Conway's challenger in the 1988 election, Tore Nelson of Emerson, contested the election to the Legislature saying that Conway's dual role made him ineligible to serve. The Legislature ruled in Conway's favor and dismissed the contest.

The majority opinion likened Conway's position to that of the head of the English department of the state normal school at Peru in the 1923 case Eason v. Majors. The high court ruled then that Eason was a public officer and his position could be challenged.

The 6,000 square foot structure will be designed specifically to serve those students who are behaviorally impaired or those who are severely and profoundly handicapped. These two programs are currently housed in separate buildings on the east edge of the city.

The architectural firm of Dana, Larson, Roubal and Associates, of Omaha, is drawing the plans for the $350,000 structure. The service unit has entered into a purchase agreement on a five-acre site located directly west of Wayne's new water tower.

GARWOOD SAID that he was pleased that the building would be situated so close to both Providence Medical Center and Wayne State College, for there will then be greater opportunity for cooperative programming to better meet the needs of the children.

The target date for completion of the new structure is September, 1992. Garwood noted that the ESU 1 central office will remain at its current location in Wakefield.

While ESU 1 serves all children in Wayne, Thurston, Dixon, Dakota, Cedar and Knox counties, some students in the Wayne-based programs do come from outside this area on a contracted basis.

Providence offers new clinic for cancer patients

By Mark Crist Managing Editor

Cancer patients who formerly had to travel to Sioux City for treatment may soon be able to receive attention at Providence Medical Center.

As part of the hospital's consulting physician's program, Provi-dence now has an oncologist/hematologist visit once a month. Visiting the hospital the fourth Wednesday of each month is Dr. Michael Parra. "We plan to offer services to patients of this area so they don't have to travel to Sioux City as of-ten," Parra said. "I think the service we will provide will offer patients easier time to get medical care, especially in the areas of hematology and oncology."

PARRA, A native of California, did his training at Creighton Uni-versity Medical School. He conducted his internal medicine residency at the University of Wisconsin. Parra completed his fellowship. at the University of Colorado Medical Center in Denver. He has been practicing medicine in Sioux City for almost a year. Parra and his wife have two children. He practices medicine with Siouxland Hematology/ Oncology Associates of Sioux City.

The oncologist said his interest in oncology and hematology began when he was an intern.

"I worked with some very good people early in my career that im-pressed me with the fact that the patients we work with are really very interesting," he said.
"Oncology is a rapidly developing field that has many new sections for patients. It's very exciting."

PARRA SAID he has been impressed with what Wayne has to offer. He said Providence Medical Center is keeping with the trend of offering top medical care to the people it serves.

In addition to providing the once-a-month visit, Parra is instructing officials at Providence on how to administer chemotherapy treatment. This will allow the hospital to administer the same type of treatments offered in Sioux City.

"For the great majority of the services we do, we will be able to offer them here sos they won't have to travel as much," he said. "There's many medications that can be given here safely.

"We're excited to Things are working well for us.

He said the committee came to him in May and said they wanted something that would be lasting, which could commemorate the town's 100 years of existance.

Initial plans for the project re-volved around painting a wall somewhere in town. Because of the size of that project, however, Lacey said he wasn't the person to do that.

"I never did this for me. I did it for the community," Lacey said.
"It's their deal. I was just glad to help them with it."

Change unfair

I have been in business in Wayne for over 40 years. During that time I have witnessed many changes, some good and some bad. I now find myself being forced into retirement by our own city officials and, quite frankly, I am very angrey.

Our city administrator, without even discussing it with me, has determined that my business should be forced out of the city auditorium after nearly 15 years of being a tenant. His reason: to set up athletic offices to store equipment and provide a part time office for and provide a part time office fa-cility for the department.

Relocation of a beauty shop is quite expensive and cannot be justified because of the lack of other adequate facilities in Wayne, the high cost of setting up such a business and the general business conditions prevailing in Wayne. When challenged with the justification for causing my business to be forced out the city administrator told my employee, "maybe she would want to retire."

I find this attitude toward our I find this attitude toward our older citizens and me in particular very disappointing. I am, instead of sitting and drawing Social Security, in fact still paying into the fund. For many years I have supported the high school, the college and the community activities with both time and money. When the people of Wayne ask me to assist in the preparation of deceased loved ones for burial, I have gladly assisted. I have a full-time employee sisted. I have a full-time employee that will now become a member of the unemployed. My clients are elderly and the current location affords them easy accessibility.

The city administrator admits the city has other vacant space available for these athletic offices. For all of these reasons I ask the people of Wayne to assist me in continuing at the current location by contacting the city council members, the mayor and the city administrator. I would also be very appreciative of your presence and support at the next city council meeting Tuesday, July 30.

Puttin' Up With Pete

By Kevin Peterson

That's just great! I play at least 90 holes of golf a week all summer long

That's just great! I play at least 90 holes of golf a week all summer long to improve my game and what happens? A guy from York comes up to play the course for the first time and he hits a hole-in-one.

Ron Salsman, a cousin of Wayne State women's basketball coach Mike Barry is responsible for the magic on hole seventeen recently with a 4-iron into the wind from 180 yards. Editors note: Congratulations Ron.

Speaking of the Barry clan we also have to take note of Mike's wife Jeannette, who recently holed out from 137 yards on hole number one.

According to Mike, Jeannette used her 3-iron to record her first birdie which is prethy repartable when you consider that Mrs. Barry hapi't been

According to Mike, Jeannette used her 3-iron to record her first birdle which is pretty remarkable when you consider that Mrs. Barry hasn't been playing golf very darn long.

Airight, enough of the Barry's, Jet's move down the block a little ways and give some credit to Tim Keller from Farmers and Merchants Bank. Keller is a pretty good golfer for those of you who don't know.

However, Keller was breezing through a particularly good round of golf a couple weeks ago when he came to hole number seven. Keller was even after six and things seemed to be working pretty well.

He hit his drive on number seven quite a ways but it drifted right a little and landed somewhat under a tree. After some deliberation Keller thought maybe he would hit a knock down shot with a 6-iron and maybe thought maybe he would hit a knock down shot with a 6-iron and maybe he would get lucky and run up on the green.

Well he got lucky alright, because the ball not only rolled up on the green but it rolled across the green and into the cup for an eagle on the par four hole to put him 2-under par at the time. I'll leave it to you to ask him how he finished the round.

him how he finished the round.

I had the privilege of playing in the O'Neill Member-Guest golf tournament last weekend with KBRX owner/manager Scott Poese. It was a good time out there and I really appreciate the hospitality the O'Neill folks showed and especially Scott and his friend Kim.

On Sunday we were paired with the Creighton University baseball coach Jim Hendry and his partner "Dutch." Of course we've all read about the success of Creighton's baseball team this past season culminating with the College World Series in Omaha.

the College World Series in Omaha.

Hendry was the master mind behind that great Creighton team and he was honored by being named Division I. College Coach of the Year. With all of the success and honors bestowed on Creighton and Hendry recently I can probably think of 100 different reasons why Jim Hendry could be the most stuck up man in Nebraska if he wanted too.

Well, guess what? I was totally impressed with Mr. Hendry and in fact the bottom line is, he's just a class act all the way. You know how politicians are, they come to your small home town and act like they are your best friend with the way they smile and shake your hand.

Hendry was not on a public relations kick in O'Neill. He was just an ordinary golf nut out to spend a relaxing weekend with friends. Oh and by the nary golf nut out to spend a relaxing weekend with friends. Oh and by the way, not only is Hendry one heck of a coach but he's one heck of a golfer as well, firing rounds of 34-32 on Sunday with six birdies and 12 pars. (Nice golfing coach.)

I guess what impressed me the most about Hendry was the fact that he was just himself and he didn't walk around with his nose in the air which many people do when they land success. In fact, he spent several minutes talking to me about Wayne State's baseball program and how much he appreciated coaches like our own Lenny Klaver
