Wilkenfeld speaks at WSC chemical conference

Schools pose chemical threat to everyone

"Virtually no attention is given to the environmental school factors that do not allow our children to perform," said Irene Wilkenfeld, one of several speakers who addressed participants during the third Safety and Chemical Awareness Conference held June 28-29 at Wayne State College.

This year's conference focused on educational environments and was organized by Dr. Pearl Hansen, associate professor of fine arts at

Hansen said the conference drew an estimated 70 persons from nine states, including school administrators, teachers and nurses from public schools as well as community colleges and four-year community colleges and four-year institutions.

"The feedback and evaluations were excellent," said Hansen, adding that many conference participants were interested in finding out what they can do as teachers to provide a safer learning environment in their schools and how to increase public awareness regarding the potential hazards that exist in the schools and environment.
"It is frightening," said Hansen,
"but there are things we can do."

Sunday storms cause minimal damage; Carroll hit the hardest by winds and rain

AREA - Storms Sunday appeared to cause the most damage to the Carroll area as 1.35 inches of rain were recorded.

According to the National Weather Service office in Norfolk, no tornadic activity was reported in northeast Nebraska. Despite NWS reports, Carroll residents reported downed power lines and uprooted trees from "what sounded like a train and looked like a dust storm, one resident said.

Power lines were reported down at the Jeff Shaffer residence and the Dorothy Isom residence. A cherry tree in the Jim Shultheis yard was apparently broken off its base and carried approximately 50 feet.

Officials at the National Weather Service said wind gusts hit 50 mph at times.

OTHER DAMAGE in Carroll was reported to property owned by Ed Simpson, Etta Fisher, Kenneth Hall and the Carroll Housing Authority.

According to Wayne Weather Observer Pat Gross, Sunday's storm lasted approximately three hours. He said Wayne received 1.25 inches of rain.

For the Dixon and Concord areas, 1.40 inches of rain were recorded at the Northeast Exten-sion Center. Officials there said the storms caused some low-land flooding, primarily to areas already damaged from a storm two weeks

Research plan a necessary tool to retail activity

As more information about the research conducted by the Wayne State College business research conducted by the wayne State College business research class starts to become available, it would be a wise move by retailers to take notice.

available, it would be a wise injury by the Wayne Herald about this business research and what types of marketing reach the college population. One such example appears in today's newspaper. Retailers could see benefits to their businesses by taking a closer look at the research.

Students predominantly want lower prices for name brand merchandise. While lower pricing may not be possible, emphasizing to students that going out of town to shop hurts their pocketbooks just as much as it does ours. Collectively, the community needs to launch a marketing campaign to the college campus. Effectively, this could be done when school starts and at periodic times during the year.

One way of doing this could be by taking our shops to them. For instance, businesses could market their products for sale at one ror instance, obsinesses could market their products for sale at one large "expo"ish event the first or second week of the school year. This could serve to not only educate the students about the products businesses carry but also what it costs them to travel out of town to do their shopping.

Also, by taking our businesses to them, they'll know we're interested in having them as customers. Some merchants in town already do this but others don't. If we work together to have a shop day or expo in the park either at the Willow Row! the WSC Stu-day or expo in the park, either at the Willow Bowl, the WSC Stu-dent Center or at Bressler Park, students might take notice.

If this plan is to succeed, the time to plan it is now.

Thumbs up to block grant for community day care center

It goes without saying that Wayne needs a community day care center for young children of working people.

For years, home day care providers have done an excellent job of providing for our young but with increases in child populations and no new major increases in child day care providers, this is as good a time as any to get a new center.

Even with the new center, there will be little, if any, threat to the home day care providers. It will also offer providers an opportunity to be a little more selective, which will be good for their businesses.

The new center has all the right tools to succeed. It has an advisory board and it will have a knowledgeable staff. With money the advisory board can get from the Community Development Block Grant funds, a new building will be perfect for the occa-

A great deal of credit deserves to be given to the individuals who have worked hard on this project. Without their time and dedication, the possibility of a center would never have materialized. It is through their insight, that there is a ray of hope. We strongly encourage that the Nebraska Department of Economic Development approve this grant. Not only will it add one more business to our economy but it will pave the way for future businesses and future employees who need child day care.

Centennials offer reason for northeast Nebraska to rejoice just like Wayne, Wakefield, Carroll, Concord, Dixon and Winside have celebrated their respective century marks over the past 10, or so years, this year it is Allen's turn. All of these centenni-als have given all of northeast Nebraska reason to come together.

Allen's will be no different.

Deservingly so, communities need to be recognized for reaching 100 years of age. In this day and age, it is a rare commodity in which we can all take part, especially as we appear to be on our way to becoming more urbanized.

The rural way of life deserves to be honored. Nowhere else can find the way of the common of the comm we find the uniqueness of culture that we thrive upon in rural areas. Centennials exclamate that point exactly.

We encourage everyone to take the time to head up to Allen over July 4-7. Let's stand together for this celebratory moment and take pride in where we live One more thing from all of us, congratulations Allen.

Threat is Satan

Inreat is Satan

I am responding to the viewpoint in the June 20 newspaper concerning the threat of gangs, drugs, violence and satanic activity to our rural communities. I agree completely that this is a real threat to our communities, however, increasing our patrol forces will not get to the root of the vicious threat.

The cause of gangs, drugs and satanic activity (devil worship) is due completely to prayerlessness, lack of zeal and revival in the church as a whole. God cannot work through a church with spiritual hypothermia. He did not or-

Sale of folks' house brings back all those childhood memories

I heard the tinging sound of my dog's collar Saturday. I could see the smile of his shepherd-collie the smile of his shepherd-coile face but Collae has been gone for three years now. I looked for him but he wasn't under the big old tree in my parents back yard.

I also remembered seeing Mark and Doug sitting under the bushes in our fort under the trees in the northeast corner of my parents yard. My childhood friends haven't been there for over 10 years.

The saying "home is where the heart is" is all too true. I found that out this past weekend.

YOU SEE, my Mom and Dad are moving from their home of 24 years in Scottsbluff this week. They closed the deal Monday and they will be out by Thursday. Leaving home for the last time didn't happen when I was 18 and off to colored by the service of the service when I was 18 and off to colored the service when I was 18 and off to colored the service service when I was 18 and off to colored the service service when I was 18 and off to colored the service service when I was 18 and off to colored the service service when I was 18 and off to colored the service service when I was 18 and off to colored the service service when I was 18 and off to colored the service service service when I was 18 and off to colored the service servic lege. It was Sunday, when I re-turned to Wayne.

Of all the kids in my family (there're six of us Crists), I spent more years in that house than all more years in that notes than any my brothers and sister combined. Just as I was the last one to be born, it was only fitting that I was the last one to step foot inside my childhood home before the sale

The separation I find myself forced to make allows me to com-prehend Mom's motive to return to California. I still don't under-stand it, but I do comprehend it. She doesn't have to justify it. We just need to understand it.

IT WAS tough to tour my home of 16 years for the last time. All the memories came back to me. I fought hard to hold back the tears but even as I write this column, I find my emotions running rampant in the cobwebs of my memory. The tears are determined to fall but I won't allow that.

I stayed up late each night, sa-voring the time like a connoisseur with a fine wine. At night, after ev-eryone had gone to bed, I would walk around outside and try to imagine the memories as if I were an observer from a different time. I wanted to phase back to see it. What was is gone.

Mom and Dad loaded us down with things they don't want to take with them to California. Every item will remind me of home, especially the turkey plate Mom used to serve Thanksgiving dinner on. If all goes well, that plate will be there for the next generation.

AS WE left, Mom asked Rhonda not to cry. She said she's seen enough tears from friends my parents are leaving. Rhonda and I didn't say a thing until we made the turn to Alliance; we were both involved in our own emotions.

If there is one wish I have for the next family that lives there, it's that all the same joys will fill their home. If there is one wish I have for my parents, it's that they'll find similar happiness in California.

As I hugged Dad before we left, I looked down the hallway at what was once my room. That's when the stark realization struck me that this was no longer my home.

Tunnel work a major project at Wayne State Network improves campus safety

If you've been on the Wayne State College campus lately, you might have discovered that it's a

That's because the college is currently reconstructing its underground tunnel network, which houses the steam and electrical houses the steam and electrical lines for all the buildings on campus. Eventually, the tunnels will also house wiring for telephone and cable TV service.

According to Andrew Soll, vice-president for Administration and Finance, the initial phase of the project is expected to be completed sometime in September. He said the new system will allow for better temperature controls in the college's buildings. college's buildings.

"THIS WILL replace a system which is not only energy inefficient but almost impossible to maintain," he said. "Some of the tunnels date back more than 70 years. There are some masonry tunnels that we are concerned about.

"Much of the pipework is either poorly insulated and in some cases wooden troughs were built around the pipes and that was the insula-on for the heating system."

In addition, some of the buildings are heated with steam while others are heated with hot water, because of this the system needed updating.

The project is expected to cost somewhere in the neighborhood of $3.6 million. Most of the project will be paid with funds approved by the Nebraska Legislature and the rest will come from bonds.

"The new system will deliver steam to each building and the steam will be converted to hot water at the appropriate temperature for that building," Soll said. "We expect this will create a much more efficient operation."

Political changes affect how countries do business The elimination of political bar-LINCOLN - Political change globally is affecting how countries do business with each other.

Ripples from that undertow even will reach Nebraska's livestock producers, who may find them-selves with stronger markets for their products simply because they've been among the world's most effective producers. Other sectors of the U.S. business com-munity, however, such as manufar. munity, however, such as manufacturing, will suffer in the face of stiffer international competition unless they make changes.

"They'll have to reorganize, re-structure," said Sang Lee, a Re-gents Professor of Management at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln College of Business Administration.

Lee is president of the Pan Pacific Business Association, which recently held its annual conference in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia.

The conference drew business and government leaders and scholars from 15 countries that border the Pacific Ocean to discuss key management, trade and business development issues.

Lee shared his perceptions from that conference in a recent interview.

The message that carried through the three days of discussions was that "the world is getting very small, and we are seeing the evolution of a global economic democracy," he said. "We don't have a clear-cut demarcation between capitalistic countries and the excialist and communist countries." socialist and communist countries.

The development of free trade agreements — EC '92 in Europe; as well as agreements involving the United States, Mexico and Canada, and the Southeast Asian block of countries --- means that economic or industrial policies for each country will have limited meaning, Lee said. "The borders will be open, and then we will see the emer-gence of transnational corpora-tions."

The top priority of these state-less corporations will be to serve their customers, not one govern-ment or one country, he said.

Vitamin E and Cataracts

A cataract is a clouded area in the normally clear lens of the eye. As a cataract progresses in its development, vision can be increasingly impaired.
About 20% of Americans age 60 to 75 have disabling cataracts. According to the Henkel Corporation, cataracts cause blindness in about 400,000 persons each year. Surgical remov-al of the clouded areas from the lens is the most common form of treatment. This procedure has been perfected and, in the hands of an expert, is safe. effective, and relatively painless. Obviously, it would be better to prevent cataracts rather than have to deal with them in later life. Vitamin E may play a role in prevention. In one Canadian study, persons who took antioxidant vitamins — such as vitamin E — had a better than 50 percent decrease in cataract risk.

Recreation Tennis Program holds Annual Awards Day

Wayne's City Recreation Tennis Program, under the direction of Tom Roberts, finished up another season recently with Awards Day at the Wayne Tennis Courts.

Roberts commented that this that this year was one of the first in many that there were no rain out days or extreme windy days which forced the cancellation of some classes. the cancellation of some classes. Roberts said his classes actually wound up finishing ahead of schedule because they did go on unscheduled days in case there were rain days.

Those who took part during the recreation program were once again awarded with certificates and badges depending on the programs they completed and started. The certificates and started. The certificates and badges were given by the United State Tennis Association during the awards ceremony which preceded the hitting for prizes session.

Roberts noted that the USTA's Skills and Drills six year program works to the advantage of the students. "If an individual can only sales it half was thereach a pre-make it half way through a pro-gram during one summer then he or she may come back and pick up where they left off during the next summer," Roberts said.

Those who begin the program could jump as far as two or three levels in one summer depending on the hard work and dedication they put into it. Certificates were awarded this summer to those who began a certain level and badges were awarded to those who completed a certain level of the six-year set-up.

"Again this year in order to encourage students to arrive on time and remain for their full hour of tennis, I continued a program in which they receive free quartz which they receive free quartz sports wrist watches and I'm pleased that this year there were nine people who received these watches." Hailey Daehnke, Casey Daehnke, Christine Swinney, Jeff Ensz, Matt Munsell, Craig Rahn, Ryan Guill, Derek Hart and Wade armichael were the recipients of

"In addition," Roberts said, "each participant earned one credit for each full hour of his or credit for each full hour of his or her tennis class participation. For each credit earned, they had the opportunity to hit for prizes and whatever they hit they got to keep. I supply the watches and all the other prizes—not the city!"

"I am glad to furnish some incentive to those interested in tennis because I have gotten a lot out of tennis during all the years I've heep involved and I only hope that been involved and I only hope that the hundreds of Wayne area peo-ple who have taken instruction also got enjoyment from our city Park & Rec program," Roberts said. "It bothers me however, that only one person thanked me after this years prize hitting session and none during the past years of this prize hitting contest. Perhaps they believe it's a part of the city expenses that provide this," Roberts said, "but it's not. I guess 'I'd like people to know that what I do is extra and I alone fund this

Visiting physician has Wayne ties

Samuelson performs eye surgery

Dr. Steve Samuelson is the newest visiting physician at Provi-dence Medical Center, Samuelson heads up the hospital's new ophthalmology clinic.

Samuelson isn't a foreigner to Samuelson isn't a foreigner to Wayne. His father, Wayne Samuelson, graduated from Wayne Prep School, Wayne State College and he worked at WSC for a time and he worked at WSC for a time as its admissions director.

"There was a certain appeal coming to Wayne," he said.
"Growing up, we would come to Wayne frequently to visit my grandmother."

grandmother."

The new physician was born in Benthack hospital in Wayne and lived here until he was one year old, when his family moved to Mankato, Minn. Also, his grandmother, Betsy Samuelson, lived in Wayne for a number of years until her death several years ago.

SAMUELSON, 32, is married and has an 11-month-old boy,

In addition to his new practice in Wayne, he has a regular office in Fremont and he travels to Columbus one day a week.

In Wayne, he will be operating out of Dr. Larry Magnuson's office. Most of Samuelson's work will be referrals for cataract and other forms of eye surgery.

"The hospital expressed a need for someone to do eye surgery here," he said. "It seemed that re-turning to Wayne was a natural thing to do."

In addition to Samuelson's visits to Wayne, Providence Medical Center has a new operating microscope, which Magnuson will use.

The hospital also recently announced that it will be starting a new oncology clinic for cancer patients.

"Laser surgery (for cataracts) is still in the research stage," he said. "There is a laser surgery performed on cataract patients but that's will conduct will be anything that deals with the front part of the eye. Some of his work will use lasers but the majority of it is done with high-energy sound waves and the cataract is aspirated. That laser work is done to remove cloudy membranes from the eye after the initial surgery has been performed. If a laser is used for the first surgery, it is done to create the incision.

Samuelson is a graduate of

"I'm looking forward to working with people in this area," he said.
"The hospital here is progressive. It does a good job of providing the people here with a variety of services."

DR. STEVE SAMUELSON is the newest visiting physician at Providence Medical Center. Sa muelson will be heading up the hospital's new ophthalmology clinic, which will be held on a regular basis. The new service allows the hospital to provide an eye care service it hasn't been able to offer before.

CEO gives award

WAYNE - Harvey Granger, president and chief executive officer of Great Dane Trailers, recently cer or Great Dane Frailers, recently presented Wayne Plant Manager Terry Hanson with a plaque recognizing the Wayne plant as the most improved plant within the trailer industry for observing safety

The award was presented as a result of the average incident rating dropping from 5.7 to 2.7. This was the greatest improvement made by any of 35 plants across the nation competing for the award. The average rate for the 35 plants was 10.2.

This is the second safety award the Wayne plant has received in 1991. Earlier this year, the Wayne plant received the 1991 award of excellence, the highest safety award given in the State of Ne-braska for employee safety.

Carhart Lumber Company celebrates 70 years of business

By Mark Crist Managing Editor

Most people are probably too young to remember when Charles E. and A. Benjamin Carhart bought the Philleo and Harrington Lumber Yard. But it was that event that helped shape the Wayne busi-nesses' history. For 70 years, the Carhart Lumber Company has been in business. The Wayne business recently hon-ored those years with an anniver-sary sale although the actual anniversary of the acquisition was in March. It was also recently hon-ored by the Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce at a weekly chamber coffee

Charles and Benjamin Carhart were in the hardware business in Mapleton, Iowa, before coming to

Charles Carhart

Prior to purchasing the Philleo and Harrington Lumber Yard, the brothers owned and operated Carhart Brothers Hardware in Wayne from 1914 to 1921. When they purchased the lumber yard they sold the hardware store to L.W. McNatt, whose son Bud still owns the store. ACCORDING 10 current com-pany President Robert Carhart, the lumber business has been passed down from generation to genera-

Bob said the business was handed down to his father John C. nanded down to his rather john C. Carhart, and uncle Ralph M. Carhart, along with a cousin J. Braden Carhart during the 1930s. It was also during the late 1930s and early 1940s that it expanded, despite the fact those were the Great Depression years.

During the Great Depression, the company incorporated and purchased lumber yards in Pierce, O'Neill, North Platte, Randolph, Hartington, Plainview, Bloomfield, Neligh, Tilden and Albion.

"PERSONALLY I think the business has been successful for two reasons," Bob said. "One, area people are prosperous because of the sweat of their brow and they've prospered over the long

"Secondly, I think the principles on which my father and grandfa-ther operated the business has been fair. They've been sensible and they've been equitable. They've treated people by the golden rule. They've treated peo-ple in a way that makes repeat customers. It's easy to sell some-one something one time but you have to treat people straightfor-ward and in an upright way to have them return."

Bob said that philosophy has continued through the times. Be-sides his father's and uncle's ownership, his cousin Chuck and he have operated it since the 1960s.

Today, the business continues to try to cater to the needs of its customers. Carhart said starting in the early 1950s, the late Roy Christiansen expanded its product line to not only include lumber but home improvement products, hardware and plumbing supplies.

JOHN C. CARHART AND Ralph M. Carhart (from left) were second generation owners of the business. John is the fa-ther of current president Bob Carhart and Raiph is the father of recently retired partner Chuck Carhart. The business has been open 70 years.

With its rich base, the business is opportunity for the next II going strong into the '90s. generation to take over the withart's diversity provides the business.

Free workshop offers tips for child care

WAYNE - Family Service Child Resource Center of Lincoln is sponsoring a free workshop entitled "Passport to Food and Fun" on Wednesday, July 10 at 7 p.m. in the Columbus Federal Bank meet-

Vicki Meyer, a consultant for the Family Service Child Resource Center stressed that the workshop is for any person interested in chil-dren or child care.

The purpose of the workshop is to help teach children how to gain self-awareness, understanding and appreciation for different cultures by experiencing the foods, games, language and crafts of different cultures. Wednesday's workshp will feature the movement of the Chinese culture.

All persons interested should register by calling Vicki Meyer at 375-3631.

The GOLDEN YEARS

B, Sel Johnson

One of the best things older peo-ple can do to maintain their health is to stay physically ac-tive, says the U.S. Public Health Service. "Often physiological de-cline associated with aging may actually be the result of inactivity," the review points out. More than 40 percent of people over 65 report no leisure time physical activity. Less than a third routinely engage in moderate activi-ty, such as walking or gardening. Among benefits of physical activity cited in the review are the likelihood of increased longevity and functional independence in later years. It's wise to consult a doctor before increasing physical activity.

Edna Lewis learned to cook in her family's kitchen in Unionville, Virginia. Now she applies her skills in the historic Gage and Tollner restaurant in Brooklyn New York. She starts work around 8 a.m. and "I have to force her to leave around 8 p.m.," says a manager. But she p.m., says a manager. But sne did take a night off recently when other cooks prepared some of her specialties, like she-crab soup and quail with spoon bread. The occasion: her 75th birthday. "I'm going to start taking it easier," she said. But she will still cook and "I have a cookbook to

I frequently get a lump in my throat during The Star-Spangled Banner and God Bless America and America, the Beautiful. I've been enjoying the Voices That Care video. And I love fireworks.

Those firework stands seem to appear out of nowhere, about the end of June. Obviously, someone had to order all the stuff and be ready to assemble them. But it always surprises me to see them, apparently overnight.

JENNIFER, of the Roca Rural Report family, was married Saturday. There was a lovely, traditional cer-emony in a large, traditional church, followed by the usual reception and pictures and bouquet throwing.

But her parents traditionally host a Fourth of July picnic, complete with wonderful fireworks.

So, on Saturday evening, we drove out to the Roca rural area and enjoyed a picnic supper. There was a tent and lawn chairs and lots of old friends to visit with

Then we gathered on a big ont lawn, recited the Pledge of front lawn, recited the Pledge Allegiance and watched the flag come down. J.R. shot off a small canon as a signal to the folks in the pasture to begin the show.

They had the supplies in an old van. Soon there were beautiful bursts of many colors and puffs of

WE WERE just beginning to enjoy it all when there was a 'dud.' It went up and came down with nothing happening. It landed on the ground, some sparks got into the van and the next thing we knew, someone hollered, "call the fire department!

In what seemed to be slow motion, there was a spectacular shower of sight and sound. Then only fire.

No one was hurt. The groom had been helping, as had the bride's brothers and friends. So there were some anxious mo-ments. It seemed to take forever for the fire trucks to arrive. The pasture was dry; after a week of hot, dry wind. The van, of course, was destroyed.

We left as the young people began dancing. As we thanked our hosts, we heard, "I don't know how you are going to top this next year!" One thing for sure, we will all remember Jennifer's wedding.

son of Mr. and Mrs. Ric Wilson.

Specialist: mulch mowers offer savings, create benefit to lawns

Recently developed consumer and commercial grades of mowers can chop up grass into fine pieces and return it to the lawn as mulch, according to a University of Nebraska-Lincoln agricultural machinery specialist.

New mulch mowers perform much better than ones developed 15 years ago, said Bobby Grisso, UNL associate professor of biologi-

UNL associate professor of biologi-cal systems engineering.

The mowers' specially designed blade and deck housing keep the grass suspended in the air longer than conventional mowers to chop the clippings into finer pieces.

The mulch produced by these mowers returns vital nutrients to the turf and reduces landfill waste, Grisso said, while the mowers themselves shorten work time by eliminating the cost of collection and disposal of clippings.

For commercial use, Grisso recommended that lawn care professionals operate a high-quality machine with 10-20 percent more power than a standard mower. Many units are too small for commercial application, he said, but at least three manufacturers offer a riding mower with at least 18 horsepower and a 50-inch deck.

Professionals should advise their customers of the advantages of mulching, Grisso said.

If customers don't want to mulch every mowing, he said, pro-fessionals could suggest mulching every third time or offer to use a blower to eliminate heavy clipping deposits.

He said mulch mowers should be operated only on dry turf, blades should be kept sharp, and turf should be mowed regularly to avoid overload of the deck housing.

For walk-behind mowers, Grisso said, most manufacturers offer mulch kits that block off the discharge chute and redirect clippings around the deck. Some have specially angled blades to keep clippings suspended for more cuttings.

Reduced usage not all that bad

Fertilizer use can save millions

University of Neoraska soil scientists raised a ruckus years ago when they began suggesting farmers use less fertilizer. But time has proven these research-based recommendations save money and protect the environment.

A "more-is-better" fertilizer philosophy prevailed when NU first urged reduced fertilizer use as a way to save farmers money. While their advice drew criticism from the fertilizer industry, NU soil scientists stood by recommendations based on research in the '50s and '60s on research in the 30s and 60s showing more fertilizer doesn't automatically mean higher yields. Over the years, further studies have reinforced and fine-tuned those early findings.

Today, a Nebraska corn farmer often can cut fertilizer costs as much as half without sacrificing yield by following NU's recommen-dations, said Don Sander and Gary Hergert, institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources agronomists.

Savings could amount to $100 million on the 5 million-plus acres of irrigated corn statewide if every producer realized an average of $20 per acre savings on fertilizer. Heavy fertilizer users can save as much as $50 an acre, said Hergert, soil scientist at the West Central Research and Extension Center in North Platte.

"We've always tried to recom-We ve always tried to recommend only what the producer needed to maximize profits, even in the '50s and '60s when fertilizer was in its heyday,' said Sander, IANR soil scientist in Lincoln. NU has slightly reduced its nitrogen recommendations over the years, but most fertilizer recommendations remained stable.

tions remained stable.
Some farmers follow NU's recommendations, he said, but many Proper fertilizer management also reduces the potential for ni-trogen fertilizers to leach below the root zone and contaminate groundwater. That's a major con-cern in Nebraska where where groundwater provides drinking water for virtually all rural households and 84 percent of the public water supplies.

"If farmers take soil samples and send them to us or to labs which follow our guidelines, they proba-bly will be producing the most economical, environmentally compatible yields available with today's technology," said Hergert.

NU researchers have looked beyond application rates, exploring the many factors that influence safe and effective fertilizer management, Sander and Hergert said. In 1972, NU researchers were among the first nationwide to consider nitrogen already present in the soil root zone when calculating nitrogen needs, Sander said. Many Great Plains states now use this procedure. States east of Nebraska are modifying this and taking plant soil nitrogen samples in early June to fine-tune nitrogen recommen-Today Nebraska researchers are refining nitrogen recommendations by accounting for nitrogen avail-able in water as well. This requires improving both nitrogen and irrigation management, Hergert said, meaning more profit because of lower nitrogen bills and improved groundwater quality. Another project compares nitrate leaching losses on continuous corn with a corn/soybean rotation.

Studying plants' phosphorus needs, IANR researchers have found alternative application methods may be more efficient. In methods may be more efficient. In wheat, they are comparing broadcast application and application with the seed.

"Some application methods have much better efficiency. You can use less fertilizer with the same yield, or use the same amount and get more yield," Hergert said.

Today, NU is considered a pace setter in fertilizer management, but it wasn't always the case, said Sander, who has studied fertilizer management at NU for nearly a quarter century.

We've all felt the pressure over the years to increase our recom-

We've all felt the pressure over the years to increase our recom-mendations," he said.

"Many fertilizer dealers and companies have questioned our recommendations, but because of our research base we feel confi-dent giving what may seem to be conservative recommendations,"

Hergert said.

NU fertilizer research began in the late '40s with tests on crop response to various nutrients, Hergert said.

"This research took up a good bit of the '50s and '60s," he said.
"That's when our recommendations came in lower than commercial labs. Beginning in the '60s, there was a concerted effort to look at residual nitrates in the soil root zone.

"Before, and even today, nitrogen recommendations are often gen recommendations are often based on the farmer's yield goal," Hergert said. Many people believed more fertilizer would automatically boost yields, but NU research showed there was a point of diminishing return. "We were finding high nitrogen carry-over in the soil and less or no yield response."

"We recognized that fertilizer was being over-applied," Sander said, "It was very apparent that commercial laboratory recommendations were often much higher than ours, but no one quite knew how to deal with it except to try to tell people what they really needed."

Agronomy department publications from the 1960s also expressed concern about nitrate in groundwater.

"At nearly every meeting with fertilizer dealers, we'd voice our concerns about misuse of nitrogen, that it was only a matter of time before government regulations would be imposed," Sander said. "We've been saying it for years and years, but nobody paid any attention until recently."

In the early 1970s, the agronomy department's soils staff took a dramatic step, Sander recalled. Soil samples were anonymously sent to independent private labo ratories for fertilizer recommendaratories for letrilizer recommenda-tions, Hergert said. Test plots grown following the commercial labs' recommendations? were com-pared with plots using NU's guide-lines.

"Although most labs had rec-ommended higher levels, our plots showed the same yields with less showed the same yields with less fertifizer. Back then the factor was not environmental, but cost, Hergert said.

Our recommendations would make farmers the most money, he said. "When groundwater concerns came along, our nitrogen recommendations seemed conservative, but they reduce groundwater contamination without loss of yield."

The soil sample comparison re-sults received national attention, Sander said, but industry was slow to change.

"We had virtually no luck con-vincing most labs. Today, finally, with the environmental concerns, several labs provide our recommendations, although sometimes only if you ask for them. Some of the smaller independent labs, however, are doing a pretty good job," he said.

Independent soil testing labs are not connected with fertilizer companies, Sander said, but com-pete for fertilizer dealers' business.

Although research provided the basis for NU's pioneering fertilizer recommendations, funding for fertilizer-use research today is tight.

Sander said he is concerned with gaps in fertilizer recommendations for some crops, such as sorghum. The crop's fertilizer needs are hard to predict be-cause data is limited on sorghum's response to fertilizer. Even with un-imited funds, such research would take much time.

"Our research base is as good as anyone's, but it could be much better with adequate funding," Sander said.

Neither soils specialist advo-cates banning fertilizer or chemicals.

"We definitely do need fertilizers to keep producing high quality, low-cost food for consumers," said Hergert, citing figures which claim food costs would double without fertilizer use. "We wouldn't go hungry, but because of lower yields, the cost would go up."

"Our responsibility is to manage fertilizers effectively," he said.

Wakefield youth attend junior cadet program

WAKEFIELD - Two Wakefield youth today have insight into what it means to be a State Trooper, thanks to the American Legion's

Junior Law Cadet program.

Billie Birkley and Steve Clark are among 59 Nebraska high school students to complete the five day course this month at the Nebraska State Patrol's Training Academy.

The "seniors to be" get an inside look at what it takes to be a State Trooper. Representatives of other law enforcement and legal agen-cies outline their responsibilities for public safety.

The cadets drive a Patrol car on the slalom course, fire a pistol, run radar and make mock traffic stops. One class proved livelier than the
