"That (independence), in itself, is good but having to be reliant' on family members or nearby neigh-bors can have indifferent conse-quences." Kucera said that having a trans-portation system which would bring rural citizens, who need the service, into Wayne would alleviate the need of some to be depen-dent on friends or neighbors.

Succession because it's available to its customers. Similarly, downtown jewelry merchant Randy Pederson, shared some of the same ideas, but from a different perspective. He said Wayne needs to make it widely known that its pricing and stock is just as good, if not better, than larger cities if Wayne is to establish itself as an area shopping hub. "We can have every product at every price with excellent service, but customers will still go else-where if we're not open when they shop," Pederson said. "Right now, we're only open long enough for the non-working person to shop and that's not good enough." its customers.

ENDICOTT AGREED. He said the only negative thing he has found about Wayne in the over-two years he's been here, is that retail businesses are not open long enough for shoppers.

For Pac 'N' Save, as well as re-tail grocer Bill's G.W., the customer base has been good, but Endicott said he knows customers are still being lost to Norfolk because they do a better job of advertising. He said although there are no simple answers to the solution, it would help Wayne if it provided some type of mail atmosphere for shop-pers. pers

One solution Endicott offered is either for Wayne to develop a 'mall-type atmosphere' or draw in, a major retailer like a K-Mart or a Wal Mart. He said the combination of competitive grocery stores and major retailers would help make Wayne a hub for the towns sur-rounding it. "My personal belief is that Wayne needs to the itself in with groceries," he said. 'In Seward (a town about the size of Wayne), they tried a combination of a Pac 'N' Save and a Wal Mart to draw people into town and it's worked," he said. 'Maybe that's something Wayne can do. We could tie in two Wayne can do. We could tie in two anchor businesses to draw people into town.

A like approach was discussed by VanMeter and Lueders. Van-Meter said, "downtown businesses have failed because they don't work together. Ben Franklin said it work together. Ben Franklin said it best when he wrote the first editorial cartoon with the chopped up snake: It read stay together or fall apart and that's true in today's business market. ... WAYNE - Since the arrival of Dr. Donald Mash to Wayne State Col-lege, the school has steadily promoted itself as a regional hub. Part of the college's efforts as a hub run off on Wayne and some would like to see Wayne grow additionally in the same respect. According to Jeff Beckman, college relations director at WSC, the college's efforts have proved beneficial. He said the school's rise in enrollment is indicative of the efforts expressed by the college. In ad-dition, promoting Wayne State as a hub college is something that can be adapted by the region. "We want people to know that because Wayne State College is here, it makes the communities in the region more attractive," Beck-man said. "Dr. Mash wants communities to exploit the advantage of having Wayne State nearby."

having Wayne State nearby.

SOME OF THE outreach programs successfully conducted by the college have resulted in programs such as the 2 + 2 classes offered in Norfolk and South Sioux City, to the work done by the Center for Cultural Outreach and other seminars for towns requesting them. In addition, professors at Wayne State are encouraged to speak at events when asked.

Another important element instituted since Mash's arrival has been accomplished through the cooperative efforts of USWest and WSC, which resulted in the Nebraska Business Development Center, run by Connie Keck. Beckman said each of these efforts have helped the Wayne area draw people into the college community for a variety of reasons. Similarly, as WSC promotes itself, Beckman said the Wayne area needs to keep pace. He said as Wayne grows, so too will the sur-

"The college is a natural drawing place," he said. "People are com-ing here for various events. Maybe the college needs to work harder, however, the community itself needs to stay sensitive to the small towns surrounding it. Even though we've evolved as a hub, the towns in the area want to stay viable. We need to keep that in mind."

This has been an outstanding local recruiting year with several top-notch signees from the area, Klaver said. *Jeff Lutt, Matt Peter-son and Corey Privett are all excellent pitching prospects as well as good position players and hit-ters. Mike Mogus is a quality first baseman and a dedicated worker."

"I.I. Parks will add good power as well as catching depth while Jeff. Mullins is a good third baseman who along with Lutt will also play football at WSC," Klaver said.

"Jeff Burger and Brent Cameron are two players we tried to recruit last year who have opted to join us now and should help us immediately. I am quite pleased with the group coming in," Klaver said. "They are all hard workers and the type of kids we will use to build around. With the move to the NCAA Division II level, we need NCAA Division II level, we need players of this quality to be com-petitive. We will have to lay an even tougher schedule in the fu-ture with more division I and II games and I feel these are the type of young men who can help us meet the challenge," Klaver added added

Under the program, the 11 incoming freshmen will only be re-quired to take three years of undergraduate work at Chadron State College before starting medical school at UNMC. A primary concern is that students must express an interest in practicing medicine in a rural community after they graduate. Spe-cial consideration was given to applicants from communities of less than 10,000 population.

Rescue squad purchases equipment ARIC MAGWIRE, AT LEFT, and Ver Neal Marotz, Winside volunteer rescue attendants, ARIC MAGWIRE, AT LEFT, and Ver Neal Marotz, Winside volunteer rescue attendants, demonstrate the capabilities of one of two Mat Jacks the unit recently purchased. The jack is lifting the back tire of the 32,000 lb. fire truck. The jacks are inflated by compressed air and are capable of lifting 20 tons. Marotz said prior to the purchase, the rescue squad had to rely on mutual aid from area communities to extricate an individual pinned beneath a piece of machinery or vehicle. "The Mat Jack only needs about an inch of space to slip under the equipment and then it is inflated to extricate the injured party." said Marotz. The two Mat Jacks cost $1,700. Funds were received from the Rural Fire Board, the village of Winside, a $560 donation from the family of the late Edwin Vahlkamp, and funds raised by the Winside Fire Department. Geneieve and Clarence Beck, 515 Crescent Dr., are proud of the con-dition of their yard. The Becks spend about five hours a week on the upkeep of their lush green lawn and they say they have been pleased with the service pro-vided by Country Nursery Lawn Service. "We have Country Nursery come out and spray it," Geneieve said. "He puts on a fertilizer and any kind of weed control formula that comes up at this time of year." We get four sprayings — one for bugs and one for weeds early in the summer and later in the summer for worms and

The Becks said the service they've had from Country Nursery has been an essential part of their lawn care. "It's been an essential part of its growth. We have a very heavy yard. So much so that you can't even see the ground."

In addition to spending five hours a week caring for the lawn, it's mowed every five days and watered when its needed, depending on the weather. The Becks have an underground sprinkler system that does a model but the species of the second seco good job of keeping the lawn watered when they turn it on. Genei added that each morning, she will walk around the yard to check for trash.

CARDS OF THANKS

A FEW WEEKS ago I was recognized y my peers for my accomplishments in rint competition at this year's Professional Photographers of Nebraska print competition at this years Professional Photographers of Nebraska Convention. This made me very proud and honored. Recognition by your peers is very nice, but not half as nice as the recognition and congratulations I have received from the community of Wayne. This means a great deal to me. Thank you to everyone who sent me notes of congratulators or offered me a con-gratulatory handshake. I also want to thank KTCH radio and The Wayne Herald for their interest and coverage of this award. Again thank you all and I hope to serve you well in the years to come. Sincerely, Wm. M.
