Recreation proposal up in the air

Decision time for city council

By Mark Crist
Managing Editor

It looks as though the Wayne City Council will have a tough decision on its hands when it meets Tuesday: Whether to accept or turn down two ordinances changing the way the city recreation-leisure program is run.

The proposed ordinances call for a coordinating commission and the establishment of a recreation-leisure services position within the government's infrastructure which would oversee all recreation and leisure activities.

With this particular item, there are two distinct sides to the issue: one for and one against. The side arguing against the change approves of the way the city's recreation program is currently run. The other side favors the change to have a coordinating commission appointed by the mayor with council approval and the hiring of a recreation-leisure services director.

At the last city council meeting, the proposed change was placed on hold in a 4-3 vote by the council in order to allow the public to comment. Although council consensus showed support for the measure, the proposed ordinances failed to pass on the second reading, which would have waived the need for a reading at three separate council meetings.

THE PROPOSED ordinances are a result of an October, 1989 ordinance passed by the council, calling for a review of the city's recreation program with a commission appointed by the mayor.

Upon designating the commission in April, 1990, they have met on a regular basis to determine the needs of the city. Once the needs were established, the report was given to council, calling for the creation of the new commission and position.

The commission, headed by Councilman Ralph Barclay, includes: Dean Bruggeman, who also serves on the current recreation board; Dr. Francis Haun, superintendent of schools; Ken Dahl, Linda Carr, Sam Schroeder, Deb Ensz, Marian Simpson and Bob Uhing.

In addition to the opinion of the city's commission, the Wayne START committee has also recommended a change in the recreation-leisure services program, calling for a director of leisure services.

"We haven't found that the current system was broke but that it was incomplete," Barclay said. "When it's incomplete, you fix it."

WITH THE possible changes to the recreation-leisure services committee and position, the new program could include a number of additions to the current program.

The things included in a complete recreation program, as found by the commission's research, are: arts and crafts, dance (modern, social, folk, ballet and others); drama, education (photography, arts, hobbies and others); sports, music, service-volunteer activities and nature oriented activities, not to mention the coordinating of special events in the community.

"Our research found that currently kids are going to Norfolk and while they're attending whatever classes they're doing, their parents are shopping" in Norfolk, Barclay said. "That shouldn't be one of the goals of having a program here, necessarily, but that is a fact."

Comparing cities with rec programs

One tool used in determining the need for the change, included a study of programs of towns in Nebraska and Iowa of comparable size to Wayne. While about half were the same size or smaller than Wayne, nearly half were larger. The mean of the towns studied for which approximate populations are available is 6,600.

Cities in Nebraska with recreation programs that were studied include: Wisner, Aurora, Nebraska City, Seward, Auburn, Gering, O'Neill and Holdrege.

Cities in Iowa with recreation programs that were studied include: Fairfield, Forest City, Knoxville, Decorah, Grinnell, Pella, Mt. Pleasant, Webster City, Harlan, Oskaloosa, Red Oak and Boone.

"This bunch of people have worked hard on this proposal," Barclay said. "They have not hidden anything from anyone."

DESPITE HAVING information about the process open to the public, the commission has received some arguably valuable criticism. One note of skepticism is that all but two of the members of the commission are affiliated, whether by employment or elected position, to the Wayne Public Schools or Wayne State College.

Council members commented that their constituents are asking the council to take the proposed ordinances slowly, since the process could later include a great deal of money.

Of the council members who were available for comment, two have said calls from residents in their wards have asked that the proposal be taken slowly. One council member said she hadn't received any calls or comments from her constituents, while another said she had received over 50 calls, half for and half against the proposal. One council member said all the calls he had received were opposed to the change and another said it was 10-1 in favor of the change. One council member could not be contacted and Mayor Bob Carhart was unavailable for comment.

Concerns expressed over financing

Of the criticism the commission's received, some of it's directed from the present recreation board, which has been in place in Wayne for years. The present recreation board was represented by Chairman Jim Keating at the city council meeting Feb. 12, who advised the council to look for unforeseen costs.

"I don't think the rec board is threatened by this possible change because if the majority of the people in the city want the change, it's OK," he said. "The concern that we have is that we don't want to see the present programs go down the tube because there's a lack of funds or that the programs in place aren't perceived to be the right ones and will then be eliminated."

"To have an effective program, we're going to need a building.

Our question is whether the city (populous) is able to afford that kind of money. We need to make sure any projects have council commitment down the road."

ONE OF THE greatest concerns people are expressing to council members—and current recreation board members is that the proposed ordinances will force the exit of long-time coach and sports-recreation director Hank Overin. Both Barclay and City Administrator Joe Salitros said Overin can remain employed by the city as long as he wants the position. Overin could not be reached for comment.

"Sports in Wayne are doing fine, but most people don't realize that what we currently have doesn't fit everyone's needs," Barclay said. "There are a lot of youngsters and adults who aren't taking part in something because it's not available. People have different interests in areas other than sports."

While the proposed position would mean an increased demand on city funds, the increase has already been planned in the city's 1990-91 fiscal budget. Salitros said $16,000 has already been set aside for this year with the expectation that the council might approve the recreation-leisure services position. He said the annual salary for the new position could cost anywhere from $18,500 a year to $24,500 a year, depending upon the experience of the individual hired. Salitros said the funding for the position comes from the general fund, of which $430,000 is created through taxes and the rest through various city fees.

Support group started in Wayne

By Mark Crist
Managing Editor

Like a number of other families in the Wayne area, Emily Haase never suspected that her son Rick would be involved in military action.

Today, Cpl. Rick Haase is stationed somewhere in Saudi Arabia.

In an effort to help others share their feelings about having loved ones stationed in the Persian Gulf region, Haase has organized an informal support group that meets every other Sunday at the Columbus Federal meeting room. The group held its first meeting Feb. 12 and will meet again March 3.

According to Haase, 16 people representing nine families, travel from Winside, Randolph, Carroll, Dixon and Wakefield to meet. She said more families have shown an interest in attending.

THE REASON behind starting the support group was simple: There wasn't one close enough to the Wayne area to adequately meet people's needs.

"Our first meeting was to allow people to express what they wanted in a support group," Haase said. "With this group, we will probably continue to keep it social—just to let people talk and share pictures and letters. Right now, we're just playing it by ear."

If others who may not have heard about the support group are interested in attending the informal meetings, they may contact Haase at 375-2243 in the evenings. The next meeting is slated to begin at 7 p.m. on March 3.

ONE OF the most telling things people expressed at their first meeting is that their loved ones in the gulf are fine and they're asking that people not worry. While Haase has not talked to her son since December, she has received letters from him saying not to be too concerned.

"This group helps others to know that they're not alone," she said. "If there's one thing we want people to know, it's that they can share their concerns with others."

Haase said following their first meeting, everyone left feeling good about having a support group nearby. She said as a result of the group, people are sharing their concerns with others while "making friendships that will last a lifetime."

Fire destroys car at Pac 'N' Save

MEMBERS OF THE WAYNE VOLUNTEER Fire Department extinguish a fire inside in a car belonging to Arlene Ellermeler of Wayne Friday morning at the Pac 'N' Save parking lot. While the cause of the blaze was unknown as of Friday afternoon, the automobile was believed to have been destroyed. The cause of the fire is still under investigation by the Wayne Fire Department.

Cardinal Key sets up board for troops

WAYNE - Like any service organization, the Wayne State College Cardinal Key Club is doing its part to show support for troops in the Persian Gulf.

Cardinal Key has a bulletin board in the Conn Library on the Wayne State campus to allow friends or relatives of soldiers to place letters, poems, pictures and addresses of troops overseas.

"Right now, it's just a matter of getting the word out," said Regina VonSeggern, president of the Cardinal Key organization. "Our intent was so that we don't forget these people from Wayne State who have gone. It's hard to remember who all of them are because there's so many. We want to make sure we remember them, who they are and what they look like."

THIS IS THE second project the academic sorority has conducted since the beginning of Operation Desert Storm.

Since the college was first affected by the troop buildup in the gulf, sometime in September, the Cardinal Key organization has made over 300 yellow ribbons for students and faculty to wear. The demand was so great, in fact, they had trouble keeping up.

In all, it is estimated that over 20 students have been called up for active duty.

SINCE THE success of their first project, VonSeggern and past president Ann O'Gorman decided something more needed to be done.

"We had tossed around ideas last semester and we came up with this," VonSeggern said. "It originally started with care packages and food but when the war started, mail became a burden on the postal system and the troops didn't need to receive and carry that extra weight. The billboard idea was one of the alternatives."

According to Deb Whitt, advisor of Cardinal Key, the projects various student organizations are taking on reflects a need by students to cope with the conflict.

"I think they feel they need to contribute in some way," she said. "It's important to show that need or concern. I know, for instance, that the members of Cardinal Key are very concerned with this."

"I think it's hard because we're here at college and these people are people we've gone to class with and people we've eaten with and lived with," VonSeggern added. "It's the least we can do."

VonSEGGERN SAID that she, like many other students, is being directly affected by the war. She said she has a second cousin fighting in the Persian Gulf region and a number of friends who are there.

"It's so painful for these people," Whitt said. "All of these activities allow people to share their concerns and it lets those who have friends or relatives in the gulf know that they're not alone." The billboard will continue to collect information about friends until the war is over, VonSeggern said.

Vital statistics and seven ways to protect your heart

In observance of Heart Month, Saint Joseph Hospital in Omaha presents the third in a series of Heart Smart articles designed to inform the public of ways to protect their heart.

Most heart disease today is really lifestyle disease, caused by improper diet, smoking, high blood pressure, stress and lack of exercise. With a little care, your heart should last a lifetime. Did you know?

- Your heart is about the size of your fist.
- It beats about 70 times a minute, over 100,000 times a day.
- Every minute, it pumps more than a gallon of blood.
- The heart is the vital link to about 100,000 miles of blood vessels.
- In one hour, the heart does enough work to lift a five-ton weight a foot off the ground. Anything that works this hard deserves a little respect!

SMOKING, obesity, high blood pressure and elevated cholesterol level are four significant risk factors in heart disease. Fortunately, they're all within your control.

For every single point you lower your cholesterol level, your overall risk for heart disease drops by two percent.

And if you quit smoking, you may be able to cut your risk in half. Life doesn't offer a no-risk guarantee. But low-risk living is the next best thing.

- Seven ways to protect your heart from harm include:
- Do not smoke.
  - Maintain your ideal weight.
  - Control your blood pressure.
  - Lower your intake of saturated fat and cholesterol.
  - Identify and control diabetes.
  - Exercise regularly.
  - See your doctor for regular checkups.

Wakefield's Jensen gets berth in speech tourney

WAYNE - Gwen Jensen of Wakefield became only the third person in the history of the Wayne State College speech team to qualify for the National Oratory Competition to be held in Florida. She will be one of two participants from Nebraska.

Jensen placed first in the oratory competition during the Nebraska Intercollegiate Forensics Association Championships held recently at Nebraska Wesleyan University in Lincoln. She also placed first in poetry interpretation and dramatic interpretation and fourth in informative speaking and prose interpretation.

The Wayne State team placed third overall in the tournament, marking the fourth consecutive year that Wayne State has placed at least third as a team. Placing first and second were Hastings College and the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Also participating from the area were Doree Brogren of Winside and Deanna Nichols of Wayne.

The next tournament for the Wayne State speech team will be the Pi Kappa Delta tournament at New Jersey's Monmouth College in March.

Briefly Speaking

Acme meeting canceled

WAYNE - The Feb. 18 meeting of Acme Club was canceled because of inclement weather.

The club's next meeting will be March 4 at 2 p.m. with Betty Wittig.

Pleasant Valley Club meets

WAYNE - The Pleasant Valley Club met Wednesday afternoon in the Alta Baier home. The meeting opened with the group giving the Pledge of Allegiance to the flag. Eleven members answered roll call with memories of being snow bound. Thank you notes were read from Minnie Heikes and Ida Bichel.

Hollis Frese read literature on the beautifying of the city of Wayne with flowers, bushes and trees — help is needed in this work. The club will make a decision in March. Leona Hagemann had the entertainment for the afternoon. Ten point pitch was played with Joanie Baier and Frances Nichols having high scores. Lunch closed the afternoon.

Next meeting will be with Phyllis Beck on March 20 at 2 p.m.

Why a new position?

Once again the city council is about to make an important decision with little public debate or awareness. A vote is scheduled for the next council meeting on Feb. 26 to create the position of leisure director. This person will have the status of department head, and will have control over the city recreation program, to hire and fire, and set the program activities. This will be a new expense to the already limited recreation budget.

I've talked to many people over the past few days and very few have any awareness of what this program is about. There are many questions that need to be answered for the citizens of Wayne before we adopt this program. These include: (1) Why was a special committee formed to examine this activity — a committee composed primarily of college and school personnel? (2) Why wasn't the existing recreation board consulted about and involved in the discussions on the issue? (3) What will be the total cost of this position over future years and where will that money come from? (4) How is this position going to affect the present recreation board and the city coaching staff — are we going to fire Hank Overin after all the years he has given to the youth of this town, and outstanding job he has done?

If you think these questions are important, call or contact your council members before the 26th, or better still, attend the meeting and have your voice heard.

Allen blood drive goes well

ALLEN - The Allen Community Blood Drive, held Feb. 11, has been deemed a success, according to officials from the Siouxland Blood Bank.

Fifty-three individuals volunteered to donate, resulting in 52 pints of blood collected. Those donating the most blood over an unspecified period of time are: Evelyn Trube, three gallons; Jeffrey Burnham, Lyle V. Carlson, Victoria Hingst and Marcia A. Rastede, each donating one gallon.

Of the donors, 15 of the 52 were first-time donors.

Two from Wayne display works

WAYNE - Forty-five artists from seven states have been selected for the 15th Annual Fred Wells 12-state juried exhibition, which opened Sunday, Feb. 17 at Nebraska Wesleyan University's Elder Gallery.

Among the artists scheduled for the exhibition are J. Marlene Mueller of Wayne and Ray Repologie of Wayne.

The show will run through March 28.

For Electronic filing of your tax return - Contact:
Max Kathol & Associates.,
CPA - 375-4718
and ask for DiAnn.

We have more tax experience than any other electronic filer in the area.
We can, prepare an electronic return for 15% to 50% less than an equivalent electronic return prepared by H & R Block.
In the past, many of you were not able to take advantage of electronic filing because your preparer charged extra for it. Now everyone who qualifies can benefit from electronic filing.
Taxes are a full time business for us, that means if you ever need help after April 15th we will be here to help you.
We are the only area electronic filer open all year long.
Piper Electronic Filing allows the preparers to avoid charging the tax payer Extra for electronic filing — so insist on Piper filing — any other type of electronic filing is like paying more taxes.....
