physicians in Nebraska, Iowa, South Dakota, Kansas, Colorado and Wyoming who most frequently treat patients with high cholesterol. The specialties of those surveyed included cardiology, family practice, general practice and internal medicine.

The survey asked physicians which foods they routinely recommend that patients eliminate, decrease or increase in their diets to lower cholesterol.

Another aim of the study is to determine how physicians receive their information for making dietary recommendations, Betts said. She also wants to identify the best methods for providing information to physicians.

"The effect of this study will be that we can create information that addresses physicians' concerns and meets their needs," Betts said. "Many areas do not have registered dietitians available. We want to help physicians in those areas to stay informed of changes."

Results of the survey are expected in June, she said.

The research is funded by a $7,800 grant from the Nebraska Beef Board. Betts' research is conducted in cooperation with the IANR Agricultural Research Division.

Board promotes beef

Since its initial creation in 1970, the Nebraska Beef Board has promoted beef to increase consumer demand.

The Beef Board is a nonprofit marketing organization. Its seven-producer-member board and staff represent all the state's 33,000 producers who contribute $1 for every head of cattle sold. More than 90 percent of the revenue invested by Nebraska producers is utilized in national beef promotion and research programs.

The board also conducts advertising programs through print and broadcast media in the state. Its intent is to reinforce the traditional appeal that beef has for Nebraskans, while addressing beef's healthfulness and appropriate place in Nebraskan's diets.

The Nebraska Beef Board helps fund international market development through the U.S. Meat Export Federation, a worldwide, trade organization that builds demand for U.S. beef in other countries.

Health care professionals, educators, food marketers, consumers and news media are receiving increased amounts of information about beef from the Nebraska Beef Board. Its intention is to reduce misinformation about beef.

Promotional activities include funding the Nebraska Beef Cook-Off, conducting a Celebrity Beef Cook-Out at the Nebraska State Fair, promoting National Meat Month and Nebraska Beef Month, and exhibiting at major consumer and trade shows in Nebraska.

The board also funds research projects in the areas of marketing, nutrition and new product development.

Persons desiring more information may write the Nebraska Beef Board, P.O. Box 2408, Kearney, NE 68848, or phone (800) 421-5326.

Olympic consultant: most top athletes eat beef

Virtually all top athletes eat beef, according to Dr. Ann Grandjean, chief nutritional consultant to the U.S. Olympic Committee and director of the International Center for Sports Nutrition in Omaha.

"There is a misconception by the general public of what the elite athlete eats," Grandjean says. "Only two percent of the elite athletes are vegetarians. Most eat beef, but this isn't really recognized due to the media attention on the unusual."

Grandjean noted that beef, for a relatively low number of calories, is a rich source of iron, protein and other important nutrients. Young athletes, she said, often consume less than 2,000 calories a day, limiting their food sources of iron. In such cases, food sources rather than supplements are recommended to increase iron intake, except in cases of anemia, Grandjean explained.

Symptoms of iron deficiency include lack of energy, irritability and apathy, and lowered resistance to infection and disease. A variety of foods should be eaten to ensure that all nutrients needed in the diet are obtained, Grandjean emphasized.

Dr. Grandjean is also a nutritional consultant for athletes at the University of Nebraska.

Nebraska repeats as cattle feeding champ

Nebraska's cattle feeding industry claimed its second consecutive national "title" last year.

According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Cattle on Feed report issued earlier this year, Nebraska Cattle on Feed report issued earlier this year, Nebraska cattle feeders sent 5.07 million head to market during 1989, the most of any state. Runner-up Texas marketed 4.7 million head, followed by Kansas at 4.2 million.

In 1988, Nebraska had an even stronger showing for fed cattle marketed, setting an all-time Nebraska record of 5.12 million head. Texas again placed second with a total of 5.03 million head.

Nebraska has been number one in marketing of fed cattle five years in history, all during the 1980s: 1981, 1982, 1983, 1988 and 1989. The top single-state record is held by Texas at 5.26 million head, achieved in 1986.

"Generally favorable corn crops of the past two years and increased packer interest in expanding their operations" are two major factors in the growth of Nebraska's cattle feeding industry, says Bill Dobbs of the Nebraska Agricultural Statistics Service.

Dobbs noted that as meat packers such as Iowa Beef Processors (IBP), Con Agra, Excel and Beef America expand their operations, Nebraska's commercial feedlots are "encouraged to expand their capacities for feeding."

Brand recording in Nebraska dates back to 1800s

Putting a mark of ownership on animals is an ancient practice, but statewide brand recording in Nebraska did not begin until July 1, 1899.

The first brand recorded that day is still on record and in use. Today, approximately 35,000 brands are on file in Nebraska, the Nebraska Brand Committee reports.

A properly recorded brand serves as legal proof of ownership. To brand cattle in Nebraska, a brand must be recorded with the Nebraska Brand Committee.

The first evidence of brand recording in Nebraska dates back to May 5, 1855 in Cass County, notes Cynthia Monroe of the Livestock Brand Recording Office in Lincoln. John Gilmore of Mount Pleasant used the brand on his cattle.

The oldest original recorded brand in Nebraska (prior to statewide recording) was first recorded in Deuel County, May 12, 1890, by the Rush Creek Land and Livestock Company, Inc.
