conduct a semester-long project to determine students' shopping habits. It is the first such time a project of this nature has been conducted by the college.

"If students know they're doing a study that will actually be used, they'll be more interested in doing it," Hallgren said. "Every year when I teach the research class, I look for a project outside of the institution that will provide a practical that will provide a practical experience. Unless you can manage a research project, it's difficult to match the theory without the

THE FIRST PHASE of the project will involve focus groups with college students to determine their attitudes about shopping for goods and services in Wayne. The information from the focus groups will be shared with Wayne mer-chants so that they can better market to the college population.

After conducting the focus groups on campus, the class will design a questionnaire to survey a larger group of students. This survey will be used to make recommendations for improved marketing techniques for businesses in Wayne, according to Julie Mash, START chairperson.

"After she contacted me, I suggested to her that we conduct a full study," Hallgren said. "My role will be to act as a coach and will be to act as a coach and facilitator. My responsibility is to motivate; to bring the community together, which definitely was the interest. By conducting this in the classroom, it will convince students that something good will come about."

FOLLOWING THE initial stages, students will learn ways of deter mining information needs, conducting questionnaires, sampling designs, conducting field work, and making input into a statistical package.

"The real benefit to Wayne is The real benefit to wayne is that the information gaps will be closed," Hallgren said. 'They'll know what advertising reaches the student population and they'll know where they're doing a poor job."

WSC students march for support

What was originally planned as an anti-war march Friday appeared to have turned for a cry for support of U.S. troops in the Persian Gulf as Wayne State students and faculty held a march from downtown Wayne to Ramsey Theatre on the college campus. In all, about 50 students and

In all, about 50 students and faculty participated in the demonstration shouting slogans decrying, "hey, hey, ho, ho Saddam has got to go" to chants of "U.S.A., U.S.A., U.S.A.,

Organizing the march were WSC students Michael Ware, Robert Grinter and Remar "Mo" Walker and faculty members Sayre Anderson and Kent Blaser. The peaceful demonstration, occurred without incident.

"This march and rally was planned before Desert Storm started," Ware said during the rally. "After it started, it takes on new meaning. I don't necessarily support the use of force but I want to see our families and friends return home safely. I want everyone to know that I now support the troops now that the fighting has

Ware also challenged the audience to analyze the war with Iraq, however, asking the question, "was it worth it?"

GRINTER, WHO has relatives serving in the gulf said before the war started, he wouldn't have gone had he been drafted. He said be-cause of the sentiment he feels for family and friends stationed in the gulf, he now sees another side.

*Eor my friends and my-brothers, today I would go fight for them and with them," he said. "I would give my life to save theirs."

Of the three students who spoke at the rally, Walker's was perhaps the most sobering. He said he prays that the infantry ground units don't need to be used because that's where the majority because that's where the majority of his family members are. He said he hopes they return home safe

WSC instructors offer insight to events in Persian Gulf

By Mark Crist Managing Editor

As events in the Middle East continue to take shape, two Wayne State College professors provided some insight to the crisis in the Persian Gulf Friday.

All Eminov, a social science pro-fessor, and Bob Foote, an associate professor in the social sciences division, both with knowledge of the middle east, offer a wide range of thoughts on the Persian Gulf conflict

The WSC professors agreed that the unprovoked attack could be a ploy by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to retain a leadership role in the region.

"He's posturing himself for what comes after the conflict," Foote said. "If he can survive the war, then he can show he attacked Israel. At this point, he has nothing to lose by doing that."

Its inaugural issue will be Thursday, Feb. 21 with a readership of approximately 31,600 residents.

PUBLISHERS FROM the eight participating newspapers have joined together to promote the new publication by offering $100 in prize money for the top five entries in the contest.

Prize money will be awarded in various forms of community bucks' or local gift certificates to be spent in the communities of the participating newspapers. (Example: If some of the winning entries come from Wayne County residents in the Herald's circulation area, they will receive "money" good only in Wayne ... if someone wins from Pender, they will receive Pender "money", etc.)

THE CONTEST TO name this new senior citizens publication now is in progress until noon friday, Feb. 8. Winning entries will be published Feb. 21 In the tab's first issue.

DESPITE THE RESULTS the war brings, the professors agree that it could have long-lasting effects on the region. Besides removing Iraq from Kuwait, which it invaded Aug. 3, 1990, the war could set off a chain reaction in the region whereby a number of governments could become unstable.

They agreed that once U.S. and allied forces have liberated Kuwait from its aggressor, the social repercussions could be felt for some time.

"If Iraqi forces are defeated, you have a power vacuum in the gulf and the two nations most likely to fill the void are Iran and Syria," Eminov said.

"I don't see that this will result I don't see that this will result in another war but rather instability in a lot of governments in the re-gion may fall, Foote added. Kuwait may not be able to go back to its monarchial government. Along with that, the presence of U.S. and allied forces there is a destabilizing factor because of social differences between the cul-jockey for position but they may have made the wrong bet," Eminov said. "Regardless of how the situation turns out, the Palestinian issue will need to be addressed.

The sad note to the war is the number of Iraqi and allied causalities it might produce. The WSC professors said they hope the situation ends soon despite the fact they both dislike war.

"We know one thing, to get Hussein from Kuwait, he'll have to be driven from it," Foote said.

The National Honor Society is prospering and continues to have an essential mission in our schools. An Associated Press news story this month reported that one Masmonth reported that one Mas-sachusetts high school has discon-tinued its National Honor Society. The story reads, in part:

Complaining that the selection process too often puts personality ahead of grades, some high schools around the country are dropping or considering eliminating their National Honor Society chap-

The article cites one school which discontinued its chapter this ear and one which dropped its chapter seven years ago.
The Massachusetts school is the only school of approximately 22,000 to drop its chapter in 1990. Meanwhile, 282 new chapters have only school of been approved in the calendar year 1990 and 471 chapters issued in the calendar year 1989. More and more schools are understanding the value of recognizing students through the National Honor Society and the National Ju-nior Honor Society.

The Massachusetts school is discontinuing its chapter because entrance requirements of charac-ter, leadership, and service are too hard to measure, according to the story. Is it sometimes difficult to measure a student's character? Sure. Most everything educators do oure. Most everything educators do today to prepare students for the future is tough. It is obvious, however, that we need to teach and recognize good citizenship, character, ethical behavior and leadership. One only needs to look at the Congressional hearings, Wall Street, college, and professional sports to see the need to improve these qualities. There is no doubt it would be much simpler to choose on the basis of G.P.A. only; however grade point average is only a single indi-cator of a student's probable success after secondary education. Society, much the same as schools, requires citizens who participate actively projecting leadership and positive character while unselfishly volunteering their time for the improvement of all.

As we move into the '90s leadership and character development are essential. Your National Honor Society chapter will help students meet the future. It should be commended for helping reward our children, the nation's future leaders, for their overall character, as well as their scholarship.

Winside teen, grandmother pedal together

By Dianne Jaeger Winside Correspondent

Winside High School junior Patty Oberle and her grandmother, Doris Hoffart of Norfolk, have a rather unique way of spending time together—they ride bikes.

Not only do the two ride to-gether between Norfolk and Win-side, they are currently making plans for their third Bike Ride Across Nebraska (BRAN).

PATTY, 16, says she started riding seriously two years ago when her grandmother, then age 55, suggested they participate in the BRAN ride — a 400 to 500 mile trip.

"I had been interested in BRAN for many years," says Doris. "My husband and I had three-speed bikes and rode around Norfolk, but I decided if I was ever going to get serious about it, I'd better do so Doris received a new 12-speed for her 54th birthday in 1988, and in March of 1989 she and Patty started getting in shape. "Patty took trips to Norfolk regularly while I began riding my stationary bike and getting out whenever the weather permitted."

When Patty first started riding from Winside to Norfolk it was a two hour and 15 minute trip. Now, she averages one hour and two minutes.

Doris said she first rode two miles, then four, then 10, and finally from Plainview back to Norfolk

— a distance of approximately 35 miles — before she was ready to tackle the hills around Winside. She explained that bikers are encouraged to ride at least 300 miles plus and do a 75-mile ride before participating in BRAN before participating in BRAN.

BECAUSE Patty and her grandmother were late getting their January registrations in for the 1989 BRAN ride, only 500 riders are permitted and the two were put on a stand-by list.

They continued to prepare for the 980Al trip bewerer and about the BRAN trip, however, and about two or three weeks before the June event received the call saying they would be allowed participate.

"On the first ride I just hoped we would make it every day," Patty remembers.
"We were suppose to drink a bottle of water every 10 miles, but I wasn't doing it. I got a little dehydrated about the third day and had to rest awhile and drink water before continuing on.

THE BRAN ride averages 70 to 80 miles per day and lasts about seven days.

Participants are given booklets before the event showing the routes they will take and listing towns where rest rooms and eating ferlitter are available.

"They try to have all bikers at the camp site each night before dark, and if you're late they send a wagon to pick you up," said Patty and Doris, adding that participants are given just one sag day and are asked to drop out of the ride if they can't keep up.

The two added that participants can have their own pickup vehicle as long as it is registered. "They're really good about patrolling the route for unauthorized joy riders and making sure everyone is alright."

MOST BRAN riders carry a bike pump, tire tube or patch kit, and wear a safety helmet. In addition, many wear waist belts for cash or to carry fruit.

Fruit and water wagons are stationed about every 10 miles along the route.

"A truck follows the group with camping equipment and other gear, and each person is allowed two bags," said Patty and Doris, adding that campgrounds are usually located at schools, on college campuses, in parks or in campgrounds.

"I've made some really good friends and met some very inter-esting people while on BRAN," says Patty, adding that she still keeps in touch with a girl she rode with last year from Ravenna. On the 1990 BRAN trip, Patty and her new friend were joined by Patty's uncle, Steve Hoffart of Nor-folk, while her grandmother drove their camper and gear.

"We had a big rain storm on the fifth day of the trip and everyone had to be bussed from York to the next town. That's about the worst weather problem I've seen," says Patty.
