School board chooses to go with program

By Mark Crist
Managing Editor

The Wayne Community School Board had the choice between something or nothing during its meeting Tuesday night, so they opted to take something.

The Wayne Community Schools will take part in Chapter I this year, it was decided at the board meeting Tuesday night following a presentation by David Lutt, who will oversee the program.

Chapter I, in essence, provides tutorial services to youth living in a local detention center. It is geared to assist those youth with their studies while they are in jail.

The reason the school board faced an all-or-nothing decision was because federal guidelines for money for the Chapter I program mandate that either they use the grant money just for Chapter I or lose it all.

FOLLOWING WORK last year, the Wayne Community schools had $10,699 left over from the program. The money can be carried over but it must be used the following year. In addition, the program will receive the new allocated amount of grant money from the federal government in the amount of $4,702 for the 1990-91 school year, Lutt said.

This year, money was generated above the regular allocation program. Lutt said schools will not lose a thing, but they have to cooperate with state and federal agencies.

"There is no doubt about it," he said. "We're running the program."

According to information on Chapter I, the program is funded entirely by the federal government and money is appropriated through the state. Lutt said that when students are being tutored, they must have a certified person conducting the sessions.

It was not said how those certified persons would be paid, however.

IN ANOTHER MATTER, the school board decided to draft a letter expressing concerns of the Westwood Addition II to the City of Wayne.

Board members agreed that there will be poor access for students to get to the schools and said they were concerned that students may have to cross through the cemetery while en route to school and would end up having to cross Highway 35 at a dangerous place.

They also noted concerns for drainage from the addition as well as the fact no playground facility has been included in the blueprints.

The board of education is one of the local groups which has to review and approve the addition before it is considered part of the city limits.

ESU 1 offers contract for new director's spot

By LaVon Anderson
Assistant Editor

Board members of Educational Service Unit One met Tuesday night in Wakefield and voted unanimously to offer a contract to Dr. Robert Schlimgen to serve as unit one's in-service/staff development director.

Dr. Schlimgen is now president of a technical college in Sheldon, Iowa and has until July 1 to accept or reject the 215-day contract which calls for an annual salary of $38,000.

The in-service/staff development director is a newly created position of ESU 1 and received approval by the board in March.

The director will be in charge of visiting area schools and assisting them in establishing and prioritizing needs to help them plan local staff development activities.

In addition, he will be responsible for developing a repertoire of staff in-service activities that would be delivered at area schools, and developing and cultivating a data base of potential speakers and resource people.

IN OTHER BUSINESS Tuesday night, ESU 1 board members approved several contracts, including one with Region IV for lease of the Wayne Children's Center for $760 per month, up $30 from last year; with the South Sioux City School system for lease of the Bryan building at $14,000 per year, the same as last year; and with Don Phipps of Wakefield for delivery of films to schools. Phipps, who has received 65 cents per mile, will now receive 68 cents.

Board members also authorized the building and grounds committee to inspect the recently purchased Masonic Lodge, located on the second floor of ESU 1 headquarters in Wakefield, for compliance with the purchase agreement, and authorized Ken Lahrs, board president, to close on behalf of ESU 1.

Second and final round approval was given to a limited smoking policy at ESU 1 facilities. The policy provides a smoke free environment in areas where children are present and smoke free areas for non-smoking personnel.

In addition, board members voted unanimously to change the wording to clarify other ESU 1 board policies and to re-code the board policies.

DUANE TAPPE, ESU 1 special education director, reported on several new contracts, resignations and contract amendments.

Board members voted unanimously to approve new contracts for Anita Anderson of Homer as an early childhood special education teacher (home base); Geraldine Behymer of Yankton as a speech-language pathologist; Irene Buck of South Sioux City as a school nurse at South Sioux City; and Laura Straight of Wayne as a speech-language resource teacher.

Board members also voted unanimously to accept the resignations of Karen Koehmoos as speech-language pathologist at the Bryan school; Lisa Sabers as speech-language pathologist at Winside and Wayne; and Lola Waldner as resource teacher at Walthill Public School.

Sue Way's contract was amended from 40 percent full-time equivalency (FTE) to 60 percent FTE. Way was serving as a resource teacher at Jackson and will now be assigned to the Bryan school in South Sioux City.

BEFORE ADJOURNING, board members went into executive session to discuss contract negotiations and the office manager's salary.

Upon reconvening, it was reported that a tentative agreement has been reached on contract negotiations and will be voted on at the July meeting. The board also approved the office manager's salary.

The next meeting of ESU 1 board of directors is scheduled July 10 in Wakefield. Administrator Rodney Garwood said a preliminary ESU 1 budget for 1990-91 will be ready at that time.

City council quick to focus on three items

By Mark Crist
Managing Editor

With only three items on the agenda, the Wayne City Council was quick to resolve its work at Tuesday night's meeting.

The result: The approval of a liquor license; the nod for a special liquor permit and the approval of two men to the Wayne Volunteer Fire Department.

Following the meeting, attorney Bob Ensz said he had followed up on a request to look at property at 509 Walnut after a question was posed by members of the audience about it in a follow up from the last city council meeting.

Ensz said he talked personally with the owner of the property, which has fallen under the scrutiny of the City Council following several complaints by people in the neighborhood. Ensz said the owner plans to have work done on the property by September but he added that the owner did not indicate what she would do with it once the work was finished.

The Council also gave the OK for a Class A liquor permit for Godfather's Pizza of Wayne, Inc. Although no one was present to speak on behalf of the restaurant, the council held little discussion on the matter and approved the request 6-0.

Absent from the meeting was Councilpersons Darrell Heier and Jane O'Leary.

The Council also approved the appointments of Jeff Sukup and Terry Luhn to the Wayne Volunteer Fire Department.

"There's a very strict procedure in their screening process," said Joe Salitros, Wayne city administrator. "It's extremely selective and detailed. By the time it reaches the Council, they've followed a very detailed process."

The Council also approved a special liquor request for a wedding reception at the Wayne National Army Guard for Pete Warne. All measures at the meeting were passed unanimously.

Cost and climate are the two leading influences in choosing destinations. Forty-six percent prefer to travel to places they have never visited, while 33 percent return to favorite locales.

Wake up

How small are the minds of people? Only as small as their world. I'm not speaking of prejudice and racism because this is the '90s; 1990 or 1590? They seem to be related. How so you ask? In 1590 if your skin pigment was much darker, you were anti-social, in 1990 if your skin pigment is much darker you are still anti-social. But this only rings true in the small world of small and uneducated minds. Wake up people, everyone has red blood and breathes the same air, or do you have your very own oxygen supply?

Wake up!
Levi A. Heywood
P.S. I'm black, but I'm human also. I too have feelings, like you!

Tribute to a friend

A tribute to Emil J. Uken:
It was indeed a pleasure to have known a man who was a sincere advocate of human rights.
The following are a few reasons:
He played the role of champion of the underprivileged and did not speak with a forked tongue.
He never judged people by the value of their worldly goods.
He believed all people are created equal no matter the color of their skin.
His prime philosophy was — do not condemn people until you have walked in their moccasins.
I am proud to say Jake was my friend.

Letters from Guam

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third of three groups of letters to the editor from students at Inarajan High School in Guam. This collection of letters are excerpts.

You said that Guam is a hard place to plant but that is not true. Why do you think they call it tropical? It is green, it has large fruit trees and we are able to grow watermelon, eggplant, mangos, hot pepper and other plants grow well on Guam.
Joseph Camocho

I am a student from Inarajan High School and I was reading your article on Schroenerr's Tell About Guam. Guam is a beautiful island and there are a lot of people here. Guam has a lot of fruit and there are a lot of animals. We grow pineapple, oranges, wild cherries and corn, etc.
Joseph Camocho

Let me tell you that you don't know anything about Guam. You don't just come around and start telling lies about Guam, you don't know Guam that well. ...Guam is a wonderful island full of wonderful things. If you don't like Guam then just don't come over here.
Geneve Manglona

The farming system works well here on this island. The farmers in the southern part of this island plant different crops: watermelon, pineapple, corn, string beans, cabbage, bananas, as well as others.
Rodney Santos

It isn't true that there are hardly any jobs in Guam. It is because the people on Guam don't really want to work the jobs that are being offered. The government had to ship people from other countries like the Philippines to fill those jobs.

Marylou Taitague

The point that I would like to get to is what do you mean by it's so hard to grow crops on the island of Guam? If you know what you're doing and how you're planting, it will grow naturally.
Judy Phatonona

In reference to your story about Guam, the story was full of exaggeration, disgrace and very embarrassing to the people of Guam to what was said.
Rachel Ceon Guerrero

On the southern island the soil is good to plant different kinds of vegetables and fruit, such as; pineapples, watermelon, mango, bananas and cabbage, corn, rice, eggplant and onions.
Joy Temorin

Guam is a great place for growing different fruit and vegetables, especially on the southern part of the island. ... The people on Guam do not eat coconut all of the time. We don't grow only coconut trees; we grow eggplant, tomatoes, hot peppers and other fruits and vegetables.

Kenneth Mantanesna

It does not always rain here on Guam.
Joseph J. Flour

Our weather here is sometimes beautiful and sometimes dull. We have two seasons here, rainy/dry season. The rainy season is between June and December but other times it's sunny here, it doesn't always rain. They have a lot of farms here. It is very suitable to grow crops here because the soil is not only an inch thick here. The soil is very rich.
Pete Gucero

Nutrition important to being healthy

CONCORD - Good health begins with good nutrition. Better understanding of nutrition evolved with the printing of the 10th edition of the Recommended Dietary Allowances (RDAs) said Darlene Martin, University of Nebraska nutrition specialist at the Northeast Research and Extension Center.

In the nutritional sciences, as in other scientific fields, revision of knowledge is in constant change as more knowledge emerges. The new RDAs reflect the best scientific judgement on individual nutrients needed for healthy Americans, Martin said.

The RDAs serve as criteria for nutrition educational programming, standards for government food assistance programs, new product development, and realistic nutritional application. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration started using the RDAs in 1968 as a basis for establishing guidelines for the nutritional labeling of foods, the specialist said. The 10th and latest edition of the RDA includes the following changes:

Age groupings—the age class of 19 to 22 years extends to include both sexes through 24 years of age. This changed because peak bone mass is probably not attained before age 25.

Nutrients for pregnancy and lactation appear as absolute figures instead of additions to the basic allowances.

Vitamin K and selenium requirements appear in print for the first time in the latest RDAs.

Vitamin C requirements are largely unchanged except for pregnancy. Cigarette smokers are encouraged to ingest at least 100 mg (milligrams) of vitamin C per day instead of the 60 mg per day for nonsmokers. Good sources of Vitamin C include citrus fruits, strawberries, broccoli, and green peppers.

Vitamin B6, B12, and folate requirements are reduced from the previous edition.

Calcium is set at 1,200 mg per day for adolescents and young adults.

Iron requirements are lowered for adolescents and adult women. A daily iron supplement is recommended during pregnancy and two to three months after birth.

Selenium requirements are established for the first time.

Zinc requirement is reduced for adult women.

The new RDA and the Food and Nutrition Board's report "Diet and Health" recommendations are considered by dietitians to be the appropriate basis for diet planning. Additional information on the new RDAs is available from University of Nebraska extension home economists in local Cooperative Extension offices or one of the 398 active registered dietitians in Nebraska.

Clues found

Scientists make discovery

by Vicki Miller

UNL Ag Communications
LINCOLN - University of Nebraska-Lincoln animal scientists have uncovered another clue to the molecular mystery surrounding sexual maturity in cattle.

Researchers are exploring how genes influencing sexual maturation are regulated in hopes of eventually solving a very real problem facing beef producers — heifer reproductive efficiency.

Controlling the time of puberty is the ultimate research goal, said Jim Kinder, UNL beef physiologist. Most heifers are bred as yearlings and must get pregnant by about 15 months to calve as 2-year-olds.

"Without a doubt, reproductive function is the biggest limiting factor to economic efficiency in beef cattle operations," he said. Heifers and cows that don't get pregnant are a major financial drain.

The team is probing the molecular intricacies of puberty. Using biotechnology tools, researchers peer inside cells to detect the presence of genetic components that trigger sexual maturity.

Their latest finding shed light on how a primary reproductive hormone — luteinizing hormone (LH) — is produced and why little of it is available in the bloodstream until puberty nears. LH must reach the ovaries via the bloodstream to stimulate sexual maturation.

Previous research focused on changes in LH levels in the bloodstream before puberty. The pituitary gland produces LH and releases it in spurts. The volume and frequency of releases increase in the 50 days before puberty.

The Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources researchers wanted to know what limits LH communities in Wayne County, are recognized as areas of risk to three varying degrees.

Businesses reporting under Title III of SARA were Terra International, Fletcher Farm Service, Swimming Pool, Great Dane and Wayne State College maintenance.

Non-reporting businesses in Wayne included Peoples Natural Gas, Noxious Weed Department, Energy Systems and Carhart Lumber.

Board discusses range of issues at meeting

WAYNE - Aside from dealing with Chapter I issues, as well as a myriad of others, the Wayne School Board also dealt with other topics. Those topics include:

- Review of achievement test scores for the total school system. Supt. Dr. Francis Haun said all grades scores were above the national average.

- Reviewed educational work plans for the Class of 1990. A separate story on those plans is included in today's paper.

- Established the Americanism Committee to review the history texts in the schools. The committee consists of: Ken Dahl, Arnold Emry and Neil Sandahl.
- Discussed professional growth and inservice for high school staff.
- Accepted the resignation of half-time Chapter I instructor Kayleen Strubel.
- Heard new staff recommen-

Reporting and non-reporting businesses are ones which have varying degrees of chemicals on site which could pose a serious threat in the event of an emergency.

AREAS WHICH are considered vulnerable, according to the report, are the Wayne Care Centre, Wayne Villa, Wayne State College, Region IV, Providence Medical Center, St. Mary's School, Wayne Elementary, Wayne High School, Wayne Middle School and the Wayne County Fairgrounds.

Vulnerable areas are determined by the number of people who could be affected in the event of the emergency, Denklaus said.

Denklaus said the old emergency response plan has fallen out of date, so a new one is important since it will be distributed to various public officials throughout the county.

"Down the road, we will have a table top meeting to discuss the procedures," he said. "Say, for instance, if there's a chemical procedure, we will determine what everyone should do."

Class

STUDENTS ALSO indicated which areas of study they would enter. Ten said they would go into business administration, five were undeclared and five plan to go into elementary education. Four said they were headed for a military program. Three graduates said they would go into each of one of the following categories: travel, engineering, secondary education, criminal justice and data processing.

Each of the other categories listed only one student, including: architecture, psychology, office administration, nursing, graphic design, music education, astrophysics, dance, electrical engineering technology, secretarial science, cosmetology, theater, automotive technology, vet assistant, pre-law, journalism, public relations, history, chemistry, home economics and child care.

availability to the ovaries before puberty. Is the limiting factor production or distribution into the bloodstream?

They found the pituitary gland can produce LH at least 120 days before puberty, but LH releases to the bloodstream are minimal until shortly before puberty, said Mark Roberson, graduate research assistant.

The limitation appears to be a hormone produced by the hypothalamus, in the brain, he said. This hormone — luteinizing hormone releasing hormone — tells the pituitary to make and release LH.

Long before puberty, the hypothalamus sends enough LHRH to the pituitary for LH production but too little to spur LH releases to the blood, Roberson said.

Kinder compared this limitation to a manufacturing operation.

"You can produce all the product in the world, but if you can't get it out to distributors, it won't do you any good. If you could just find a way to get it out of the plant, puberty probably would occur."

Kinder and Roberson admit there is much more to learn about the complex biochemical process that drive sexual maturation, but this clue narrows the search.

Estrogen appears to be a major influence on reproductive hormone production. Next, Kinder wants explore how estrogen affects the hypothalamus and pituitary prior to puberty. Before puberty, estrogen from the ovaries appears to limit hormone production. Shortly before puberty, estrogen's inhibitive effect diminishes.

Kinder is optimistic about unraveling the mystery. He speculates on how knowledge gained in the laboratory eventually might be applied to improve beef reproductive efficiency.

"There may well be a time when we're able to induce puberty," he said, although such manipulation must be judicious because pre-puberty serves a purpose for the animal.

If researchers confirm estrogen is inhibiting LHRH prior to puberty, Kinder said, it might be possible to induce puberty by giving heifers anti-estrogen shots for a few days.

"There may be a time where we can go out and say, 'I'm going to induce puberty in my heifers this weekend.' Maybe you can do that with an immunization just like a calfhood vaccination," Kinder said.

A heifer's third heat cycle is more fertile than her first, Roberson said. If heifers could be brought to puberty earlier, it would boost the odds of their getting pregnant during the breeding season.

Understanding the potential impact on beef producers lends focus to the on-going research to better understand the complex biological process driving puberty, Kinder said.

"You have to dig into these things before you know what to do to manipulate reproduction," Kinder said. "There may be some things there that we can really improve on once we understand them."

Kinder and fellow animal scientist Edward Grotjan received $218,000 from the U.S. Department of Agriculture for the four-year project that runs through this year and is conducted in cooperation with IANR's Agricultural Research Division.

Attention makes shift

AREA - Recently much attention has focused on the difficulties of finding representative payees for some Social Security and SSI beneficiaries, Tom O'Connor, Social Security manager in Norfolk, said. It is particularly difficult to find payees who can act for homeless beneficiaries and for those with disabilities involving drug addiction or alcoholism.

A representative payee is someone appointed by Social Security to receive and manage benefit payments for the well-being of a beneficiary who is unable to manage his or her own benefit payments, O'Connor explained. Most of the 1.2 million adults who need a payee are represented by a family member or by a public institution where they live. Others are represented by close friends, state and county agencies or other non-related individuals.

In recent years, members of volunteer organizations, such as the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP), have filled the growing need for recruiting interested, responsible payees.

Talks are underway between Social Security and other volunteer groups to expand the number of volunteer payees now available.

For information about Social Security call 1-800-234-5772. The Norfolk Social Security office is located at 1310 Norfolk Avenue.

Mark'n' the Spot

by Mark Crist

Lately, animal activists have made quite a few headlines not only for destroying research labs but now for marching in Washington D.C.

These so-called animal rightists need to be educated. Unfortunately, Washington politicians aren't the people to educate them.

Laboratory testing is an essential part to modern medicine. Without it, the world would be years behind technologically and people would probably commonly be suffering from diseases like polio.

If laws are made to protect laboratory animals, there may never be a cure for cancer or AIDS as well as a myriad of other diseases which will come in the future.

The animal rightists are also opposed to many forms of animal production. These activists are an imminent threat to farmers. If activists have their way, we'll be thrown back to the days of pre-history. Man will end up hunting for his food.

PROGRAMS LIKE AgLink, which involves three families in the area, is important. AgLink will take a group of city youth and educate them about the purposes of agriculture. There's a story in today's Wayne Herald which will explain the program better. We'll be doing a follow-up on it in the future.

The problem with these activists is that very few of them have knowledge of medical or farm operations. They live in a tiny shell, fragmented by misinformation to make them believe what occurs in medical laboratories and farms is wrong. Sure, animals have rights but most animals, especially those on the farm, are treated better than humans in many respects.

If animal rights is going to be one of the hot issues of the '90s, the time to start educating people about what goes on on a farm, as well as a medical laboratory, is now. Without educating the public, these activists may get things the way they want them and with more people leaving the rural areas, urban people don't understand the necessity of the farmer. Farm groups need to form to educate the urban citizen.

OOPS, MY FAULT. Not to abruptly change the subject, but I made a boo-boo in last week's Mark 'N' the Spot. Believe me, it was far from intentional.

I hate using pros and cons in a column because I usually get them mixed up. Last week, that happened in my column when I was talking about the pros and cons of LB 1059. Instead of explaining the pros and the cons, I reversed them: I guess it just goes along with the territory.

One of the nice things about being a journalist is that you have the opportunity on a mass basis to comment on things most people either can't or don't.

The bad thing about being a journalist is that when you make a mistake, everyone gets to see it. As much as we try for perfection, mistakes do occur. Sorry, folks.

Convention news

Democrats elect O'Donnell chairman

The Wayne County Democrats elected Allen O'Donnell party chairman at a convention held Thursday evening in the Wayne County courthouse.

O'Donnell, who served as party chairman for the county from 1972-1980, will take the reins as of the state convention to be held in Lincoln, July 13-15. Deb Whitt was elected vice-chair and Bob Jordan, State National Bank President, was retained as party treasurer. Also, Jociell Bull was retained as party secretary.

At the convention it was announced that Sheryl Lindau of Four-in-Hand will head up the U.S.

Senate campaign for Jim Exon in the county.

Resolutions passed at the convention include the pledge of support for "the eventual winner of the closest primary election in the race for Governor in Nebraska history, either Bill Hoppner or Ben Nelson."

Also, a resolution relating to the ending of the Cold War where "it is obvious that the winds of change are moving across the globe, Wayne County Democrats applaud and support the efforts of President Bush and Soviet President M. Gorbachev to create an atmosphere of peace for all people in the world."

Elected as delegates to the Democratic state convention in Lincoln were Allen O'Donnell, chairman; Deb Whitt, Vice-Chair; and J.S. Johar, alternate.

At the convention, O'Donnell said that "no one election is a sure thing in Nebraska in 1990. With President Bush coming into the state to support Kay Orr and Hal Daub, we know that the Republicans have chosen this state to make gains and to keep what they have. It will take a strong effort on the part of the democratic party of Nebraska to keep what we have, and to make any gains."

At that time cast members of the play may also pick up their playbooks and initial the cast list on her front porch.

Buffany Blecke will serve as assistant director and Kristen Miller as stage manager. Becky Stout will be the accompanist.

SWIMMING LESSONS

Wakefield swimming pool will be offering two sessions of Red Cross swimming lessons this summer along with two water safety classes.

This year in place of Junior and Senior Lifesaving Class, the Red Cross is offering Basic Water Safety and Emergency Water Safety Classes, according to pool manager Carol Clark. These two classes will begin on Monday, June 11 and end on Saturday, June 16. These two classes are necessary for anyone who wants to take the Red Cross Lifeguarding Class, Mrs. Clark said.

The two sessions of regular swimming lessons will be held June 18-29 and again July 9-20. Lessons are for beginners, advance beginners, intermediate swimmers and cost is $10 per student.

Please pre-register by stopping at the pool or calling 287-2007. Adult swimming is from 6-7 p.m. Monday and Wednesday. Exercise class is Tuesday and Thursday, adult only swimming.

4TH OF JULY EVENTS

The Wakefield Firefighters and Rescue Squad are sponsoring a variety of activities for the Fourth of July to begin their fund drive towards $60,000. Activities on the Fourth include sand volleyball, horseshoe pitching, water fights, tug-o-war, and dunking booth.

The Wakefield squad wants to trade in their 1984 van style unit for a more spacious box style ambulance. The 1990 cost of $60,000 includes the chassis, emergency body and equipment. Wakefield currently has two rescue units, a 1971 unit which will be retained as a back up unit and the 1984 unit which they would like to replace. The local group lists as advantages to the box style body as more space for patients and rescue personnel, better equipped for patient care and smoother ride for patient. The squad also noted that the body can be transferred to another chassis, an advantage when looking towards future needs.

The Rescue Squad hopes to raise the needed funds through fund raising activities and donations, rather than use direct tax support.

SEASON TICKETS

American Legion Post 81 is currently selling season tickets for Legion baseball games. The cost of the ticket is $12 and is good for all regular season games. The post notes that this does not include the Fourth of July or post-season tournament games.

The Legionnaires and players are planning a door-to-door campaign in the near future to sell the tickets. Presently the tickets are available at the gate at the home game or by contacting a Legion member or player.

Counselors learn about camping

WAYNE - "You, the camp counselors are the key to a successful summer experience for your young campers. A prepared and enthusiastic counselor will insure campers a meaningful and fun experience, regardless of the camp program or the facilities," said Vickie Genoff, extension 4-H and youth specialist, during a counselor training workshop held Wednesday, June 6 in Bressler Park.

Genoff, Lynda Cruickshank, extension agent 4-H and Carol Larvick, extension agent home economics organized and presented the training.

Twenty-four soon-to-be 4-H camp counselors learned about everything from listening skills and building self-esteem to first-aid and dealing with homesickness.

High expectations and challenges for leadership are put upon these teens before they attend camp, according to 4-H officials.

"It is exciting to see how well the counselor's leadership skills develop when the young campers actually arrive; suddenly there is someone looking up to and depending on them," Cruickshank said.

The majority of the counselors will be helping with Ponca Day Camp at Ponca State Park, June 26-27.

The camp, entitled "Dare to Be You", focuses on building self-esteem and is sponsored by the Northeast Fire Extension Program Unit. Extension offices in Wayne,

Rebates allow for expansion

WIC expanding despite rise in food costs

AREA - Expected savings from a rebate on baby formula will allow the Nebraska WIC program to expand to serve more women and children in spite of rising food costs, state health officials announced.

Price increases in milk, orange juice, cereal, eggs and formula rose 10 percent in the last eight months, absorbing some of the money that was counted on to expand the program, said Dr. Gregg Wright, director of the Nebraska Department of Health.

But the Nebraska WIC program still expects to add over 4,000 to its rolls because of a rebate agreement the Health Department reached with two formula companies last fall. Mead Johnson and Ross Laboratories agreed to a rebate of $1.10 and $1.01 per can of formula purchased by a WIC recipient.

Although increased food prices have offset some of the rebate savings, the program estimates that approximately $1.6 million will be saved, allowing the program to expand its efforts to reach more of those in need, said Dr. Wright.

Some mothers with children are eligible but they are not aware of the program, he said. In an effort to reach them, the WIC Program at the Nebraska Department of Health has broadened its outreach efforts.

WIC currently provides 23,600 women and children up to age four in low-income families with vouchers allowing them to obtain free formula and food from 475 grocery stores and pharmacies across the state.

WIC serves participants through 14 local health and community action agencies across the state. For more information, call the local WIC agency or the toll-free hotline, 1-800-942-1171.

In northeastern Nebraska, the Goldenrod Hills Community Action Agency in Wisner administers the WIC program. The agency currently serves 2,58 women, infants and children.

Clinic sites are located in Antelope County at Neligh, in Burt County at Decatur, in Cedar County at Hartington, in Dakota County at South Sioux City and Dakota City, in Knox County at Crofton and Verdigr, in Madison County at Norfolk, in Stanton County at Stanton, in Thurston County at Waltham, in Wayne County at Wayne and in Cuming County at Wisner.

Families interested in the WIC program can make an appointment by calling Goldenrod Hills Community Action Agency at 529-3513.

Governor Kay Orr has proclaimed June as WIC Awareness Month in Nebraska.

Centennial Notes

Centennial trunk showing held

DIXON - A centennial clothes trunk showing was held June 6 in the Dixon auditorium. Ardith Armour of Smithland, Iowa displayed her collection of centennial clothing for the entire family.

Mix-ups costing state

AREA - Incorrect social security numbers given to the Department of Motor Vehicles are a growing problem, Director Margaret Higgins said. "The social security numbers are needed to verify a driver's identity," Mrs. Higgins said. "Our licenses are used across the state for identification purposes, so when a citizen gives us a wrong number, we must track down the mistake."

The Department of Motor Vehicles estimates the "tracking down" is costing Nebraska taxpayers up to $30,000 per year.

Mrs. Higgins emphasized that the majority of the wrong numbers seem to be given innocently by citizens mixing up the digits in their social security number, or simply by forgetting the number. However, some people coming in from outside the state may deliberately give a wrong number in order to hide their driving record.

The Department now is correcting between 50 and 60 numbers each week. A state employee must contact each of the citizens with an incorrect number. The citizens are asked to bring in proof of their social security number.

To further complicate matters, some of the wrong numbers given may belong to other Nebraska license holders, and those innocent citizens then must be contacted to make certain they have the correct number on their licenses.

Director Higgins says she feels Nebraskans can solve the problem and save tax dollars simply by double-checking their numbers as they apply for a new or renewed license.

By Pat Melerhenry

Somehow, we have been spared floods and tornadoes, and our crops look wonderful. People have been putting up hay all week.

In reading more about the Gorbachev's trip to the U.S., one had to sympathize with the farm family in Minnesota who got all spruced up for a visit which was cancelled at the last minute.

After visiting the Twin Cities, I can see why they decided to take Mr. G. there. But I couldn't help wondering what we would do if they told us we had been chosen to host the VIP's. We would have had to do more than paint the picnic table!

As much as we love Apex Farm, it will probably never be featured in "Country" magazine. The grass outside the yard fence is "mowed" by cows, and their "pies" are left for "organic enrichment." The dandelions have been blooming joyously inside the yard. The "landscaping" is "au naturale" because I don't like the artificial look.

Actually, if I could keep them in the kitchen, and serve some fresh coffee cake, it probably wouldn't be so bad. It certainly would make a great column!

The "Great Nuclear Waste Facility Site" battle rages on...I hope someone doesn't end up getting shot. An editorial in another local newspaper points out that the one nation to have suffered nuclear destruction first hand, Japan, has 38 nuclear power stations. And they are considering 40 more.

My concern continues to be with cost. My brother's company did not bid on this site because there is not enough waste to make it financially worthwhile.

He points out that any company doing the project should have to do to guarantee liability. It seems U.S. Ecology's stock has dropped from $54 to $4. The latest development is the resignation of its president and CEO, and the withdrawal by BFI of its $25 million loan guarantee.

I don't deal in big finance, but even I know these are not healthy signs. Is this the company we need to manage a radioactive-waste facility? As sure as I am that it can be done safely, I'm equally sure the company must have a good track record. Something to think about.

AgLink to include families from area

AREA - Three area families will be participating in the AgLink (Agricultural Leaders Impacting Nebraska Kids), as hosts to some of 24 Omaha Public Schools students who have been selected to spend three weeks this summer on a Nebraska farm or ranch.

Dale and Lori Jackson, Allen, Larry and Kathy Boswell, Allen and Kevin and Bonnie Kai, Wakefield, will serve as hosts to the Omaha youth. The Omaha students will meet their host families June 16, when AgLink officially begins.

The send-off ceremonies are slated for 1 p.m. on June 16 at the OPS Teacher Administrative Center in Omaha. Nebraska Gov. Kay Orr will participate in the send-off and will be photographed with each AgLink host family-visitor group.

AgLink was conceived by Douglas County Commissioner Howard Buffett, who also owns and works a farm near Tekamah. Having seen how city youth responded to life on his farm, Buffett believed many Omaha youths could benefit from time away from the pressures of life in the city.

He approached the Nebraska Farm Bureau and the Omaha Public Schools about the idea and the AgLink program was developed.

Farm Bureau recruited member families to serve as hosts for the three-week visit, June 16-July 7, while OPS junior high guidance counselors recommended students, most ages 12 to 15, to participate. At the end of March, the parent training staff of Boys Town led orientation sessions for the AgLink youths at a Douglas County farm and for the farm and ranch families at a north Omaha community center.

The Omaha youths will become part of the host family for the length of their visit and will be expected to participate in the farm work and recreational activities. Most of the host families will be irrigating during the visit, so the guests will have the opportunity to participate in such tasks as setting and moving irrigation pipe. Many will also help work cattle and hogs.

AgLink visitors will participate in such recreational activities as riding horses, fishing, camping, 4-H projects and community Fourth of July celebrations.

Constipation & Iron

Many persons consume iron-deficient diets and benefit from getting extra iron in the form of tablets or capsules. Women and adolescent girls are especially prone to become iron deficient. Large doses of iron can be poisonous, especially in children. A problem that may sometimes occur with small, therapeutic doses of iron is constipation. There are at least three ways to help prevent iron-induced constipation. First, take a stool softener such as docusate daily or occasionally. Second, use a psyllium seed husk bulk laxative to add fiber to the diet. Third, eat additional fiber in the form of whole grain cereals and breads. Although some iron supplements contain stool softeners, they should be reserved for those persons who actually become constipated.

Program offers juveniles alternative

By Mark Crist
Managing Editor

As county sheriff, LeRoy Janssen understands what an education can mean to a juvenile in trouble with the law.

One of the things Janssen has seen incorporated is the offering of a general education diploma (GED) program at the Wayne County Juvenile Detention Facility.

Since it has been implemented, one youth has taken and passed the GED test and will be starting college in the fall. Another is in the process of taking the six-part exam.

What it means to these youngsters is one thing. What it does for them is another, Janssen and Dee Gable, detention facility office administrator, agree.

"Just as education is important to our juveniles, the only difference between here and a school is that the kids have been in trouble with the law," he said. "I think it's important for them to get an education and with what we can provide here, maybe it will influence them when they return to school or the outside world."

In addition to offering the GED program, this fall the facility will coordinate a Chapter I program with the Wayne Community Schools. The Chapter I program, essentially, provides tutorial services living in the detention center. Janssen said the two programs will be coordinated together.

What differentiates the two programs is that the detention facility often has youth over age 16 who have dropped out of school. Gable said the Chapter I program does not apply to juveniles who have quit school but rather the ones who want to have their high school diploma.

"Most of the kids we get in here don't have living skills; they don't know how to avoid fights and they don't fit into society well," she said. "We try to do this because many of the kids don't live in an environment that cares. If we can provide something to them they might not otherwise get, maybe we can make a difference in their lives."

Gable said the one juvenile who earned his GED has all his college education paid for through funds found through the parole office. In addition, the Wayne United Methodist Church provided the $25 for him to take his GED test.

Gable said the juvenile, whose name was not released for privacy purposes, will either attend Wayne State College or Northeast Community College in Norfolk in the fall.

"It's a good opportunity to have it because it encourages them to go on in school or it allows them to get a better job," Gable said. "I'm sold on the program because it teaches them the independent living skills they need to become an active member of society."

So far, of the 30 plus juveniles who have known of the program in the six months it's been offered, four have shown interest in it. All the youth who are interested in the GED program are over age 17.

In-service aids teachers in profession

By Mark Crist
Managing Editor

What is the purpose of teacher in-service?

Ask any professional, according to Supt. Dr. Francis Haun. They'll tell you.

"There's no doubt it improves the classroom atmosphere. But it's good for any profession," he said.

Over the summer, if Wayne Community Schools' instructors aren't spending a little time at home, or doing odd jobs through the summer, they're most likely returning to school, Haun said. For that reason, it's important for teachers to keep up with the changing times, he said.

"It's essential to keep up with your pupils if nothing else," Haun said. "Anytime, people have computers at home as well as newspapers and television. Kids are coming to school much smarter than they have in the past and teachers are having to keep up with that."

According to Nebraska education laws passed in 1982, teachers and administrators must have evidence that they have continued professional growth.

"Every six years permanent certified employees shall give evidence of professional growth. Six semester hours of college credit shall be accepted as evidence of professional growth or, in the alternative, such other activities as are approved by the school board, which may include, but are not limited to, educational travel, professional publications, or work on educational committees," the law states.

IN ADDITION TO providing "professional growth" opportunities, Haun said some of the in-service activities are motivational for some. He said others find them refreshing because it makes it easier to teach or practice new theories in the classroom.

"Let's say you have a teacher that when she asks questions, she asks the same questions which are so broad that only one student responds," he said. "That works, but it doesn't allow someone else to respond. What they're recommending is that questions be pointed at one individual and if that's wrong, the teacher won't say 'that's wrong' but they'll ask someone else in the class to respond."

"That creates a more lively and positive atmosphere for the students. If makes it so the class atmosphere is not monotone and boring. It keeps people's minds busy."

Haun said the in-services usually teach motivational strategies: "It makes students want to learn and it makes learning interesting."

THE PURPOSE of in-services is not to make great teachers, but rather to provide teachers with better educating skills, Haun said.

Research shows that teachers are better prepared for the classroom by having their lesson plans well prepared in advance. Haun said the in-services allow teachers to look at students through a more objective eye rather than picking out favorites.

"Sometimes these things are motivational to teachers but more often it's good preparation to be ready to know what you're doing," he said. "It's surprising how often teachers just aren't doing that."

In addition to having motivational and educational values, in-services allow teachers to implement changes over time. Haun said changes in teaching methods and theories are constantly being made.

"In service does not make great teachers out of them but it keeps everyone up to date on the research that's being conducted. If you don't keep up with the changing times, you'll fall behind, especially in this day and age," Haun said.

Clean Up Wayne

START, Jaycees tackle project

By Mark Crist
Managing Editor

Plans are in the works to hold a Clean Up Wayne Day Friday, June 22. The Clean Up day comes as a result of findings of the START survey.

According to Ron Gentrup, president of the Wayne County Jaycees, which is directing the program, the Jaycees are proud to be helping out.

Gentrup said the Jaycees were approached by Garry Poutre, who works for the City of Wayne and was a member of the START task force, to head the program.

Poutre said the reason for initiating the clean up campaign was a direct result of responses from the START survey. He said it was an area citizens of Wayne said needed addressing and this is the first response to it. He said if it is successful this year, it may be continued for years to come.

In addition, there may be an attempt to include block parties with the program where city blocks would hold parties following the clean up.

"We know we can't just go in and clean up an area but with this project, we're hoping other citizens will act upon others to clean up their neighborhoods," he said. "It's an entirely positive thing we're trying to do."

People looking to help in the clean up are asked to contact Poutre at 375-2866 (W) and 375-4693 (H).

IN ADDITION TO contacting the Wayne County Jaycees, Poutre said he has approached the Wayne Kiwanis and Lions Clubs. He said although he hasn't attended a Rotary meeting to discuss the project, interest has been shown on behalf of the Rotary Club. He said he still plans to contact the Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts about helping out, also.

"Our idea is that we would divide up the town into four sections from Seventh and Main," Poutre said. "The clean up would start around 5:30 p.m. and finish by 7 p.m., so neighborhoods could have their block parties then."

At the completion of the neighborhood clean up, the Jaycees and the City of Wayne will pick up refuse and deposit it at the City's transfer station, where it will be taken to a solid waste disposal site.

Since the waste will be taken to a landfill, the Jaycees are asking that trash be placed in cardboard boxes, paper bags or biodegradable plastic garbage bags. Although this is not necessary, it is preferred, Gentrup said.

THE CLEAN UP is not intended to be for large items like old refrigerators and washing machines, Poutre said.

"We're not asking that people clean up their basements but rather clean up their yards," he said. "We'd like to see people clean up the areas of their yards and streets which are clearly visible."

If the program is continued in years to come, Gentrup said it would be done earlier in the year. He and Poutre agreed that this year, they'd like to get the project complete before the Chicken Days celebration in July but in future years, it may be done as early as April or May.

Helpful tips offered for cleaning up city neighborhoods with party

WAYNE - Suggestions for the Clean Up Wayne project being taken on by the Wayne County Jaycees in conjunction with the START committee, will provide people with some ideas of how to clean up their neighborhoods, according to Garry Poutre.

Some of the suggestions for the clean up include:

- Asking all residents of Wayne to first check their own property, focusing especially on paper, plastics and metal objects.
- Have residents check the streets and terraces in front of their property and their block.
- Check all allies and vacant lots and parks in the block.
- If possible, make arrangements for the days' debris to be placed in a central location. This way it is easily accessible for pick up crews to take the debris to the transfer station.

Poutre also suggested ideas for the block party. He said after picking up trash for an hour to an hour and a half, have residents of your block gather at a central location to enjoy a pot luck meal like hot dogs, salads and potato chips. Have all the residents who can prepare a dish for people in the area.

In addition, it is suggested that a block chairperson be selected to assign the various tasks, like preparing the meals and collecting the garbage.

The Clean Up project is planned for Friday, June 22 from 5:30 to 7 p.m.

Kloster earns award

Philip A. Kloster, former Wayne city administrator and manager of Wayne Municipal Utilities, received the American Public Power Association's Seven Hats Award for outstanding service in the management of a small public power system. The Award was presented at the Association's National Conference in Denver, Colo., June 11-13.

The Seven Hats Award, created in 1966, recognizes utility officials who serve smaller communities that have no more than 2,500 homes and businesses and whose management responsibilities extend well beyond those of a larger-system executive.

As managers of small utilities, the award winners typically wear "seven hats" in the areas of: 1) planning and design, 2) administration, 3) public relations, 4) field supervision, 5) accounting, 6) personnel or employee

Conference educates people about chemicals

WAYNE - Despite having a smaller than expected turnout for the Chemical Awareness Conference at Wayne State College, Dr. Pearl Hansen said those in attendance were impressed with what was discussed.

One of the discussions Thursday dealt with legislation to label products people use in their homes.

Pam Gilbert, an attorney who works at Congress Watch, a consumer advocacy group, said people need to be more aware of the hazards chemicals pose in their homes.

During her presentation Thursday afternoon, Gilbert discussed the importance of legislation with chemicals which could pose a hazard in the home. She discussed topics from asbestos in the ceiling, sidewalls and flooring to formaldehyde in the walls as well as threats posed by organic compounds, such as cleansers, paint removers and cosmetics.

SHE SAID THE most recent advance in legislation dealt with a bill passed in 1988 which requires companies to place labels on containers indicating whether the contents could be hazardous. She said very few people understand the danger some of these chemicals pose.

"The biggest problem through a regulatory perspective is that it's been largely ignored by government regulators and researchers," she said after her presentation.

"The situation you have are consumers, children and those at home are exposed to chemicals sometimes 15 times greater in their concentrations," she said. "If you're outdoors dealing with some of these chemicals, you aren't as exposed but inside, it's concentrated. We have controls of chemicals in the workplace but there's no controls for what you can be exposed with at home."

Gilbert said those who are most vulnerable are children, the elderly and the disabled who are home bound. She said more work needs to be done to make people aware of what they're being exposed to in the home.

"Just like you wouldn't give a child a Scotch on the rocks, you wouldn't want to expose a child to toxic chemicals," she said. "Like with alcohol, their bodies react quicker to toxic chemicals and that can cause severe damage to their organs and brains."

ALL AND ALL, Hansen said the conference was a success. She said despite low numbers of people, conferences like this one get the word out that many of the chemicals people face in the workplace and at home can be hazardous. "We've had a fantastic response," she said. "There's been outstanding comments about the speakers, the community and the college. I feel good because people are asking for more. We just have to get more people to understand the importance of it."

Hansen said 51 people representing seven states made it to the conference. She said with the success of it, there are plans for more.
