START plan unveiled at town meeting

If public reception to the GREAT town meeting is any indica-tion, then Wayne's on the right track to staying economically sound.

Over 200 people attended the GREAT town half meeting at GREAT town hall meeting at:
Wayne High School Tuesday with Gov. Kay Orr, R-Neb., facilitating the gathering One of the meeting's purposes was to unveil the START action plan, which has been in the works for several months.

Unveiling the plan was only part of the purpose of the meeting, as Wayne citizens heard first-hand the progress made by the START task force. After hearing reports from the five groups, citizens were given a chance to floor questions. While some of the comments appeared to be criticism of citizen involvement in local governments, some criticism was directed at locally elected officials. Criticism aside, many asked questions about how the START plan can be

"As you can remember, there was a time not long ago that our future in this state wasn't so bright, but Wayne is ahead of the others with planning for the future through the START program," Gov.

THE FIVE AREAS which the START task force focused its efforts include day care, housing, public facilities, community attitudes, image and communication and expand/attract businesses.

The GREAT town meeting be-gan with Mayor Wayne Marsh in-troducing Gov. Orr. Following Marsh's introduction, the meeting got underway with the showing of a Nebraska promotional video.

Gov. Orr then patted Wayne citizens on the back saying "the work you're doing now will insure the future of your community. It will enable you to pass on your fortune to your children."

SOME OF THE START task force committee chairs had some surprise messages for the audience.

Schroeder started off the surprises by announcing that the League of Human Dignity had completed its accessibility study of Wayne's public facilities. He also said the recreation program, suggested by his task force, will be designed to include people from around the Wayne area as well as

Area officials gather to discuss rural housing By Mark Crist

GOV. ORR and START leader Julie Mash pay close attention to one of the start task force chairpersons.

Companies in rural communities need to take greater responsibility need to take greater responsibility in providing housing for employees, according to comments made at a Monday morning meeting with Rep. Doug Bereuter, R.Neb.

The meeting, attended by 18 officials representing several northeast Nebraska communities, was for the purpose of discussing housing needs in rural America.

The common thread among

The common thread among builders, real estate brokers, em-ployers and city administrators was ployers and city administrators was that there is a severe housing shortage in the area and it's get-

Throughout the course of the meeting, one sentiment reflected a number of others.

*The problem we're running into is the restrictions imposed by Congress with the dotting of the I's and the crossing of the T's," according to Wayne banker Pat Gross. "We've found that if a builder isn't focused on a project, the government won't help that particular project."

BEREUTER STARTED the meeting by saying his objective of being there was to hear from members of the START housing committee as well others from northeast Nebraska.

He discussed legislation which is on both floors of Congress, while noting that it was the first housing legislation discussed since 1981. said several plans are in the rks to make housing available

One such program, which is still in the formulative stages, is called the HOME ownership made easy program, where potential buyers establish a HOME account, which is similar to an IRA (Individual Re-tirement Account). Since it's in the formulative stages, it is not widely available, Bereuter said.

Other programs include the Section 108 program, which is a guaranteed loan program backed by HUD. He said it is limited to $5 million per computing. million per community.

DESPITE HOUSING shortages around northeast Nebraska, there are healthy aspects to the problem. According to Dist. 17 Sen. Gerald Conway, R-Wayne, the overload on the housing market has forced renters and buyers into surrounding communities; which helps smaller communities' economic development.

"One of the things that scares me from a politicians viewpoint is that people are going outside the communities they work in for housing. If larger towns pull the working people back into town, it will hurt the smaller one," Conway said. "There's a balance there we need to strike."

Conway also suggested the Conway also suggested the HOME plan be expanded. He said it should not be just a homebuyer affair but one that involves employers and family members. He said it could be used as a part of the benefits package an employer offers, similar to health insurance or profit sharing.

He also suggested a change in the equity status so that the first time home buyer won't always be a first time home buyer. "If they don't establish equity in a property, every time they buy a home will force them back into the first time home buyer market," Conway said. "We need to see return on homebuyer's

SOME SUGGESTIONS which were made to Bereuter was to see if HUD (Department of Housing and Urban Development) officials could come to visit the rural areas and educate the public about pro-cedures and types of programs which are available.

which are available.

Other items which were discussed included having employers providing half of the down payment on a home or having an employer provide some sort-of loan—insurance for buyers. Other issues dealt with FmHA (Farmers Home Administration) procedures as well as providing tax-exemption housas providing tax-exemption housing properties.

"For years rural America has been caught up in the bureaucracy and it's caused the government to overlook us," said Ed Booth, West Point city administrator. "We face a serious information gap out here and that's something we need to see change."

Four to wear kilts in 'Brigadoon'

WAYNE - The kilt is a traditional male's dress clothes in Scotland and wearing one is a new experience for some men from Wayne taking part in the Wayne Community Theatre's production of "Brigadoon."

"Like for a woman wearing a "Like for a woman wearing a dress, walking in a kilt requires shorter, measured steps, so that the material doesn't pull or flap," Scott said. "Also, you can't walk or run too fast or the kilt will fly up." Ironically, Scott's husband Mike will be one of four men in "Brigadoon" wearing the traditional Scotties kits." She said Mike has

Dave Lebsock — will be dressed in the attire unusual to the American

"THEY'VE ALL discovered that "THEYVE ALL discovered that when they sit down, the rear of the kilt needs to be pulled underneath," Scott said. "Standing up poses them with another challenge. It requires that the men hold the kilt down as they stand up. It's really something to see if you haven't seen it before."

Along with the modeling of lts, "Brigadoon" features several dance numbers, some of which cause problems for the men who

Concerns over curb pickup expressed at council meeting

Offices set for license renewals need to renew their licenses in September may save some time by doing so early. Starting Sept. 4, the Department of Motor Vehicles will Department or Motor Venicles Will put its new computers on line. At that time, examiners will begin us-leg a new system that will check past driving histories. Although all examiners have been schooled in the use of the new, computerized, system, DMV officials anticipate some delays until the use of the computer becomes second nature. Nebraska drivers can renew their license up to 90 days prior to the expiration of their current license. DMV Director Margaret Higgins says the new system will allow ex-aminers to more easily tell if a liaminers to more easily teil if a li-cense can legally be renewed, or is still under suspension. "It also will allow them to detect right away if someone moving into the state has a suspended license," Mrs. Higgins a suspended include in inguistic added. Currently, the licenses are checked against the main file-in-Lincoln. Starting Sept. 4, all license testing facilities will have a computer terminal linked to Nebraska and national drivers register files.

To get that kind of information, examiners will be entering into the computer more information, from an applicant. They will be entering the applicant's name, date of birth, social security number and current drivers license number.

Once that information is en-tered, the computer will check driving records and will automati-cally waive the written exam for people whose record is good enough to qualify for an exemp-tion. The applicant will not even have to ask for the test to be

Float pays tribute to 100 years

Methodist Church will be celebrating its 100 year birthday this year and to exclamate that point, they en-tered this float in the Dixon centennial parade held Sunday, Aug. 12 during the Dixon centennial. People from the area attended the Dixon centennial parade as well as a number of organizations from towns around Dixon. Parade watchers were entertained by over 100 floats in the Dixon centennial parade and many seemed to be pleased by the number of entries in the century celebration.

Research sugests that people who climb high on the corporate ladder need to prepare for retirement from running a big show. Henry Kates, chief exec-utive of an insurance company, noted that five senior manag-ers died shortly after they reers died shortly after they re-tired. He was present when a sixth collapsed and died while making his farewell speech to 300 colleagues. As a result, Kates helped to fund research at the University of Colorado into the psychological impact of retirement on high-level ex-ecutives. And he initiated a program called "Second Start" in his company. The program in his company. The program brings some retired executives back to special jobs that serve important purposes but carry less pressure. The nonpermanent positions let execu-tives turn on their skills again, and give them a second chance to make a transition to satisfying activity.

Arthur Lang, 112 years old, had never voted in an election because he didn't get around to registering until this year. What took so long? "My mind was on making a living," said Lang, who formerly operated a bar-beque eatery in Chicago. "I'm what you call a workaholic and I just devoted all my time to busi-

Senator Conway to serve as chair on committee

Senator Gerald Conway of Wayne will be serving as Chair of the Government, Military and Veterans Affairs committee while it erans Affairs committee while it conducts hearings across the state on LR 280. LR 280 is a legislative resolution requesting information to help examine the needs of veterans in Nebraska. Conway, a Vietnam veteran, introduced the study resolution because of concerns he has about the future for Nebraska veterans. veterans.

"During my six years as a state senator," Conway said, "I have seen very little legislative attention given to the area of veterans' affairs. We are approaching, and in some cases already entered, a time when the age of many of the World War II and Korean War veterans will severely impact the services presently provided by the state. We need to be aware of these needs and develop plans to address them," Conway said.

Conway announced that the hearings will be held this week in Scottsbluff, North Platte, Grand Island, Norfolk, Omaha and Lincoln. "For the most part, these are the locations of current veterans' facilities and we need to be sure that the veterans at these locations and the personnel that actively provide veterans' services have an oppor-tunity to be heard," Conway re-

He added, 'These hearings are open to the general public and we will welcome input from all sectors. If a person cannot attend at one of welcome input by writing: Senator Gerald Conway, District 17, State Capitol, Lincoln, NE 68509.

Topics expected to be covered at the hearings are the Nebraska Veterans Aid Fund; proper recognition of veterans; expansion of the homestead exemption for veterans and dependents; nursing care for aging veterans, and; the capacity, current use and administration of the Veterans' Homes.

display for the public from Thursday morning, Sept. 6 through Sunday, Sept. 9.

Don Siffring, University of Nebraska 4-H youth specialist, said that although the removal of all 4-H exhibits is occurring earlier this year than at previous state fairs, more fairgoers will have a chance to view the total 4-H exhibits.

Prior to 1990 4-H exhibits from

Prior to 1990, 4-H exhibits from Prior to 1990, 4-H exhibits from 12 counties nearest Lincoln were on display throughout the State Fair period. "Four-H exhibits from the remainder of Nebraska coun-ties were released on Tuesday (the day after Labor Day) for transport by volunteers and staff to home counties," he explained. "The exhibits from the 12 counties remained in place upstairs in the exhibit hall. This was considered out of sight and inconvenient to fairgoers who found the lower level of the building empty until Thursday and the upstairs difficult to access," the specialist said.

FFA exhibits will be displayed in the hall for the remainder of the 10-day fair after 4-H exhibits have been removed on Thursday.

This column is written twice a month to inform the Wayne area as to what types of reading material and other items are available at Wayne Public Library.

We haven't talked about videos for a long time. Our video collection has grown with an additional grant from the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation.

"The MacArthur Library" was created by the Foundation from existing quality film/video productions dealing with five of the

1. Health, 2. MacArthur Fellows; 3. Peace and International Cooperation, 4. World Environment and Resources, and 5. Community Development.

These videos range from mental retardation to a cassette about the right whale, to a story about squatters in Philadelphia who live illegally in abandoned houses.

The MacArthur Foundation was the source of Video Classics which includes "The Jewel in the Crown", the PBS series "The Story of English"; "Great Performances"; "Nova"; and the "Planet Earth" series among others.

Our collection includes cassettes on several sports: "Downhill Skiing"; "Water-skiing"; three of Lee Trevino's golf tips. Does exercising fall under the sports category? We have three workout tapes with Jane Fonda for you aerobic sports fans.

Travel with us to Hawaii, New York City, Washington, D.C., San Francisco, or New Orleans.

And there are a variety of health topics, lawn care, gardening hints, basics of sign language, antiques, quiliting, photography, career strategies, dog training and many, many more.

We have added to our collection of children's videos as well with these popular titles:

"The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe"; "Bedknobs and Broomsticks"; "An American Tale"; "Beverly Cleary's Ramona"; and "Charlotte's Web". These join old favorites "The Velveteen Rabbit" and many cassettes from the "Faerie Tale Theatre" and two Berenstain Bears tapes.

AREA - Lloyd Castner, Platte County and Chairman of the Northeast Nebraska Economic Development District, announced the consolidation of the Development District with the Northern Ne-braska EMS Council. Both organizations serve local governments in northeast Nebraska. Castner said, "We're pleased with the opportunity to maintain service to local governments, improve effi-ciency and save dollars."

The EMS Council provides training equipment to rescue squads, grant writing assistance, technical assistance and consulting service. The Economic Development District provides a broad range of local government services, in the fields of community and economic development.

The combined organization will cover the 17 counties of northeast Nebraska. Each member govern-ment will benefit from the in-creased services and improved efpartment of Environmental Control and the potential liability to cities using non-certified landfills. As background for those unfamiliar with the handling of solid waste in the City of Wayne, let me explain the process. Two garbage collection companies in Wayne are licensed by the City as Class A Haulers. Residents contract with these companies (sometimes rethese companies (sometimes referred to as Sanitary Services) to collect, compact, and haul away their garbage for a monthly fee. The Class A. Haulers transport truck

For the first time in five years, the City of Wayne's transfer station rates will increase. This increase, which will take effect in September, was requested over a year ago by my predecessor when our solid waste transport company raised their rates by 30 percent. At that time the increase action was delayed in order to research tighter restrictions by the Nebraska Department of Environmental Control and the potential liability to cities pension that can leach into the ground water from the landfill. Tighter compacting helps reduce leaching; however, large items and especially tires are a hindrance to good quality compacting. Cus-tomers of the Class A haulers were notified of these new policies when L. P. Gill started taking our waste in solid waste removal company was Community Refuse, a Fremont firm, who delivered the waste to a land-fill in Norfolk. For liability reasons, it seemed prudent at that time to enter into a contract with L. P. Gill for removal to their landfill in Jackson, Nebr., several miles west of Sioux City on Highway 20. The Jackson Landfill is the only Jandfill in northeast.

northeast Nebraska that is constructed to meet Subtitle D regulations from the federal government and regulated by the State of Nebraska.

While L. P. Gill's rates were slightly higher than those of the previous vendor, rate increases by Community Refuse were pending for later in the year. With certifica-tion of their landfill at a higher level than Community Refuse, the City Council felt the Jackson Land-fill operated by Gill was the best choice to reduce the City's poten-tial liability for damage to the environment.

In keeping with the ever more apparent national trend, the Jackson landfill discontinued acceptance of large appliances, furniture, and tires for disposal. Environmental studies have shown that insulation in stoves and refrigerators, as an example, and refrigerants like freon are long-term disposal concerns. So, too, are metals in sus-

April.

To get back to the rate increase, several years of fee increases by the solid waste removal companies have been absorbed by the City and a $23,000 deficit in the Transfer Station fund resulted in the recent year. In order to reduce this deficit next year, the Council responsively implemented a 50 percent rate increase (from $4/cu. yd to $6/cu. yd) on our Class A Garbage Haulers. Along with the rate increases are several provisions geared to keeping down solid waste removal costs for the class A hauling companies—all effective Sept. 1. effective Sept. 1.

First, residential garbage will be picked up at curb-side only. Eliminating alley pick ups means less fuel, labor, and wear and tear on garbage trucks and reduced city costs for maintenance of alleys.

Second, yard waste (leaves and grass) will be picked up separately and dropped off at a designated site provided by the city or chosen by the hauler. Since yard waste (especially wet grass) is heavy and the City is paying a premium to have it hauled away, costs can be reduced significantly be keeping it reduced significantly be keeping it separated from the waste hauled to the Jackson landfill. Grass and leaves are environmentally safe and effective for use as compost and mulch, and therefore can be alternately handled, rather than be treated the same as regular garbage. For those who do not want to use the excess yard waste on their own property, the trash haulers may pick up these bags once a week at the request of the resident. Residents can also bring their bags of grass and leaves to the city site for a fee of 50 cents per 35-gallon bag. With the above policies for curbside pick up and grass removal, it is our objective along with the hauling companies to keep charges at a reasonable level for residential garbage collection.

ronment.

It's a trashy subject we all have to deal with, especially since the City of Wayne recently changed some of its solid waste ordinances and consequently haulers increased their rates.

Unfortunately, us folk have to pay for the changes through one of the most precious places — our pocketbooks.

I wonder, could we alter the ordinance a little bit more so we don't have the garbage hauled to Jackson, Neb. In recent weeks an alternative solution to the solid waste problem has been discovered but it probably won't receive much attention by the city council.

DUMP THE GARBAGE on Iraq.
Better yet, dump it on Saddam Hussein.
Really, if he's going to threaten U.S. troops with chemical weapons, why don't we just threaten him with our solid waste.

why uon't we just threaten him with our solid waste.

By dumping our solid waste on Iraq, we wouldn't necessarily be breaking the embargo, would we?

If we find an alternative site, why don't we use it? Dumping solid waste on Hüssein or Iraq wouldn't take much effort but it would save precious space in America's landfills.

You know what they say: What one man considers his garbage, another considers his palace.
I'd better hold off on that statement. I might have people calling me about who says it. The problem is, I don't know.

SO WHO DOES Hussein think he's fooling? So he's got chemical weapons. Oh yea! We got garbage and our garbage stinks more tha anyone else's. You want a chemical war? We'll give you garbage.

In your face Hussein. Is there any United Nations provision which says we can't dump solid

Terms often confusing

Difference between fermented and spoiled explained

By Virginia J. Nelson
For UNL Ag Communications LINCOLN - Fermented and spoiled are terms that, unfortunately and incorrectly, often are used synonymously in this country in reference to food.

University of Nebraska-Lincoln food scientist Khem Shahani has spent his long and distinguished career proving what he had theorized: that certain properties found in fermented foods, particularly milk products, are directly related to living longer, healthler lives.

"Exclusive of infant mortality, people in the countries within eastern Europe, Africa and India lead productive lives longer than the people in the United States or western world even though their standard of living, methods of sani-tation and availability of medical attention are far less sophisticated than ours," said Shahani, a native of Hyderabad, India, and a UNL faculty member since 1957.

"The difference is the ingestion of fermented foods," he said.

Americans sometimes mistake fermented foods for spoiled food, Shahani said, because they are un-familiar with fermented flavors.

"Fermentation is actually a way of preserving foods to be con-sumed later, like cheese, wine, sauerkraut. Our affluence allows us to throw away things that are very beneficial."

The human body is a literal hotbed of bacteria, Shahani said.

Some are beneficial, such as bacteria aiding in digestion and absorption of food; others can cause disease. Lactobacilli, the bacteria that produce lactic acid, is introduced into an infant's intestinal introduced into an infant's intestinal track during breast feeding and tend to suppress the growth of disease-causing bacteria. However, the onset of disease, the ingestion of antibiotics, even emotional stress can upset this delicate balance of intestinal flora.

This is when the addition of fermented milk foods, naturally rich in lactobacilli becomes important, the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources researcher said. Fermented milk foods include yogurt, buttermilk, kefir or food supplements containing viable live lactobacillus organisms.

Shahani has isolated two strains of lactobacilli from yogurt that produce a natural antibiotic-acidophilin and bulgaricun. NU holds settett on both patents on both.

Different strains of these lactic cultures have been tested and found to reduce cholesterol levels, increase calcium absorption, reduce infant and adult diarrhea, inhibit yeast infections and, when tested at the Sloan-Kettering Institute, even suppress the growth of cancerous tumors, Shahani said. Globally, infant diarrhea is a problem of major proportions, Shahani said, and its toll on human Different strains of these lactic

The implications for human health are great but, Shahani pointed out, "nutrition of animals is even more important because they are unable to talk." Shahani has successfully used lactobacilli supplements to improve performance in swine, poultry and cattle

In the course of all of Shahani's work with fermented milk, an abundance of whey, a by-product, has been generated.

"If we threw it away it caused pollution, but we found if we mixed it with corn (starch) it makes alcohol," Shahani said. NU is patenting the process that turns two Nebraska products into two Nebraska products into ethanol.

Shahani also has found that dried distillers grain, a by-product of whey-corn ethanol production, is more nutritious for livestock than distillers grain from conventional ethanol production. The whey-corn by-product is, has more protein and is more easily digested by cattle, he explained.

Shahani's research has been funded grants from the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Nebraska Corn Development, Utilization and Marketing Board, Nebraska Gasohol Committee and the University of Nebraska Water Center in cooperation with IANR's Agricultural Research Division.

He emphasized that he was working on communication in this second relationship. I recalled that a cousin of Mike's who had experienced a divorce kept telling us at the time of our marriage that he felt communication, or the lack of it, had been the problem for him. I reflected again on how sad it is that we don't pay enough attention to these skills until it is too late.

pounds) of body weight. The ash-gray blister beetle (a common Ne-braska species) contains from one-half to 1 1/4 milligram of cantharidin per adult beetle.

Bug can be toxic to animals

Thus, it would take some 200 beetles to kill an adult horse, Rice said but there have been reports of horses being killed by consuming only 25 to 50 blister beetles. This is probably because of the wide variation in the amount of cantharidin a beetle may contain, depending on size and species of blister beetle, Danielson said.

Blister beetles also could be fatal to cattle and sheep if enough are consumed, but these livestock species are much less sensitive, Rice

Cantharidin poisoning causes in-flammation of the lining of the gut, kidneys and urinary system. A poi-soned horse will sweat profusely, colic-like symptoms.

Rice says once poisoning has occurred there is really no treatment other than to provide supportive care such as fluids, electrolytes and pain killer. A poisoned horse will show symptoms within four to six hours of consuming the beetles and, if the dose is fatal, die within 12 to 48 hours, depending on dosage.

Danielson says that blister bee tles typically swarm and move into alfalfa fields in tightly compacted groups, feeding on the pollen of blooming alfalfa and weeds. Normally they will move on in a few

Danielson says farmers cutting alfalfa should be looking for blister beetles as they go around the field. This is especially important if the hay is being cut primarily to feed horses. Beetles can be killed with insecticides, Danielson said, but some dead beetles still may end up in the hay. And residual insecticide in the alfalfa may in itself be a hazard for horses fed the hay, Rice caulioned Rice cautioned.

Because of the swarming and moving-on type of behavior of blister beetles, delaying the haying process would be a way to avoid beetle infestations, the specialists said. But it is not a practical or economic approach because of the critical need to harvest when alfalfa is at each caulifur. Cimport addition. is at peak quality. Crimpers add to the problem because they trap and kill beetles in the hay, but again, this precaution is ruled out in most situations because crimpers are used in the majority of alfalfa haying operations, Rice said.

SENIOR CITIZEN CORNER RESTRAINTS IN NURSING CARE FACILITIES: Need to do

FIRST NATIONAL BANK'S

Some time ago, I asked health care providers to write about their experiences in the use of restraints on elderly or frail persons in nursing facilities. The following is excerpted from a well-detailed letter from Chuck Davis, LCNA, (Licensed and Certified Nursing Assistant) of Spokane, Wash., with 18 years experience working with natients:

patients:
"I am caring, compassionate and concerned ... Like many of my fellow co-workers, I am extra sensitive (to the needs of patients) ... readers should seriously consider becoming an aide or volunteer in a local nursing home for becoming an aide or volunteer in a local nursing home for at least six months prior to making any judgment on this issue. My ... opinion is, 'thank God for these valuable tools called restraints.' Without them, treatment would be inhumane, life-threatening and breed utter chaos.

"Used correctly, regulated by state agencies and governed and supervised by qualified professional doctors,' licensed nursing staff and licensed certified nursing assistants, restraints have proven to be a valuable necessary! Safety is safety, for all concerned. It may require restraints, along with the wisdom to know when they are necessary, and to be used wisely." Davis invites people who are against restraints to see for themselves "the dangers involved in not using (them) ... " Your comments, as always, are appreciated. nursing assistants, restraints have proven to be a valuable and necessary asset, helping to (prevent such) serious injuries as broken: limbs, pelvises, hips, concussions, ripped out catheters and I.V.s and the resultant complications. Due to patients' frail health and advanced ages, death could become imminent after such injuries."

Mr. Davis acknowledges that abuse and misuse is death could become imminent after such injuries."

Mr. Davis acknowledges that abuse and misuse is pushing for government action on this terrible situation. He noted it's been a decade since the abuse of the elderly, established or penny plinching government agency) would be at the cost of senior citizens' lives. ... What next? Cribs, car seats and high chairs for infants? Shouldn't need them! Seat helts on roller coasters and in vehicles? Shouldn't be

Many Persons Are Zinc Deficient

According to one study conducted in teenage and college-age girls, 2 out of 10 may have a deficient intake of the mineral zinc. In another study, residents of a nursing home obtained less than 65% of the reccommended dietary allow-ance for zinc from the foods offered to them. And because fiber often interferes with zinc absorption, the recent trend toward eating whole grain break-fast cereals and breads may further contribute to zinc deficiencies. Zinc is necessary for several dif-ferent enzymatic reactions to occur in the body. The recommended dietary allowance (RDA) is 15 mg for teenagers and adults, but more is needed during pregnancy and with lacta tion. Many animal and vegetable foods contain zinc. Many manfuacturers now include zinc in their vitamen/mineral supplements.
