Wayne gets CDBG funds

Wayne is among 38 communities in Nebraska which will receive a share of $6.5 million in Community Development Block Grants, it was announced at a press conference held by Gov. Ben Nelson in Lincoln Thursday.

"The recipients of the funds will use them to help communities better themselves, which in turn creates a better Nebraska for all of us," Nelson said. "By building strong communities, we can help ensure a brighter future for all Nebraskans."

Wayne will receive $165,300 for the acquisition and construction of a child day care center. The project has been in the works since the release of START findings in 1990.

"We're all ready to go," said Mary Temme, co-chairperson of the Wayne Child Day Care Board. "We're more than eager to get started. As soon as we can get release of funds, we will buy the property and go through the building process and get moving on it."

THE PROJECT is expected to cost $250,000. The CDBG money will cover 66 percent of the construction and acquisition costs. The new center will house as many as 60 children, which will relieve what many have referred to as burdened home day cares.

According to statistics, there are 25 licensed day care providers and an estimated 10 unlicensed providers in Wayne, who each legally care for eight children at a time. With 405 children in need of the service, it is estimated that there are 125 children in need of day care services.

According to the blueprints of the building, the main floor would be approximately 3,700 square feet. The size of the lot the facility would be built upon would be approximately 15,000 feet. If everything goes as planned, the new facility could be located southeast of Pizza Hut, along east Sixth Street.

"If at all possible, we will be breaking ground this fall," Temme said.

WAYNE CHILD Day Care Co-chairperson Carolee Stuberg said news of the grant being awarded for the Wayne project made jubilant.

"We're excited about getting the money and putting the day care center all together," Stuberg said. "It will be a definite asset to the community."

Stuberg, along with eight other members of the board have worked hard on the project. Other members include: Temme, Janet Dyer, Nancy Heithold, Leslie Hausmann, Diane Ehrhardt, Bonna Barner, Mary Kranz and Rev. John Mitchell.

Wayne Mayor Bob Carhart, who attended the meeting in Lincoln along with City Administrator Joe Salitros, said the project means a great deal to the Wayne community.

"The main thing it means is that families with youngsters who need attendance during the day will be able to find appropriate care," he said. "This will ease the concerns of parents in the community. It will mean additional growth. The beauty of this is that it will be another home grown building."

Carhart said the research done by START officials and the Wayne Child Day Care Board has paid off. He said without the data, the grant may not have been possible.

JULIE MASH, who chaired the START committee and wrote the grant application, said much of the credit goes to the Wayne Child Day Care Board. She said she was more than happy to help them by writing up the grant. She added that it's nice to see all the work done by the Wayne START committee pay off in such a big way.

"I am sure it wouldn't have happened if we hadn't done the START program," Mash said. "That got people working together on issues important to the community. It was a matter of getting the right people working together on a problem. That's what START did: it got us working together."

Wayne officials said they anticipate receiving the CDBG money sometime in the middle of November. The project will go out for bids to businesses interested in constructing it.

Notification law frustrates officials

By Mark Crist
Managing Editor

Students in the Wayne, Winside, Wakefield and Allen schools may find something new added to the list of handouts the schools give this year, only school officials are upset that they're required to do it.

That's the general consensus of three administrators who spoke to The Wayne Herald about LB 425, the parental notification bill dealing with abortions.

Superintendents Dr. Frances Haun of Wayne, Don Leighton of Winside and John Warner of Allen, said they plan to keep the parental notification abortion issue as low key as possible. Superintendent Derwin Hartman of Wakefield could not be reached for comment.

GROUPS ON both sides of the abortion issue have also raised complaints about the abortion law passed by the Nebraska Legislature this year. Religious groups and school associations have also spoken out against LB 425, and local school administrators disagree with the way the bill has been handled.

"The intent may be noble but the results will be disastrous," Warner said. "... If the parents complain about this, we'll tell them it's the state's directive. I'm going to pass the buck on this one. This is what the legislators did, not us."

Dr. Haun said he doesn't feel the abortion issue should be in the hands of the schools.

"I don't feel this is something the public schools should be forced to do," he said. "We'll keep the procedure simple and do the minimum the law requires us to do."

Leighton's comments echo Haun's. He said, "It's a law and we're going to have to do it. ... I'm not in agreement that we are the ones who should have to (issue the handout), however."

WHILE EACH school will have to deal with the matter, each superintendent said their respective schools will handle the bill differently.

In Winside, Leighton said the schools will likely send a newsletter to parents informing them that the school is required to provide students with this handout, while explaining the procedures the school will follow. He said most likely, a guidance counselor or nurse will discuss options with students should the issue ever come up.

Warner said the Allen schools will most likely hold a school assembly, where students will be given the literature. He said if the matter comes up, it will be directed to the school nurse or counselor.

Dr. Haun said the Wayne schools will give the information to the students as soon as the administration receives the directive from the state. He said then it will be in the counselors or nurses hands.

"It's a generic type-of handout," Haun said. "We won't teach it or get involved in it. If it gets to the point down the road that we will be required to teach it, then we will have to have some sort of in-service."

UNDER THE stipulations of the law, it is "an act requiring parental notification if an unemancipated pregnant woman under 18 years of

New law enforces licensing

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the final article in a three part series about licensing of home day care providers.

By Mark Crist
Managing Editor

While there may be a few day care homes whose operators don't know that they need to be licensed, it is the law.

Under the guidelines of the Nebraska Rules for Family Day Care, licensing is required when care is provided to four or more children age 11 or younger from different families for compensation either direct or indirect.

That's why Deb Arickx of Wayne has decided to license the child day care operation she runs out of her home.

Until recently, Arickx didn't need to license her home because she cared for fewer than four children. Just recently, as the demand for day care services in Wayne have increased, Arickx needs to become licensed.

"I'LL SOON have more children than I should have" to be a non-licensed operator, Arickx said. "I started the licensing process once before but because of the paperwork, I decided I didn't want to license since I didn't have more

Internship a summer adventure

Joel Pedersen's college paper he writes from his summer internship may not have any real exciting details about close encounters with black bears but it should have some fascinating information about his experience.

Over the summer, Pedersen, son of Randy and Rozan Pedersen of Wayne, conducted an internship in the Great Smoky Mountain National Park in Tennessee. As an intern, he assisted Frank VanManen, a doctorate student at the University of Tennessee, who was studying the black bear.

"Each bear we caught was exciting because each one was different," Pedersen said. "... It was a real application of everything I've learned in college. It was nice to put my knowledge to practical use rather than let it stagnate over the summer."

THE STUDY Pedersen assisted with was the trapping of black bears in the park for population dynamics studies. The study, which is in its 23rd year, involved radio-collaring females to see which ones produce cubs and to study their health.

During the study, Pedersen and VanManen ran trap lines for 14 nights. The lines varied in length from five to 15 miles and the traps were set off regularly hiked trails. Since the traps were secluded, the baited snares were checked daily to ensure the well-being of any bears they caught.

Once the bears were discovered, they were drugged so the team could approach them. Once drugged, jelly was placed in their eyes and they were band-aided. Any bears that had not been captured before had ear tags placed in each ear and tattoos were printed inside the mouth and along the groin inside one of the back legs.

JOEL PEDERSEN KNEELS by one of the bears he helped to trap during his summer internship. Once trapped, the animals were analyzed for statistical purposes.

"We were careful to stay out of their reach if they charged us," Pedersen said. "There were never any close calls."

AFTER THE bears were drugged, the study team would collect visual data on the animal's condition. Females would be checked for their ovulating cycles and birth history. Blood samples were also taken and the bears were vaccinated. In addition, a member of the study team would pull the first pre-molar, which would then be used to determine the animal's age.

"At first I was worried I'd hurt them or they'd hurt me," he said. "But after a while, you learn that they're tough. We were concerned with hurting them but not to the extent that it would hurt the study work we were doing."

As a student at the University of Nebraska-Kearney, Pedersen is studying wildlife biology. He said once he finishes his undergraduate work he will go on and earn his master's degree. He said he hopes eventually to work with bears or other large predators and study ecosystems.

"I've always enjoyed the outdoors and hunting and fishing," the 1988 WHS graduate said. "Through Boy Scouts, I gained an appreciation for the outdoors and for wildlife. I'd like to do what I can to keep that around for future generations."

than three children. It wasn't until recently that I got so many kids."

Currently, Arickx is caring for four children, plus her own, with plans for two more in the near future. On Friday, she began to fill out the paperwork for her home to become licensed. Fortunately, only one of the four children she's currently caring for is full time.

"I'm experienced in dealing with government paperwork since my husband and I are foster parents," she said. "I think the state has a right to ask all the questions. For years, children have suffered from neglect. I think the state has the right to check me out to make sure I'm caring appropriately for the children. They need to check anyone out who cares for kids."

ACCORDING TO Diane Bishop, acting supervisor for the early childhood licensing office in Lincoln, whenever the Department of Social Services receives an unlicensed care complaint, Social Services will make an unscheduled visit to the providers' home.

"We then let them know that within 15 days they need to get licensed or reduce the number of children they care for in their home," she said. "If they exceed the 15 day limit, we can then refer the names to the county attorney."

Bishop said while it is not an infrequent occurrence that the whistle is blown on unlicensed facilities, most of the facilities comply within the 15 day period.

On rare occasions, a worst case scenario occurs when the county attorney files an injunction for the day care operation to cease. Bishop said most operators are not aware this law even exists, since it has only been in existence since May.

At any rate, the pains of licensing will be beneficial for Arickx. She indicated that she was glad she decided to license.

"I enjoy being with children and I like being an adult child myself," she said. "What kind of fun you can have as a child unless you're around children? I enjoy this."

age seeks an abortion. A judicial waiver of parental notification is permitted in the bill. The schools are involved in this issue due to the requirement that on or before Oct. 1 of each school year each school district shall provide written information to all students grades 7-12 explaining the three provisions of the bill regarding parental notification and judicial bypass," the law reads.

At the directive of the new law, the department of education is required to develop a standardized information form to be distributed to all school districts. The schools then may develop their own form or use the standardized one. All students, regardless of gender, are required to be given these handouts.

"It upsets me that anytime there's a crisis, it gets dumped in the schools' lap," Warner concluded.

WSC players earn honors

Four Wayne State College football players are honored in the current issue of Don Hansen's National Weekly Football Gazette as preseason NCAA Division II all-Americans.

Junior linebacker Jerry Kleidosty (6-0, 230, Omaha) earned second-team honors, while senior wide receiver Marlon Goolsby (5-10, 165, Columbus, OH) was selected to the third team.

Seniors Bob Sterba (LB, 6-0, 235, Omaha) and Eric Colbert (OT, 6-3, 270, Hayward, CA) were named to the honorable mention squad.

Kleidosty led WSC's ninth-ranked defense with 116 tackles last fall. He also intercepted two passes and recorded eight tackles for losses in his first year at linebacker. Kleidosty transferred from the University of Nebraska, where he was a fullback.

He and Sterba were prep teammates at Omaha South High School and have run a pair of swimming pools in the Omaha area the past two summers.

Goolsby led the Cats' with 39 receptions, 638 yards receiving, and five TD catches in 1990. His nine receptions for 169 yards helped WSC down Northwestern (IA) 23-18 in the season finale.

Goolsby, who runs a 4.36 40-yard dash, was a all-region performer at North Iowa Area Community College before transferring to WSC.

Sterba totaled 113 tackles last fall despite being hampered by injuries. He led WSC with 131 tackles in 1989, and is the spiritual leader of the nationally-ranked Wildcat defense. He and Kleidosty are among the strongest Wildcats—both bench pressing over 440 pounds and squatting over 700 pounds.

Colbert is dubbed the "unsung hero of the offensive line" by WSC head coach Dennis Wagner. Colbert has started every game at WSC since transferring from Chabot Junior College, where he was a first-team all-league selection.

All four student-athletes were selected to the Omaha World-Herald all-state team following last year's 7-4 season. The Wildcats open the regular season on Aug. 31 at Missouri Western State College.

Referendum calls for wool producer approval

According to Teresa Post at the ASCS office, the National Wool Act of 1954, as amended, provides that a referendum will be conducted to determine whether wool producers approve of a new agreement between the Administrator, AMC and the American Sheep Industry Association Inc., (ASI), for the advertising and sales promotion of lamb and wool. If producers indicate approval in the referendum, deductions will be made from shorn wool and unshorn lamb payments for 1991 through 1995 to finance ASI's activities.

The wool referendum will be held Aug. 19 through Aug. 30. The ballot box will be in the County Office, serving the county, in which the producer's farm headquarters is located.

The following must apply in order to be eligible to vote:

•The producer had an interest as owner or partial owner in one or more sheep.
•The sheep were six-months old or older.
•The ownership was for at least

30 days during 1990.
All ballots shall be cast in the county office no later than Aug. 30. Ballots will be filed timely if postmarked no later than Aug. 30, and received in the county office before close of business on Sept. 6.

For the first time, Dixon County 4-H's were able to interview judges (visit with the judge) when taking all exhibit hall exhibits to the fair this year. They also had the option to leave their exhibits off as in the past. There were several 4-H's who took advantage of the additional learning experience according to Extension Agent, Karen Wermers. The feedback has been 100 percent positive by superintendents, parents and 4-H's, who chose the interview option. Judge like the visit too, because they can ask questions and the 4-H'er can give and get answers. In years past, clothing, knitting and crocheting and photography have been routinely interviewed judged prior to the fair.
 4-H exhibit hall exhibits were up from 1990 from approximately 420 to 480 this year.

College names Macklin presidential scholar

Jennifer M. Macklin of St. Charles, Ill. has been named a presidential scholar at Augustana College in Rock Island, Ill. The highly selective award was granted to Macklin on the basis of high school academic record and potential to excel in college studies. The Presidential Scholar award carries a substantial monetary scholarship and will allow Macklin to participate in special programs at the college.

Augustana Presidential Scholars must demonstrate exceptional academic ability, intellectual curiosity and the capacity for effective, thoughtful expression. Class rank, college admission test (ACT or SAT) scores, and grade point average are important criteria for selection. Last year's Presidential Scholars, on average, ranked in the top five percent of their high school class.

Macklin is the daughter of Bill and Pattie Macklin of St. Charles, Ill., and granddaughter of Jane Macklin of Wayne.
