A group of citizens are express-ing concerns about a proposed comprehensive plan for Wayne County.

The plan, if ultimately approved by the Wayne County Commis-sioners, will update the county's zoning. It will serve as a guide for future land uses. Currently, Wayne County has no comprehensive plan or zoning laws.

County has no comprehensive plan or zoning laws. The Wayne County Commis-sioners discussed the proposal at last Tuesday's meeting. Wayne County Clerk Deb Finn said the county Commissioners have accepted a recommendation from the Wayne County Joint Planning Commission, to analyze what a comprehensive plan will mean. Finn said this does not mean a plan will be developed, however. A comprehensive plan will include comprehensive plan will include county wide zoning laws.

ACCORDING TO Neil Sandahl, chairman of the Wayne County Planning Commission, the firm of Hanna:Keelan of Lincoln has received the planning commission's endorsement. Hanna:Keelan is also updating the City of Wayne's and the City of Wakefield's comprehensive plans.

"In order to have zoning, you have to have a comprehensive plan," Sandahl said. "I feel that we need it. People are saying that neighbors will look out for neigh-bors but I don't buy that. We need some zoning plans to protect us." 'The progress of this plan depends on public input. If the plan is drawn up without public input, people may end up losing some of their rights.'

Merlin Beiermann

Wayne County Commissioner

Sandahl said a comprehensive plan and county wide zoning will be especially important to Hoskins. He said due to Norfolk's growth, Hoskins residents can expect to see a large migration of people into their community. He said that may not necessarily be a desirable trait without zoning laws.

SOME HOSKINS residents showed interest in a county wide comprehensive plan during Tues-day's county commissioner's meeting. Officials have said people in Carroll and Sholes have indicated an interest in the plan. No word has been received from Winside officials

Talks stir debate in county

The county commission did receive some negative input toward the comprehensive plan. About 10 rural residents spoke out against the proposal.

One of the 10 residents opposed to the plan is Fred Mann rural Wayne County resident. Mann said he is concerned that zoning said he is concerned that zoning laws would create limits with what he, and others, can do with their land. He said he is opposed to an-other level of bureaucracy. "Many times government offi-cials will use scare tactics as an in-centive," he said. "I rely on my neighbors to protect me from un-desirable developments."

Mann cited the proposed nu-clear waste dump site in Boyd county as an undesirable develop-ment. He said if that type of thing were to develop in Wayne county, he doesn't think zoning regulations will really protect his rights. "It seems to me that people in America are turning away from their freedoms," he said. "Other countries are trying to get the plans drawn up, rather than getting the county involved. He said this would save people a lot of headaches. According to Hoskins Mayor Pat Brudigan, having separate com-prehensive plans drawn up is not a viable alternative. She said Hoskins looked into having one drawn up a few years ago but found out it was too expensive. Brudigan said Hoskins needs a comprehensive plan to protect it-self from Norfolk's expansion. She said it would be more convenient if Hoskins could participate in the county's plan because it would save county's plan because it would save taxpayers money. "We need to let them write this up to see if it fits our villages and our county," Brudigan said. "If we would do it just as a village, it will be too expensive. Doing a com-prehensive plan and creating zon-ing regulations on our own would be at an outrageous price."

ACCORDING TO information provided by Hanna:Keelan, the comprehensive plan will include population, economics and housing data; existing land use; physical and environmental characteristics, which includes flood terrain and soil classifications; citizen participation; development code and policien; a development goals and policies; a land use plan; a housing plan; a public facilities assessment plan; a major thoroughfare plan; public facilities assessment plan; a major thoroughfare plan; environmental assessments; zoning ordinances and subdivision regula-tions; and a procedural manual. The total costs for creating a comprehensive plan for Wayne county only will be $7,000. For just the villages of Hoskins, Win-side, Carroll and Sholes, the price tag is $6,000. For the county and the villages, the price is $11,250. Wayne County Commissioner Merlin Beiermann said he is ap-proaching the project with an open mind. "I drove the car the day after surgery."

Edna Degner had Cataracts.

She had "Single-Stitch" Cataract Surgery.

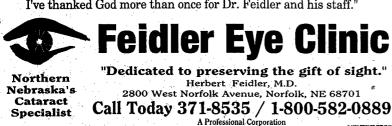

"My last cataract surgery was much easier than the first one I had. Three years ago they used more stitches. This last cataract was a breeze. It healed much quicker; there was only one stitch. You don't have to give up any activities. I drove the car the day after surgery. I am very happy. It was a breeze.

I knew I had a cataract. I like to read and the pages would turn yellow and after a short while I would have to stop reading.

It's a pity that anybody wouldn't have cataract surgery. I can read and see bright colors. To have your sight back for such a small inconvenience is remarkable.

I've thanked God more than once for Dr. Feidler and his staff."

The inscription on the plaque reads as follows: On July 1, 1991, the Board of Trustees of the Vil-lage of Winside Ne. resolved that in recognition of the lifetime con-tributions to this community made by Frank Weible that hereafter by Frank Weible, that hereafter the village ball park shall be known as FRANK WEIBLE FIELD. Marvin Cherry, Chairman of the Board: Nancy Warnemunde, trustee, Frederick Weible, trustee, Darci Frahm, trustee, and Warren Gallop, trustee. Frank Weible, a life long resi-dent and businessman of the Winside community, was active in playing, supporting and promoting baseball in Winside since the early 1930's.

In 1948 a group of baseball boosters formed the Winside Baseball Association and sold enough shares to 35 shareholders to purchase the land, install the lights and build bleachers to seat 1000 fans. Frank served as secre-tary for this Association. He also one of several managers of mond and all its land to the village of Winside. Board member Nancy Warnemunde stated: "The inscrip Warnemunde stated: "The inscrip-tion on the plaque explains why the board decided to named the ball park Frank Weible Field. His many contributions to the community was the main factor. He lived his entire life in Winside except for the time he was in college and the U.S. Army. He was also a great booster for the community, especially where baseball was concerned. Many people are deserving of such recognition, but if you had to pick just one, we thought Frank Weible was the right choice."

Frank Weible owned and oper-ated Weible Transfer for many years in Winside. He passed away April 14, 1991. A formal dedication is being planned for next spring.

Safety a top priority roading equipment

Farm field work often requires transporting farm equipment from one field to another on busy road-ways. Keeping proper safety mea-sures in mind can save the life of the another the same the life of the equipment operator as well as the car driver.

, "Checking safety equipment at the beginning of each season is a good idea," said Gary Pick, Man-ager of Logan Valley implement. Some of the most important things to check include the com-lete lighting and marking surtan plete lighting and marking system on tractors and towed implements, slow moving vehicle signs and hitch pins and safety chains. Slow moving vehicle signs should be replaced if foded faded.

Physically inspecting equipment is the first part of safely roading equipment. The second is review "Drive defensively," said Pick. "Drive defensively," said Pick. "Motorists may not see you coming out of a field or they may not real-ize how wide your machine is."

Pick adds, operators should check to make sure the wings on tillage equipment are folded up as far as possible, and, when applica-ble, that the transport locks are in place.

"Helpers should also be re-minded to match the size of the pulling vehicle to the size and weight of wagons being pulled," explained Pick. "Recommended speed and weight guidelines for towing loads can be found in the operator's manual."
