Wayne residents may find themselves sharing the burden of side-walk replacement as the Wayne City Council gave unanimous approv-al to a sidewalk cost-sharing resolution Tuesday night. According to City Administrator Joe Salitros, the sidewalk cost-sharing program was something he did in a similar position earlier in his career. The resolution, was passed since certain public sidewalks percent protectial cafety hazards to perdestrians and need to be represent potential safety hazards to pedestrians and need to be re-paired or replaced.

paired or replaced. Under the resolution, areas of Wayne will be designated for side-walk replacement by the city administrator or his designee. Accord-ing to the resolution, the city shall consider the assessment of the costs for replacement sidewalk and sidewalk construction over a six year period at interest rates as provided by state statutes.

UNDER CONDITIONS of the resolution, the city will share up to 50 percent of the sidewalk replacement in instances where the city constructs or has the sidewalk constructed and where funds are budgeted and available.

Plans look good only if we maintain a watchful eye

While the proposal of having a cost-sharing plan involving the City of Wayne and its residents is a good idea, the program has some hidden question marks.

The first question mark: Why will the city charge interest rates to residents who can't afford to pay for the sidewalk replacement all at once, when in the past the residents were assessed for the costs through the can't afford to pay for the sidewalk replacement costs through taxes?

The only solution we can find is to make money for the city so taxes levied might be lower, which is a fallacy in and of itself because history shows that once the taxes go up, they stay up. The second question mark: How will areas be designated for

The second question mark now will areas be designated to the sidewalk replacement projects? At Tuesday's meeting, the resolution for this program said it will be done by the city administrator or his designee. While there are some definite areas in Wayne which need to have side walks replaced or constructed, there are others which could be Walks replaced or constructed, there are others which could be designated without citizen approval. Because of this subjective evaluation, we, as citizens of Wayne, will need to guard this program with an eagle's eye. The third question mark: Whenever sidewalks have been built in the past, the cost of the project-has been assessed to the prop-erty owner through tax levies. So is there any real difference now? By this estimation, not really. As was noted earlier, the city will charge interset rates to be propendence to the prop-will charge interest, rates to homeowners who cannot pay for the project all at once. Since city funds come from taxes already, there is no big savings to the taxpayer. Since interest rates will be assessed, taxpayers will actually be spending more.

If there is a point that needs to be expressed, we will need to keep a careful eye on this cost-sharing program. While it sounds like a good deal, we must ask ourselves if it really is.

LINCOLN The legislature reached the half-way point of the legislative session this week having completed the 45th day of the 90 day session. The senators have now started to focus their attention on the issues that will dominate the remainder of the session.

STATE APPEALS COURT

Senators gave first-round ap-proval this week to a LB 732, a bill that would create an intermediate court of appeals. In the November general election, voters approved a constitutional amendment per-mitting the legislature to create such a court.

If approved by the legislature this year, LB 732 would establish a court between the Nebraska Supreme Court and the state's district courts. It would consist of nine judges based in Lincoln who would hear cases in three-judge panels throughout the state.

Opponents of the bill argued that the creation of the appeals court would take away the constitutional right of Nebraskans to appeal directly to the Supreme Court.

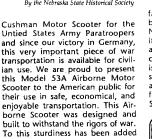

Court. Proponents, however, stated that the appeals court is needed because of a two-year backlog of cases before the Supreme Court. Because of this delay, Nebraskans are waiting prolonged periods of time to have their cases heard and are essentially having their right of appeal denied because of the length of time. RURAL HEALTH CARE

RURAL HEALTH CARE Nebraska medical students who promise to practice in rural com-munities lacking physicians could receive student loans that could later be forgiven under LB 400 which received first-round approval this past week. As a result of this bill, a Nebraska medical student could receive up to $10,000 a year in educational loans that would ei-ther be repaid or fogiven de-pending upon where the student

Frosh, Brandt at top

AREA - Frosh Dairy of Paxton and Brandt Dairy Farm of Royal took top awards among 41 small and large herds, respectively, which were honored for producing high quality milk throughout the past year at the Nebraska State Dairymen's Association meeting in Columbus on March 19. Geraid B, Bodman University of Columbus on March 19. Gerald R. Bodman, University of Nebraska-Lincoln agricultural engi-neer-livestock systems, said "the quality of milk produced by Ne-braska dairymen has continually improved over the past 13 years, but these 41 dairies were singled out for their exercised shifter 1 out for their exceptional abilities.' To be eligible for competition, producer must have no violations for added water or antibiotics and low bacteria counts, Bodman said. The producer with the lowest so-matic cell count was declared the winner. Official records of the Newere used to judge entries. The Quality Milk Award program was initiated by the Nebraska State Dairyman's Association in State Dairyman's Association in 1987 to honor producers who demonstrate an ability to consis-tently produce high quality milk. The quality of milk is a direct re-flection of cow health, according to Bodman. As milk quality im-proves, production generally in-creases and the cost of production decreases, decreases. "Higher quality milk also increases the yield and quality of manufactured dairy products such as cheese and ice cream." Bodman said. "The manufacturing of dairy products is big business in Ne-braska. Improved milk quality makes Nebraska businesses more

The quality of milk produced by Nebraska dairymen has im-proved steadily over the past 10 to 13 years," Bodman pointed out. "This year's award winners have clearly demonstrated that Ne-braska dairies can effectively compete with the dairy industry in other states. Equally important, consumers across the state can rest assured the dairy industry is striving to continually improve the quality of milk in the state and to make 'nature's most perfect food' even better.

Large her dairies honored for producing high quality milk in-cluded Hol'n-Ayr Dairy, Allen and Greunke Dairy, Winside.

Provisions in bill allows for greater planting flexibility

AREA - Provisions of the 1990 AKCA - Provisions of the 1990 Farm Bill are allowing farmers more planting flexibility for 1991. With the exception of fruits and veg-etables, up to 25 percent of the crop acreage base (CAB) may be planted to any crop. This includes soybeans for 1991.

According to the provisions of the 1990 Farm Bill, the first 15 percent of these flex acres are called normal flex acres (NFA), the last 10 percent are termed op-tional flex acres (OFA). No defiuonan nex acres (OFA). No defi-ciency payments are paid on the NFA, whether they are planted to an alternate crop (flexed) or not. If the OFA is 'flexed', no deficiency payments are paid on those acres either.

Tim Powell, farm management specialist at the Northeast Respecialist at the Northeast ke-search and Extension Center in Concord, says that one of the biggest decisions producers par-ticipating in the farm program face is whether or not to 'flex'. Powell says the easiest way for producers to decided is to estimate their re-turns above operating costs (the turns above operating costs (the cash costs going into the crop) for each crop and choose the one with the highest net return (Gross Marcio) Margin).

For example, consider dry land corn and soybeans. Should beans be flexed on corn base? If a producer assumes a harvest price for corn of $2 per bushel with an expected yield of 100 bushels per acre minus operating costs of $90 per acre, the Gross Margin for corn on NFA would be $110 per acre.

•[($2.00 x 100)-$90=$110]. Remember, the NFA does not earn deficiency payments. Assuming soybeans at $5.50 per bushel at 35 bushels per acre minus $65 per busies per after minus sob per acre operating costs, the Gross Margin for beans would be $127.50 per acre [($5.50x35) $65=$127.50]. Therefore, it would be more profitable to flex the NFA to bears to beans.

For OFA, if corn was $2 per bushel at 100 bushels per acre plus an ASCS yield of 70 bushels per acre at a deficiency of 58 cents per bushel minus $90 operating costs, the Gross Margins would be $150.60 per acre

$150.60 per acre [($2.00x100)+(70x$.58)-$90=$150.60]. The Gross Margin for soybeans would be the same at $127.50. So, it would be more profitable not to flex the OFA to beans. Note: no credit has been given to soybeans for nitrogen or reduced tillage in the following year. Also, conservation compliis assumed to allow more ance planted beans.

According to Powell, this same methodology can be used to con-sider any crop on any CAB with participation in the basic program or the 0/92 program.

Palm Sunday-all the choirs walked in with palm branches this morning; all ages, three to sixty three, singing "O magnify the Lord." A new baby was baptized. And I just came back from a walk, watching new baby calves and lis-tening to some beautiful song birds. The wind has been blowing birds. The wind-has been blowing all month. The first day of spring was cool and damp, with snow warnings in the forecast. But it fildn't materialize, and the wel-come moisture is soaking in. The roads are dry. We even have new gravelout our way. I continued on my cleaning spree and washed curtains and windows and scoured the store spree and washed curtains and windows, and scoured the stove. Then I decided the inside of the fridge looked so good, I'd better move it to sweep under it before I scrubbed the floor. It reminded me of the little boy who informed his mother: "If we are made from dust and return to dust, there is some-one either coming or going under the bed!

Ag Day was also observed this week At least I think it was I have just reviewed four newspapers pub-lished on Wednesday, and find very little about it. There is one embarrassing item, to the effect that a mechanical pen signed the governor's name to denote March 20 as a Meat Out Day, proposed by the Nebraska Vegetarian by the Society.

I know that there was an Aq breakfast at the capitol on Wednesday morning. And I know that Wayne County Farm Bureau held a 30th anniversary banquet. But that was about it.

I attended a farm management conference on Saturday. Ne-braska's assistant secretary of agri-

WOMAN'S CLUB

The Woman's Club met Thurs-day at the Lutheran Church base-ment for their Easter breakfast. Hostesses were Margaret Wittler, Alice Wagner and Dorrine Liedman

Nineteen members were in attendance and one guest, Phyllis Frahm. Ruth Kerstine had a memorial service for Mariorie Morris, whose name was added to the plaque. The group ordered 50 bunches of daffodils which will be delivered

April 5. Each member is urged to take a bunch to church on April 7 for Daffodil Sunday, a project sponsored by the American Cancer Society. The group also voted to continue with the flower garden pro-ject in downtown Carroll. Joyce Sandahl is chairman of the committee.

Members are asked to bring ideas to the April meeting for the May tea. Doris Harmer and Ivy Junck had an Easter program. A silent auction of white ele-phant and baked goods was also held. The next meeting will be April 11 at Davis Steakhouse at 2 p.m. Election of officers will be held at that meeting. Hostesses will be Beverly Hansen and Doris Harmer.

EASTER EGG HUNT The Carroll Community Club held its annual Easter egg hunt on culture was a keynote speaker. He echoed my sentiments when he described the "lump in the throat" he gets when he looks up at the figure of The Sower at the top of the capitol building. It hasn't been that long ago that the seed was planted in exactly that way. It symbolizes for everyone the agricultural character of our state.

He informed us that each Nebraska farmer now feeds 114 other people. I find that staggering. Ninety-two of these people are in the U.S., which means each Nebraska farmer also feeds 22 people abroad

He had just come back from a trip south, looking for more foreign markets. We are the second state in ag exports, and leading in per capita income from exports. We have passed Texas in number of cattle on feed, making us #1; and we are a leader in poultry products, #1 in dry-egg production. Two-thirds of our corn is certified #1 in quality, and is free of any aflatoxin. That's justification for Pridex.

I've been invited to speak for all kinds of organizations, but I visited a new one this past week. It's called Parents of Multiples, and is just what its name says. The folks there all had a pair of twins; or, in two instances, a set of trinlets.

two instances, a set of triplets. Once again, I witnessed the value of a support group. As one mother put it, "We laugh here about the things that make us cry at home!" (Made no here here) at home!" (Made me thank my lucky stars as I listened to their sto ries.)

Now it's time to get out baskets and bunnies. Happy Easter, Happy Spring.

Saturday at the auditorium in Car-roll. Games were conducted before the hunt began with mothers helping. Leaders for the preschool group were Joni Davis, Debbie Hall and Kathy Hochstein. The kindergarten group was assisted by June Koester and Sheri Schmale; first and second grade, Pat Bethune and DiAna Shultheis; and third and fourth grade, Lori Roberts. Winners of the games held in the first and second grade were Aaron Bethune, Kayla Schmale, Devon Bethune and Andrea Bethune, Winners in the third and fourth grade were Brandon Hall, Jenny Schaefer, April Lage and Jill Jarosz. The winners were awarded a 50 cent piece.

The Easter egg hunt was held with the following children gath-ering the most eggs for their age group: three and under, Stephanie Owens; four and five year olds, Ashley Hali and Jarold Bethune; kindergarten, Justin Davis; first and second grade, Joey Jarosz and second grade, Joey Jarosz and third and fourth grade, Brandon Hall

Assisting with the Easter egg hunt from the Carroll Community Club were Ginger Rethwisch, Sue Gilmore and Sandy Hall. Also as-sisting in hiding the eggs were Mandi Hall, Melodee Lage and Carri lucek. Carri Junck. The group was treated to
